RENCH CLAIM TANK BLITZKRIEG IS HALTED

HUNDREDS ARE DESTROYED IN NEW DEFENSE

Violent Counterattacks to Regain Ground Are Launched

BULLETIN

PARIS, June 7 (AP)—Germans, with their machine power dwindling, sent masses of men into battle today.

French, claiming that a fifth of the German tanks engaged in the offensive had been destroyed, said their lines were holding well along the whole front.

They also reported that nazi dive bombers were dropping out of action.

On the other hand, the German high command declared that the "Weygand line was broken through on the entire front." The communique however, was terse and gave none of the details.

By The Associated Press

Fighting like men possessed, the French defenders of their homeland at nightfall Thursday and in the red glare of the flaming battle of the Somme hurled themselves on the nazi war machine in fierce counterattacks intended to regain the ground they had lost.

French Lines Hold

Today a French communique said that the poilus were holding all along the line and that hundreds of tanks had been allowed to filter through the first defenses only to be blasted to pieces by the cross fire of guns planted in the mesh-like defense which Gen. Weygand had devised to meet the steel blitzkriegs of Hitler's warriors. Hardly a tank was left in one piece in this withering fire, as the French closed in behind the penetrating units, preventing nazi motorized infantry from following the lumbering monsters into the breaches and bottling the tanks to their doom. A German statement said the French defenses had been pierced all along the line. The French said that this has occurred because it was the plan of General Weygand to let it occur so that the tank units could be entrapped and destroyed in the staggered defense that has been erected.

The counterattacks, started in the gathering darkness and continuing through the night, came on the right, or east French flank. There German infantry, following tanks and an artillery barrage, had driven south from the Ailette river to take positions just north of the Aisne river on the Chemin-des-Dames.

The French stormed that position after the fashion of poilus who fought Germans there in the World war.

The crescendo of the great battle rose until its rumble and roar could be heard 30 miles away.

Paris Shaken

Meanwhile Paris, the prize for which 2,000,000 men were locked in deadly struggle on the Somme front, was shaken by loud explosions to the south. The blasts came after heavy anti-aircraft fire had roused the city.

At nightfall, while the fighting rumbled and flashed all along the first line of Paris' defense, the French acknowledged they had fallen back slightly at both ends of the line. They said nazi tanks had penetrated seven and one-half miles into the first of the new French defense lines—designed to trap those tanks.

Claiming progress for their ponderous advance "everywhere," the Germans said they found furious resistance from Frenchmen who fought from house to house, tree to tree, with everything they had—even long knives.

In particular, the nazis claimed, their iron-pointed forces hurled the Somme under fire at Pont Remy, a few miles southeast of

Raymond J. Kelly of Detroit, Mich., second from left, national commander of the American Legion, was greeted here by representatives of the Dulin-Daniels post at Eastland yesterday afternoon on his arrival from Coleman. Kelly was entertained at a barbecue at Eastland last night at which 375 persons registered, including delegations from Cisco, Abilene, Ranger, Breckenridge and other points. The Lobo band participated in a parade in his honor. Kelly is shown here with M. H. Kelly, Eastland city manager; Henry Pullman, Eastland Legion post commander, and H. J. STATE ADULT CONFERENCE TO LAKE HERE

Christian Church Will Bring 300 or More Workers in July

The annual Adult Workers conference of the Christian church in Texas will be held at Lake Cisco this year for the second consecutive time. Facilities of the Presbyterian encampment grounds and the Cisco Country club will be in session on July 15 to 19, inclusive. A daily vacation bible school will be conducted at the First Christian church here for Cisco children coincident with the program for adults at the lake.

Denominational leaders not only from Texas but from over the nation will lead the studies and devotional programs during the conference. Dr. Clinton Lockhart, venerable and revered bible scholar of Texas Christian university, Fort Worth, will teach an adult class in Bible. Adult classes in other phases of church work and in devotional subjects will be conducted. Recreational and devotional features will round out the conference program.

Last summer the conference drew 300 visitors to Lake Cisco. The group was so well pleased with the facilities and location that upwards of 400 are predicted for this summer.

