DIES WHEN TRUCK AND CAR COLLIDE

Sam J. Rogers, 69, Dies of Injuries Saturday Morning

Sam J. Rogers, 69, of Jacksboro, Texas, was fatally injured early Saturday morning when the car in which he was riding with three other men was in collision with a truck at the intersection of D avenue and Eighth street. The truck, a Johnson Motor lines motor unit and trailer, was driven by Dick Simmons, officers were informed by the company. Rogers, cattle solicitor for the George W. Saunders Commission company in Fort Worth, was a former sheriff of Jack county and a candidate for sheriff in the election this year.

The accident occurred at 3:25 a. m. The truck travelling west on Eighth street, was en route to Sweetwater. The car in which Rogers was riding was travelling north on D avenue. Rogers was thrown from the car and the truck ran over his right leg and arm, crushing them. He died in Graham sanitarium about 8 o'clock this morning. His companions, E. V. Carter of Graham, who was driving, and L. A. Ferguson and E. E. Henderson of Jacksboro, were only slightly bruised. Rogers was riding in the right front seat. City Officers Eddleman and Pense took the injured man to the sanitarium. The body was taken to the Neil Lane Funeral home, from where a Jacksboro funeral coach carried it overland to Jacksboro Saturday afternoon. A wife and several children survive.

State highway patrolmen investigated the accident. The truck, veering after the collision with the two-door sedan in which the four men were riding, ran onto the curb, striking down a white way light post, several signs and damaging another car.

Red Army Gains Foothold on Bay

HELSINKI, March 9 (P)—Russia's red army, beating across the ice has gained "a restricted foothold" on the northwest shore of the Bay of Viipuri from which it can threaten complete encirclement of beleaguered Finland's vital Mannerheim line. Despite punishing Finnish air attacks against the troops, trucks, tanks and sledges driving over frozen bay, the high command admitted the invaders had forced a landing and captured "some islands" from which to base further drives on Finland's third city.

The great battle for Viipuri continued with undiminished intensity in the midst of efforts from outside to find a basis for Finnish-Russian peace.

Revival Continues at Church of Christ

Revival services at the Church of Christ are increasing in attendance and interest, according to Bro. A. G. Hobbs of Monahan, evangelist. Services are conducted twice daily, 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

DI MAGGIO STOPS HERE

Joe Di Maggio of baseball fame stopped for supper at a local drive-in cafe Friday evening en route from his home in San Francisco, Calif., to the New York Yankees' training camp in St. Petersburg, Fla., according to Ciscoans who talked with him during his short stay. He was accompanied by Mrs. Di Maggio.

MOSCOW NOW CENTER OF PEACE TALKS

Sweden's Role Seems Finished in Red-Finn Negotiations

STOCKHOLM, March 9 (P)—Negotiations toward a Russian-Finnish peace appeared to have shifted to Moscow, with Sweden's role in the matter more or less finished.

Attention was centered on the whereabouts of Dr. Juhuri Paasikivi, Finnish negotiator, who was reported to have left Stockholm and was believed in Berlin, or en route to Moscow.

Paasikivi led the Finnish delegation which unsuccessfully negotiated in Moscow before the war began last November 30.

There were rumors also that Riga, Latvia, might be the center of final negotiations, and that a Finnish delegation was en route there to meet soviet representatives.

Toward Climax

There reports developed as efforts to settle the undeclared war in Finland drew speedily toward a climatic stage with the probable outcome still shrouded by indecision and official secrecy.

It became known here that Russia had demanded fulfillment of her terms before even accepting an armistice, however.

Although officially confirmed here that Sweden had acted as go-between for Russia and Finland in preliminary negotiations, there was strong insistence that the Stockholm government was in no way acting as mediator.

It was stated further that the initiative toward negotiations came from Russia and not Sweden; that this Scandinavian country did no more, in effect, than to lend its "front parlor" for establishing contacts and for presentation of Moscow's terms.

"Behind-Scenes" Mediation?

In some quarters here, Germany is regarded the actual "behind-the-scenes" mediator, and increasing attention is being directed to the question of to what extent Germany may make diplomatic capital in northern Europe if the Finnish war is settled.

