BEF SAFELY REMOVED FROM NAZI POCKET

Through the

By GEORGE

The armament program upon which this country has embarked already is putting in sharp relief one of the most serious deficiencies besetting the national economy. This is the lack of a sufficient number of skilled mechanics. There is unemployment aplenty and among the unemployed large numbers of mechanics, but it is an even more tragic than foolish fact that during all these years that the locusts have eaten our educational systems have increased the proportion of engineers and so-called professionals and have actually decreased the turnout of highly trained artisans necessary to do the work which the engineers and designers have laid out. When you consider that balanced industry requires a considerable number of ex-mechanics for each engineer or designer you can see what a "bottleneck" has been permitted to develop in industrial personnel organizations by failing to encourage the training of a number of top-flight mechanics at least proportionate to the production of engineers and white collar workers.

It takes years to produce a good mechanic. Despite this fact only desultory attention has been given to the problem of providing a supply of competent journeymen. The training of these vital members of the industrial community has been left to the industries affected, to chance apprenticeship or to private trade schools of uncertain standards. Meanwhile our public schools and colleges have been turning out thousands upon thousands of academicians, embryo lawyers, doctors, engineers and others of the professional class, many of whom not only become a drag on an unbalanced social organization by reason of numbers, but are actually unfit for the work they endeavor to do.

This top-heavy condition is the result of a foolish insistence on elegance. Blame our schools with it, if you please, but the reason is actually the determination of mamma and papa that sonny boy shall not be compelled to work for a living as did they, but that he shall sit in plush-lined chairs and make the decisions for others to carry out. As if that entailed no work!

This sort of parental obstinacy produced a fine crop of school leavers, preachers, editors, lawyers and half-baked professionals of every class. It is a pity that any thirty-three million persons in this country should know the difference between a collar-key and a ball-bolt, although the instruments of fixation were in use on the machines used. As mechanics the nation increases the depression and

First Period Of Softball Nears Close

(By Softball Reporter)

Next week winds up the first of the three divisions of summer softball play. The second division will begin on Monday, June 10. The schedule will come out in Monday's paper.

Next week finds all teams in action with two teams playing twice. Putnam is leading with three wins and no losses, followed closely by Conoco and Red Front, with only one loss each. Any team making first division in any of the three divisions will be in the final playoff. First division means the first three teams by percentage. Next week will be the deciding games of this division. No awards are offered the winner of each division, but a beautiful trophy will be given to the leading hitter in each division. A player must play in at least three games to be eligible for the award.

Boxing will get under way probably Monday, June 10. The arena is being constructed now and will be ready by then. This is an additional feature to add to the softball. A game will be played that night. All boys wishing to box must get a written statement from their parents stating their consent for them to box. A meeting is called for 1 o'clock Monday afternoon at the high school gym to organize. This is purely amateur, with no reward except training and experience. A doctor will examine each boy before entering the ring, and will stay at the ringside. Each fight will be stopped in case of injury to any contestant. Small boxing gloves will be given to the winner of each division. Twenty or thirty

Pastor, Wife To Batimore So. Convention

The Rev. and Mrs. Judson Prince and the Rev. and Mrs. J. I. Cartledge, formerly of Eastland, now of Nacogdoches, plan to leave soon by automobile for Baltimore, Maryland, where they will attend the annual meeting of the Southern Baptist convention, one of the three groups composing the largest denomination in the world today.

During the meeting, which convenes from June 9 through 16, reports from churches throughout the southern Baptist assembly will be made, and it is expected that the reports will reveal that the Baptist denomination has progressed more during the past year than any other year in the history of the convention.

Prospects for a decisive denomination by 1941 are in store for representatives to the convention. It has been reported.

FRENCH HOLD NEW POSITION UPON SOMME

PARIS, June 1 (AP)—New French positions on the south bank of the lower Somme were attacked repeatedly by the Germans Saturday as the remnants of the allies' retreating northern armies hastened their embarkation at Dunkerque with the aid of low-hanging rain clouds. The French said they held fast against the Nazi onslaught.

Bearing the brunt of the German assault along the Somme was a single bridgehead which the French succeeded in establishing on the north side of the river. Lesser attacks were launched against French positions on the south side of the stream.

The Germans accompanied their assaults along the Somme with an attempt to land troops by sea on the channel coast between Dunkerque and Boulogne, which they held.

Fleets of torpedo-carrying launches were directed mostly against small harbors and fishing villages.

Masses of infantry, supported by tanks, planes and artillery, were reported by military spokesmen to have taken part in the German attempts to force a crossing of the Somme.

The Germans found their way blocked by strong defenses which the French constructed during mopping up operations along the front last week.

The French reported Friday

NAZIS CLAIM 5 TRANSPORTS SENT DOWN

BERLIN, June 1 (AP)—Raining more death on British troops seeking to withdraw from Flanders, the German air force Saturday added five British transports to its list of sinkings, while the Nazi infantry was reported marching 26,000 French prisoners back to prison camps from the blood-stained fields around Lille.

The German high command announced that the resistance of French units trapped in northeast France had been broken, but admitted that the difficult terrain around Dunkerque, rendered worse by the flooding from canals, was hindering German action against that port, the Allies' point of withdrawal from Flanders.