Putnam Wins Top Place In First Division

Tsk-tsk. The Red Front boys rested on their laurels last night and before they woke up, if they did, Melvin Travis and his Recreation boys had 15 runs to their 5. The game was almost over before they got a hit or almost before they got any one out. Those kids can play the best or the sorriest. I honestly believe Recreation slipped up on them. Recreation came out to win the ball game and they would have beaten most anyone in the league last night. C. Pippen pitched 3-hit ball and was in danger, except for good hitting. His team-mates had given him a good lead anyway with good hitting. They won't be in anybody's cellar next division. I betcha. Red Front had poor everything and wasn't in the ball game.

The second game was the better one. Putnam won first place in the first division by downing Scranton, 8 to 5. This was a close game, and featured long-distance hitting for extra bases. Two balls went out of the park from Putnam bats. Scranton battled most of the way, but was hurt by poor fielding.

One game remains in this division. It will not have any bearing on top leaders, but rather on the cellar position. It will be a ball game, with Scranton losing last night, and Recreation finding themselves. I really believe it will be one of the best games of the season tonight.

Chris Sunderman, catcher for Putnam, won the base-running contest. Coy Warren was next with 10 3-4 seconds. T. A. Jones, Raymond Reames, W. Bailey, Jobe, Cozart, Jeff Pippen, and Belew where others who rounded the sacks in good time. This was a pretty sight and a good race. Jones stumbled rounding second, hurting his time.

Up to this time, McDaniels, of Miller-Penney has the best hitting average, with .625, but is disqualified because he only played in two games. Bennie of Conoco and Sunderman of Putnam are next with a .500 clip, and it will be left to the sponsors and man-

Prioux Performs Military Miracle

Holding open an escape corridor against overwhelming odds so that remnants of the allied armies could retreat through Dunkerque to Britain, Gen. Rene Prioux, above, performed a military miracle. Germans reported later he was captured together with members of his staff.

Enrollment for CCC Camps Open July 1 to 10

Almost unlimited opportunities for enrollment in the Civilian Conservation Corps exist, especially for boys from WPA and FSA families, Miss Elsie Glenn, social worker, said today. The next enrollment period will be from July 1 to 10, she said, and enrollment terms are from six months to two years. Boys and young men in ages from 17 to 23 years are eligible. All who wish to enroll in these camps from the Cisco section were advised to see Miss Glenn on any Friday at the city hall before July 1.

There is no military training in the camps, Miss Glenn emphasized.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Politics has taken a back seat. War reports have sped almost the complete rest of the voters and ate all the efforts of the campaigners little attention being paid to the forthcoming elections. The American people take their interest in big doses. Sometimes they look as if the country has single-track mind. It ignores an issue until it gets big to ignore and then goes for that issue with enthusiasm or violence—ending upon the kind of it is—that simply sweeps everything else aside.

Already, it is being conceded that Roosevelt will be elected for a third term, and looks as if the public will be satisfied with the status quo in the rest of the political line-up. Even the resurgence of the Moody-Ferguson antagonism in Texas gubernatorial politics has abated hardly more than a ripple on the surface, while W. Lee O'Daniel News, spicing into the political time pot as it has been doing in recent issues, has moved hardly incidental yard for the folk who have exhausted the war news. The good governor could be smarter, methinks, draw in his little sting, devote himself to tactfulness and a great show of defense measures. We note the papers that the national administration looks with favor upon Texas as a training ground for the nation's airmen. There's a job for the governor that could give him a real issue, his assault on Harry Hines is not half so sensational as the war news and news of fifth column activities.

It will do little good to say, but the public officials who will be elected this summer and fall will be in charge of the administration of national, state and local policies for two years at least, that two years will undoubtedly be one of the most critical in the nation's history. It may find us plunged in a bloody war up to our ears. Again it may find us established securely in a hemisphere of our own construction, secure against foreign aggression both of a military and economic variety. It may find us reduced in national status actually subservient to some mightier power or group of powers.

The result in the largest measure depends upon whom is elected to carry out the national program and policies in all their details. These include not merely the topflight officials of the national administration. It embraces state and local officials as well. It is extremely important whose hands control the reins, whose hands and energies are devoted to the government of the country and all its subdivisions in such a time as this.

It is high time you started thinking seriously about who will have for your

ALLIES MAY GET 50 U. S. NAVAL PLANES

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP)—The United States navy last night made 50 of its warplanes available for immediate sale to the allies, now locked in a life-or-death struggle with Germany.