If some agreement can be reached, it is assumed Germany will try to extend her influence in Scandinavia by arguing she had safeguarded this region's neutrality.

Although it was taken for granted the first Russian demands were severe, it was rumored that Moscow might be satisfied with only a section of the Karelian Isthmus.

Brief funeral services will be conducted from the Kelly home today at 9 a. m., with Green funeral home in charge. The body will then be taken to Kansas City, Kan., for burial.

CLUCK NAMED TO SURVEY 12 GRADES IDEA

The executive committee of the superintendents section of the Texas State Teachers association has named Supt. R. N. Cluck of Cisco as chairman of the committee to conduct an investigation of the feasibility and value of adding a twelfth grade to Texas public schools. Some schools of the state, notably Port Arthur, have twelfth grades. The survey to be made by Mr. Cluck, who has accepted the assignment, will consider a uniform organization and make recommendations.

Cluck said he would start the survey at once and be ready to report to the association within a few months.

The project has for some time intrigued educational thought in the state, particularly since the lowering of the average age of high school graduates has raised a problem of youth in college enrollment, but so far no formal study of the project has been made.

Action of the superintendents' section on the issue will depend in large part upon the results of the Cluck survey, it was pointed out.

Hull Gets Report From Moscow

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Secretary of State Hull revealed Saturday that he had received a comprehensive report from United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt in Moscow regarding his two-hour talk Friday night with Soviet Premier V. V. Molotov, but added the soviet government had not asked the United States to mediate between it and Finland.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Fonville had as their recent guests Mrs. Fonville's mother, Mrs. Bertie Rice, of Los Angeles, Calif., and her brother and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Pounds of Long Beach, Calif.

New Strike Found Near Desdemona

Twenty feet of saturation in lime topped at 3,360 feet Saturday drew immediate interest to a semi-wildcat operation four miles northeast of Desdemona in Erath county.

The well, drilled by T. G. Jackson et al on the J. W. Taylor farm in the W. S. Prater survey, will be treated with 1,000 gallons of acid within the next few days. Oil has risen 1,500 feet. Total depth is 3,390 feet. The lime horizon was not identified in reports to the Cisco Daily Press.

Brother of Ciscoan Dies at Cameron

C. B. Kennon, brother of R. W. H. Kennon, died Friday at his home near Cameron. He was 89 years old.

He is survived by two sons, two daughters and several grandchildren.

Wildlife Conservation Leader Here

Joseph S. Wright, chairman of the State Wildlife Federation of Arizona, and Mrs. Wright stopped at Lake Cisco last night en route to Washington, where they will attend the third annual convention of the National Wildlife Federation.

Wright, one of the nation's foremost authorities on wild life conservation, came to Cisco for the first time. He praised the cabins at the lake, declaring that they were accommodations of which Cisco could well be proud.

Discussing the wild life conservation program, he said the national association had been organized under the leadership of Ding Darling, famous cartoonist and authority on the work, to "vocalize national sentiment for conservation of the nation's game resources."

In Texas and Arizona and other states the organization has proceeded to such a degree that every county has been organized.

PLAN FOUND SATISFACTORY WHERE TRIED

Through the Eastland chamber of commerce application has been made for authorization of the Food Stamp plan of disposing of surplus commodities in Eastland county by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corp., it was announced. Sec'y H. J. Tanner of the Eastland chamber, made the application. Friday he and County Judge Adamson and County Auditor Parker went to Wichita Falls, where the stamp plan has been in operation for several months, with very satisfactory results, to investigate the administration there.

"If this plan can be put in operation in this county it will bring between $15,000 and $20,000 of new money into the county," Mr. Tanner said. "It provides for disposing of surplus commodities through the retail stores, thus giving the recipients of relief commodity distribution on normal consumer basis and insuring them of fresh goods. Under the present arrangement surplus commodities for relief distribution are shipped to the local center by carload and lesser lots for distribution to the clients. Local business gains no good, while the commodities are often stale."

