DANGER

SERIAL STORY — ROMANCE AHEAD BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1940.
NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

MONNIE MILES — her mania for fast driving almost wrecked her romance.
LARRY COLLINS — newspaper reporter, hunting for the murderer of his brothers.
MIKE BENTLEY — wealthy rancher, knew too much about auto accidents.

YESTERDAY: Larry refuses to let himself fall in love with Monnie until he has learned more about Hugh's death. Riding out to the scene of the accident, he studies the curve. On his way back, he sees a plane land at Bentley's field. He believes he has seen a delivery of narcotics. On the way home, a car passes him. It's Monnie's.

CHAPTER IX

Monnie's car was safely parked in the garage by the time Larry reached the corral. He unsaddled the black, turned him loose, then hurried to the back of the garage. He had to find boot tracks but there were too many in the dust to tell him anything, and he wasn't enough of a tracker to pick out the most recent.

He crept around to the open doors, slid in beside the car, silently lifted the hood. The motor was still warm. He glanced up at the house. A soft light came from the window of Monnie's room.

So she had been to Bentley's. Perhaps he was wrong in believing the plane had delivered narcotics, Larry argued. Monnie could have driven to Bentley's then taken Mike out to the field to meet some friend, flying through. But if that had been the case, why were the lights switched off as soon as the plane came to a stop, and why had Monnie returned home by the rough canyon road rather than by the highway? He wished he might have had a better look at the driver of the car as it passed him.

He was still debating the problem as he rolled into his bunk. He'd ask Monnie in the morning. He wasn't even certain that Monnie's car had been at the landing field. He had no proof that Bentley was there either. Perhaps the bank bandit—that Bill fellow—was using Bentley's field without the owner's knowledge. Bill knew someone with a plane, had used it in his getaway after taking Larry's car.

Before he could make any report to Harris, before he could be sure he was on the right track, Larry knew he must have proof—evidence that would stand up in court. Getting it wasn't to be easy. Nor particularly healthy, if the gang got wise to him. There were ways of getting rid on an overly inquisitive cowhand. Accidents could happen.

Hugh had taken that chance—and lost. Larry would have to take his own risks.

Barnes let him sleep late the next morning. It was Sunday, and there was no work to be done. Shortly before noon Larry saw Monnie come from the house, go to her car. He hailed her.

"Sorry I rushed away last night," he began awkwardly. "I guess I acted pretty much like a fool."

Monnie laughed lightly. "I was the fool, Larry. Forget it. Be seeing you—" She started away. He caught her arm, fell into stride beside her.

"I'm not sorry it happened, though," Larry went on. "And when—"

She stopped, faced him. He noticed there were circles under her eyes. She had been awake half the night.

"Listen, Larry. You almost kissed me. So what? I'm glad you didn't. So are you. Now forget it ever happened. I have . . . Now I'm in a hurry, Mike just called."

"You didn't see him last night?" Larry fired the question at her.

"Of course not! But if I did, what business is it of yours?" she answered, temper flaring.

"I just wondered," he explained lamely, watching her go on to her car. Then he ran after her, leaned on the door as she started the motor.

"But you light was on—the light in your room, until after 3. I saw it."

"Mis-ter Collins" — her voice snapped. "I fell asleep reading. The light was on until this morning. It wasn't the first time it has happened, nor the last. Now if you've completed your cross-questioning, I'd like to go on. I am in a hurry."

Larry spent the remainder of the day apparently walking aimlessly around, actually searching for what he knew he must find. About a mile from the house, in the shelter of a little draw, he made his discovery.

A man had waited here—waited several hours. Numerous matches and half-smoked cigarettes told Larry that. There had been two horses, too. . . . He found marks where two saddles had been dumped on the ground, or at least he thought he did.

That would explain the theft of Monnie's car. Two horsemen had come from Bentley's. While one had crept up to the garage, taken the car without disturbing anyone, the other had remained hidden. If the theft had been discovered, the watcher would have warned his pal. Monnie's car would have been found miles away.

When the car was returned, the man with the horses had covered the other's escape. And everyone at the Hayhook had slept peacefully through the whole night.

It suddenly occurred to Larry that he might have been seen coming from the canyon gate. In that case, he would be wise to be more careful in the future.

And Monnie would have to keep her car locked. If she refused he could take the keys, return them each morning. He'd tell Barnes that he had seen some tough-looking hordes on the place, suggest that everything at the ranch be locked at night.

He mentioned it to Barnes that night. "Found some truck tracks along the railroad fence today, Pete. That bunch of calves would make nice pickings for a bunch of truck rustlers."

"They sure would," Barnes agreed. "Have trouble with them every year. Lost 20 calves one spring."

"Perhaps I'd better keep a look-see around each night," Larry suggested. "And it wouldn't hurt to keep the cars locked and put a padlock on the saddlehouse."

"Not a bad idea," Barnes fell in with the idea immediately. "But don't tell the Colonel anything about it. He still likes to believe that everything is safe just because it's got a Hayhook brand on it. In the old days it was. You could leave your saddle on a fence, go away for a week and it was there when you came back. Now, with all these folks driving through the place, we're lucky if we can keep our beds."

