FOCUS EFFORT, HINES TELLS COFC FORUM

Dissipation of Energies Among too Many Projects Decried

Harry Hines, member of the Texas Highway commission, told the Cisco chamber of commerce dinner-forum Friday night that dissipation of community energy among too many projects, and particularly projects out of relation to community resources and character, was obstructive.

The need is for a focusing of the personalities and the talents of the community upon certain definite and realizable aims, he told a group of guests at the First Christian church who attended the March forum of the Cisco commercial institution. The attendance, cut down because of the county interscholastic league events at Ranger, was near 100.

E. P. Crawford, chairman of the chamber highway committee, presided and introduced Mr. Hines. Entertainment included music by the Ray Judia orchestra and two numbers by Cisco's "Merry Quints," five young Cisco artists, four of whom play violins. They are Misses Gloria Graham, Rose Ann Wood and Patty Jean and Emily Jo Boyd, violinists, and Miss Betty Slicker, pianist.

Accompanying Mr. Hines were Cal Speedy, Austin newspaperman and campaign manager for Mr. Hines in the race for governor, which the commissioner recently entered, and Joe Erwin, Southern Methodist university student and president of the Future Democrats of Texas. Irwin told Cisco friends of Cecil Edwards, Cisco SMU student, that young Edwards is certain to be the next campus editor at SMU.

Another and casual guest at the dinner was John H. Booth of Indianapolis, executive secretary of the board of church extension of the Christian church, who was here on church business. He left for San Antonio Saturday morning.

Hines, an eloquent speaker, told the forum that the trouble with most communities in their program community building is division among the leaders and the citizens, a tendency to pull at cross purposes or not pull at all. He decried the gossip mongers, and spoke of "community love" as distinguished from this condition as the force which mobilizes the people into effective assault upon the problems and the objectives that are faced.

Mr. Crawford introduced as special guests for the evening County Judge and Mrs. W. S. Adanson of Eastland, and Judge B. L. Russell of Baird.

He explained the purpose of the forum, a regular monthly event with the Cisco chamber, as a means of bringing the community and the board of directors of the chamber into harmony and mutual understanding where the work of the chamber is concerned.

Though hurt badly and weakened, the minister managed to get into his car but could not start it. He blew his horn, but no one was at home at the Baker place, so it attracted no attention. It was believed that it was at least an hour before assistance came.

The Rev. Mr. Walker has been pastor of the Grace Presbyterian church for 15 years. He was also pastor at Baird. He came here from Lamar county, C. O. (Pat) Paterson, county assessor-collector of taxes, is a son-in-law.

REVENGE DEPT
PIERRE, S. D., March 30 (AP)—Tim Benson, WPA recreation director here, is a basketball referee. Provokers broke into his car, stole only his uniform and whistle. "Must have been someone who thought his team was robbed," said Benson.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

The clean-up campaign has been lagging despite the best efforts of the city beautification committee of the chamber of commerce and the city sanitation department officials to promote the cooperation that is necessary to its success. Perhaps the people of the community think their city is clean enough. In some respects, of course, it is. But the real value of the clean-up campaign is not so much in the clean streets and alleys that are the result of the activity, but in the new interest which such a campaign inspires in homes and businesses, the improvement in property appearance and in buildings that results and the increased values that are created.

Cisco is in a bad way for housing facilities. The number of available houses, fit to live in, in this town is practically nothing. Those which need painting and repair are numerous. So much so, in fact, that the visitor driving down the average city street in Cisco is impressed, not with the community pride that once was demonstrated on every hand, but by the general air of carelessness and defeatism which the appearance of the property inspires.

Now this situation can be remedied to a great extent and at small cost in money. It will take some effort, of course. But the effort is worth its expenditure and the increased values that come about as a result of this demonstration of care and pride will more than reimburse.

Judging Teams Practise for Area Contests

Two of the judging teams of the Cisco FFA chapter, agricultural classes of the Cisco high school, went on practice judging tours last week. They were conducted by their instructor, T. G. Caudle. Members of the livestock team making the tour were Gene Duncan, Billy Fox, J. V. Heyser, Gerald Jensen, Harlan Donaway and Odell Plumlee. Members of the dairy judging squad who went to Brownwood were Gail Jones, Curtis Gamblin, Larkin Akers, Ross Harris and Lowell Carlile.