Old Method Discontinued

Under the food stamp plan, however, the method of distributing commodities from welfare warehouses or trucks is discontinued, and the relief client is issued $1.50 worth of food stamps for each $1 worth purchased. These stamps are used as money and the client exercises a choice of surplus foods in purchasing from any grocery store. A list of the commodities classed as surplus is issued periodically by the government and the client may use the stamps to purchase any of these from the grocery stores, the merchant depositing the stamps.

A story hour is being arranged for the primary and beginner age children, and the church nursery will be open.

Everyone who is interested in being a better church worker is cordially invited to attend the study course.

Cisco Seniors Are Invited to Tarleton

The senior class of Cisco high school recently received an invitation from Dean J. Thomas Davis, head of John Tarleton college, inviting them to be the guests of the Stephenville institution at an open house on April 10. In addition to the invitation from the dean, letters urging attendance were received from representatives of various Tarleton social clubs, who are sponsoring the affair.

Included in the program for the hundreds of high school students expected to attend will be a tour of the campus, lunch in the dining hall, motion pictures, a program by the music department, and a military review of the cadet corps.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

This columnist does not view the view of some of the able contemporaries in this area that the Trinity canalization project is a bad thing for this section. It is difficult to appreciate any and basis for such a conclusion. To adopt the conclusion that Dallas, Fort Worth and other population centers, directly on the banks of the Trinity, would profit at the expense of ourselves and other "hinterland" communities, one must embrace a theory of destruction and competition. And we do not hope to develop at the expense of other communities any more than Dallas or Fort Worth can expect to grow at the expense of Cisco, Abilene, Breckenridge and their sister communities. The Trinity canalization project is a bad thing for Cisco, it is a bad thing for Dallas and Fort Worth!

If the reader figures that intercommunity competition is essentially a process of the community eating another, then that statement will appear foolish. But the statement isn't made on such a premise, although there is plenty of reason to argue, with that opinion in mind, that the canalization project would still be a good thing for our part of the Texas world.

Now Dallas and Fort Worth are almost as important to Cisco and Ranger and Eastland, etc., as the latter are to Dallas and Fort Worth. I said "almost," because if Dallas and Fort Worth did not exist some other large center or centers would. But if Cisco, Eastland, Ranger, etc., and their sister communities, did not exist either Dallas, nor Fort Worth nor any other large city would exist in this area.

The relationship between the small and large community is circulatory in nature. The circuit—symbol of constant, energizing motion—governs all natural processes. It establishes the power of the electric current. It controls the fish life in Lake Cisco. It governs the rising of flesh from the soil through all its various stages and its return to the soil to begin again the mysterious biological progression. The farmer learns that if he takes from the soil he must put back the elements that prosper his crops. The tradesman knows that if he sells he must also buy. For the law of the circle controls and harmonizes the flow of commerce. No community can take all from its sources and exist longer than its sources. Because of that natural flow, the law of the energizing circuit, it must cultivate its growth and prosperity not at home, but abroad.

Cisco and Breckenridge and Ranger and Eastland are not in competition with Fort Worth and Dallas. In a better sense, we are in

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

And the disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Spirit.—Acts xiii, 52

Rejoice! our God has come
In love and lowliness,
The Son of God has come
The sons of men to bless. —BONAR

The profound significance, and the illumination brought to the problem of living by simply giving one's self entirely, with belief, and love, and joy, to the will of God, is an experience that transcends human language.—Lillian Whiting.

Green Misses a Bet

WILLIAM GREEN, president of the A. F. of L., and his associates are passing up one of the best chances they ever had to enlist sympathy for their cause. Instead of conceding that abuses do exist in the building trades unions and offering to help the government's anti-trust staff to clean up the rackets, Green has decided to fight Thurman Arnold, assistant U. S. district attorney and instigator of the nation-wide investigation into building trade irregularities.

It's not altogether satisfactory to have someone else point out the rubbish in your own backyard; but, if that's what has happened, the most graceful thing to do is to concede that it is there and to offer to remove it. The racketeering and dishonesty that has crept into the A. F. of L. was inevitable and is not the fault of the millions of honest men and women and the dozens of honest labor leaders in the organization. The refusal of the leadership to assist in getting rid of the rubbish, however, necessarily reflects unfavorably upon the rank and file.

