RUMANIAN MOBILIZATION IS ORDERED

Calmer Rumanian and Bulgarian Situation Reported

BUCHAREST, June 29 (AP)—Russia's occupation of Rumanian territories ceded by King Carol was reported transformed abruptly into an invading Saturday, and Rumanian military leaders credited general mobilization which will place 250,000 men in battle line within the next few days.

The Soviet army was said to have penetrated to the town of Dobruja and Belzoum in Moldavia, 15 and 20 miles, respectively, from the river Prut, western boundary of Bessarabia.

The impression prevailed in diplomatic circles that the Hungarian and Bulgarian situation had calmed, but King Carol was said to be taking full precautionary measures. Both countries have territorial claims on Rumania dating from World War days.

Rumania agreed to give up Bessarabia and northern Bucovina in Russia without opposition, but King Carol met the joint demand of further territorial demands from mobilized Hungary and Bulgaria with an order of mobilization "to the last man." A special session of parliament was called for this afternoon, but was postponed until Monday.

The refugee problem became acute.

Turning Back Crowds—The Rumanians were reported turning back crowds of residents of Bessarabia and Bucovina caught outside of those areas who are attempting to return to their homes and families.

Ten of thousands of refugees now flooding through old Rumania and the mobilized soldiers going to the frontier are choking all means of land and water transport.

The government is rushing plans to care for the refugees, the majority of whom left all their possessions in the Soviet occupied territory which was their home.

Police in Bucharest took strict precautions against possible public demonstrations against Hungary in anticipation that she might seek to enforce her claims to Transylvania against extradition to mount.

The Soviet occupation of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina brought bloodshed. At Cernauti, 15 miles south of the border of Polish Russia, anti-communist civilian snipers fired an advance tank unit of the Soviet army and were not dispersed until Russian infantry arrived in force. At an undisclosed point in the Bessarabian-Rumanian frontier, Rumanian troops opened fire with machine guns on Russian infantrymen.

“Just Politicians!”

The man slapped the paper to the table, the black-and-white news from the political party conventions uppermost.

“Just a lot of politicians!” he snorted. “Why, of course! Just a lot of politicians. What, in the name of the sainted memory of old Aunt Tabitha did he expect?”

You hear a lot of people talk very loosely about politics and politicians. “The politicians want to do this and so.” It is just about on a par with the swivel-brained nitwits who pass rumors from mouth to ear that “they” are planning this and plotting that. And when you pin down this loose-tongued double-talker, you find that he has only the haziest idea of who “they” are.

NOW there isn't a thing wrong with the term “politicians.” What is a politician? Simply a person who is devoted to, or engaged in politics. We usually use the word as applying to one who is active in purely party politics for what he can get out of it. Only when a political figure rises above the partisan do we grant him the verbal accolade of “statesman.”

Yet no man can be a statesman without having first been a politician, nor does he ever become 100 per cent statesman. In government by popular representation, any man in public life must necessarily be in large part a politician. Lincoln was a politician. So were Jefferson and Hamilton, and Jackson. So were Cleveland, and Theodore Roosevelt, and Wilson. It is true that men like these lifted themselves above the narrowest considerations of partisan politics to become statesmen. But in occupying political position they remained always in part politicians as well.

Does anyone think there can be organized government without politicians? Does anyone fool himself that in the vast bureaucracies built up by Hitler and Stalin and Mussolini there are no politicians? Yet you hear people thoughtlessly say, “If we could only get rid of the politicians!”

No people will ever get rid of its politicians. There is no reason why it should. What is needed is better politicians.

Big problem confronting the school board is how much more time they should give Adolf before ordering the new geography books for the fall term.

Astronomers say an unknown planet is causing a disturbance on Uranus. Others claim the fifth column is getting more ambitious.

The Burmese smoke cigars three times the size used by most folks. The effect this will have on German kultur is yet to be studied.

According to recent tests, women are physiologically cooler than men, but returns are still forthcoming on the lefthand turn against traffic.

The national defense budget can hardly be referred to as radio numbers because it isn't likely the announcer would have that much time to decipher them.

What It Means:

All-American Corporation

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
WASHINGTON, June 29 (AP)—The men who stage the foreign policy of the United States are working temporarily on the assumption that Herr Hitler is not only the political and military champion of all Europe save Russia, but the economic master as well.

