DINNERS WILL NOT BE HELD IN HOLIDAYS

Program of Next Monthly C of C Forum in Jan. Secured

The chamber of commerce directors last night approved a suggestion of the dinner-forum committee that the regular monthly dinners of the chamber of commerce be dispensed with during November and December because of the holiday press of activities. The dinners will be resumed in January and a program for the dinner in that month has already been obtained, it was announced. The difficulty of finding suitable dates for these dinners in the conflict of holiday activities and the fact that the last community meeting was such a success that the interest in the events should not be jeopardized by too small attendances prompted the decision not to hold the meetings this fall.

The directors heard the report of a committee which went to Denton to confer further with chemurgic researchers there, relative to sweet potato possibilities in this area. Through tests of the productivity of sweet potatoes and their costs and value in feeding and other uses were directed. Data on the tests and on the costs of processing equipment and other pertinent information will be assembled for presentation to the chamber later.

The program for Christmas decorations and trade stimulation during the holiday season was presented by Sec'y Bob Taylor and approved. The street lighting and decorations will be in place by the first week in December. There will be parades on the 16th of December, with bands from neighboring towns invited and prizes offered for the best bands, and on December 23rd, Santa Claus will appear each time.

The street decorations will extend from Third street at D avenue to 14th street, and from J avenue on Eighth street. Streamers of colored lights with wreaths and garlands of evergreen will form the principal units of this decoration. Street light standards will also be decorated. The Oil Belt Decorating company will do the work.

Surprise in Store at Prayer Meeting

A unique program has been arranged for the prayer service this evening at the First Baptist church, it was announced by the Rev. Judson Prince. A surprise is in store for all who attend. For obvious reasons the program is not being announced publicly, he said.

One of the phases of the program this evening is some special music.