MR. ARNOLD'S campaign, thus far, has been reasonably objective. He is not a labor-baiter. He is not out to smash unions. Previous blasts have been leveled indiscriminately against milk distributors, business men and doctors.

The present attack is not directed solely against union men. Contractors and building supply men are also being made targets. The announced purpose of the entire probe is to "clean out" the industry, which means that the broom will be applied wherever there is dirt.

WHAT Mr. Arnold hopes to accomplish, and what has already been done in some places, is to reduce building costs. When the excess prices are trimmed off, more people will build homes and more union men will get jobs.

It is not an invasion of democratic rights to indict and punish men guilty of fraudulent practices. If building prices are too high because some contractors and some union men are entering into collusion, prospective home-builders and union craftsmen, who are directly affected, have a right to know about it.

Louisiana legislators defied the defeated governor and refused to respond to a call for a Long duck session.

Germany has agreed to be courteous to American vessels. Nazi captains will probably doff their hats before firing a torpedo.

If nothing else, Sumner Welles may learn that it's a good idea to See America First.

Items of Interest From Putnam

Wednesday noon, the radio arts class of the Putnam high school presented a program as follows:
Commercial advertising, Wilbur Caraco; Song, "The Rainbow," G. S. Quints; reading, Maxine Harper; continued story, "Gold," Bill Gaskins and Bobby Clinton; sound effects, Lenox Byrd and W. P. Yearbrough.

The Putnam students were permitted to attend the show "Gotha," which was presented at the Baird high school auditorium Wednesday afternoon. The students were given bus transportation.

A drama entitled "Love Never Failing" will be presented at the Putnam Methodist church Sunday evening at 7:30. The cast will include twelve characters, and the public is cordially invited.

Last Monday afternoon the Putnam Women's Study club met at the home of Mrs. E. C. Waddell. The following program on "Statesmen" was given:

Roll call; a beautiful building, architecture appreciation, director, Mrs. I. E. Cook; "As I Saw It," by E. B. Wilson, Mrs. Mark Shurwin; John J. Pershing, Mrs. B. Herring.

E. C. Waddell received a letter from Congressman Clyde L. Garrett Friday morning, stating that his appointment to the office of postmaster of Putnam had been recommended to the senate for consideration, and his confirmation would be made within the next few days.

Throughout the state and nation, at 7:30 Friday evening, April 5, all eyes will gather at the nearest prescribed reunion for a buffet supper. At 9 p. m., Dr. Frank L. Turner, active president of McMurry college, will address them through the Texas State network. At the conclusion of the address, voices of all alumni will be singing the alma mater.

The morning of Founders' day, on the college campus the ex-students' organization, with Alsie Carleton, in charge, will conduct the celebration honoring the 1940 seniors.

is given 50 cents worth of blue stamps. These stamps are issued only to those who are certified as eligible to receive them. Identification cards are issued. The stamps are sold or given, as the case may be, under regulations laid down by the administration. They are spent as cash, the holder of the stamps buying just as he wishes of the goods classed as surplus and paying for them out of the stamps. The stamps cannot be traded.
Well Pleased
Wichita Falls merchants were said to be extremely well pleased with the stamp plan, which has answered much of the criticism arising from former methods of administering relief, as well as putting the relief food distribution administration on a business-like basis, returning profits and benefits to local merchants as well as to relief clients and distressed commodities.
The demand for the plan has been so great, however, that considerable delay in acting upon the Eastland county application has occurred. Mr. Tanner said he and county officials hope to have the program approved and starting within the next few weeks, however.

MOTORISTS—

In most states the law requires you to have a rear view mirror. It's a necessary part of safe driving. But there isn't much use having such a mirror if you can't use it. The Oil Belt Safety Council points this out. Never pile baggage so high in the back seat that you can't see through the rear window. And keep the rear window clean.

Texas' carbon black, used by tire makers to toughen rubber, is made from sour gas, unfit for other commercial use.

BRUCE CATTON'S AMERICAN ROUNDUP

WASHINGTON—A broad expansion of Assistant Attorney General Arnold's anti-trust campaign is likely to follow the Senate's action in voting additional funds for his division.