'BEST WINE' AT LAST IS NAZI PROMISE

BERLIN, March 30 (AP)—The 16 documents which the German foreign office published Friday as "finds" in the archives of the Polish foreign office were only "cheap wine" compared with costly vintages to follow, an authorized German source asserted Saturday.

Citing the Bible story of Jesus turning of water into wine, this source observed:

"American statesmen must not go out on a limb and try to put Friday's publication off with the remark that these were after all the opinions of Polish ambassadors as to what American policy is.

"Remember how at Cana the ruler of the feast complained to the bridegroom for keeping the best wine until the end. Maybe that's what we're doing."

He further intimated that the German government was in possession of direct communications by the United States ambassador to Paris, William C. Bullitt, and others.

Complete Digest
German officialdom let the German newspapers have a complete digest of editorial comment and news reports from the United States, with the result that afternoon newspapers featured American reception of the story.

The newspaper Nachrichten, for instance, had the banner headline: "America: Tremendous impression of war-guilt documents." All the newspapers printed many columns of the alleged reports verbatim.

Foreign office officials invited foreign correspondents to inspect closely the original documents, of which copies were released Friday.

Examination showed that the documents offered as reports by Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish ambassador to Washington, who is alleged to have reported to Warsaw conversations with Bullitt, invariably were written on a rather heavy paper with the monogram MFP under which were the words "papier a lettres," under which in turn was the word "Mirkow."

Non-Committal
The reports attributed to Count Edward Raczynski, Polish ambassador to London, which told of alleged conversations with the VAL DOUGLAS — girl sports writer, shipped on a freighter to find excitement.

EDDIE CAVALIER — a prize fighter headed for the title, has a nose to settle with Val.

CAPTAIN STEVE HANSEN — skipper of the Northern Belle.

DUFFY KELSO — Cavalier's manager.

YESTERDAY: When Steve explains that an important contract depends upon the safe arrival of a shipment of mining machinery at Prince Rupert, Val refuses to be mate, signs as pursuer. Three sailors jump ship a few hours before sailing. To wait for new men will mean a costly delay. Val suggests they shanghai three men.

CHAPTER III

There was a broad smile on Steve Hansen's face. "We'll make it right after dark . . . an shove off as soon as we get back. You can nose around a bit by yourself now, while I make a few arrangements." He patted her arm and went to look for Barney MacGregor.

"Barney," he began when he found the big Scotsman. "Barney, we're going to have a little fun tonight. We're going to do a little shanghaiing to replace those three skunks that jumped ship."

The effect on Barney MacGregor was just what Steve Hansen expected. "Take it easy, Barney. It's just a little gag to please 'em."

"Keep talkin' Steve Hansen, but I'm going to need a bit of conviction."

Hansen laughed. "Barney, here's where you come in. You take 30 bucks and scout around a few of the waterfront hangouts. Pick up three guys you think might make pretty fair hands. Give 'em 10 bucks each and explain to 'em what we want 'em to do. Tell 'em what's coming off and have 'em walk along casually behind that abandoned freight warehouse at Pier 7. Tell 'em to put up some sort of struggle to make it look good. Now . . . d'you get it?"

Barney MacGregor regarded his skipper dubiously. "Steve Hansen, it's just a mite bit clearer, they bilge water, but it that's the way you want it, okay with me?"

Val Douglas, seated at most a short while later, felt a tingle that started at her toes and seemed to run to the base of her neck. This, she told herself, was more fun than she'd ever had in her life. She glanced across the table at Barney MacGregor and he gave her a broad wink.

"We're not letting everyone in on this just yet," Hansen whispered to her. "We don't want to take any more chances than we have to. Barney has six of our best men lined up for the job. Figures two to a man ought to be plenty."

He nodded toward a red-headed seaman at the far end of the table. "Mike Kelly, there, used to be a pretty fair heavyweight fighter about six years ago. He says he can go out and bring 'em in himself."

Talk about luck, Barney whispered. "Look!" Three men were coming toward them. They crouched behind the wall, waiting.

Then lowering his voice still further: "We don't want to go along with the boss by any chance, do you?"

She almost choked on a mouthful of string beans in her haste to reply. "Try and leave me behind," she thirled. "Whose idea was this anyway?"