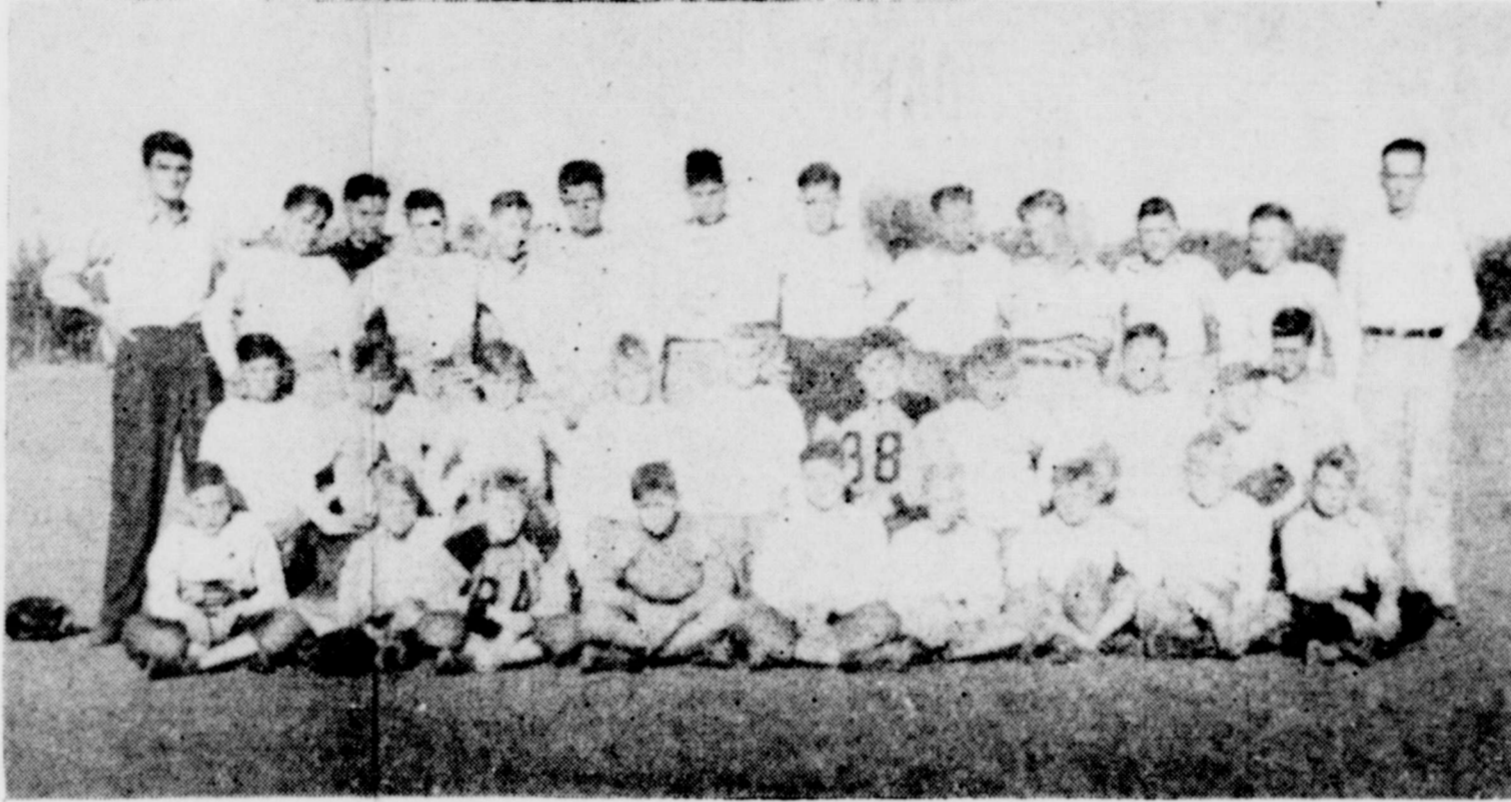

A call was issued for a deacons meeting and finance committee meeting this evening immediately after the prayer service. All members were urged to attend.

The public is invited to attend this mid-week service and the members are urged to do so.

Jackson Speaker for Lions Club

Lion E. L. Jackson was the speaker for the Cisco Lions club today noon, speaking on the obligations of membership to new members of the club. A. L. Osborn had as his guest Martin E. Valentine of Baton Rouge, La. Members of the club voted to attend the community meeting at Putnam next Tuesday evening.

Issue Challenge to Any Sixth and Seventh Grade Team in State

Their undefeated record, including victories over strong junior high and grammar school elevens, the Cisco grammar school Midgets, above, have issued a challenge to any football team of their class in the state. Arlin Birt is coach of the squad and C. J. Turner is principal of the school. Once before a Cisco grammar school eleven, coached by O. L. Stamey, now high school principal, won the state title by defeating the Temple grammar school team.

DEWITT JONES AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH FRIDAY

Hundreds to Attend Annual District Church Event

Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones, internationally famous clergyman of Detroit, Michigan, will be the speaker for the annual convention of District 11 of Christian churches in Texas here Friday. Dr. Jones, pastor of the Central Woodward Christian church of Detroit, and immediate past president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, is scheduled to speak three times during a convention in which preparations are being made to take care of between 400 and 500 visitors.

His first address is scheduled for 11:30 a. m. Friday, his second at the laymen's banquet at 7 p. m., and his third at the evening service at 8:30 o'clock. Due to the fact that Dr. Jones will be pressed to make his arrival here from Detroit—he will fly—in time for the morning program, a change may be necessary, the host pastor, the Rev. Clark W. Lambert, said today.

The convention, which will embrace inspirational and business activities of men, women and youth in the district, will bring delegates from a wide area in west Texas, and the presence of Dr. Jones, who will appear in west Texas for the first time, was expected to attract churchmen and lay leaders from all over the state. In the district are included Abilene, Coleman, Brady, Ballinger, Cisco, Eastland, Ranger, DeLeon and other churches. Breckenridge, although not in the district, will bring a large delegation, advises to the convention officials here today said.

Plate charge for the laymen's dinner, at which Dr. Jones will make a principal address Friday evening, will be $1, the fund to be used to defray expenses of the convention. Preparations are being made to take care of 200 men. The banquet will be held in the dining room of the First Christian church. Simultaneously there will be a women's dinner at the First Methodist church and a youth dinner at the Mobley hotel. Presiding at the banquet will be F. M. Warren, Abilene lay leader.

The program for the convention was announced as follows:

Morning session, beginning at 9:30 o'clock:
Hymn led by Harley Patterson of Wichita Falls; Welcome by the Rev. Lambert, host pastor; response by F. W. Warren, Abilene, district convention president; appointment of committees for the work of the convention; worship service at 9:45, to be led by J. B. Blunk of Eastland; presentation of district activities as follows:

10 a. m.—Children's work, Mrs. C. W. Lambert of Cisco;
10:20—Young People's work, Harley Patterson;
10:40—Adult work, Charles Marion Ross of Fort Worth;
11—Church Expansion, H. B. Johnson of Ranger;
11:30—Address by Dr. Jones.

Britain Begins Unrestricted Nazi Blockade

LONDON, Nov. 22 (AP)—Great Britain, accusing Germany of "ruthless brutality" and illegal mine warfare, Tuesday proclaimed in reprisal an unrestricted high seas blockade of German trade.