1. A study of the costs of food distribution, including an investigation into milk costs all over the country, and a thorough survey of the problem of interstate trade barriers.

2. An equally comprehensive study of the costs of war materials such as are being purchased in the government's huge rearmament program.

SENATE INCREASES FUNDS BY $100,000

THE budget sent up to Capitol Hill by the President had the anti-trust outfit slated for a $100,000 cut from this year's $1,309,000. This would have pulled the teeth of the famous building costs investigation. Arnold estimates that at the least it would have meant pulling grand jury investigations from five cities.

After a good deal of debate, the Senate voted to restore the cut and add another $100,000. This isn't any means as much money as Arnold thinks his division could use profitably, but it makes some expansion possible.

"We ought to have another million, but a hundred thousand is better than a kick in the pants," he says, philosophically.

MANY REQUESTS FOR FOOD PROBE

ARNOLD looks on the food cost study as fully as important as the present investigation of landlord-tenant suits.

WOULD BE EASY WITH MORE MEN
THE matter of keeping down war material prices has had a prominent place on his calendar for months.

"The government is going to spend enormous sums for these things," he says. "The question is, will that money be a stimulus to business, or will it simply raise prices—as the housing subsidies did in New York?"

Arnold has hit on a new slogan. He no longer talks about monopoly; instead, it's "free trade within the borders of the United States." He asserts this "free trade" could be made a reality if the anti-trust division had a permanent staff of 400 trained men.

"Most of this stuff is a push-over," he declares, "if you've got enough men."

SERIAL STORY

$15 A WEEK

BY LOUISE HOLMES

COPYRIGHT, 1934, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
ANN BROWN—orphan daughter of a gambler, alone in an unfriendly city.
PAUL HAYDEN—stock room boy with ambition.
STEVE CLAYBOURNE—wealthy playboy.
CLARA BROOKS—dime store counter girl.
IRENE TEMPLE—society debutante.

YESTERDAY: Arrested for driving while intoxicated, Steve sends Ann home in a cab. Clara arrives at the same time, tearful drunk, and angry because the men practically threw her out. But by Monday the party has gained glamor for Clara and she regales her friends with the story. Paul overhears, is angry over Ann's part in the affair.

CHAPTER XVI
Ann briefly described the unsuccessful evening to Mrs. Pringle. "I knew better than to go," she concluded. "That isn't what I want—parties with men who wouldn't speak to me if they happened to be with their mothers or sisters."

"Or wives," Mrs. Pringle put in. "Gracious—do you suppose they were married men?"
"Not young Claybourne—the world would hear about it if he got married. But Jake Baltane has a wife, my husband's niece is her personal maid. Very likely Florabelle's friend is married too."
"I don't know what comes over men, too much money, I guess. Now there's my Joe—he may not be much, but he's faithful. I never leave him enough money to be anything else."

Ann began, "Oh, I don't think Florabelle would—" She did not finish the remark. After all, what did she know of Florabelle? Beautiful apartment, stunning clothes, frequent parties, a glamorous appearance.

Ann pondered over the queer assortment of girls who lived on the third floor of Mrs. Follet's rooming house, not realizing that they represented a cross section of thousands of rooming houses, a coming together, through necessity, of varying personalities, each with her own set of emotions and standards, each trying to lick life in her own way.

There was Clara, weak and silly and loving; the twins, gaily riding their popularity in the cheap taverns; Myrtle, grieving for a worthless husband; Florabelle, pitying her not-so-young beauty against terrific odds for the sake of transient thrills. And there was Ann, herself, an ambitious reached home at the same time. "Good. She's a witless little sap, but I wish all saps well."

"Kind of you," Ann laughed. "She was mad as a hornet."
"Well, I don't blame her. Those birds were none too subtle."
"Unsubtle is the word. They shoved her into a taxi, saying that it was time to throw out the trash. That's what made her mad."
"They didn't?"
Ann went to the door. "Nice to have seen you. Goodbye." Hurrying along the sidewalk, she found Steve beside her.