The Germans reported these naval successes:

Five British transports bombed and sunk outside Dunkerque.

One destroyer and one submarine sunk by German torpedo work boats.

EVACUATION CARRIED OUT BRILLIANTLY

Wartorn Divisions Go
Home as Heroism
Is Acclaimed

LONDON, June 1 (AP)—General Lord Gort, commander of the British expeditionary force fighting its way out of Flanders, came home Saturday to the acclaim of his king, while his soldiers estimated that all but one war-battered division of the original 175,000 men in his army have been removed from the Nazi pocket.

Britain's divisions normally number 15,000 men each, but the claim that one division still was in Flanders recognized that it likely was not intact.

A war office announcement declared that Lord Gort returned to England on orders of the government as a result of the "good progress in the evacuation of the B. E. F. and consequent reductions" of the forces in northern France.

A junior officer carried on the command of the greatest rescue in military history, which continued steadily.

King George VI received Lord Gort and conferred on him the insignia of the Knight of the Grand Cross of the Order of Bath.

To Move Children

Meanwhile, Minister of Health Malcolm MacDonald announced that the government regarded the danger of a direct German attack on England soon as so real that plans for dispersal of school children should be ready by the beginning of next week.

"Parents who do not register their children by Monday evening run the risk of not having their children taken away," MacDonald said.

The homecoming Tommies, saved from annihilation by their comrades' brilliant rear-guard action, said the single British division and two divisions of Gen. Renee Jacques Adolphe Prioux's French army were the only allied troops still covering the Dunkerque retreat.

This would mean that only some 45,000 men were left in Flanders of the 270,000 allied troops which originally were trapped.

Likened to Moore

General Gort was likened by the British press to Sir John Moore, hero of the Peninsular war, who saved his army from annihilation by Napoleon's troops. Returning soldiers said Gort had taken personal command of the rear guard fighting.

While all of London's evening papers proclaimed the Germans had lost half a million men in their attempt to wipe out the B. E. F., an official announcement said the allied supreme war council met Friday in Paris and reached "full agreement regarding all measures which the situation calls for."

Boatloads of soldiers moved steadily across the channel. The movement was screened by the Royal air force, which shot down 56 German planes Friday, with a loss of 16 British ships, and shot down 14 Nazi fighters over Dunkerque Saturday morning and seriously damaged five more.

The air ministry said the battle in the skies Friday raged unceasingly while the allied withdrawal continued. German bombers, protected by swarms of fighters, came over hour after hour and, the ministry said, the royal air force fighters "waged relentless war against them."

One announcement said the British fighters were outnumbered five to one at times.

Increasing numbers of General Prioux' French troops fought through the German lines and reached England.

One small boatload of soldiers picked up two German airmen shot down during a bombing attack and brought them along. The prisoners were given sandwiches

Buck Up, America!

THE people of the United States seem to be suffering from a sort of mental shell-shock as the tragedy of Europe unrolls swiftly before their eyes.

There is greater panic in certain American circles than even in England and France, which lie directly under the guns of the Nazi invader. It is not fear—it is simply shock at seeing the anchors of civilization tossed overboard, one by one. It is horror at seeing an orderly world descend to chaos.

There are signs that this panic has already passed its climax as it should. Up to now the whole thing has had the aspect of a too-hectic melodrama. Now it is beginning to be real, and already there are signs of that calm that comes with reality.

IT is certainly true that the British and French, whose way of life is so much like our own, are fighting a desperate fight for existence. None would dispute the gravity of the situation as it affects the future of the free political and economic life we love.

But at least our own course is clarifying, and as our task becomes clearer, we begin to bend to it, and we find relief in action. Our own defenses have lagged. No nation has had to arm itself for fear of us. Now, in a world which has forsaken order and justice and peace, we must prepare to defend by force what we have failed to defend by negotiation.

Very well. Is there any reason why we cannot defend ourselves? These are no supermen who have overrun half of Europe. They are men. They have succeeded up to this point because they have converted all life into a military machine.

