I don't think it matters very much whether I want to grow up or not. Because nobody can help growing up. It just happens. And it's not anything to get excited about one way or another. I want to grow up, because if I didn't ever get any bigger there would be something wrong with me.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The Lord is good unto them that wait for Him, to the soul that seeketh Him. Because Thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of Thy wings will I rejoice.—Lam. iii. 25; Ps. lxxiii. 7.

Thou hast made us for thyself—
Made us for thyself, O God!
Made for thy love, thy service, thy delight;
Made to show forth thy wisdom, grace and might;
Made for thy praise, Oh, strange and glorious thought,
That we may be a joy to thee!

Lenses and Liberty

THE news camera is playing a part in important part—in recording the history of our times. Not only freedom to speak and to print are important these days—freedom to record photographically the passing of events is also important. That is why we think delegates to the United Mine Workers' convention at Columbus were wrong when they seized newsmen's cameras, tore out and destroyed their plates, when the cameramen had made "shots" of the communist flag which suddenly appeared above President Lewis' head.

These delegates were fearful that something discreditable to their union might be recorded; they acted hastily and unthinkingly. Had they paused to think, they might have thought like this: what if the picture had been one which might reflect on a coal company or a steel company, and deputies or guards had similarly man-handled the cameramen and their pictures? Why, the unions would be first to raise a cry of "censorship" and high-handedness. That is no conjecture. It has often happened.

The incident of the communist flag was evidently an ill-conceived and stupid prank on somebody's part. It reflected no discredit on the union. But the destruction of newsmen's equipment and the suppression of picture records of a convention of great and legitimate public interest reflects discredit on the union in a way which the pictures themselves could never have done.

Watching Politicians

A GROUP of New York citizens has organized to watch political maneuvers in the coming elections. The body calls itself the Independent Committee on Political Techniques. Among its aims is to guarantee that politics will be honest.

Sincere citizens who take their franchise seriously will applaud the motives of the New York committee. The movement sponsored by the group is one that could be put to advantageous use in other communities. Most voters are interested in honesty, not alone in the financial kind but in moral honesty. They are interested in the things their candidates say, in the charges they make and the promises they fling about.

Politics is not the God-given grant of a select few. It is a heritage to be shared by everyone in the community. A group earnestly desiring to keep political figures in line can be a decided asset wherever it may spring up.

Fritz Mandl says it isn't true he chased all over Europe and spent millions of dollars to buy up negatives of Hedy Lamarr's film, "Ecstasy." You needn't be ashamed of it, Mr. Mandl; most of us would have done the same thing.

It looks as if Cactus Jack Garner is really serious about being a presidential candidate. Twice in the same week he stayed out after curfew.

A British magistrate advocates a plan to permit offenders to serve prison terms on week-ends. If it catches on here, a lot of people will be slipping up the river instead of down to the seashore on Saturdays.

Unless Norway and Sweden quit defending themselves, Stalin says he is likely to get very sore.

February 2nd in Europe

They were floated among an estimated 300,000 investors.

Spending Rechecked

These investors were in two classes. Some held $250,000,000 of debentures. These are securities not so binding as bonds but having priority over stocks. In addition, about $250,000,000 in stocks were issued.

The debentures were devised so that as long as interest payments were continued, the investors could not step in and take control of the system away from Hopson.

Among the various charges directed against Hopson by congress and other official bodies is one that he piped so many earnings into the pockets of friends, relatives, and his own law and engineering firms that only enough was left to keep the debenture holders off his neck.

SEC claims to have closed many of those drains. The receivership court, in its discretion, may cut off any that may remain. Better times, fewer drains, and sterner administration, the SEC believes, will bring earnings that will put new life into the outstanding debentures and stocks. Bank loans may be paid off first, debenture payments next, and payments to stock investors third. Perhaps even ahead of all, earnings will be used to improve any weakened operating companies. What's left, if any, may go to Hopson and Minge interests. Their own securities come last.

Baptist Sunday School Meeting At Harlingen

DALLAS, Jan. 30 (Sp.)—Thousands of Texas Baptist Sunday school workers are making preparation to go to the valley to attend the annual state Baptist Sunday school convention in Harlingen, March 5, 6 and 7, 1940.

The convention drew an attendance of not less than 10,000 last year in Waco. Messengers will attend from 3,035 Baptist Sunday schools with a total enrollment of 523,522. There are over 50,000 officers and teachers in the Baptist Sunday schools of Texas. 48,601 book awards on teaching; child psychology; the Bible; and other subjects, have been issued to Texas Baptist Sunday school workers in 1939.