Two definite reasons stood in the way of loving Paul Hayden. First, he had plainly stated that love and marriage were outside his calculations. She admired him for his honest directness. Secondly, Ann intended to climb the ladder of success alone, unimpeded by ties of any kind. This meant that she must be on guard to keep her emotional self in the background.

Ann left the shop at 5 o'clock to find Steve Claybourne cooling his heels in the gloomy foyer. His eyes lighted with pleasure as she stepped from the elevator and, although she knew she should pass him with a cool nod, she stopped when he extended his hand.
"I thought surely you would send flowers to the jail," he laughed.
"Didn't you get them?" she sparkled. "I ordered a wreath of lilies and a spade."
"Are you inferring that I'm a dead one?"
"Sounded a little that way, didn't it?" She started for the door. "I must dash."
"Why dash? What's the hurry?"
"It's my time to get dinner."
"What would happen if you weren't there? Would your charming little friend starve?"
"Oh, she showed up all right—"

"There's the green light. I really must go, Steve."
"No dinner?"
"Plenty of dinner out on Murray street."
"How about dinner?" he asked.
"No, thank you."
"Why not?"
"Oh, just because."
"Well, well—old Steve must have lost his power of attraction. But persuasion—I'm still good at that."
"Not good enough." She crossed State street, heading for the El. He kept step, jostled by the hastening home seekers.
"I want a chance to apologize," he said.
"For what?"
"For Saturday night."
"Listen—I went to that party, it's my own fault if I didn't like it." They stopped at Wabash for the lights to change and she looked into his handsome, reckless face.
"There's one thing that I'm curious about," she said slowly. "What were you doing in that crowd? You were almost as out of place as I."

"Oh, I don't know. I go hither and yon in search of adventure. I'm always looking for it. If nothing turns up by 6:45 in the evening I go out and break something loose. Clancy is my father's representative in Omaha and a darn good business man. Jake is one of our best customers. I just drifted into the party for something better to do."
"Sounds like a stupid way to live."
"On the contrary, it's fascinating. If you march face forward along the straight and narrow, fate hasn't a chance at you. I believe in meandering along forbidden paths. It's astonishing, the things I turn up."

THE STORY OF DEMOCRACY

By Hendrik Willem van Loon
Illustrated by the author

The Vast Difference Between Democracy and Self-Government

The final destruction of the Athenian democracy gave the cause of "rule by the people" a bad reputation.

CHAPTER SIX

The people of the Middle Ages enjoyed one great advantage over our own time.

They not only had to work for a living but there was only one way in which they could (if they were fortunate) hope to make that living. They had to dig in the soil, and as that soil, from the outrageous treatment it had received for almost a thousand years, was completely exhausted, they had to dig very hard. That left them little spare time for contemplation, and the few who loved to indulge in that expensive luxury were buried in some cloister and as faithful members of the best of all totalitarian states—the super-empire of the church—they were very definitely conscious of the limits imposed upon their political speculations.

But they had already been shrewd enough to discover the tremendous value of "quotes." To "quote some one" means that you use another person as the authority for a certain statement or opinion which you insert in your own writings.

The mediaeval writer upon the dangerous subject of politics used quotes, and in nine cases out of ten, he quoted from Aristotle.

It was true that that ancient Greek author had come to him in a rather round-about way. The original Greek had been translated into Arabic. The Arabic version had thereupon been carried to Spain and had been re-translated into Latin. This process of linguistic laundering had sullied rather than cleansed the original text, but nobody knew the difference and so nobody cared.

And Aristotle was always a safe person from whom to quote. Because his erudition, even the highly suspicious Church Fathers had bowed their pious heads with deep reverence.

Yes, Aristotle was the ideal mine of information for all mediaeval writers, but unfortunately for the sake of the democratic ideal, that famous disciple of Plato hated democracy almost as thoroughly as Thomas Carlyle came to do twenty-two centuries later when he dismissed all democratic forms of government with a contemptuous sneer and grunted, "Democracy! Huh! A form of government in which the vote of Judas is as good as that of Jesus!" (By the way, you will observe that I use "quotes.")