So they assume, too, that it's up to the boss to lead 350,000,000 men here and there, and the republics of this hemisphere are interested in knowing how Hitler proposes to do it.

Three obstacles
But three great forces are at work to prevent any such easy solution of Europe's economic problems. The first of these is Dame Nature. The second is war, and the third is a new and vastly broadened Monroe doctrine now in the making.

1. Europe, suffered the worst winter in a half century. Spring was late, wet and cold. Winter grain suffered. Crop prospects are about half as good as usual. Authentic reports to the U. S. department of agriculture indicate Rumania's crop of winter wheat is 40 per cent below normal, and rye is 26 per cent under. Rumania is Europe's most important bread basket.

2. Ever since Hitler came to power in 1933, Europe has been using the cream of its substance for armaments. Even Sweden has been making munitions and armaments for other powers. The switchover from wartime economy to peacetime economy always has been disastrous. After the World War, bankruptcy was practically universal. International

“And the Lightning Struck One.”

American Pennies Aid War Children

NEW YORK, June 29—Dorothy Canfield Fisher, national chairman of the Children's Crusade for Children, reported yesterday from her home in Arlington, Vermont, that over 13,500,000 pennies had been contributed during the campaign by American school children, to help hungry and homeless children of war-stricken nations.

The children's money will be appropriated among the relief-dispensing agencies abroad by a jury of award consisting of Eleanor Roosevelt, William Allen White, Hon. Irving Lehman, Monsignor John A. Ryan, director of the National Catholic Welfare conference, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Dr. Chas. B. Glenn, superintendent of schools, Birmingham, Alabama, and Carolin S. Woodruff, former president of the National Education association.

“The period of collection in the schools,” Mrs. Fisher said, “was a short one, only ten days, ending April 30. The penny contributions have been coming in ever since, and small sums still come daily principally from remote country schools.”

“One of the most heartening features of the movement was the participation of literally thousands of one-room and two-room country schools. Over 900 of these grassroots schools were reached directly with educational material, the first we believe, this has ever accomplished in a philanthropic movement. The vast majority, of course, to the numberless and small-town schools.”

“We estimate now that the generously-given penny contributions of children will finally amount to a total of $140,000. They come out of the tiny allowances of the children themselves, who were carefully told not to give themselves, because the purpose of the movement was to benefit to them the difference in their status and that of many foreign children.”

“Great as the material is which the total contributions represent, this is only half the story. The other half is the aroused awareness among the younger generation.”

BRUCE CATTON'S AMERICAN ROUNDUP

This is the first of three columns analyzing the moves toward an economic union of the Americas.

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The recent White House announcement of a plan for an economic union of North and South America symbolizes this government's conviction that the United States is entering a new and perplexing world order profoundly unlike anything it ever dreamed of before.

This plan for an international cartel to handle all new world export surpluses is based on a theory expressed roughly as follows:

Hitler is going to dominate Europe. The immediate menace to America will be economic rather than military, although the two are tied together. To meet this menace, this nation must do a number of very expensive and complicated things wholly aside from building up its army and navy.

This theory may be wrong—various people in Congress believe it is. If it is right, the answer now proposed may be wrong—even some New Deal planners think it is. Nevertheless, it represents dominant administration thinking.

PLAN OUTLINES ARE NOT NEW

ALTHOUGH FDR sprang the idea before the plan had been perfected, the broad outlines of the program are not new. Two years ago the Agriculture and State Departments began intensive studies of the chances for a closer economic tie-up between North and South America, with an eye to the increasing economic penetration by the totalitarian states.

Moral: Buy Clothes You Can Use

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 29 (AP)—The cap and gown worn by Genevieve Sulter at Marshall college commencement was the same worn by her parents on five occasions when they received degrees.

R. W. Sulter, former superintendent of schools at Chesapeake, O., received two degrees from Colorado State Teachers college. Mrs. Sulter received degrees from the same school, from Valparaiso (Ind.) and Marshall.

Genevieve's younger brother, Fleming, expects to wear the same outfit when he graduates from Marshall in 1943.

Took Him 44 Years To Win A Diploma

LONG BRANCH, N. J., June 29 (AP)—Oscar P. Cobb, 59, got his high school diploma 44 years after he started the course. Cobb left school in 1898 to fight in the Spanish-American war. He resumed studies in 1938 and completed credits with the class of '40.