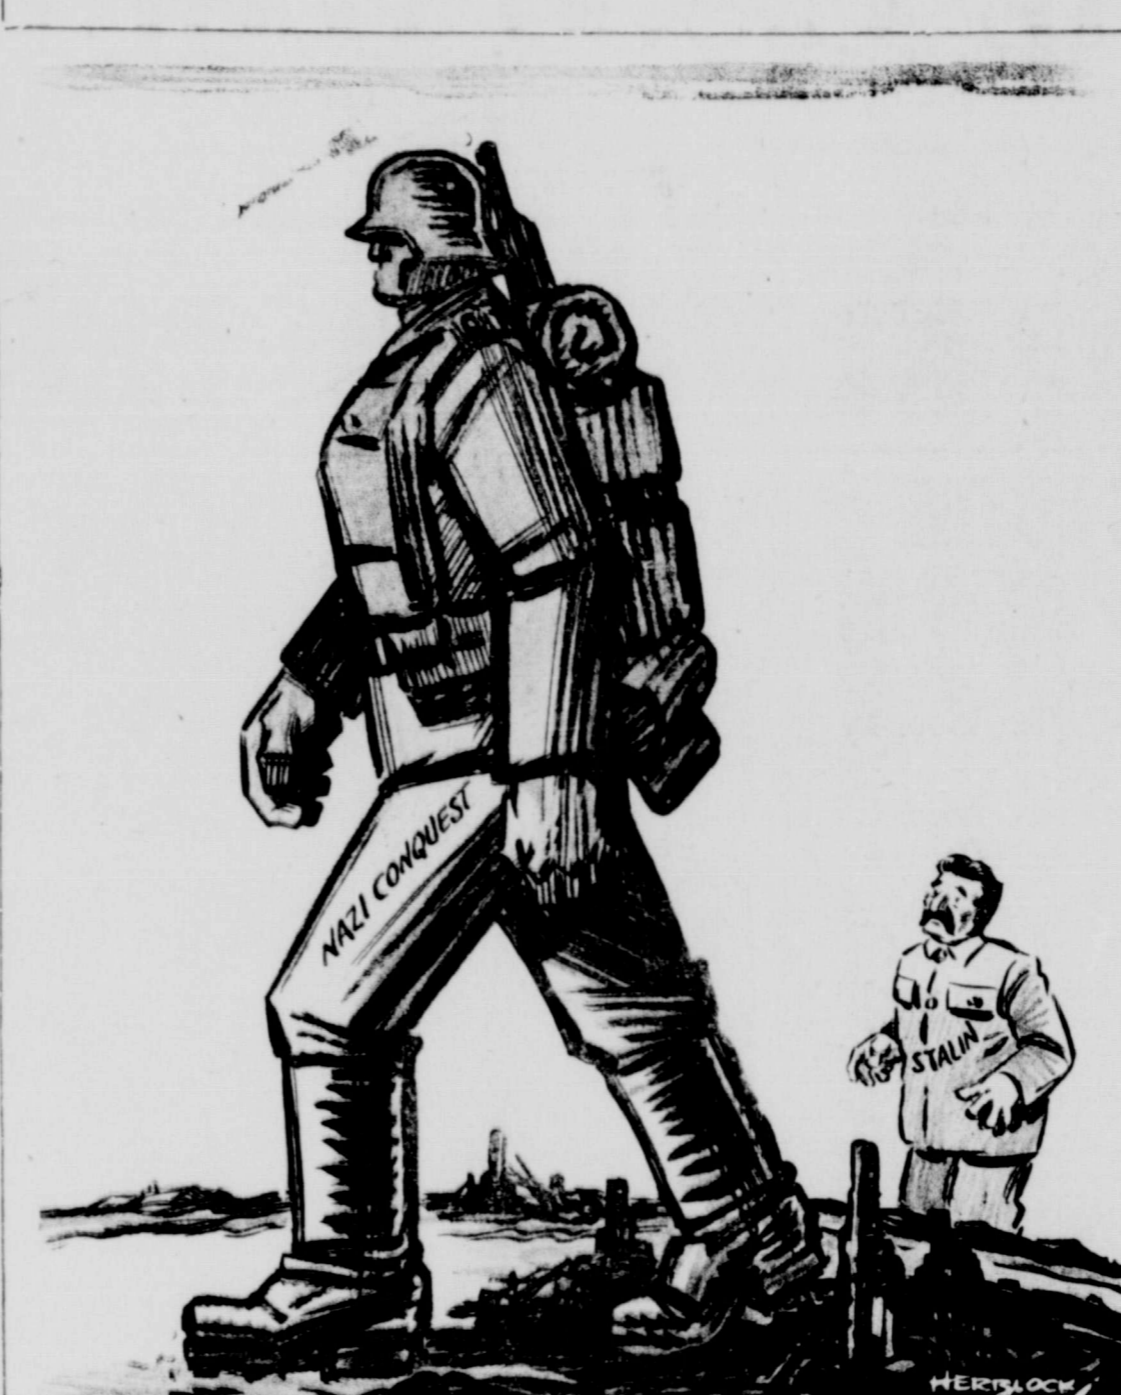

Hitler himself in "Mein Kampf," wrote: "The gigantic American state colossus, with its enormous wealth of virgin soil, is more difficult to attack than the wedged-in German Reich."

It is true that that reich is less "wedged-in" than it was when Hitler wrote. It is true that we are badly unprepared in material and training. But we have had our lesson.

With calm confidence and reliance on our own emerging strength, America goes forward unflinching and unafraid to meet whatever the world has in store!

A 5-week-old child turns up with two molars, to the surprise of everybody, and in a few weeks more will probably be endorsing six different brands of tooth paste.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The Washington taxi drivers, with a gift of gab that shames the most off-spoken congressman, almost talked themselves into trouble.

Washington loves its hack drivers and well it might. They are as distinctive as strangers in a strange land, and yet as much a part of the Washington scene as the Lincoln memorial. They come from all over, but the sun of Dixie seems to have melted them down to the same general mould of mental loquaciousness.

To understand them, you must understand first that Washington taxis are among the cheapest in the land. The zone system is used. For 20 cents you can ride the two miles from the capitol to the White House. As a matter of fact, you can ride almost anywhere in official Washington for 20 cents.

Beaver Pests Threaten Model Forest Nursery

ASTORIA, Ore., June 1 (AP).—Hundreds of mountain beaver are sweeping Oregon forestry department's 1,000-acre model nursery.