"It's liable to be a little dangerous," he said, leading her on. "If anything goes wrong you can't afford to be in on the mess. Which reminds me, if your Uncle Hank gets wind of this we'll all be finding ourselves lookin' for jobs."

"Uncle Hank is 3,000 miles away and he won't be back for a week. And besides, he need never know. As for me, I don't worry about my getting involved in a mess. I know people who can square anything but murder."

"I've seen shanghai parties that have ended in just that."

The odd, casual way he said it made Val Douglas shiver just a little.

Barney MacGregor, leading his little party single file along the deserted dock, held up his hand. "We take it easy from here on," he whispered. "Another 300 feet and we'll begin to see some signs of life."

Big Mike Kelly took Val's hand in his. "Stick close to me, kid." He whispered hoarsely. "An' hang onto those ropes. We might have tened out against a wall, held her breath. Barney gave a signal and the six of them catapulted on their three victims.

Val, her eyes wide with excitement, had never seen the likes of this struggle. The three victims fought back savagely, so savagely they made hardly a sound.

One of them caught Barney MacGregor with a right that drove him back six feet. The man dropped another with a terrific left to the chin. He was a wild man, but they closed in on him again. Val gasped when the seaman with the blackjack went to work. He lifted his hand. There was a dull whacking sound and the wild man crumbled.

The other two were subdued in a couple of minutes. "Lucky it's so dark," MacGregor muttered. "We're going to have to carry that one guy. He's out cold."

A half hour later Val Douglas stood on the bridge with Captain Steve Hansen as they upped anchor and headed out toward the Golden Gate.

"We've got 'em locked up below, Steve. When do you want to let 'em out?"

"When we're about an hour out to sea I'll go down and talk to 'em," he told her. "I haven't seen 'em yet, y'know."

"Neither have we, hardly. It was so pitch dark out and we didn't dare use a flashlight."

They were plowing along at 10 knots by the time Steve Hansen made ready to go below. He had just filled his pipe when Mike Kelly came barging up breathlessly.

"Hey, Skipper . . . there's been Gregor held up his hand again. "Talk about luck," he whispered excitedly. "Look!"

Walking toward them, a couple of hundred feet away, were three men. "Split up, quick!" Barney ordered. "Behind these two sheds."

Val felt her heart racing. All three at one fell swoop! A minute or so later the three men were upon them. Val, flat-

Club Stages Golden Jubilee Celebration

Commemorating the Golden Jubilee year of the general Federation of Women's clubs, the Twentieth Century club held a celebration at the clubhouse Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The receiving rooms were beautifully decorated for the occasion, club colors, white and gold, emphasized in all appointments. Lovely white iris and yellow tulips and jonquils were arranged on the piano and mantel, while tall gold tapers in silver holders added to the decorations.

The program was opened with a brief word of welcome by Mrs. J. T. Anderson, president of the club, who explained the nature of the afternoon's celebration. This was followed by a history of the club since its organization in the '90's, given effectively by Mrs. E. P. Crawford.

While Mrs. Crawford was speaking, the four remaining charter members, living in Cisco, Mmes. William Reagan, C. H. Fee, J. J. Butts, and W. P. Lee, entered wearing costumes typical of the era in which the club was organized. At the conclusion of the review, Mrs. Fee, District Six jubilee chairman, introduced Mrs. Reagan, district parliamentarian and member of the state board, and bestowed upon her the award of pioneer woman for the Twentieth Century club.

Burnett, J. W. Mancill, E. E. Kean, T. J. Dean, J. T. Berry and J. E. Spencer. The high school trio, Misses Billie Cole, Marilyn Shertzer and Lillian Spears, sang two numbers unaccompanied.

Mrs. Joseph Perkins of Eastland, state federation president, was then introduced by Mrs. James Horton, also of Eastland. Mrs. Perkins discussed federation work during the period in which she served as president of District Six, the year 1920, and members representing the club in that year were Mmes. E. P. Crawford, S. E. Hittson, Alex Spears, Lucretia Irby, J. T. Anderson, C. C. Jones and John Shertzer.

Mrs. M. H. Hageman of Ranger, present District Six president, discussed the present and future of the Twentieth Century club, and members representing this group were Mmes. J. E. Moriarty, Lee Heltzel, J. C. McAfee, Gary L. Smith, F. E. Harrell, Edward Lee, F. D. Wright and W. J. Leach.