While Prime Minister Chamberlain was announcing this step to the house of commons and blaming Germany for the past week's heavy toll of merchant shipping off the British east coast, the 11,930-ton Japanese passenger liner Terukuni Maru, became the latest and largest victim.

The vessel, which was believed to have struck a mine, sank within sight of the coast, and her 26 passengers and 180 crew members were saved.

Chamberlain said the government had decided to "subject to seizure on the high seas" all "exports of German origin or ownership."

He said the practice had been followed during the World-war "as a measure of justified reprisals for submarine attacks on merchant ships," and it was to be put into effect now because of "many violations of international law and the ruthless brutality of German methods."

The measure, to be put into effect shortly, "by an order in council, calls for seizure of all German exports on the high seas, regardless of whether they are carried under neutral flags, in order to throttle Germany's supply of currency to buy war materials."

Other developments of the day, a relatively busy one for war-time Britain, included:

1. Announcement of the sinking of the 490-ton mine-sweeping trawler Mastiff, sixth acknowledged British naval loss of the war, off the east coast, by a mine yesterday. One crewman killed, five missing.

2. The British merchant trawlers Thomas Hankins and Sea Sweeper, of 276 and 329 tons, respectively, were sunk by submarines off the Irish coast.

3. 250-ton British trawler Delphine was sunk by sub-

BIDDING DUE TO BE BRISK ON 44 HEAD

With a greater percentage of buyers and interested cattlemen and a less number of sightseers than before, the second Mitcham Hereford auction got under way shortly after 1 o'clock at the Mitcham headquarters ranch, 12 miles northwest of Cisco.

Auctioneer Earl Gartin brought down his hammer 25 minutes late before an auction ring crowded with bidders and prospective buyers and started bidding on 44 head of pure bred Herefords, comprising 10 males and 34 females.

The eastern United States demand for blooded beef cattle was evident at the auction, where men had come from Tennessee, Louisiana, and other points east, with the prospect of buying. There was, of course, a large representation of west Texas cattlemen.

Demand for females was expected to be stronger than for males, as was the case at the Alexander auction the day before at Albany. Frank Reeves, Star-Telegram staff man, suggested, however, that this might be due to the fact that the offerings of high grade bulls had been such during the past year or so as to "top" the class and leave individuals of a quality not to demand the highest prices, whereas, no such condition existed with respect to females.

Mitcham increased his offerings by one female this morning. The animal was not, of course, included in the catalogue.

With several hundred buyers or prospective buyers present and a decided interest shown in the catalogue descriptions and the cattle themselves, auction officials looked for spirited bidding this afternoon. Auctioneer Gartin said that prices being paid for cattle this season were definitely higher and that the demand was strong, particularly in the eastern United States and east Texas.

Among the prospective buyers from a distance were H. F. Hol-

Pay Tax Early If You Want to Vote in 1940!

Records of the tax collector's office reveal that 500 persons had qualified as Texas voters up to Tuesday noon, by paying their poll taxes of $1.75 per poll. Poll taxes must be paid by January 31, midnight, if the payee wishes to have a voice in choosing the public officers of the state.

There is every reason to anticipate a record of poll tax payments before the dawn of February 1, as 1940 will be a general election year, and to participate in this, and other elections which may be called, it is absolutely necessary to possess a poll tax receipt, so it is not too early to admonish all to PAY POLL TAX EARLY!

NO BEER VOTE CASE APPEAL IS INDICATED

There was no indication today that an appeal will be made to the eleventh civil appeals court from the judgment of the 83rd district court, which denied the prayer of the plaintiffs contesting the beer election held October 7. Although contestants' attorneys gave notice of appeal, and some of the preliminaries were observed in preparation for this step, no request for a transcript of the proceedings were made, and Judge Adamson said he was told that money deposited with the district clerk in anticipation of appeal had been withdrawn.

Judge B. W. Patterson, in whose court the contest proceedings were held, stated that M. E. Lawrence, attorney for the contestants, informed him that no appeal would be taken.

It was the opinion of Judge Adamson that a decision had been

NAZIS CLAIM BOMBING PLOT IS SOLVED

BERLIN, Nov. 22 (AP)—German secret police last night announced the arrest of a man charged with the November 8 beer cellar bombing attempt on Adolf Hitler's life, and the capture of two British intelligence agents accused of plotting German revolution from Netherlands soil.

While the official announcements of Heinrich Himmel, chief of the gastapo, did not connect the arrest and the capture, they did charge Otto Strasser, one-time Hitler lieutenant, but now a leader in the disident "black front," with organizing the bombing plot, and the British intelligence service with furnishing the money.