It is the first time in the history of this convention that it is held in a city farther south than San Antonio. However, indications point to a record attendance in spite of the fact that it is not centrally located. 185 inspirational speakers and conference leaders and workers will appear on this three-day program. Out of state speakers are Perry Mor-

Texas Poultry Is 45 Million Dollar Industry

COLLEGE STATION, Jan. 30 (Sp.)—Poultry production in Texas is a $45,000,000 industry.

A check-up of figures from the USDA of agricultural economics and the bureau of census shows that poultry ranks fourth as a source of agricultural income in Texas, behind cotton, beef cattle, and dairying, but ahead of hogs, horses, mules, sheep and goats, wheat, oats, grain sorghum, rice, peanuts, potatoes, onions, pecans and citrus.

Cotton brings in around $125,000,000, beef cattle $100,000,000, dairy products $80,000,000, hogs $30,000,000, sheep, both wool and lambs, $30,000,000, goats $7,000,000, mules $6,500,000 and horses $4,000,000.

Texas ranks first in the United States in turkey production and fifth in chicken production, including eggs.

"Poultry in Texas is a $45,000,000 industry and still growing," George P. McCarthy, poultry husbandman of the Texas A. & M. college extension service, commented. "Back in 1912 we ranked ference work, covering all phases of class, department, and administration Sunday school work.

Officers of the convention are: Robert Jolly, president; G. S. Hopkins, Dallas, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Julia Mae Slaughter and Mrs. Mahon Seawell of Dallas, recording secretaries; Dr. E. Douglas Carver of Harlingen is chairman of the committees in Harlingen.

down in seventh place." A break down of the poultry business shows that eggs brought in $30,182,000; poultry meats, including turkeys, $13,619,000; and miscellaneous items, including ducks, geese, turkey hatching eggs, breeding stock, etc., came to $6,199,000.

The New Shoes Seem to Fit All Right

Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Hundreds of thousands of stock and security holders of the Associated Gas and Electric system may be out of assurance that they are not being by another Insull debacle, but anything approaching

Insull's Securities and Exchange commission are convinced that the recent act of the company in going into bankruptcy will result in a hard-shelled receiver to comb through the surplus of the company out of the corporate hair and separate the savings to the security holders.

First off, there are about 200 subsidiary operating companies whose affairs are not badly tangled. The $400,000,000 of bonds outstanding against these subsidiaries were described as "insurance company assets," a term implying they are all-edges. Mismanagement of some of these operating companies has been alleged. That will be the job of a receiver to straighten out. Reports in the SEC indicate some of them have suffered from being "fled" by the top holding companies. But state utility commissions have stepped into the picture in many instances to check this before it could get too far out of hand.

An Unmade Mistake

It is in the upper stories of the holding company system where the receiver, when appointed, will have his job cut out. He will have to cope with a system which was designed by H. C. Hopson, long recognized as one of the smartest operators in the utility field, to secure control of the empire for himself.

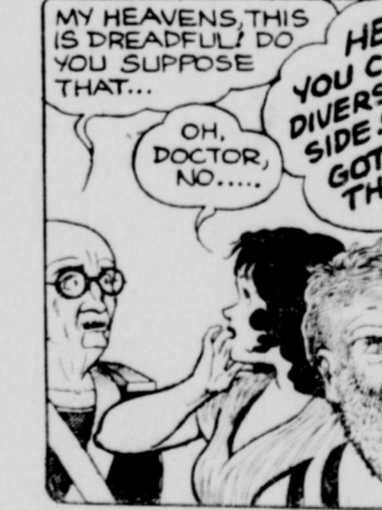

Hopson and J. I. Minge, whose performances have confused and perplexed more than one congressional committee, started their system in 1922 with assets estimated from SEC records to be $7,000,000, of which they owned outright only a very small portion. By 1939 they had built Associated Gas and Electric into a $750,000,000 holding company system with operating companies bound to it all the way from the Philippines to Maine.

If Hopson had been less smart, it is conceivable that his empire would have crumbled under the depression just as did Insull's. But a mistake made by Hopson was not repeated by Insull. Insull had raised money by borrowing bank money and pledging the securities of his operating companies. When the depression hit and Insull's tower began to totter, the banks stepped in and pulled the props out from under it by foreclosing on the operating companies. That left no source of revenue to support the superstructure. The thousands of stockholders whose money had been invested in the superstructure were left with little but fond memories.

Hopson's course was different. He kept his operating companies free of bank loans excepting about $20,000,000, a trifling sum for such a huge system. Instead he pooled the controlling stocks of the operating companies by an intricate network of holding companies. A corporate mechanism as complicated as a terminal switchyard channeled all the control into two main-line holding companies. These two then issued stocks and securities—but not to the banks.

THE WORRY WART

T.M. REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. COPIED 1940 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

Dan hasn't asked me to marry him," she protested.

"He's going to," said Mike. Her cheeks flushed with excitement. "Do you really mean it?"