Welcome with my such week the day that God has called His day. Sunday is a day of Love. On Sunday we array ourselves in garments not only fresher, but more choice and graceful. Why not prepare the heart even as we prepare the body?

The War of Words

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, who has for many years spoofed his own people as no more outsider has dared to spoof them has a character who, temporarily discomfited, splutters, "No Englishman is ever fairly beaten!"

So it seems to be with the war of propaganda which to date has been perhaps more important in Europe than the war on the Western Front. The English have been beaten—en—but not fairly beaten. And this time there does seem something unfair about the contest.

Radio interchanges between England and Germany have been constant, each country trying to beat down the morale of soldier and civilian behind the other's lines. London papers have forthrightly admitted that thus far on the battlefield of propaganda Britain has been "decisively beaten," and that Goebels has had a walkaway.

BUT the odds really are unfair. In Germany, every effort is made to keep the people from listening to the French or British broadcasts. The secret listener, caught in the heinous crime of listening to the broadcast of his choice, may even have his head shorn off by that German revival of Dr. Guillotine's ingenious invention.

The British can't do that. In a war in which they have announced that freedom is one of their chief objectives it would be most embarrassing to begin the fight by sacrificing the objective. So the only defense is to laugh off the German radio barrage that daily blankets the British Isles.

That has not always been successful. The British papers themselves comment on the extent to which the German broadcasts have appealed to the poorer and less fortunate of the British people, saying "Look, you are being used as sacrifices to preserve a situation in which you are miserable, and have no stake." To the extent that the listener is miserable, and has no stake, this has been effective. It is reflected in a growing movement for peace, compromise, settlement, and it is disturbing to British authority.

Thirteen persons in New York are jailed for picketing against the federal government. "Do your marching over at Henry Ford's," Uncle Sam splutters angrily.

Some citizens still insist they will refuse to answer certain of the census questions. Their personal affairs, they contend, are matters strictly between themselves and the finance company.

A southern mailman had a hard time finding the postoffice and no one would tell him where it was. This is the season for resenting questions asked by government representatives.

THE STORY OF DEMOCRACY

By Hendrik Willem van Loon Illustrated by the author

Democracy Still Ends in Dictatorship Unless Closely Watched

The last strongholds of popular self-government are being threatened with extinction by their powerful neighbors who have submitted to the will of a dictator.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR In the old world, the political development, painstakingly following the Platonic schedule, passing through the complete cycle of events which that old Athenian philosopher had predicted 2,500 years before. In one of the most glorious outbursts of human decency, the best part of the nations sincerely and honestly endeavored to bring about those reforms which would have produced a much more equitable reshuffling of the political and economic cards. But having stared themselves blind on a theoretical "mankind," these poor professors found themselves with no knowledge of "man." Others, who knew "man" very well and who cared naught for "mankind," found it ridiculously easy to destroy this small group of well-meaning enthusiasts. These others then established a democratic reign of terror which for sheer violence and sadistic cruelty remained unsurpassed until Comrade Stalin appeared upon the scene. In their despair and facing complete extermination, the more reasonable elements of society finally banded together to put an end to this intolerable state of affairs.

"Look Here, Now, Jim--"

political rivalries and assassinations. In Poland, the movement was suppressed in the usual Russian fashion by hanging all honest patriots. In Spain and Portugal, the same. In France, the bankers, 15 years after Napoleon's downfall, brought about a revolution which drove the last of the incorrigible Bourbons from the country and bestowed the crown upon a survivor of the revolution—prince of the house of Orleans, who was thereupon acclaimed as Louis Philippe, King of the French, "by the will of the people."

All that happened in or before the year 1830, but the explosion was not serious enough to cause a universal change. The reactionaries continued to suppress all attempts at liberty with unparalleled force and lack of imagination until the outbreak of 1848, which for a moment seemed to menace every throne in every part of the world. But no sooner were the new popular leaders in power than it was the same old story all over again.

Under the new democratic masters there was a complete absence of authority. Hundreds of eager patriots claimed that they, and they alone, could bring salvation to the long-suffering masses. Finally these well-meaning, but unrealistic friends of the common people mired the chariot of democracy so thoroughly that there was no other way out but to surrender the government once more to the old forces of monarchy.