JUST FOLLOW THE SIGN

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

ALLY OOP

debts went unpaid. The depression resulted.

German financiers already have foreseen the disaster ahead, and in every captured country, even in Germany, rediscount rates have been lowered—which is an attempt to produce easy money. Easy money is the first step toward inflation.

3. The new Monroe doctrine is not only a military and political instrument to keep European and Asiatic powers out of this hemisphere, it is also being forged rapidly into an economic instrument to prevent economic penetration. For economic penetration now is recognized as a forerunner of political and military conquest.

At the Conference of Panama last year the 21 American republics formed an intra-hemisphere financial and economic advisory committee. And now that the loss of Europe as a market is implied in undercover threats from Berlin and Rome, the committee is going into action.

Solid Front Proposed

The first proposal to reach publication is a plan to form an all-American corporation or cartel to buy up with United States dollars the surpluses in the United States and Latin America, and to force European bargainers to deal with a solid front of American nations—instead of picking off business men and nations one at a time and playing them against each other.

If that all-American corporation formed in Havana this summer and gets down to business—and reaction in Latin America is universally favorable—the Hitler economic bloc in Europe won't be able to get what it wants on its own terms.

The British empire is not available, as yet, as a reservoir of supply. Russia hasn't enough raw materials for her own needs, and her political tack of recent weeks indicates that she wouldn't send them to the rest of Europe under Hitler even if she had surpluses. So that leaves the American nations as the best source of supply for Europe.

American foreign policy makers tell you off the record that they have a desire to starve the people of Europe. But if American surpluses are going to be used for relief in Europe, they want them so labeled and hope to make Hitler tell the people who receive American relief that his system did not produce their food.

Unofficially, an American representative in Berlin already has been told by the German undersecretary of agriculture that Germany has no surplus of grain to feed the millions of Europe this winter.

The American case is based on the belief that Hitler will have a hard time explaining how nazism is the greatest of all systems, when starvation and famine and bankruptcy begin to spread over Europe.

The name “Balkans” is Turkish for “mountains.”

Francie turned, sobbing. "Take me to him, Pops. I want to go to Gusty."
John Weston took his daughter's hand, a look of relief breaking over his face. "Good girl, Francie," he murmured, and led her swiftly out of the studio into the warm California night.
Francie felt faint. She was vaguely conscious of the lights of Hollywood swarming by the car window, and then they were at the hospital.
As they approached Gusty's room, a gray-haired doctor met them. He said to Francie in low tones, "Are you 'Sugar'?" She nodded. "You can go right in. He's been calling for you."
Gusty was a white still figure on the bed. His eyes were closed. His breathing came with an effort. Francie crossed to him softly. A cold weight pressed against her heart as she bent over him.
"Gusty," she said, then added in a whisper, "dear."
He stirred and a low moan escaped his lips. "Where's Sugar?" he muttered. "I want to see her. I want to give her the ticket." He fumbled with the covers. "Where's my wallet? I want Francie to have it."
"Oh, Gusty . . ." She pressed her cheek against his. "I—I've got the ticket."
He sighed, threw back his arm. "Where's Francie?"
"I'm right here, Gusty." Francie was crying, and the theatrical make-up ran down her face in streaks. "Please open your eyes and look at me."
His lids came up slowly. His eyes lighted. Restless fingers groped for her hand. "Hullo Sugar," he said with an effort.
"Gusty! Oh, I'm so glad you know me. You're going to be all right. You're going to get well. Aren't you, dear?"
The shadow of a grin flickered across his set lips. Gusty said weakly, "Darn right, Sugar." Then he went to sleep.
Francie held his hand until the doctor came and motioned her outside. "Your boy friend has a very solid constitution," he smiled.