The man charged with the bombing was named George Elser, 36, of Munich, who was said by the gastapo to have confessed.

He was said to have been arrested November 11—three days after the Munich explosion, which took eight lives and injured 62 others—while attempting to escape into Switzerland, and to have confessed on November 14. Several of his accomplices also were declared to have been arrested.

The two British agents were named "Best" and "Captain Stevens," and were declared to have been captured on Nov. 9, while attempting to escape across the border into the Netherlands at Venloo.

The Nazi report said that "contradictory claims whether they were captured while still in Holland or when in Germany, are at present being examined."

BRITISH DISCLAIM KNOWLEDGE

LONDON, Nov. 22 (AP)—The British foreign office said last night neither the British government nor any agent of it "had any knowledge" of the German citizen "described as having placed a bomb in the Munich cellar" November 8.

It was stated that official quarters considered the German government's statement "quite incomprehensible."

The foreign office communique said there was "no connection" between the Munich bombing, in which Adolf Hitler missed death by 11 minutes, and the "kidnapping of two British subjects on the German-Dutch frontier."

Mrs. Finis Garrett of Moran was a Cisco visitor this morning.

Civilization May Sneak Through Again

DURING the course of the last war, writers and orators re-discovered a word that was not only filled with lurid implications but bounced pleasingly along the tongue. The word was "Armageddon," and it came to be an essential part of the vocabularies of alarmists and pessimists.

Never before 1914 had a war been staged on so widespread a scale. Conflicts before had always been conducted along conventional lines—between two nations or two factions within a nation over some such orthodox matter as boundaries, colonies, freedom of the seas or the prestige of a ruler. Never before had half the world gone to bat for democracy and the other half against it.

Here then was Armageddon. It was not only God's great battle of good against the forces of evil, but it was the war that would eliminate either all future wars or civilization itself.

Here was the master war of them all, with new-fangled flying machines that could wipe out cities as men swat flies and guns that could fire shells into towns 60 miles away. Civilization could not possibly survive that mighty onslaught.

FOR 21 years after the 1918 Armistice, Armageddon was forgotten by all but classical scholars. Civilization, through some inexplicable miracle, had not been wiped out. And wars had not been ended. The euphonistic word was packed away in mothballs along with such curios as A. E. F. uniforms and bustles.

Then came 1939. Bustles came back and so did Armageddon. Here it was again—the great decisive battle of all time. This was the war that would grind the earth into a mass of lifeless pulp. Columnists built their sermons around the resurrected word. On one day, two writers climaxed their messages with nearly identical sentences, both involving "Armageddon" and other columnist used the word so often that it began to sound like the title of a popular song.

During the past two months, speakers and writers have gradually been laying off. Either they began to tire of the word or they realized that maybe this wasn't quite Judgment Day. Perhaps they decided civilization, having managed to squeeze through the last assault, might get through this one.

IF the war abroad is ever unleashed in all its fury, folks all over the world will probably have a pretty rough time of it. Those who aren't directly in the line of fire are going to feel the repercussions in their economic and political life. War is never very pretty.

Yet, somehow, civilization will probably survive. It may not be quite the same as we know it now. Modes of living may be adjusted to meet new conditions, and Europe may get its face lifted again. But life will not be summarily wiped off the planet.