Fortunately, this time a few of the rulers proved to be of sufficient intelligence to bring about some of the inevitable reforms and improvements. It was better to compromise just a little than run the risk of losing everything. After the middle of the last century, every citizen, be he rich as Croesus or poor as Job, could take a direct part in the government by means of the ballot box.

Came the Great war, and in the wake of this calamity a worldwide spread of what this time seemed to be a true and lasting force of popular government. The fight seemed to have been won. But today, only 20 years after Versailles, nearly every one of these democracies, started among such high hopes, has passed out of existence.

In the smaller neutral countries of Europe, popular government survives. It is a strange mixture of socialism and devotion to some particular royal family. Everywhere else, democracy has perished. It passed out of the picture through its own inherent weakness, a deliberate cult of mediocrity, an absolute unwillingness to face unpleasant facts, an exaggerated devotion to material interests, an almost mythical belief in the efficacy of the spoken word and the unwillingness of the burn the home owner for the investment.

There are values aside from and even greater than increase in the worth of property. Experience points to the fact that many days of illness and many dollars in doctor and drug bills are saved by these clean-ups. Breeding and harboring places for disease-transmitting insects are removed. The sources of unhealthful influences which are uncovered by thorough-going clean-up campaigns, even in the most carefully groomed and tended places, are often astonishing. It is well on this score alone to conduct the close inspection of familiar places that an honest-to-god search for removable filth and disease-promoting conditions brings about.

The importance to community safety from fires is another factor that argues for his clean-up. Cisco must keep vigilant if it keeps safe. The credit enjoyed on fire insurance premiums is not determined by the future, but by past concern. The rates tomorrow will be determined by the losses that occur between now and that time. It is not enough merely to have a credit. It is necessary to keep it, and this is done solely by maintaining the proper caution.

The only way to put over his community clean-up program, out of which the entire town and every person in profits in some direct or indirect manner, is to get busy personally on the job. Each citizen must make himself responsible in action for the condition of the premises occupied, and at the same time promote a community atmosphere of concern for cleanliness by assuming a social attitude toward the front lots, the streets and alleys and even the residences of neighbors about him. It is not necessary to be rude or patronizing. It is necessary only to adopt a standard which is applied to those premises over which the citizen has control.

Will you cooperate?

Everybody Would Like to Know the Answers to the 1940 Census

By MORGAN M. BEATTY

AP Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON, March 30.

The census is the romance of America all bound up in blue-green volumes.

Those books tell of the joys and the tragedies, successes and failures of the people who, for 150 years, have been making our land what it is today—the world's richest and most powerful democracy. You and I can't read this epic. It's set down in millions of Arabic numerals.

But the wizards with slide rules in the census bureau can see the romance. Their facts often are closer to the hearts of Americans than many a historian ever got.

Of course, like all accounts of romance, the census account has its ups and downs and its blind spots. There have been padded figures in years past. And it took two census to lift the automobile from the class of "miscellaneous machinery" into its place as a great modern industry.

But, by and large, census statisticians have been uncannily accurate for 150 years, and they've gone deep into the life of America for keys to secrets of the future.

Broken Hearts Dept

A census wizard knows more about love than Hollywood. He can tell you the depression had left 550,000 broken hearts among American women up to 1937. This year enumerators expect to find 500,000 of these, still broken, counting 10 per cent off for those who wouldn't have suffered a broken heart under any circumstances.

Those half million broken hearts represent women who would have been married if the depression hadn't prevented it. The men who would have married them have since taken wives—but they picked younger women, leaving a lost generation of spinsters.

The census experts could have told John Steinbeck in 1930 to head out west to find material for his story of the miserable Joad family. Statisticians knew then the greatest migration of modern times was on full force and playing havoc with their slide rules, and economic problems.

They can even tell you the turkey and chicken population of the United States.

What's all their data worth to anybody?

Starting with the turkeys and chickens, literally thousands of business houses and millions of farmers want to know what that population is. Sixty-seven types of business concerns are asking, including florists in the market for strong fertilizer.