"You ride night herd on those calves. I'll see that you get some sleep. But don't mention it to the Colonel or he'll start another cattle war."

The night trick gave Larry plenty of time to watch for the return of the mysterious plane. He sent to town for a pair of field glasses, borrowed a carbine from Barnes and spent every night from midnight until dawn perched on a hill overlooking the canyon road.

If the plane came in, a few minutes hard riding up the canyon would bring him close to Bentley's landing field, and he counted on Bentley's carelessness and self-confidence to keep him from being discovered. He wasn't worried about rustlers stealing the calves. He had lied to Barnes about seeing the truck tracks. But he kept an eye on the herd.

Monnie had apparently forgotten their quarrel. Barnes gave him an easy job, wrangling horses, kept him close to the ranchhouse during the day, and Larry found opportunity to spend most of the afternoons with her.

Bentley's visits became less frequent and Larry wondered if Monnie's interest in the rancher had lessened. Bentley wouldn't be dismissed easily, however, so Larry decided that probably Bentley was on one of his frequent hunting trips.

He thought it all out as he sat on the hilltop one dark night. He was in love with Monnie—hopelessly and completely. He had a constant battle with himself to keep from telling her.

There'd be time for that after he had settled this narcotics smuggling. Then, and only then, he told himself, would he let Monnie know.

His horse, tethered at the end of a lariat, raised his head whinnied. Someone was coming up the hill behind him. Larry moved quickly to his saddle, pulled the carbine from its scabbard, pumped

How THEY DO SATISFY

"HIGHER and HIGHER"
That describes Chesterfield's increasing popularity and the new Broadway hit of the same name in which Marta Egger, Leif Erickson, Lee Dixon and Billie Worth share honors with CHESTERFIELD CIGARETTES.

Do you smoke the cigarette that's COOLER, that's MILDER, that TASTES BETTER...

Are you getting all the pleasure that Chesterfield's RIGHT COMBINATION of the world's best cigarette tobaccos gives millions of smokers every day... the pleasure of a milder, cooler, better-tasting cigarette? The Chesterfield combination really satisfies.

BETTER MADE FOR BETTER SMOKING

Every Chesterfield must conform to the one right standard of size and shape for a cooler, better-tasting, definitely milder smoke. Chesterfields are made right in every detail to give you the cigarette that really satisfies. (As seen in the new film "TOBACCOLAND, U. S. A.")

Refugee Children, Innocent War Victims, Appeal to America's Heart for Survival

"DEATH-DEALING airplanes ride the skies. The carnage of their crashes sweeps many lands. Armored tanks and mounted artillery roll across whole countries destroying, as in a blight, all standing in their way. Cattle, crops, homes, people—innocent and defenseless children—stand in fear, then in despair, only to fall into destruction. Some will live. They must be aided to endure, to struggle on, to survive."

This was the message directed to America's generous heart by Chairman Norman H. Davis of the American Red Cross, in asking prompt contributions to a $10,000,000 war relief fund to be spent by the Red Cross for help to military and civilian wounded, and the homeless people of the warring nations.

"We must send relief as needed and not too late to be of use," Mr. Davis said. "We must send clothing, bedding, shoes, medications, surgical dressings and food."

ers lavished money and talent on planes, and soon proved they could direct artillery fire and observe the enemy.

The Plane Goes to War

In 1910, Gypsy fliers spied out Mexican rebels for the military outside Mexico City. Next year, Italian fliers in Tripoli photographed hidden Arab and Turkish trenches. In 1912, Balkan pilots dumped crude bombs into Adriatic, killing six people. Compare that with bomb casualties today!

fuse to face facts, nor is it 'meddling' in Europe's affairs to discover frankly our own interests therein and reasonably prepare to take care of them. We certainly haven't gone so far into national ineptitude that we cannot see the danger that confronts us and too lethargic to want to defend our rights and our self-respect!

Mrs. Coy Guy and son, Darrell, of Jackson, Mississippi, formerly of the Laguna hotel here, spent Sunday with Cisco friends.

outriders with heavy fire which broke up their attacks. The spokesman denied any direct offensive had been launched on the channel port of Calais.

Does Not Aspire to Be Vice President

HOUSTON, Texas, May 27 (AP)—Jesse H. Jones, federal loan administrator, disclaimed any ambition to become vice president of the United States in a telegram to former Gov. W. P. Bobby, publisher of the Houston Post.

274 Degrees to Be Conferred by SMU

DALLAS, May 25 (Sp.)—Degrees will be conferred upon 274 candidates for graduation, 21 more than last year, at Southern Methodist university's annual spring commencement exercises to be held Tuesday evening, June 4, in McFarlin Memorial auditorium.

And they died like flies, just as civil pilots were dying. Orville Wright felt the terrible toll was due primarily to that scourge of the air—the stall. So he went up one day, knowing if he failed, he'd never live to tell the tale. He climbed until the plane almost lost momentum—the point of the stall.

French artillery also unleashed a "very violent" artillery bombardment on the German position between the Aisne and Meuse rivers. The shelling was believed to have caused "very heavy damage" to enemy posts, the spokesman said, but final reports were lacking.