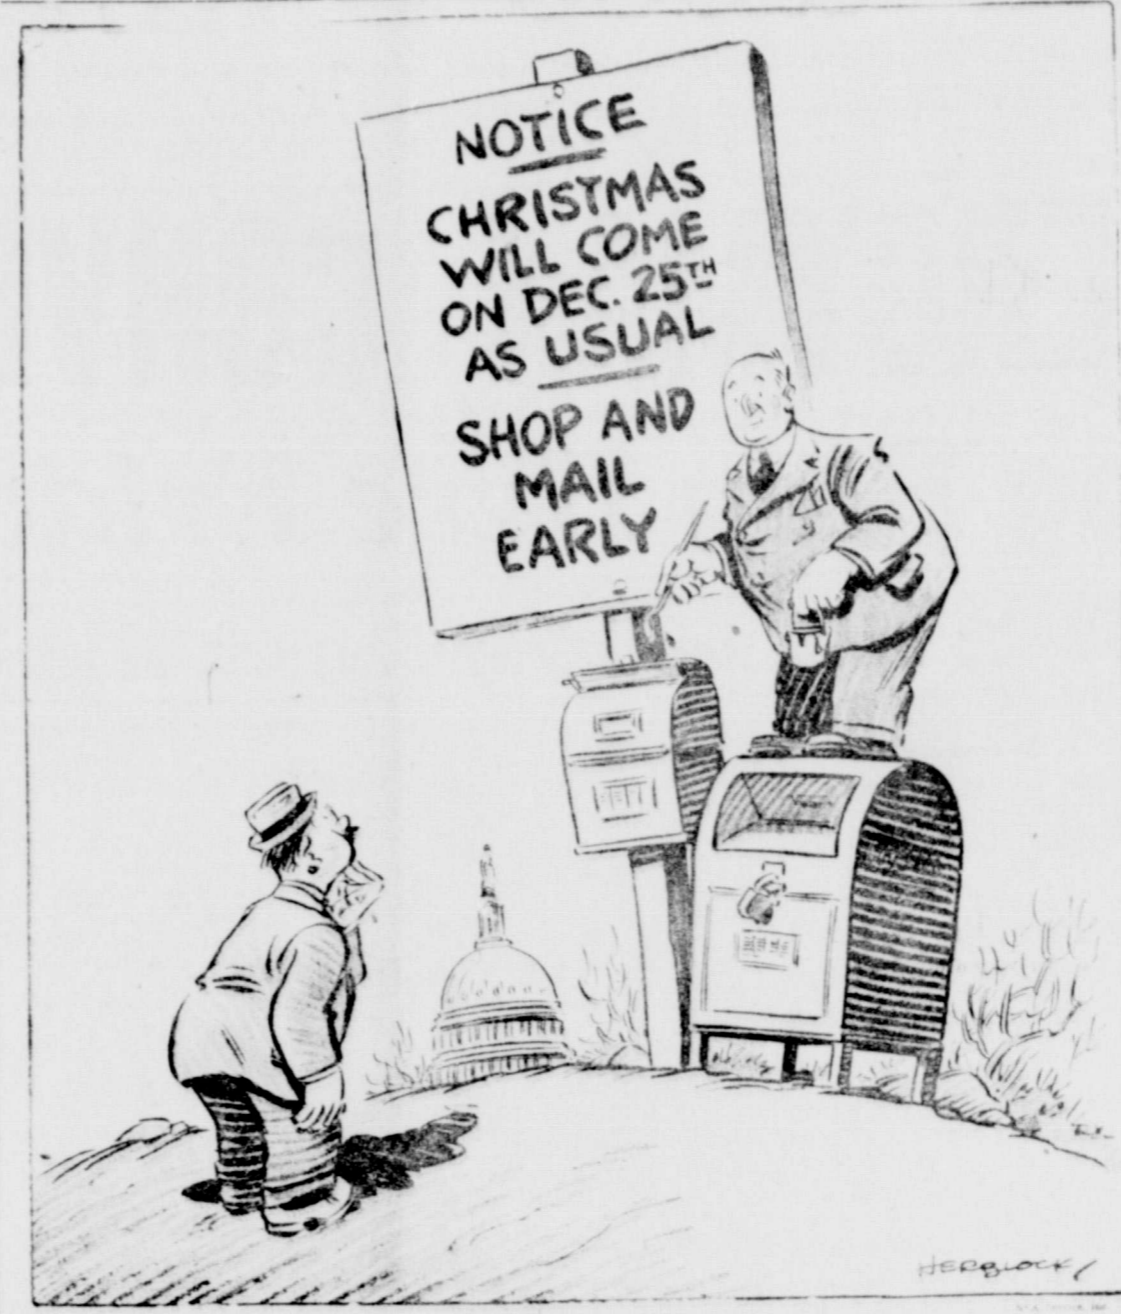

The United States may as well plan on that. We may as well look beyond the yet undefinable limits of the present war and project our program for peaceful existence into a future period, even though it does look a little vague to us now.

the schools, progressing nicely, attendance good, programs being carefully worked out, teachers competent and enthusiastic and children interested.

Mr. Williams said that most of the schools are keeping the buildings, class rooms and school grounds in good condition. A few of the schools, however, are neglecting to keep an orderly attractive school plant. This, Mr. Hollbrook pointed out, is highly important, since it gives the children pleasant and attractive surroundings in which to live and to pursue their school activities.

Foundations of Mobley Hotel Strengthened

Workers have completed quite a job of underpinning and reinforcing the foundations of the Mobley hotel building. It was found that there were some cracks in the walls, indicating sinking of the foundations. Remedy for this was sought in the work just completed, in which all of the half of the concrete walk, along the entire front of the building, had to be taken up, excavations made under the foundations, which were filled with concrete, and the walk replaced. It is believed this work will stop the settling indicated and probably avoid the necessity of a more expensive repair bill.

Other improvements also have been made, repairs to the roof, capping the walls, working over the interior with paint and varnish.