The pests (not the protected fur beaver) ignore poison baits and Clatsop county authorities fear bounty offers would bring a flood of pelts from other sections.

BRUCE CATTON'S AMERICAN ROUNDUP

OF BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—England's drastic law for the control of men and money in wartime doesn't go such an awful lot farther than the program the U. S. government has in mind—should this country be forced into war.

The British law goes whole hog and simply turns the entire country and everything in it over to the disposal of the government.

America's famous industrial mobilization plan, as drafted by the War and Navy Departments, would accomplish just about the same thing, but it would cushion the shock a little. Theoretically, it would stop short of actual confiscation of property and conscription of labor; actually, it would go a long way in both directions.

This plan is not a law, of course—not yet. It is, however, just what the army and navy want. Legislation to put it into effect has been drafted, and the general opinion is that it would go through pretty much as is if the nation found itself on the verge of war.

PRESIDENT COULD DRAFT EXECUTIVES

ASSUMING the industrial mobilization plan should be adopted, what would be the effect?

The President of the United States would be given wartime powers almost equal to those just given Mr. Churchill. If he deemed it advisable for the successful prosecution of the war, he could:

1—Draft any executive in any industry and make him run his plant under War Department orders—or, if he chose, transfer him and put somebody else in his job.

2—Fix prices on anything and everything sold in the United States.

3—Requisition any manufactured product or raw material necessary to the prosecution of the war.

4—Commandeer any factory, or—short of that—compel any manufacturer to make what the government directed him to make.

5—Close all security exchanges for the duration of the war.

6—Draft every workman into the army, under a setup which is generally interpreted to mean that any worker could, at any time, be ordered from the factory to the army at the President's discretion.

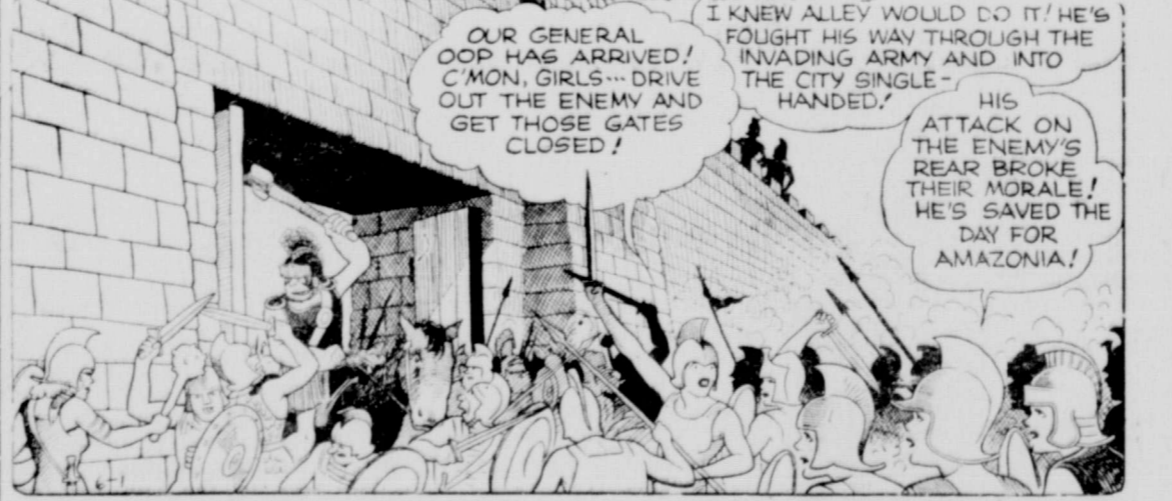

7—Control, in short, all of the nation's resources, through licensing, rationing, requisitioning, and regulation of the sale, use, transportation, manufacture or distribution of any product.

CAPITAL WOULD BE IN STRAIT JACKET

VARIOUS New Deal critics of this scheme have objected that it would hit labor harder than capital; that control over labor would be absolute, while provisions limiting wartime profits would be less drastic. However that may be, it is certain that capital would find itself in a pretty tight strait jacket.

As a matter of fact, laws already on the books give the President pretty broad powers. Section 120 of the National Defense Act authorizes him to place compulsory orders for either finished products or raw materials, with government seizure of the plant the penalty for non-compliance. The Naval Emergency Fund act grants similar powers, specifically broadened to include aircraft plants and with the words "raw materials" so defined as to include any commodity out of which war materials are made.

● SERIAL STORY

DANGER ROMANCE AHEAD

BY TOM HORNER COPYRIGHT, 1940. NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MONNIE MILES — her mania for fast driving almost wrecked her romance.
LARRY COLLINS — newspaper reporter, hunting for the murderers of his brothers.
MIKE BENTLEY — wealthy rancher, knew too much about auto accidents.

Yesterday, Monnie sees Larry. She denounces him as a thief. Then she tells Bentley that Larry's brother was killed on the curve, that he has been investigating the accident, spying on her. Larry tries to tell her that Bentley is smuggling narcotics. She refuses to believe him. Later she promises to marry Bentley if he will turn Larry over to the sheriff. Bentley agrees, but makes his own plans.