"I wouldn't plan any funeral yet." Francie blushed. "Why did you send your wallet to me? Gusty. I'm so ashamed about that day in Mr. Koon's office. Can you ever forgive me?"
He said, "Well, Gusty, I've finally settled matters. I've been talking with one of the studio executives. He admits they were at fault for not checking your qualifications more carefully before letting you smash that car."
"Are they going to pay Gusty?" Francie asked.
"Better than that," Mr. Weston replied. "They're standing all hospital expenses and giving Gusty $100 in cash. And if he wants it, he can have a job shoving props around. How does that sound, Gusty?"
"Swell!" After six days Gusty's grin was still wan. "I can sure use that money."
"And the job? It will put you in contact with some pretty important musicians. That's your ambition, isn't it? To play with some big outfit?"
"Well . . . yes, Mr. Weston, but gee, I hooked my trumpet."
"You can easily unhook it," John Weston noticed his daughter's hand clasped in Gusty's, and his eyes smiled. "Well, it's up to you, son. At any rate, you're not broke."
He faded discreetly from the veranda. Gusty and Francie sat for a while in silence.
Francie said, "It—it's a grand opportunity, Gusty. Pops is right. You'd soon know everyone important, and before long you'd get a real break. Maybe doing music for pictures or something."
"Yeah," Gusty said, "I guess so."
"Well, you don't sound very happy over it," Francie said, her eyes hopeful.
"You know what, Francie?" Gusty said suddenly. "It was pretty doggone swell of you to throw away your big chance to come to me. Why'd you do it?"

glamorous against its backdrop of hills.
"Pretty here, isn't it?" Gusty said.
Francie's heart ached solidly. Gusty liked it. He was going to stay. Some day she would read in the Elspeth City Bugle about how he had signed a big movie contract . . .
"Yes," she said tonelessly. "It's pretty."
"Prettier than Elspeth City?" he probed.
"I—I guess so."
Gusty sighed. "Well, I suppose if this is where you want to live I'd better take the job."

Research Key To Progress In Industry

WACO, June 29.—Scientific research is the key to progress in the textile industry, it was declared today by Dr. Samuel Lenher, technical manager of the Fine Chemicals Division of the Du Pont company, in a paper presented before the Cotton Research congress.

"It is reasonable to assume," said Dr. Lenher, "that increased attention to research will bear the same fruit in the textile industry as has already been borne by the research activities in the chemical industry."

Dr. Lenher pointed out that the textile industry ranks first in the nation in the number of persons employed, wages paid, and chemicals consumed, yet stands near the bottom in research expenditures.

"One estimate," he said, "gives the figure of $250,000 as representing the current annual expenditures on research by the textile industry—a figure corresponding to only about 0.01% of sales. In contrast, the United States Tariff commission reports that the synthetic organic chemical industry's net cost for research was $10,449,000 in 1938; this cost was equal to 4.3% of sales of all synthetic chemicals that year."

Research by the chemical industry has brought many benefits to the cotton textile industry. Dr. Lenher declared, pointing to dyes, surface active agents, synthetic resins, water repellents, fire retardants and mildew inhibitors as among the chemical contributions that have brought constantly increasing use of cotton textiles.

"The production and consumption of cotton textiles in the United States continues to increase," he continued "in the face of the rapid expansion of the rayon industry and the recent rise of new fibers such as rayon. Information compiled from the Bureau of Census reports for 1939 domestic production of over nine billion square yards of cotton goods and a per capita consumption of 67.7 square yards, as compared with an average per capita consumption of maintenance of private armies is no way to deal with these traitors.

The column is of the opinion that the country should institute universal selective military training as a part of the national arms program. It is of this opinion for the reason that the men of the nation, if called upon to fight, should be ready to fight at the quickest possible moment. Speed is the essence of successful warfare. It has always been. Many long and valuable months of time would be necessary to train and equip an army sufficient to meet the armed strength of a modern dictator. A great reservoir of trained men, equipped and ready to fight at a moment's notice would be a persuasive force that a n y ambitious aggressor would consider with prudence and hesitation. Moreover, such a force and the knowledge of the men who would compose it that they know the weapons and the technique they would be called upon to use, would instill into the country a confidence it does not now possess. Such a program of training would be a strong insurance against war.

Such a force would be under the control of duly constituted and responsible public authority. It would be an organization of due process. It would be no special group obsessed with the idea of a peculiar and high mission, responsible, not to the people, but to its own concept of this ideal and the interpretations and private ambitions of its leaders.

That is the only way in which a responsible military organization can be formed of the citizenship.

Ticket to Hollywood—

the ticket. What did you do? Why, you tossed away your big chance to come to the hospital!"

Francie said, "Gusty, you mean . . ."

"Well, it's darn funny, ain't it?" "Yes, Yes, it is. It . . . it seems like each one of us was thinking of the other instead of ourselves."

Gusty nodded. "We're pretty young of course, but if you want me to stay in Hollywood I could send for you some day."