Billion Dollar Cut In Deficit Sought

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—President Roosevelt, his advisors said Tuesday, will reduce the 1941 federal approximately $1,000,000,000 low this year's figure, despite expected increases in the national defense.

Budget plans, it was said, are being drafted with a view to trimming the deficit for the year beginning July 1, 1941, to $2,000,000,000. Officials believe, however, that $2,500,000,000 is a more probable figure.

Exactly how much this year's deficit would fall below this year's age is not known. Mr. Roosevelt in January estimated the deficit at $3,426,000,000, but business upturn and congressional rewriting of White House recommendations have improved outlook.

The San Antonio, Tex., year raised more cuts than any time during its existence, leopards, six pumas, three and two tigers.

BRUCE CATTON'S AMERICAN ROUNDUP

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Experts on labor disputes here believe that the recent history of the textile industry offers a valuable tip in the auto industry in wrangles like the one currently causing a costly stoppage of work in the Chrysler plants.

Central point of this dispute is the speed at which certain operations are put through.

The union demands a voice in setting that speed. The company replies that to grant it would be a long first step toward admitting the union to a share in the management of the organization.

DISPUTE SETTLED, NO FACE LOST

IN any case, the point is that arbitration is accepted.

On the one hand, union grievances which arise over questions of speed are settled without strikes. On the other, the agreement is able to make concessions, where concessions are visible, without in any way admitting that labor is entitled to a voice in setting the policy of a company.

TEXTILE INDUSTRY HIT SIMILAR SNAG

THE textile industry hit the same snag several years ago and got around it to the satisfaction of organized labor and management alike. It did this largely by using the services of a skilled technical staff maintained by the Division of Conciliation of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Here's how this body works: A dispute over speed of operations arises in a textile mill. Representatives of management and labor argue and reach no agreement.

The Division of Conciliation offers its services and they are accepted. A government technical expert comes to the scene.

He makes a detailed stop-watch study of the operation in question. Then he makes studies of similar operations in other textile mills—in as many as 15 or 20, sometimes. He comes back, calls in both sides, and explains his findings.

By showing how the operation-speed in the local mill compares with the average for similar plants, and by calling on his own technical knowledge to suggest ways in which adjustments can be made, he usually is able to suggest a speed which both sides agree is fair.

It is admitted that the textile industry is not exactly parallel, and that a process which might be fairly speeded up in one could be extremely complicated in the other.

For one thing, tremendous amounts of money are involved in a factory, and costs are shared in micrometers. A saving of 1/100 of a cent on one operation can mean a difference of millions of dollars on the year's balance sheet.

The thing that has been established in the textile industry is that determination of the speed at which certain operations are to be conducted can be a matter of collective bargaining negotiations. This can be done without implying that a union is an actual or a theoretical management partner.

Within limits, the matter can be classed with the settling of hour and pay schedules. To the extent, the record in textiles is a useful guidepost to the industry.

Swindle Backfires to Give Ranch Hand $1,500 Horde

FORT SUMNER, N. M., Nov. 22 (AP).—An alleged "gold brick" swindle, which back-fired to produce a buried silver hoard for a New Mexico ranch hand, came to light here Tuesday.

According to information obtained by the secret service, the silver bars were dug up on a ranch at Big Spring, Texas, by Emmett E. (Tex.) Ferguson, a Fort Sumner ranch hand, who overheard a conversation relating it had been "planted," supposedly as a swindle bait.

Secret Service Agent Emmett Hargett said the preparators of the fantastic "gold brick" scheme, whose names were withheld, were believed to have swindled a wealthy Texas banker and others of some $200,000 through tales of buried Mexican gold.

Ferguson, Hargett said, maintained his right to the silver by virtue of digging it up. Pending determination of the case, the treasure will remain in custody of the government.

The secret service uncovered the swindle tale when Ferguson attempted to sell a dozen of the silver bars at a bank in Lindsey, Okla.

Agents did not divulge either the names of the alleged conspirators or the victims, and stated that no charges had been made.

According to information obtained by the secret service, the swindle was another form of the old "Yaqui gold" scheme, worked on the Mexican border and based on mythical gold buried in Mexico, only awaiting financing to dig up and sell at inflated prices in the United States.

Gilded bricks of metal actually were produced for the amazement of the Texas victims in this case, Hargett said, and extensive financing was obtained to further marines and her crew rescued. The Delphine was the 15th ship, including 10 British and five neutral, to be sunk by torpedoes or mines since last Saturday.