Whether this move would be followed speedily by other assistance was not officially announced, but it was known that this government, which has received urgent pleas from the allied capitals, was considering selling surplus World War material, including rifles, machine guns, artillery and ammunition.

Navy officials said that the 50 planes were Curtiss scout bombers, single engine seaplanes acquired by the navy in the last two years and especially adapted to dive bombing.

The navy announced that the planes were being flown to Buffalo to be turned over to the Curtiss Aircraft company on future deliveries of new planes "of a superior type, equipped with leak-proof tanks and armor. The company will be free to see the turned-in planes to the allies. The announcement said that the planes being turned in were from "various naval aviation reserve squadrons."

The navy said the turn-in was in accordance with an agreement

Italians Await Decision on War

ROME, June 7 (AP)—Italian fascists, ordered to be ready at any time for nationwide mass meetings to hear Premier Mussolini's decision on war at the side of Germany, awaited their leader's evaluation of French Premier Paul Reynaud's suggestion that a peaceful solution might yet be found.

None knew when the solution to the public squares throughout the land might be given to hear Il Duce's verdict, but public and private indications were that, unless Reynaud's speech had impressed him, the call might be expected soon.

Referring to Reynaud's declaration that "there are no peoples with whom France cannot settle by peaceful means divergences of interests which appear to oppose them," one of the best informed fascists cautiously commented that it was "very important."

This source would hazard no further comment, saying that Premier Mussolini's reaction was the only important one in Italy.

The impression prevailed, however, in some lesser political circles that Reynaud's conciliatory attitude might have come too late.

Meanwhile, three trains of 15 railroad cars each, painted with red crosses, stood on sidings in Rome, ready to speed away to succor bombing and battle victims if need be.

Third-class coaches were made over into hospital cars. Two trains also stood ready to rush British and French diplomats to the frontier.

Shopkeepers, porters and householders were warned of three-month jail terms and $1,000 fines for failure to observe blackout orders when the time comes.

Even such illumination as the permanent lights burned before sacred images on Italian streets would be doused.

A special law gave guards orders to shoot persons trying to evade border control.

Miss Joy Miller has returned from TSCW in Denton and is spending the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Miller.

BUSINESS MEN MEET TO MAP SCHOOL DRIVE

A meeting of business men to map a campaign for raising the needed $4,000 to be used for buying library and laboratory equipment for the Cisco Junior college will be held at the chamber of commerce offices this evening at 8 o'clock. The meeting was called by the board of directors of the chamber of commerce at the regular session of the board Tuesday evening.

Unless this fund is raised and raised immediately, there will be no junior college in Cisco. It is necessary to raise it now because of the great amount of preliminary work which must be done before the school can be organized and opened on September 1.

Prospects before the school are excellent and the approval of the state board of education and the state accrediting committee of plans submitted to them has been received. Local school officials were congratulated on these plans.

Members of the board of the chamber of commerce meeting Tuesday night pledged themselves to work in the campaign and set Friday evening as the time for organization of the campaign. No difficulty in securing the necessary funds, if the drive is properly organized and carried out, was anticipated.

The business men were deeply interested in the organization of the school as the crowning institution of the public school system. Prospects of an enrollment reaching several hundred from schools with direct bus and other transportation system contacts with Cisco were pointed out.

"This college project has been hanging fire for a year now," the board was told. "It is past the conversational stage. Time has come for action. The people of Cisco must show the old spirit and do the job with their support and their money if the college is realized."

L. F. Bookman of Lubbock, formerly of Cisco, transacted business here today.

SERIAL STORY

AN EYE FOR A GAL

BY HARRY HARRISON KROLL

COPYRIGHT 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
ROSSY McAFEE—went to college to play baseball, get an education, and settle a feud.
JUDY TOLLIVAR—daughter of Lincoln College's president.
HANNAH SHRIDER—hillbilly girl who followed Rossy to college.

YESTERDAY: Dr. Tollivar arranges for Hannah to stay in school room at another place. When Rossy goes to see her, she tells him how his cousin, Steve Hogg, came down to school spied on Rossy, then reported back that he was living with the Tollivars. She reminds Rossy of his oath to avenge his father, denounces him, slaps him sprawling.