"Gusty, do you want to stay here?"

"Do you?"

Francie frowned. "Everything's sort of changed, Gusty. I'm not sure I even want to be a singer except just for fun. Like with Duke Meyers or someone."

Gusty's hand tightened around hers. "Well, heck, why didn't you say so, Francie? Because I . . . I feel like that too. 'Course, I want to go on playing my old hot trumpet and maybe work out new licks and play with Duke. But fixing autos is a good business. It's solid. If you're good you can always make enough to—well, run a home."

"On, Gusty."

He straightened. "Say, know what night it is, Francie? It's Friday. I'll bet Maw's got a raft of new records. Wouldn't mind sitting in on the old jam session right now."

"Gee, it'd be swell Gusty," Francie said. "Maybe Pops was right after all. He said the happiest girls stay in their Elspeth Cities and marry their Gu—" She broke off, cheeks crimson. "Maw's their who?"

"He said . . . their Gusty Gays."

"Well, why not?" Gusty said fiercely. "I guess if we want to do things that way it's our business. Maybe we're just getting a little sense. In a year or so, maybe—"

Francie laid her head on Gusty's shoulder. He had changed so. He wasn't afraid to like her any more. Hard-boiled Gusty talking about love and getting married. Francie's heart seemed to have wings.

Aunt Hat poked at the door to look out at them. She emitted a somber "humpf!" But there was a mellow light in her eyes that belied her disgust. Her lemon-colored head bobbed away, occupied perhaps with somewhat gender thoughts than usual of the man who had blighted her career.

Francie fumbled in her bag. "I've still got your wallet, Gusty, and your little trumpet pin. I found it the night Blubber robbed you. I was afraid you might lose it."

"Well, I'll be!" Gusty fingered his beloved pin. "Am I glad to have it back!"

Francie said, "The ticket's still in there, Gusty."

He pulled it out, examined it. Francie watched him with clear, unafraid eyes. Even Pops had agreed it was better for Gusty never to know she'd taken it.

Gusty said softly, "I—I'd like you to keep the pin, Francie."

"Gusty, not really?"

"Yes," he said gravely, fumbling as he pinned it on her blouse. "It sort of makes all the things we've planned seem kind of near and real."

Then he bent and kissed her. It was not a movie kiss. It had no glamor. It was just a plain, ordinary kiss, but it filled Francie's eyes with ecstatic tears and made her happier than all the expert kisses Jerry Finney had given her.

And, as if the tears had washed all the stardust from her eyes, she saw quite clearly that the ticket was nothing but a bit of worthless pasteboard. It had made her deceive Gusty, but she would never do it again. Unless, of course, it was for his own good . . . and that was a woman's privilege.

Smuggling close to him, Francie said, "Gusty, let's frame this old thing and hang it in the living room of our house back in Elspeth City."

(THE END)

Safety Shorts

From Oil Belt Safety Council

LET'S TURN the pages of the calendar back almost a year, to a hot summer afternoon in July, 1939. Now, let's pick out an hour in that afternoon—any hour. The clock strikes, and the hour begins.

All over the United States things are happening—people are doing countless things. An automobile races along a highway in Kansas—a man is fishing on a lake in Michigan—the head of a swimmer bobs through the water off the coast of California—a farmer plows a field in Nebraska—a housewife climbs on a chair to hang a curtain in her new home in New Jersey.

The clock strikes again. The hour is ended. In these brief 60 minutes, what has happened to all these people doing all these things? Well, 12 of them are dead—cut down suddenly by accidents. Every hour of every day during July last year an average of 12 persons met death accidentally, the Oil Belt Safety Council says.

Now let's come back to the present. July is almost here again. Will the stroke of every hour again mark the death of 12 persons? Not if we don't want it to—not if every one of us recognizes July as the most hazardous month of the year, and uses extra caution in everything he does.

Didn't Like School, So She Went Back

NEWARK, N. J. June 29 (AP)—Mrs. George Farley, 35-year-old mother of five, went back to school, she explained, because there were a lot of things about education she didn't like.

"But before I could intelligently criticize them," she said, as she received a degree from Newark Teachers College, "I thought it would be a good idea to find out what exists now in the educational field."

Now Mrs. Farley plans to work for a master's degree and a doctorate.

Comprehensive Study of Plant Life in Texas

DALLAS, June 29 (Sp)—A joint project for making the first comprehensive survey of Texas plant life has been set up by Southern Methodist university and the University of Michigan.