This intense dislike for democracy on the part of Aristotle was quite logical and entirely understandable. Under the clever leadership of Pericles in the fifth century B. C., the city of Athens had enjoyed—for a few brief years—such an outburst of democratic glory that even today the world is still talking about this Golden Age.

But I said it had lasted only a few years. It had started in 444 B. C. It had been all over in 429 B. C. And most people laid the blame for this defeat to the outrageous misrule of the Demagogues (the rabble-rousers) who succeeded Pericles and who, hiding behind their temporary bill-of-rights, had merely used their own liberty of expression to enslave all those who did not agree with them.

The final destruction of the Athenian Empire, after the treason of Alcibiades (usually regarded as the best example of an aristocrat gone democratic), had given the cause of "rule by the people" such a bad reputation in the eyes of all well-balanced and reasonable-minded people that according to Aristotle (who of course had an axe to grind), democracy was the perversion of that "desirable form of government" which one might call "constitutional government." To Aristotle this meant the rule by the majority of all free and equal citizens as opposed to a monarchy or an aristocracy.

And so, as early as the fourth century B. C., there were already people who were beginning to recognize the vast difference that exists between "democracy" and "self-government."

For Sheriff

W. A. (Walter) EVANS

Evans States Platform In Sheriff Race

Fellow Citizens:

I am now taking a serious step—not through any personal ambition—but through an answer to a public demand placed upon me.

Several months ago, some friends suggested that I enter the sheriff's race. Since that time I have been solicited day after day until it has come to look like a conscription. I strongly believe in the sovereign right of plain citizens to conscript their candidates.

In view of this attitude, and in the face of the solicitations I have had, as one who wants to be a good citizen, I feel that I can have no choice other than to offer myself for service as sheriff for the next two years.

I am just a plain, working man 37 years of age. My home is on the Eastland-Cisco highway. I have spent all of my life in Eastland county. I have never held public office, either elective or appointive. My business is trucking contractor and house moving.

My personal ambition has been to make a living for my family—to raise and educate my three children, and to help them to make good citizens.

Now, I realize the sheriff's office pays a good salary. To one who works as most of us do, it looks good. I shall feel amply paid to work at the sheriff's job just as hard as I do my present manual labor. It will not be enough to run down the reports that come to me, I expect to go out and look for sheriff's business just as I now go out and hustle trucking business. I have seen a golden opportunity for this kind of service. I believe that by cooperating with other officers properly and by working at the job like other citizens must work, that crime can be reduced, our highways made safer and the moral welfare of our youth can be more carefully safe-guarded.

"Big Criminals"
I believe the man who steals a million dollars is a criminal just the same as the boy who steals a chicken. In fact, I firmly believe that if we will start enforcing the law vigorously against the big criminals, the larger portion of the little racketeers will quit the crime business voluntarily. Less than equal justice is not justice.

All I ask is a fair trial in the court of public opinion. I shall not try to pull wires through church, lodge or society. I shall not sponsor or tolerate any whispering campaign, or any other way to try to unjustly control a black vote. My only desire is to keep everything on the barrel-head, open and above board. Let each voter use his own poll tax unimposed and I shall be glad to abide by the results.

After you have placed this responsibility on me, I realize fully it is still your office and I will be only your hired hand. I want every citizen to keep his eye on the office and cooperate with me. I promise only to work hard and give you two years of the best service of which I am capable. It's your business. I shall abide by your choice—neither boastful nor complaining.

Sincerely,
W. A. (Walter) Evans.

Canadian Government Hangs in Balance Because of Army Lieutenant's Chill

By JAMES MONTAGNES
NEA Service Special Correspondent

TORONTO, Ont., March 8 — An army overcoat has become the symbol of the issue on which Canada's government will stand or fall at the election March 26.

It is the coat that Lieut. Colin Campbell didn't get. At least he didn't get it in time. The missing greatcoat has grown into an issue that promises to go down in history with Britain's famous "khaki election" after the World war.