Coupled with these mounting losses was a report by Reuters, (British news agency) that the 16,662-ton German liner Windhuk slipped out of Lobito bay, Angola (Portuguese West Africa) Friday, to begin her career as a surface raider.

Anti-aircraft guns fired again at 7 P. M. on German planes over the east coast and British fighters were sent to intercept them. No bombs were dropped, however, and the all clear signal was given after 75 minutes.

SERIAL STORY 5 WOULD KILL

BY TOM HORNER
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
ARNOLD BENTHORNE—Five persons wished him dead.
HELEN BENTHORNE—His charming young wife.
WILLIAM ALSTON—Benthorne's father-in-law and business associate.
JOEY DI TORIO—Night club owner and gangster.
ARA JOHNSON—The mystery girl.
JOHN DOUGLAS—A young mining engineer, in love with Ara.

Ara Johnson

Yesterday, Joey di Torio admits he and Benthorne were "associated" in several rackets. Dawson believes the gangster killed Benthorne to silence him. Joey finally admits he left the club, but maintains it was after midnight. He also reminds Dawson of one other thing that will prove his innocence—ballistics.

CHAPTER VII

Patrolman Dan Flynn's feet hurt. It was bad enough, he told himself, to stand half the night in the rain, but to have a murder piled on him, to have the captain stare at him, and to have to find a will-o'-wisp taxi driver at 4 a. m. was asking too much of his even Irish temper.

How the devil did Dawson expect him to locate one taxi driver—Nick Smith—in a city full of taxi drivers? The taxi company had been a great help—yeah! "Smith reported in tonight," the office clerk told Flynn. "He's on cruising service, reports in if business is slow, but goes on his own if business is good." That helped a lot, yeah! They'd be glad to have Smith come in if he called, but Flynn knew that Smith would stay out just as long as he could. Probably halfway to Florida by now, with the cab parked on a deserted road.

Smith wouldn't show up at home either—too smart for that. Smith was just too, too smart. Dawson was too smart. Benthorne was too smart. Everyone was too smart—everyone but Dan Flynn. And he was just a dumb cop. And his feet hurt.

Well, there was no use pacing up and down the sidewalk in the rain in front of a deserted taxi stand. There was a chance that Smith might, from force of habit, return to his usual haunts. But it was a small chance. Flynn knew. A cab hurried by. Flynn whistled, but the cab sped on. Another taxi, hurrying down the opposite side of the street, whirled around and the door swung open before Flynn. "Just drive," he ordered, and slumped in the seat, kicked off his shoes, wiggled his toes in damp socks and promptly went to sleep.

He awakened half an hour later. The cab was stopped, even the meter was silent. Flynn looked around and saw he was parked in front of an all-night lunch stand. Driver evidently decided he needed a cup of coffee. Coffee might go well, Flynn thought. And ham and eggs and maybe some pie. He bent over fumbling in the darkness for his shoes.

A car paused beside the cab, then pulled in front to park. Flynn granted as he tied his laces, raised his head just in time to see another driver climbing out of the taxi parked directly ahead. He held his breath as the man

"I'll talk."
 "I picked them up—this guy and the girl—over on the avenue, in front of some of those apartment houses. I thought they were just a couple of petters. They said to just drive around and they talked for a while."
 "Finally the fellow asks me if I know where there's a preacher. Said they wanted to get married. Then they argue some more and it seems like the girl is doing most of the talking. Then she asks me to stop."
 "Driver," she says in that soft voice, "will you help us out? My fiance and I want to get married, but his father don't like it."
 "Now me, I'm sort of a romantic guy, and I like to help out a couple of kids—"
 "You can tell your love story to the captain, Nick," Flynn said shortly. "Right Now I want to know one thing. Where does this girl live?"
 "I swear—I swear I don't know. Honest, I let her out at a subway—honest—"
 "There are ways of improving your memory, Nick," Flynn interrupted. "I hope we don't have to use them."

The girl with the smoky eyes tugged at the straps on her battered suitcase, pulling it closed, finally turned the key in the lock. She rose hurriedly, moved to the dresser, slammed drawers open and closed as she made sure nothing had been forgotten.

The mirror caught her reflection as she paused to light a cigaret. Her dark hair needed attention; she applied lipstick hurriedly to her firm, full-lipped mouth, centered in a girlish face. Her cheeks were pale, her eyes tired and for the moment lacking fire.