CHAPTER IV
THE terrific impact of Hannah Shrider's hand on Rossy McAffee's face left a glowing, four-pronged picture on his amazed and bloodless cheek. He wallowed a moment on the floor, where he had fallen after the girl slapped the fire out of him. He gulped, started to rise. Murder ran through his arteries and muscles. "You—you—I'll knock the tar out of you!" Hannah made ready to meet him blow for blow. "Knock the tar out of me, dad-burn your low-life time! Just come on and knock the tar out of me!" Rossy looked up at the passion-set face of the girl he had once asked to marry him. He remembered that day, in the spring, when the orchard trees were pink and white and the bland wind waved her tawny hair.

Rossy and Hannah had been sweethearts—and enemies—since their childhood. Both families had known all along in time they would marry. Rossy had never given thought to anything else, nor had Hannah. At least not until this moment, though they had fought as often and as hard as they had hugged and kissed.

Anger went out of him. He got clumsily to his feet, and stood just staring at her. The commotion of their scrap brought a heavy figure to the door, and there stood Mrs. Patterson.

"Well, of all things!" the horrified lady cried, seeing what had just happened. She advanced upon Hannah. "Fighting! Quarrelling! And you have only got here. Who ever heard of such goings on? I'm a mind to send you away, not let you stay another moment in my house—with all my nice girls—"

"It was my fault," Rossy said. "Blame it on me, not her. I reckon it'll take me a little time to act like white folks." "I'll report you to Dr. Tollivar, sir!" Mrs. Patterson promised grimly.

Rossy picked his hat from the floor and clamped it on his head. "I'll be seeing you," he said mechanically. Hannah bawled, "I don't want to see you again, Rossy McAffee!" He turned upon her, "Them's the death-bed words of all the gals that make up the world's mess of old maids." He added with a sneer, "But I reckon you'd like to see our dear Cousin Steve Hogg again! He's got money that's never been spent!"

Hannah came right back, "Yes, and he asked me to marry him, too, and at least he wouldn't two-time me every time I turned my back a minute!"

DOSSY knew this led to a renewal of the battle. He went sadly out and stood looking up at the stars. Mrs. Patterson would report this to Dr. Tollivar first thing in the morning. The two of them would be dragged on the carpet almost before they had got settled in school. If it got out—and how could it be kept?—he and Hannah would be the laughing stock of the student body, and then he would have to kill somebody to shut the stuff up.

With these gloomy reflections for companionship he made his way back to the big house. He walked slowly, wishing he had somewhere else to go.

Judy was just finishing a telephone conversation when he slipped in. She hung up and stopped him.

"Rossy," "Yes'm." Rossy slipped into a chair with a hard bottom. "Come over here on the sofa."

When he reluctantly complied, she examined him with that odd smile of hers. There was amusement in it, and also something else he did not understand. "I have just been talking with Mrs. Patterson."

Rossy gave a start. "She told you, I reckon."

"Yes, and I asked her not to take it to father."

Rossy tried to think of something nice to say about this, but all he could think of was, "Yes'm."

"There wouldn't be any point in making it a matter for the administrative council," she went on, curling her legs under her. "But you don't want to fight like that, Rossy."

"Yes'm. I mean No'm." "You're in school now. You came to get an education. You want to be a gentleman. You want to acquire a certain amount of—well, culture. That is, you want to get the rust knocked off. Make yourself into somebody. Don't you, Rossy?"

"I reckon so," he admitted grudgingly. "Of course, you do. That's why you're here at all. And, you want to play baseball, maybe become a great pitcher and work your way up to the big leagues, and all that, but even so you want to amount to something, become a somebody. Isn't that right, Rossy?"

He gulped. "Yes'm."

"Well, brawling with your sweetheart won't start you off in the direction you plan to go—"

"She ain't my sweetheart any more."

"You mean you two broke off—"

"Not just now, but it will amount to that in the end."

"Rossy, are you sure you would want to do that—"

"You see, Rossy, father knew all the while you had something to you. When Coach Hurd went up to Hell'n-Damnation to look you over, saw you play ball last summer, and came back and reported to Daddy about you, we all had faith enough in you to spat—you want to be broad-minded, at least try to learn to be broadminded—"

"I hope you don't call being smacked flat a slight thing!"

"No, but brawling and fighting like that is small!"