Campbell, a former colleague of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn of Ontario, enlisted as soon as Canada entered the war. But through the bitter-old days of October and November, Lieut. Campbell couldn't get an overcoat. He caught a severe cold. That set Premier Hepburn investigating CHARGES CANADA NOT PREPARED

He charged that the lack of that coat typified a lamentable lack of preparation for the war that went all the way down the line. And he used it as a basis of a broad attack on the dominion government of Premier Mackenzie King.

Ontario Premier Hepburn, though himself a liberal, is here allied in Ontario with the conservative opposition to the King government.

The conservative charge that the liberal government did not take adequate preparedness steps during the two years preceding the declaration of war, nor since it began. The liberals reply that a few slips have been inevitable in so tremendous an effort, and that in general their war effort has been adequate.

Conservatives also claim that 10,000 dependents of soldiers and sailors are not getting sufficient separation pay, and that mothers and wives of men overseas suffer hardships because there is too much red tape between them and dependents' allowances.

ELECTION TESTS KING'S MAJORITY
Premier King's liberals had a big majority in the parliament just dissolved as one of the last acts of Governor-General Lord Tweedsmuir before his death.

They defend their war-effort records as including completion of Canada's coast defenses, sending of three contingents of trained troops to England, getting 90,000 men under arms, completing plans for training a huge air force and successful war financing plans.

Premier King's conservative opponent for the premiership is Dr. Robert J. Manion, who started out as a liberal in 1917, became a conservative in 1921, and has been leader of that party since 1938. He is 58, married, and saw active service in the World war. He promises a national government made up of the "best brains" of both parties.

the person of Mr. Steve Claybourne."

"She darted another glance at him. 'Steve wasn't so bad,' she said."

"That's what I thought. There's more than one way of pulling yourself to a higher level."

"Ann did not like his tone. She said, with spirit, 'It isn't my fault if I happened to meet him.'"

"Certainly not and it may be to your advantage if you play your cards right—and I think you will."

"Are you deliberately trying to be nasty, Paul?"

She felt hurt and bewildered. She couldn't know of the impression left by Clara's remarks. And she couldn't know that Paul was bitterly disappointed and confused as to the reason for his disappointment.

He did not answer and they hurtled onward in silence. The train, near Paul's station, Ann raised her eyes. She had no idea of the effectiveness of her upward glance. Her lashes were remarkable, long and curling and gold tipped. Paul, who had been gazing somberly at her averted face, started when she looked up.

"Friends?" she asked.
"Yes," he nodded gravely.

standings?" She was so in earnest that she smiled for the first time. Paul's smile was one of the nicest things about him. It began with his eyes and ended in a flash of white teeth.

"I wasn't sure you wanted to be friends," he said.

"Oh, yes," she breathed.

The train was slowing. Paul said, "Let's walk in the park tonight and smell the spring."

"All right," she laughed. Ann leaned down to catch one more glimpse of him as he strode across the platform. She was only half aware that her blood sang deliciously.

In 1938 the total tax on Texas oil averaged 9.3 cents per barrel.

Oil was accidentally discovered at Corsicana, first large oil field in Texas, in drilling a water well for the city's water supply.

Oil supplanted cotton as Texas' largest money crop in 1929.

A recent survey by an oil company showed that its employees received 15.6 cents of each dollar it spent, while the stockholders got 3.7 cents. The tax collectors, however, got 23 cents, or more than both groups combined.

partnership with these large centers, a partnership vital to them. For it is not necessary to live in these cities to realize the benefits of the social and economic organization of which we are a part. On the contrary, these smaller cities are indirect, often direct, beneficiaries of the advantages that the larger cities accumulate. If this were not true the ratio of cost between the smaller and larger would become prohibitive and the smaller would die. That would destroy the larger's source of support. The larger would then die or decline.

It is foolish to expect any fundamental change in the relationship between the larger and the smaller cities and towns. As the larger grows, so will the smaller. It is better, considering that the relationship is indispensable to plan for and encourage growth together. Thus it is better to help Dallas and Fort Worth promote the Trinity canalization program as benefiting the whole area, rather than to oppose the efforts of those communities in the selfsame spirit of narrow selfishness of which they have been accused. We shall all gain benefits then, rather than none. Reduction in transportation rates will make our own communities more attractive for homes and industries.