CHAPTER XIV
Worrying about what Bentley was planning to do with him didn't keep Larry from enjoying the dinner his guards brought. He was just finishing his pie when the rancher walked in.

"Good cook you hire here, Bentley," Larry commented. "You always eat this well."
Larry laughed. "No, this is special—for you. The condemned man ate a hearty dinner and all that. Glad you liked it, though. It's your last meal."
Larry rolled a cigarette, eyeing Bentley speculatively. "You're a nice guy, Mike. I'll bet you used to drown kittens, stick pins in bugs, and that sort of thing when you were a kid. You enjoy seeing people squirm so much. Do your worst, Bentley. I'm not squirming for you."

"You will before we get through with you." The man's innate cruelty reflected itself in his face. "You came here asking for trouble, just like your brother. We caught him snooping. We caught you. It's not healthy to know too much about Mike Bentley. You're finding that out. Your brother discovered the same thing."
"You admit you killed him?"
"Sure, I did. And I did a swell job of it. Unidentified drunk killed on curve. Everybody forgot about him as soon as the inquest was over. No one will bother much about a dead cattle thief, either."
"There are a few who might be interested," Larry suggested. "They might even start investigating when I don't come back. Ever think about that?"
"Let 'em investigate all they want to, they won't find a thing." Bentley was aggravatingly confident. "Might slow things up for a bit—cancel a few deliveries, but nothing more than that. You're not so important as all that, Collins."

"You must have it pretty well worked out."
"I always have things 'pretty well worked out.' That's why I never fail. Here's what's going to happen to you—at least, this is what everyone will think happened to you."
"In a couple of hours, you're going to knock me out, while I sit here talking to you—"
"I'll enjoy that part of it," Larry interrupted.
"That's only in the story, you don't actually have the pleasure of slugging me. One of the boys will take care of it. . . . You take my gun, throw down on the boys and get away. Just outside, you find my car. . . . You jump in it, race to town. You'll meet the sheriff at Dead Man's curve. . . . If he drives too fast you may take him into the canyon with you. . . . I won't mind. . . . The car catches fire. . . . You shoot yourself—with my gun, of course—rather than burn to death or be taken to prison. You'll make a few headlines, but we probably won't bother to hold much of an inquest."
"Just like Hugh," Larry commented. "Aren't you afraid someone will start thinking these accidents on the curve are occurring too frequently?"
"What if someone does? What can he prove? The sheriff will be the only witness. This setup is perfect. It worked for your brother. It'll do for you."

Bill and two more of Bentley's men came for Larry about 9:30. They tied his hands behind him, then hustled him upstairs and out into Bentley's car. He was pushed into the front seat beside the rancher. He noticed a man riding a horse down the highway, leading a second saddled horse.
"He goes down into the canyon to fire the shot when you kill yourself," Bentley explained. "He'll stay close to the curve, but well out of your way. From the highway it sounds like the shot comes from the burning car."
Larry was silent. He watched another man put a gasoline can in Bentley's car. Bill climbed in the back, fanning a machine gun. Bentley drove out to the highway. A second car followed.
"Nice car you've got here," Larry said. "Don't you mind losing it?"
Bentley was amused. "It's insured. I'll need a new one anyway, when Monnie and I get married. You knew we were going to be married, didn't you? Monnie set the day, September 10, this afternoon. She went on in to town to talk to her bridesmaids. Too bad, Collins. You should have stayed in New York."
Larry did not answer. After this afternoon, nothing surprised him. He didn't mind Monnie believing he was a thief, she might have been angry, but to tell Bentley about Hugh. That was more than he could stand. He had trusted her—loved her.
The car stopped, but Bentley left the motor running. Larry saw the curve a hundred yards beyond. Bentley got out, called to the men in the other car.
"Turn around and keep the motor running. This will go off just like the other one. Joe—you get up on the hill. Flash your light when you see a car coming up, then duck back through the pasture. I'll have someone pick you up."
"You, Bill, steer the car. Be sure that fuse is fastened tight and watch out you don't blow up when you light it. Jump off when the car gets rolling good and go down into the canyon. Tony'll have your horse down there."
"I'll go back to the house with Shultz and let him put a bump on my head. But I'll take care of Collins first."
He came back to Larry, cut the ropes that bound his wrists. "Move over under the wheel, Collins. You're driving from here on."
Larry rubbed his wrists to restore circulation. When he failed to obey Bentley's command, Bill prodded him in the back with the machine gun. "You heard him, buddy. Move over."
Bentley handed his automatic to Bill. "I'll take that tommy-gun up to the other car. Shoot him in the head if he tries anything."
He was back in a minute. "All right, Bill. Spill the gasoline back there; wind the fuse up over the door." He took his gun from Bill, got into the seat beside Larry. "Any last words, Collins?"
"You certainly have this down to a system."
"We practiced on your brother.