Tomorrow I'll be home, she thought. Everything is finished here. The police will never know, not even John Douglas will know. The thought of him made her pause, stare at her own reflection

"Hello, Nick," he said softly. The driver whirled on the stool, stared at Flynn, then turned back to his coffee. Flynn's own driver got up, quickly.
 "Just stopped for a cup of java," he explained. "You were having a good sleep and I hated to disturb you. All us drivers usually stop here and gossip and eat."
 "Glad you did," Flynn answered. "I've been looking for this guy." He jerked his head toward Smith.
 "Who? Nick?" the driver asked. "Nick's all right, Sergeant. Now if he was speeding, maybe—"
 Flynn ignored him, sat on the stool next to Smith.
 "I've been looking for you, Nick," he went on. "About that fast one you pulled tonight. Here's your driver's license."
 "Oh that?" Smith turned to him. "Sorry if I almost spilled you, Sergeant. That girl—"
 "Yeah, that girl—" Flynn broke in. "Where is she? Where did you pick her up?"
 "I don't remember. Hell, she was just another fare to me—didn't even give me much of a tip," Nick growled over his coffee. "You better start remembering, Nick," Flynn said quietly. "There was a murder—and you're a possible accessory."
 "A—a what?" Smith choked.
 "A murder—man killed. Maybe that kid who jumped out of the cab did it. You helped him and the girl get away. How about it, Nick? Are you going to talk or am I going to have to take you in?"

in the mirror. John had been so kind, so helpful, without knowing. He had asked no questions, demanded nothing. He was in love with her—wholly, helplessly. Perhaps he would hunt for her. No—he would return to the place he had first met her—and she would never go back.
 It was just as well. There was no place in her life for love, but—
 The buzzer interrupted her thoughts. Someone at the apartment door. The porter, for her bags. She hurried to open it.
 Dan Flynn was framed in the doorway. He was smiling. His glance took in the disordered room, the packed suitcase on the floor.
 "You going somewhere, Miss Johnson?" he asked pleasantly. "Sorry to upset your plans, but you'll have to come with me."

City Federation Meets on Monday at Clubhouse

The Cisco City Federation of Women's Clubs met Monday afternoon in regular monthly session with Mrs. A. J. Olson, president, in the chair.

Mmes G. B. Kelly and Olson, representatives from the Twentieth Century and First Industrial Arts clubs, respectively, to the annual state convention of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, held during the past week in Wichita Falls, gave interesting and detailed accounts of the proceedings of the convention.

On the musical program which followed, piano and vocal selections were presented by Mrs. Lee Clark, and the high school freshman trio, composed of Bonnie Jean Wilson, Betty Jean Boyd and Allene Ely, accompanied by Betty Slicker, sang, "My Wild Irish Rose."

Fifteen members responded to roll call.

Women: "Build-Up" Way To Relieve Those Pains

A weak, run-down, under-nourished condition calls for attention. Such a condition often causes functional dysmenorrhea to get its foothold. That's bad thing which leads to much of women's suffering from headaches, nervousness, those cramp-like pains. A very good way to relieve such pains—women by thousands have found relief by the proper use of CARDUI. It stimulates a lagging appetite, assists digestion and assimilation, thus helps build physical resistance to periodic pain. Taken just before and during "the time," many women also report that CARDUI lessens the pain and discomfort of the period.

Bride-Elect Is Complimented by Bridge Party

Miss Betty Fee Spears, bride-elect of Sterling Drumwright, was feted with a lovely bridge party given by Miss Lillian Shertzer at her home Tuesday evening. Miss Shertzer is to be a bridesmaid in the wedding.

The chosen colors, pink, yellow and white, were used artistically in floral decorations for the rooms, and bridge appointments.

The dining table was laid with a cloth of white pineapple linen, with a centerpiece of pink, yellow and white flowers, flanked by pink tapers. On the table were placed pastel mint cups, replicas of bridal attendants, bearing pink and white mints. These later marked the places at the small tables from which refreshments were served.

Four tables of bridge were played, with Mrs. James E. Harvey winning high score and Mrs. Roy Huffmeyer high cut. The winners and Miss Spears were presented lovely gifts.

The guest list included: Misses Betty Fee Spears, Mary Jane Butts, Lillian Spears, Marilyn Shertzer, Mmes. Alex Spears, E. P. Crawford, F. W. Snyder, James E. Harvey, Roy Huffmeyer, Yancy McCrea, S. E. Hittson, K. H. Pittard, Paul Woods, F. D. McMahon, W. W. Wallace, Edward Lee, R. W. Mancill, Oscar Cliett, James Moore, R. N. Cluck, John Shertzer and the hostess, Miss Lillian Shertzer.

Grand Chapter Report Is Heard

Cisco Chapter, Order Eastern Star, met at the Masonic hall Tuesday evening.

There will be a called meeting Tuesday, November 28, which all officers are urged to attend. Twenty-two were present for last night's meeting.
