SERIAL STORY THE CAPTAIN'S DAUGHTER BY HELEN WORDEN

CAST OF CHARACTERS MARIE LA PORTE—model in exclusive dress shoppe, lives on a barge. DAN DONOVAN—playboy son of a rich Irishman, in love with Marie. TOMMY RYAN—leader of the truckers fighting Marie's father. LYNDIA MARTIN—society debutante, wants to marry Dan. BAPTISTE LA PORTE—Marie's father, owner of a fleet of barges.

YESTERDAY: Dan and Marie have a delightful party, but Marie realizes that she can never break through to Dan's level of society. After she leaves, refusing to let Dan take her home, she meets Lyndia. Marie tells Lyndia that she has no intention of marrying Dan.

The success of the William Martin party could be measured by the number of photographers and newspaper reporters congregated outside the great mansion at 88th street and Fifth avenue. It was not yet 10 o'clock but many guests had already arrived.

"Our city editor doesn't care how much dough or S. A. she has," remarked Benny Tompkins, the Looking Glass's crack cameraman. "She can't get by unless she's under 40 and still photogenic."

"S. A.?" kidded Nelly Pry of the opposition, "what's that?" "Social appeal, to you. Sh-h," Benny fitted a flashlight in place and focused his camera. "Here comes the Donovans, father, mother, Dan himself and Lyndia Martin."

Lights blazed. Lenses clicked. "Hold that just a minute, will you Mr. Donovan? Thanks, we'll try one more—" A dozen photographers shouted at once.

"For Heaven's sake, have a little mercy," begged Dan. "I know you fellows have to make a living but—"

Dance hall, sir," the hot dog man told Dan at Pier Six. "I'm going jes' as soon as I close."

"Is Marie La Porte there?" "Yep. Folks tell me she warn't goin' at first. But somethin' changed her mind."

Dan raced up the steep stairs to the dance hall. "Name, mister?" A huge-fisted giant waiting at the top of the flight glared at him.

"Why, Donovan, Dan Donovan," Dan was puzzled. "Mis-ter Dan Donovan—" the fellow bellowed.

Dan advanced hesitatingly to a barn-like room jammed with people, many dancing, others crowding around Bat and Mrs. La Porte, and near them, Marie, strikingly beautiful in a simple blue crepe dress. A blaring band roared out a waltz.

As Dan watched, he saw Marie dance away with Tommy Ryan. Dan started forward, fists clenched, showing his way through the crowd to the whirling pair.

A woman shrieked. Dan heard loud angry voices. The band stopped suddenly. The crowd surged toward Bat. Dan glimpsed him, pulling off his coat, shouting angrily. And the object of Bat's rage was—Mike Donovan!

"I know my boy is here!" Mike was shouting. Marie darted across the room to her father's side. "Papa! Papa! Will you never stop fighting?"

Dan waited as Tommy Ryan pushed into the circle gathered about Bat and Mike. A grimy workman came up the stairs, edged his way to Bat.

Someone who'd seen them said they were stopping for you and Mr. Donovan. Katie cringed, as if she'd been guilty of something, she didn't know what. "They came with us," she whispered back.

$248 Average in Sweetwater Sale

SWEETWATER, Feb. 20.—Thirty-nine animals sold for an average of $248 Monday in the 23rd annual Sweetwater Hereford Breeders' sale. Severe cold weather was a big handicap.

The 17 females averaged $390 and 22 bulls sold for an average of $209. In spite of the cold weather and small crowd, the prices were considerably higher than those of a year ago.

George Glass, Midland cattleman and Hereford breeder, topped the sale by paying $520 for Winona 10th, a choice daughter of Advanxiety, consigned by John B. Strubling and Son of Rotan, Strubling also consigned the sale's top bull, Prince D. Plus, three-year-old herd bull, which was bought by L. A. Wall, Abilene cattleman.

question of superior force, but it also involves a question of English as well as Norwegian rights and the exercise of force by the English only for the rescue and protection of English nationals.

I have no sympathy with the Norwegian protest in the case. It was Norway's clear duty to intern the ship under the circumstances or to have refused its passage through its neutral waters.

It is not improbable, of course, that Norway is more appreciative of the British action than appears, and that she values her indignation more for its effect on Germany than its relationship to what she designates as her neutral rights and territorial integrity.

any action that might be construed as aiding the English, and the prospect of being caught between the Soviet conquest and the British sphere. Lots of implications are involved.