The lost generation of spinsters and the divorce question, on the census for the first time in 1930, will give the census men enough figures so that your school board will know for sure whether a new school house will be needed in your town in the next ten years. Those things help count the fertility of the American women. Unless a divorced woman tell about the children of her previous marriage, part of her fertility record is lost, and the catching on with the public and why.

They Won't Guess

Now the census bureau's slide rule doctors can tell you already many of the things they are going to find out about America in 1940, long before they complete the count. But they won't admit it, because the census bureau doesn't guess.

For instance, they're going to count about 132,000,000 people this year, nearly 10,000,000 more than they counted in 1920.

About 55,000,000 of these people will make up the big group called "the nation's labor force." Some 35,000,000 out of the fifty-five will be the nation's industrial workers—professionals, salesmen, traders and service workers, such as hotel employees. About 10,000,000 will be found in agriculture. Three million will be working on federal and state emergency programs to care for the unemployed. And about seven million will be actively seeking work in the labor market. That's the net number of unemployed.

Another 35,000,000 of the population will be babies and school children under 14. Twenty-eight million more will be housewives, and the remaining 14 million will be students, vagrants, convicts the insane and those who do not choose to work—meaning the retired.

But the wizards with the slide rules only shake their heads when you ask them where all these people are.

"That's the great puzzle of the 1940 census," they say. "We don't know the answer. We quit trying to estimate the population by states in 1937 because we knew the migration of the population was playing havoc with our slide rule calculations."

What does this mean?

It means this generation is witnessing a strange drama of evolution. Can man in America have let his ties to space, to property, and communities? Maybe. Anyway, any Tom, Dick or Harry can scrape up $50, buy an old auto, and go clean across the country from New York to California.

In 1930, Americans started out, helter skelter, to visit Uncle Fred in Iowa, or just to go and find something, somewhere, besides panic and depression.

Strange Things Happen

Modern communications and business methods did some of these strange things to us. Any citizen can clear a check across the whole continent. Credit can be established anywhere overnight.

Only the census figures can measure the impact of migration, depression and unemployment and our civilization and our democracy.

And in a few months you'll begin to get the answers, ground out by mammoth, high speed tabulators, and put together by the wizards with the slide rules.

But, first, 130,000 enumerators are going to ring 40,000,000 door bells, between April 1 and April 30, and ask three and a quarter billion questions. These will go to

Clean-up Committee Chairman Appeals For Cooperation

By Mrs. C. H. Fee, Chairman of the Beautification Committee of the Cisco Chamber of Commerce.

Cisco has the enviable reputation of being one of the cleanest and most sanitary towns in Texas.

We are proud of this coveted name, but to maintain it means the cooperation of every citizen. Therefore, your committee is most anxious that every week be "clean-up-week." This should not be difficult since the garbage wagon comes to your home each week.

For the past two weeks an intensive clean-up campaign has been conducted. The results speak for themselves. Your committees want this to be a thorough clean-up. If your home has not been visited by the trucks to remove heavy garbage, or if there is a nearby vacant lot that needs cleaning, please call your general chairman, Mrs. C. H. Fee, telephone number 10.

Governor O'Daniel has proclaimed April 1 through April 7, Health, Clean-up and Safety Week. Chairmen of these departments of our city, Health, Dr. W. P. Lee; Clean-up, Mrs. C. H. Fee; Safety, Chief of Police M. L. Perdue, and fire prevention, Noah Fowler, will assist you in every possible way.

Cisco has no imposing or beautiful buildings to attract the eye of visitors or passing tourists, but we can be remembered for our clean, shady streets, our attractive homes with a lovely setting of trees, shrubs and blooming flowers.

We want everyone who calls Cisco home to adopt this slogan—"Clean up, paint up and fix up."

7,000 special census workers in Washington, who will start their rolling through the statistical mill.

Then will come answers, facts, the Battle of the Census—and maybe a few more keys to unlock the secrets of the nation's future.

U. S. EMPHATICALLY DENIES NAZI CHARGES

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP).

The authenticity of documents produced by German officials as evidence that "American policy" helped loose war on Europe was challenged emphatically in administration quarters Saturday.

President Roosevelt was the first to comment after the documents—purportedly found in seized Polish archives—were published in Berlin. He declared that propaganda from abroad should be taken with several grains of salt.