BIG SPRING, June 1 (Spc.)—Members of the executive committee of the U. S. 80 Highway association of west Texas in session here Thursday voted unanimously to sponsor a delegation composed of representative citizens from towns along Highway 80 from Fort Worth to El Paso to appear before the Texas Highway commission late in June. The delegation will ask that modernization work on U. S. 80 be included in the commission's 1941 program. They will particularly call the commission's attention to several obsolete, dangerous stretches through west Texas which, they claim, are causing a severe loss in tourist traffic to the Broadway of America. Present at the meeting were C. C. Johnston, president, Sweetwater, Texas; John M. Hendrix, executive secretary, Sweetwater, Texas; Sterling P. Wooten, Abilene, Texas; Bill Collyne, Midland, Texas; J. H. Greene, Big Spring, Texas; R. E. Gracey, Roscoe, Texas; and Ben Smith, Colorado City, Texas. Jack Helton, manager of the Colorado City chamber of commerce also attended the meeting.

For purposes of local government, England and Wales are divided primarily into 62 administrative counties.

When Joe flashes his light, I'll shoot you, let off the brake and put the car in gear. I jerk the hand throttle open as I jump out. Bill lights the fuse, steers you almost to the curve. Then—
"What about Monnie?" She knows why I'm here, knows I've been trying to prove you're smuggling narcotics. She suspects there was something wrong about the first accident here. She'll talk."
Larry was stalling.
"No she won't. We'll take care of Monnie. If she starts any trouble we'll tip the federal men to search her car. There's $500 worth of dope hidden in it. You couldn't find it. But the government men will."
"That's why you stole her car?" Bentley nodded. The smell of gasoline came from the rear seat. Bill carried the empty can to the other car. Larry knew he wouldn't have long to wait, now. "Monnie would have trouble explaining how that stuff got in her car. We planted it there just to make sure she wouldn't talk, if she did find out anything. We're not worried about Monnie."
"YOU'D BETTER BE!"
The words split the stillness. Monnie! Here!
Bentley was caught off guard. In that instant, Larry swung for Mike's chin, grabbed for the automatic.

1 Families Apply Application for Mattresses

Over a hundred and 81 farm families have made application for mattresses in the program to be held on in this county, it was announced by Miss Ruth Ramey, demonstration agent.

The subject of the number have been approved. A few are being held more information, and individuals who have received cards should do so at once in order to get all applications approved as early as possible.

The program is for low-income families, that is, families having $400 or less gross cash income, a part of which is derived from the farm or farm labor. They are a bona-fide farm family eligible to take part in the program, and have not made application for mattress, do so at once.

June 15 is the deadline for setting the applications in the cotton. It is arriving in the county daily, and when the tick-arrives, the program will be in the work centers over county. The following counties have been approved as work centers and committees have been organized out of the equipment needed for the making of the mattresses: Medina, Rising Star, Bluff, Dan Horn or Scranton, on Valley, Kokomo, Desdemona. Other centers can be arranged.

Testing Conduct by Its Usefulness With Illustrations From Ezekiel

Text: Ezekiel 15:1-6; Matthew 5:13-16; 7:16-20; I Corinthians 10:6, 7.

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

OUR lesson consists of four passages of Scripture, which come out of a wide range of time and circumstance, but which are all designed to emphasize the great truth confirmed by all experience, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

The prophet Ezekiel makes his contribution by the illustration of the vine-tree, which is of little use except for fuel. He is thinking evidently not of the productive vine which bears useful and nourishing fruit but of the vine of the forest which has no size or substance, which is of little use except to be burned, and which is of no use after it has been burned.

He uses his illustration to suggest the fruitlessness and uselessness of Israel in its lack of faith and good works, and the destiny of a nation or people thus fruitless and useless is to be "given to the fire for fuel." "So," Ezekiel represented Jehovah as saying, "will I give the inhabitants of Jerusalem."

JESUS emphasizes the need of manifesting faith, by reference to salt and to light. If salt has lost its savor, it is useless. If a light is hidden, it is of no value.

It is the Christian's duty to keep the savor of an active, wholesome, Christian life, manifest in deeds as well as in inward faith. It is his duty to be as a city set on a hill that cannot be hid, or as a light in a house, uncovered and free to shine into every place and corner.

Then, Jesus turns in His teaching to the illustration of the tree bringing forth fruit. The tree is known by the nature and quality of the fruit that it bears. A thorn tree cannot bring forth figs; nor does the fig tree produce thistles. This is as true of men and women in their lives as it is true of trees. No outward show or profession of piety is worth anything if the life be not truly good, and its goodness is tested by its words and deeds.

The closing passage of the lesson, from I Corinthians, brings this teaching to a head in stressing the fact that all that has happened in religious experience, and especially in the failure of men and women to live according to their highest and best, is for our instruction and benefit.

The appeal of the apostle is that we should not be as idolaters and as those whose religion has been one of mere profession and falsity; that we should look well to the quality of our lives and see that our religion manifests itself by bringing forth much fruit.

ANALOGIES, or illustrations, are never perfect, and there is one warning that perhaps should be sounded in connection with a lesson like this. It is that fruits themselves should be tested carefully and should not be judged by appearances.

Actions and deeds are in themselves sometimes deceiving. There may be an appearance of good works when there is anything but a true spirit back of them. Recently I purchased some fruit that was very attractive to the eye. It had all the appearance of excellent quality, but when we came to eat it, it was woody and pulpy and utterly without flavor.

There are lives like that, that have the appearance of good works but that lack almost entirely the spirit of anything either truly human or divine. Fruits are the evidence of inward life in trees or men, but there can be no fruits without life.