He kept sitting there, liking the touch of Judy's hand, trying to feel through his emotions to her real meaning. She gave his hand a pat and released it.

"You see, Rossy, father knew all the while you had something to you. When Coach Hurd went up to Hell'n-Damnation to look you over, saw you play ball last summer, and came back and reported to Daddy about you, we all had faith enough in you to with the manufacturer, and added: "These airplanes are temporarily in excess of requirements, due to the fact that many of the reserve squadrons have been ordered to Pensacola (Florida) as instructors on account of the large expansion of training at that place.

"It is expected that the remainder of these planes at reserve bases will be similarly turned in as replacements are received." Advocates of extensive assistance to the allies have urged the turn-in procedure. Transferring the planes back to the companies, it was said, would technically avoid the implications of a government-to-government sale. Selling planes directly to the allied governments some had argued, might be considered an act of war.

The French retirement on their left, or west, was on that part of the front from the Somme along the English channel to the Bresle river, 17 miles south of Abbeville. On their right, or eastern, flank, the French retired from the Ailette river south toward the Aisne about six miles.

Italy Closer to War

Hour by hour Italy drew closer to war. Latest indications that she might plunge into the conflict any minute was an order to all branches of the fascist party to be ready to don uniforms any time to meet before Premier Mussolini at the Piazza Venezia to hear an announcement that Italy was at war.

Such an order follows the custom of preparing the party to hear momentous announcements from Il Duce. Premier Paul Reynaud told the French that the high command is "well satisfied" with the dogged defense of their armies. He declared there is good reason for hope.

In London the British minister of information, Alfred Duff Cooper, declared that if America should come to the aid of the allies even a year hence, it would not be too late. He declared his belief that Eng-agers to see who gets the award. Bennie has 11 hits in 22 trips, in five games. Sunderman has six hits in 12 times at bat in 3 games.

The only other players who have a chance of beating this are the ones from Recreation and Scranton. A few players of these teams are hitting over .300 and tonight's game might mean an award for one of these players. Belew, Shrader, Thompson and B. Ledbetter of Scranton have a good chance. So does Carlyle, McCuary, J. Pippin, and C. Pippin of Recreation.

work out a way for you to come to college. You don't know it, but you were the subject of a lot of discussion in our home as far back as last July.

"Was I?" he asked, studying her in bewilderment. "I never knew that."

"I'm telling you now because you have to make good to make our faith come true."

He sat there turning this in his mind. Finally he turned to her. "Let me ask you something."

"Go ahead. If I can answer your question I will."

"Was your paw ever up in Hell'n-Damnation Holler?"

"ONLY for an instant did any change come into her expression. It was so little as a flicker of her long lashes.

"Why I suppose so, Rosy. When he came to be president of Lincoln college he covered just about all the territory in this end of the state. He felt he should travel over his territory so as to know the people who would come to his school. I think he visited your neighborhood, too."

"I don't mean that way. I mean did he--"

"Did he what?" she prompted him. "Did he ever live up in there?"

"My father? Why, no. I can't think of his ever living in Hell'n-Damnation Holler. If you're asking whether he is a relative of the family of Tollivers up in your country, the feuding Tollivers your family has been traditionally at outs with, no. How could we be?"

"Er--well--"

"Can't you see how absurd that would all be? My father a member of a feud clan, and his being president of one of the best colleges in the mountain country? That wouldn't make sense, would it?"

She was leaning forward persuasively, and her very anxiety for him to accept the absurdity put him on his guard. Cousin Steve Hogg would have said "She's mealy-mouthed you. She's sneaking up on your hind side. She's trying to ketch you in a left-handed moment and hog tie you."

Something in Rosy believed that too. And he knew what Hannah would say, and his mother—all his kinfolks.

"My father has always been in school work," that sweet, determined voice went on. "Ever since Cozart, if I don't mind, he was principal of a big high school, then he went to the university and he lived there four years while father finished his master's and took his doctor's degree. He was a professor of education two years in a northern college."

"That was before my mother died. Then this place called him. Naturally the board of trustees would examine carefully the whole history of a man before they put him in a responsible job like this. Well, they gave him the presidency of Lincoln college. He has always been a fine, clean man. For me he's a great man, Rosy."

But for Rosy he was the man who killed his father.