"Why would I be here?" His big voice was kindly. "Of course Dan's tactics and my own aren't the same. Now he told his folks before he told the girl. With me 't would be the other way round."

Lynda twisted her handkerchief nervously. "I'm terribly happy, but I hardly know what to say." She dropped into a chair opposite Mike. "I'm crazy about Dan. I've done nothing but think of him day and night for the last three weeks."

Mike laughed, a big, jovial laugh. "You'll get over that, my dear, when you realize that you've got nothing but him to concentrate on for the rest of your life."

His voice sharpened again. "But that doesn't help us now. When did you last see the kid?"

"Yesterday afternoon." Then, Lynda told him of the luncheon, going to Varnet's and leaving Dan at four.

"He brought me home," she explained. "I asked him in for a cocktail but he said he must go on.

A very important question had to be settled later in the day. He said he had already made up his mind but the other person had not. I suppose it was some business deal." Anxiety showed on her face. "But where can he be now? I've waited all day for him to phone."

"There, there, my dear," he said. "I've been over-excited myself. Dan's all right. He's probably with some of the lads he knew in college. Don't you worry. We'll all have a big celebration tomorrow night. A special dinner in honor of the happy occasion."

It was after 8 when he returned home. Too upset to ride, he walked, thinking of Dan all the way. Perhaps the boy would pay more attention to business after he married and settled down. Mike looked forward to the day when he could add "and Son" after Donovan on the brass name-plate outside the building on Lower Wall Street that housed his shipping interests.

Puffing nervously on his cigar

he fitted his key in the front door. Ling was waiting in the hall. "Well, Ling, any news?" "Something happen, Mr. Dan."

CHAPTER VII

The first question Mike Donovan put to Ling, the Chinese butler, when he got home from the south Wednesday evening was about Dan.

"My boy in?" as asked, as Ling helped take the bags out of the car.

"No, sir."

Ling never failed to answer directly but he always gave the impression of knowing more than he told. This trait maddened Katie Donovan, but Mike found it amusing.

"I like servants that won't talk," was his reply whenever Katie complained.

As a matter of fact he would have condoned anything short of murder that either Ling or the other Chinese servant did. Ever since he had shipped as a boy to the Orient, he had had a rough tenderness toward the Chinese. When he could, he put them on his boats. He was good-humored, hearty and considerate for them. While Katie was not exactly enthusiastic over having them in the house, they came. Ling and Taki were privileged characters. They had been with the Donovans from the time Mike made his first money. As their fortune increased, the cook and the two second boys were added.

Tonight, stepping from the car to the house, Mike glanced toward Fifth Avenue. His eyes brightened at sight of the restless traffic, the hurrying people and the twinkling lights.

"Give me New York every time," he said, half to himself. "I'm on home ground here. Know what's ahead of me."

"Yes, sir," said Ling. But his tone was sad and his face troubled.

lion when Dan worried him.

"Yes, sir," said Ling.

At 7 o'clock Mike was ringing James Martin's doorbell.

"Sorry, sir, but Mr. Martin isn't in," said the butler. "Would you like to see Miss Lynda?"

Exasperation spread over Donovan's fat face. "She's the one I wanted to see in the first place." He glanced at the butler. "I suppose my boy is here, too?"

The servant shook his head and led Mike into the drawing room. "No, sir. Miss Lynda is alone."

There was a quivering note in Lynda's voice as she greeted Mike a few minutes later.

"Oh, Mr. Donovan, I'm so glad to see you, but where is Dan?" She flounced down beside him on the tapestried sofa.

"What do you ask me for?" he bellowed. "You're the one who should know."

"I?" Lynda snapped. "Really, Mr. Donovan."

Mike caught himself. "My dear child, you mustn't mind me. I'm half beside myself when that boy's concerned." He patted her hand. "I'm lookin' for Dan. I'm just up from Charleston. The servants tell me he ain't been home since yesterday noon." His voice grew tender. "You can't blame me for turnin' to you when it's all settled between you and Dan."

Lynda faced him with puzzled eyes. "What do you mean?"

Mike, forgetting his anxiety, chuckled. "Don't be so shy, my dear. Mrs. Donovan and I are very proud to have you for a daughter-in-law. In fact, the last thing she said before I left Charleston was, 'Tell Lynda how happy I am.'"

Lynda jumped to her feet. "But Ling's laconic tones were heavy with excitement.

Mike stared at him, his teeth biting into the cigar. "What, do you mean?" He spoke harshly.

"Police phone." The knuckles of Ling's yellow hands whitened as he interlocked his fingers.

Mike dropped his cigar. "My God, don't keep me guessing this fool way. Where is he?"

Ling leaned over methodically, picked up Mike's cigar and rested it on the ash tray.

"Cop calling, he say, Old Slip on Front Street." He repeated the word sing-song fashion.