News From County 4-H Clubs

Good Demonstrations

A recent visit by A. C. Pratt, assistant county agent, to 4-H demonstrations revealed that Doyle Hunt, Olden 4-H club boy, is getting splendid results from the use of a sudan pasture for his growing pig. Believing that pigs need green feed until they weigh 100 pounds, Doyle planted about one-fourth of an acre to sudan in a fenced lot next to his hog pen. His feed costs have been greatly reduced because of the pasture and his pig appears to be very thrifty.

Bobbie Moseley, Olden 4-H club boy, has an outstanding peanut demonstration consisting of approximately three acres. Working with the advice and full cooperation of his father, Bobbie is going to go places in the farming world. A trip through the family orchard revealed a complete variety of adapted fruit and vegetable crops that will be very appetizing within another month. The family pantry would be a credit to any home, having enough canned fruit and vegetables remaining on the shelves to supply the family needs for several months.

Enrollment Highest

The official 1940 enrollment of 4-H club boys in Eastland county is the highest in the history of club work here, according to a statement today by A. C. Pratt, assistant county agent of Eastland county. A review of enrollment records in the past five years shows 1935, 42; 1936, 236; 1937, 159; 1938, 168; 1939, 276, and 1940, 352.

Much of the credit for the high enrollment this year is due to the fine work done by club boys in the past four years, stated Pratt, as he explained that the boys had a high regard for the work after seeing some of the results.

1,250 to Receive Texas Diplomas

AUSTIN, June 1.—Marching—not into totalitarianism—but into "the democratic way of life," more than 1,250 Texas youths Monday night will be awarded diplomas marking an educational milestone in their lives, in the 58th annual commencement at the University of Texas.

Capped and gowned seniors and advanced students—45 of them candidates for the doctor's degree—will move across the terrace of the University's main building to receive degrees at the hand of Dr. Homer P. Rainey, president.

They will be addressed by Dr. Daniel Samper Ortega, counselor of the Colombian embassy in Washington, who will remain on the campus for the next six weeks to lecture in the University's Latin-American institute.

Preceding the Monday commencement, graduates will hear the Rev. Donald S. Elder of Houston—youthful minister ever invited to address a university graduating class—at the Sunday evening baccalaureate service.

Drills In The Sea To Get Fresh Water

HOUSTON, June 1 (AP).—A water well was drilled five miles out in Galveston bay by the Humble Oil and Refining Company.

The company wanted the water for steam boilers at an oil test in the bay. It's easier to drill a well for fresh water than to extract salt from bay water.

the most popular in 1940, with 115 boys enrolled. Poultry demonstrations came next, with 71 boys, followed by beef calves, with 55, peanut growing, with 45, and the remaining boys making demonstrations in turkey growing, sheep, goats, horses, rabbits, gardens and truck crops. After visiting more than 100 of the boys since the schools have closed, Pratt said that most of the boys have their demonstrations and records in excellent condition.

Morton Valley Club Active

If the interest in dairy demonstrations continues to grow in the Morton Valley club as it has in the past six months, the Morton Valley 4-H boys will have one of the strongest dairy calf clubs in the county, stated A. C. Pratt, assistant county agent of Eastland county. Several registered Jersey heifers and one registered Jersey bull have recently been brought into the county by these boys, and there are prospective buyers yet in the club, according to Pratt. The boys are interested in calves of good show type, but more preference is given to calves from cows with a good register of merit test.

In 1939 Morton Valley had the strongest pig club in the country and largely through the club's records, the county won second place in pig club work in this extension service district of 19 counties.

Much credit for the fine work done by the Morton Valley boys in swine demonstrations and dairy demonstrations is due to Lonnie A. Smith, club leader.

'Light Me, Pop,' Says Four-Year-Old

Nothing like a big black stogie after a mealtime bottle, claims Gerald Edward Summers, 4, of Dallas. The boy has been smoking since he was 2, is large for his age and has never been sick for all his smoking. Often he varies the cigar with a cigaret or pipe. Physicians have told his father that smoking in moderation will not harm the lad.

Congress Balks At FDR's Request For Guard Power

WASHINGTON, June 1 (AP).—Congress rallied unhesitatingly Saturday behind President Roosevelt's call for another billion to fortify the ramparts of national defense, but there was sharp dissension in the ranks over his request for power to call out the national guard if needed.
From both parties came staunch support for the broadened preparedness plans. Representative Martin of Massachusetts, the republican leader, said his party would join in every effort to improve defenses.
The latest arms recommendations gave the nation a prospective military bill roughly three-fourths of the $6,148,795,000 spent for army and navy during America's first full fiscal year in the World War.
Although Roosevelt spoke in round terms of "more than a billion dollars," authoritative quarters said that the expenditures contemplated in Friday's special message would come to $1,375,000,000. Added to regular and extraordinary measures now pending, this would make a total of $4,872,011,352.
While congress evinced readiness to vote the mounting millions, Roosevelt's accompanying national guard recommendation encountered prompt opposition.
Senator Vanderberg of Michigan told reporters the request for power to call out the national guard if necessary to maintain neutrality was a "shocking" proposal which sounded as if the president wanted to be able to order a partial mobilization by executive authority alone. Senators Wheeler of Montana, Nye of North Dakota and Bridges of New Hampshire, seconded this view.