Secretary of State Hull spoke bluntly. He declared that the state department placed not "the slightest credence" in the conversations related in the German white book, and denied that the warlike attitude they set forth represented "in any way" the country's foreign policy.

Newspapers Play Big Role in R. C. Cola Advertising

Newspapers will play a strategic role in the 1940 plans of Royal Crown cola, "the greatest advertising and merchandising campaign in our 30-year history," according to H. R. Mott, president of the Nehi corporation, makers of the beverage. "We are taking advantage of the tremendous momentum which Royal Crown's sensational sales increase has given us," Mr. Mott announces, "and again in 1940 we will use the power of the press to push Royal Crown sales upward."

More than 600 newspapers, coast to coast, will carry dozens of hard-hitting Royal Crown cola advertisements. By latest estimates, these newspapers reach 25 million readers.

Color advertisements specifically aimed at almost five million women—"purchasing agents for the great American home"—will appear in women's magazines.

Radio will be vigorously used. Royal Crown cola takes to the air again on February 16, over the 88-station coast-to-coast network of the Columbia Broadcasting system, "Believe It or Not" Bob Ripley will again be the headline feature, with B. A. Rolfe and his orchestra, and songstress Linda Lee. In general the program will follow the pattern of last year's show, which was officially rated one of the top attractions on the air. Bob Ripley promises even greater emphasis upon humorous "Believe It or Not" when he parades his "astounding aggregation of oddities" before CBS microphones every Friday night during most of the remainder of 1940.

Striking billboards in picked locations, store displays, merchandising stunts, and unusual dealer helps complete one of the biggest advertising "pushes" ever put behind a beverage.

DID HE CALL POLICE?
BUTTE, Mont., March 30 (AP).—Speak of adding insult to injury! Thieves stole the car of a police officer from the police parking lot at the rear of the police station and abandoned it—on the city dump.

In the United States, there are 288 insane persons per 100,000 inhabitants.

Seedlings brought from Spain by Franciscan missionaries many years ago are responsible for peach trees which bloom each spring on the floor of Canyon de Chelly, in the remote Navajo Indian reservation, Arizona.

Eastland to Be Lions Zone Host

EASTLAND, March 30 (Sp)—Eastland will be host to a zone meeting of Lions club Tuesday night, April 16, it was announced. Representatives from clubs at Cisco, Ranger, Eastland Breckenridge and Albany are expected at the zone meeting, it was stated. The noon luncheon of the Eastland club April 16 will be dispensed.

Program for the meeting of the Eastland club this week was headed by a skit in which Bob Hutchinson and V. T. Seaberry, Jr., were featured. Earl T. Williams and J. F. McInroe were in charge of the program.

Since work on the club's Boy Scout committee has been completed in the securing of a house and lot for Troop No. 6, the members were discharged.

Leon Ball and Cecil Barham were appointed as chairmen of programs for April meetings, including the zone meeting.

There are 67 ports in Japan open to foreign trade.

Romance

A Modern Linerider
on the Range

'Bulldoggin' a steer's like hangin' a pot'

The modern linerider has a language all his own, much the same as the old-time cowboys used a "foreign" tongue picked up on the range.

These linemen are HANGING A POT on a 50-foot BLACK DIAMOND. They are using a protector on the HOT wires for protection against 13,000 volts of JUICE.

A "pot" is a transformer, fixed high up on a crosos pole. It reduces the voltage to 110- or 220-volts so that electric current can be safely used in your home. A protector is the rubber line hose placed around the wires to prevent shock.

Until a lineman is experienced enough to work atop the pole without fear and without holding on with one hand, he is known as a "clumbthumb." The man working on the ground, sending up tools and handling paraphernalia, is called a "Grunt." "Coon that pole" is the signal to climb a pole. "Suck on it" means to take up the slack in a new wire being strung. A "Johnnie Boy" is an insulator. A "Niggerhead" is a fuse. "The Bear" is the sobriquet sometimes given the boss.

Although the lineman's life is fraught with danger, he is a normal citizen . . . maybe your neighbor. He is one of hundreds of men and women working "behind the scenes" to help make Electric Service efficient, dependable, and economical here.

On him we bestow a title of honor—A Modern Linerider."

This is the fourth of a series of "THUMBNAIL SKETCHES" featuring the work performed by our Linemen in bringing ELECTRIC SERVICE to your home