"First Precinct. Meesah Dan in jail."

ery 10 years the census records the nation's development and provides its guideposts for the immediate future. While this work must be done as efficiently and diplomatically as possible, yet it must be done within the time fixed therefor.

"Probably some of the answers are not as easily arrived at as 'falling off a log.'" Shipman admitted. "They may and will require a spirit of cooperation between the one who is asking and the one who is answering. To sum it all up, the 1940 census will be as good and as accurate in this district as the people living here-in, recognizing the responsibility

Scores Die as Reds Bomb Finnish Cities

HELINSKI, Jan. 30 (AP)—Russian warplanes, winging their way out of the southeast in waves, rained more than 1,000 bombs on southern Finnish cities Monday and first reports indicated that scores of civilians had been killed and wounded.

The raids, the worst of the war in some sections, came as Finns cheered news of fresh successes on the front north of Lake Ladoga, where the Russians were officially reported to have left more than 1,200 dead on two snowy battlefields.

Hanko, Turku, Provo and Tampere were among the cities which felt the power of the Russian air armadas.

Reuters, British news agency, said that more than 50 persons were killed and 200 injured at Kanka, south coast naval base.

At Turku, residents crouched in shelters for three hours as 50 Russian bombers, swooping down out of the clouds with their engines cut, gave the city its worst bombing in 53 raids during eight weeks of war. Thirty civilians were killed at Turku, and ten buildings were demolished. The fleets of warplanes left clouds of smoke in their wake from the first that sprang up from incendiary bombs.

The Russian planes flew over the city in five waves, loosing their cargoes of death on each trip.

of Ralph Waldo Emerson, famous lecturer-philosopher of the Concord school, New England, will be placed on sale, together with the five-cent Louisa May Alcott stamp. Miss Alcott was a novelist of the same period, whose "Little Women" is perhaps her most famous work.

On February 13 a stamp honoring Samuel L. Clemens, who, as "Mark Twain," is regarded by many critics as the first real American author and who wrote "Huckleberry Finn," a Mississippi river life classic, will go on sale.

The "author" series is but one of a number of such issues honoring great Americans in all walks of life.

his security. It is a frontier in which great and startling developments foreshadow the future of our race and civilization. A vast, new and vital economy is coming into being. With it come opportunities to attract the best in mind and training.

The day when "hit-or-miss" methods of farming will endure is rapidly passing. The farmer of tomorrow must be as keen of mind and as well trained in his profession as his brother who works in industry is keen of mind and trained, if he expects to compete with other farmers and to fit safely into the economic program. If he does not, he will be pushed out by others more alert and energetic and better prepared to meet the demands that must be met.

For industry, appreciating its vital relationship with the farm—its partnership, so to speak—is going to see to it that the farm is as efficient and as productive as possible. Any economic scheme of things which employs the share-the-profits principle, as the new industry-agriculture order appears to do, demands it. A successful factory program cannot be based on a careless or unprofitable farm industry. The two must meet on equal terms if their partnership is to be mutually beneficial.

to being called in as a state witness. This disappearance caused Compton's father, M. D. Compton, to ask a grand jury investigation of what he said was the kidnaping of his son from the court house.

Compton was witness to the accident in which Guy was killed and was badly shocked, a member of his family said. On a previous occasion he was the first to see of the scene of a wreck and had been severely shocked then.

Anderson testified that as he attended his duties on the oil lease, he first noticed the death car parked on the farm of C. E. Warford about 8:10 a. m. Shortly he loaded a truck of crude for Elton Compton, brother of the dead man. Elton left with his load without being aware of the tragedy.

Deciding to investigate, Anderson went to the car about 10:15 a. m. Seeing the situation, he summoned Warford, then turned off the switch of the still running motor. Officers were summoned.

in the United States and that prospective acreage represents only a small percentage of this. He plans to be in Cisco early enough to make a tour of the section here, to meet with farmers and business men from various communities to discuss the industry and its possibilities and then to appear at the dinner that evening.

"This is not a subject that can be treated in 45 minutes," he said. "I will come prepared to go into the question thoroughly. They can throw everything at me but the furniture, I'll be ready with the answers, and I'll talk bluntly. This is a business matter and we haven't time for any misapprehensions or misunderstandings."

Van Over said that a minimum of 12,000 acres is essential to make a project worth while. It is planned to conduct a variety of test plantings in various soils in this area, closely supervised by agricultural leaders and Woburn experts, and on the basis of these tests to determine the feasibility of the crop and the varieties of the bean which will produce best. There are many varieties, most of them developed by Mr. Van Over and his scientists. He will bring with him to Cisco the beans requested for planting here, he said.

Invitations will be sent to farmers and business men from towns and communities within a wide radius of Cisco to attend the forum, it was announced.