Senator Austin of Vermont, a consistent support of the Roosevelt foreign policy, said the proposal was "unfortunate" and would "have an adverse effect on harmony between the president and congress."

"What does he know that we don't know that would justify him in implying that it would be necessary to call out the national guard to enforce neutrality?" he inquired.

night that they had liquidated the last German bridgehead on the south bank in the vicinity of Abbeville.
The first German attacks were launched Friday noon and were continued until nightfall without letup. At dawn Saturday the Germans returned again to the assault.
A war ministry spokesman said the battle was still continuing.

Counter Attack Repulsed

"The enemy, slowing the importance which it attaches to the passage of the Somme, counter-attacked in this region. This counter-attack was repulsed."
The communique gave no details of the Dunkerque situation, but said French and British forces "of the land, sea and air, continued a furious fight in full solidarity to resist a German push and assure evacuation."

Racing against a break in the weather, a great fleet of transports shuttled back and forth across the foggy English channel in a desperate attempt to salvage as much as possible of a force which once totaled more than 270,000.
While the gigantic rescue task proceeded under the guns of allied warships, the French army of the center, supported by the second British expeditionary force now being formed in France, was reported to be mopping up the Abbeville sector at the mouth of the Somme.

The reaction around Abbeville was mentioned guardedly in official communique, but military sources indicated the French had launched a surprise attack, led by 20-ton tanks, to capture a German bridgehead on the south side of the Somme.

Capture of the city itself, on the north side of the river, was not claimed, but the French said they had taken hundreds of prisoners and large quantities of war material.

by a Nazi submarine off Ostend, Belgium.
The high command said the latest successes increased to six the number of destroyers sunk by speedboats in the channel and the number of submarines to two.
Saturday's high command communique indicated a German offensive was stirring along all fronts.

It reported bombing attacks against Allied troops in a forest south of Abbeville, near the western terminus of the German forward line in France, and a sally against French forces, at Lechesne, on the other end of the line.

An authoritative source said the high command probably would announce the tabulation of its collection of guns, war equipment and other booty abandoned by the Allies in Flanders in an all-embracing communique. The spokesman said these reports are "enormous."

He described British reports of orderly retreat from Flanders as "bloody irony" and "shameful cynicism."

German assaults on the remainder of the British expeditionary force fighting for its life in the Dunkerque area were reported proceeding "favorably."

Allied tank attacks on the southern front near Abbeville "foundered," the high command said, and added that the nazis had gained ground in that area in a forward thrust after the Allied attempts.

its widespread unemployment aggravated the situation. When men were being turned away from jobs there was no inducement for the boys to learn the mechanics of over-crowded trades. The schools, however, continued to grind out lawyers, doctors, teachers, engineers, etc., thus widening the gap between the supply of professionals and the supply of those capable of translating plan into reality. We are now confronted with a great rearmament program which must be done quickly and well, and we are discovering to our chagrin that our real problem is not provision of materials for making armaments nor industrial plants for making them, but in providing enough skilled men to accomplish the production required.

This lack is evidence of the workings of a social philosophy, subtly cultivated, which has robbed the country of a great deal of the vitality that carried it forward to industrial, agricultural and social conquests of real magnitude. That philosophy, acknowledge it or not, holds that work with the hands is debasing. It is the underlying motif of all this social security legislation, old-age pensions and wage hour laws we now have. These were not passed primarily to spread the wealth, to give labor a greater share of industrial earnings or create more purchasing power. Their real purpose is a political apology for what is sneakily felt, even among manual laborers themselves, is a class position a little lower than the professional. The politicians sought to compensate for this inferiority complex by a sense of power. The fact that true dignity is the reward of self-support and the knowledge of being useful is ignored entirely in this foolish philosophy. This misplaced emphasis has worked to discourage the youth of the country from seeking training and employment in the manual trades. It has deprived, therefore, a great proportion of the population of the productive powers that are necessary to any sound and prosperous economy, overcrowded the other professions and left a large element of workers in a state of uncertainty and suspense, conscious of their inability to do anything well and wondering where in the heck they are going to do that.

Keep Your Dirt, Says Young Hoover

TULSA, Okla., June 1 (AP).—Please don't send Herbert Hoover, Jr., any more buckets full of dirt.
He recently made a speech describing a new method of searching for oil pools.
Later, an oil company research director explained the method might mean: "If you go into your back yard and dig a pint of dirt it would be possible to determine whether you have an oil pool underneath."
By the time Hoover reached his office in Pasadena, Calif., there were hundreds of containers filled with soil.
Hoover says the new method has not been perfected, still is being studied.

Docs Study Flying To Give Army Exams

SACRAMENTO, Calif., June 1 (AP).—Intensive aviation has brought a specialized field of medicine—that of the flight surgeon.
"We have to be practically pilots as well as physicians," says Col. Robert C. Murphy of the army air depot here. He explains that the examining doctor must understand the reactions of patients to flight tactics as well as the handling of machine bomb releases, etc.
Periodic examination of pilots is not only good for the pilot, it is good business in protecting the government's heavy investment in planes, he says.