The project, which eventually will involve the collaboration of many of the country's outstanding botanists, will begin January 1, when scientists from the two universities inaugurate an initial five-year period of field work to gather an extensive collection of plants from the several floral zones of the state.

As a part of the project, they will collect and preserve for the University of Michigan herbarium at Ann Arbor and the herbarium of S. M. U. at Dallas. The collections eventually will be the basis for a flora of Texas, a publication to include all the ferns and flowering plants of the state.

More than 5,000 higher plants are known to exist in Texas," said Dr. C. L. Lundell, curator of the Michigan herbarium and director of the joint project, "and it is hoped the new plan will materially increase the number."

The United States has a telephone to every seven persons.

Rumanian Battle...

King Carol ordered complete mobilization—"to the last man"—effective at midnight and all taxis and private vehicles here disappeared from the streets during the early morning hours.

Cafes and restaurants closed as waiters hastily doffed their aprons and hurried to concentration points to join the 2,000,000 men already under arms in this war-threatened Balkan kingdom.

Increase Forces It was learned that the German legation warned the Rumanian government to increase internal police measures against possible revolutionary activity by communists and Jews.

A complicated situation fell on the Rumanian general staff with the revelation that many of Rumania's troops on the Hungarian border—another trouble spot—are from ceded Bessarabia.

According to the Russian demands to which King Carol capitulated they must return to their Bessarabian homes as new Russian citizens.

Besides losing some of its best fighters, the general staff must find replacements quickly on the Hungarian frontier, which threatens to develop trouble over Budapest's demands for Rumania after the World war.

After taking over Cernauti, a city of 110,000 population, the Russians swept into Dorohoi, a town in the province of Moldavia.

As soon as this news seeped out, the Rumanian government filed an urgent appeal with the German minister that Berlin put hard pressure on Moscow to halt the red advance and force the Russians to retire to the line named in their original, and accepted, demand.

All this was not the end of this unhappy country's troubles.

Budapest informants advised that while Hungarian official quarters were denouncing as "typical Rumanian gangsterism" published reports of a Russian ultimatum to Hungary, a campaign against Rumania was opened in the officially inspired Hungarian press.

The papers there asserted that the Bucharest newspapers had published the story about a Russian ultimatum against Hungary, only to "make the Rumanian people think that other people are in trouble."

Already, this country has lost 4,000,000 people—one fifth of her population—and one fifth of its total area. Of these people, 80,000 are Germans.

Already, red troops have occupied surrendered sections of Rumania in a political conquest that may set bring conflict between Germany and Russia.

The Rumanian government formally announced general mobilization—which actually had existed since yesterday—after receipt of information that soviet troops were moving further into the

German Planes Continue to Harass England

By The Associated Press LONDON, June 29. — German planes renewed the bombardment of Britain last night and early today, but a neutral diplomatic source declared, "a peace move is in the air" and predicted any attempted German invasion would await the outcome.

The German air raiders struck at southeast and southwest England and at Wales early today after having killed 29 persons in bombing and machine-gunning England's channel islands last night soon after a British announcement that those outposts near the French coast were demilitarized.

Heavy explosions were heard in southeast England, anti-aircraft guns and searchlights got busy in the southwest, and bombs were dropped in Wales apparently by a lone raider who made a hit-skip dash to that western region.

The home office said 23 persons were killed and 36 injured by the raids on Guernsey and six were killed and several injured on Jersey. Property damage was heavy. Most civilians along with all military forces and equipment, were moved from the islands secretly last week, it was disclosed last night.

The German air raiders struck at southeast England, where heavy explosions were heard today.

The islanders, (nearly 150,000 according to latest census figures) carried only light luggage, abandoning their crops and farm animals and shops filled with valuable stocks. Automobiles were left standing at the wharves.

Officials acknowledged that the islands' position between the peninsulas of Normandy and Brittany made them virtually indefensible.

Watchers on the southeast coast of England reported last night the sound of heavy explosions across the channel on the Nazi-held French coast, along with vicious anti-aircraft fire, indicating that the British were continuing to harry German base-builders there.

As for the report of a peace move, the source, who has world wide contacts, said it was believed the British position rested on the response of French colonies and the French fleet to the efforts of French General Charles de Gaulle to have Frenchmen fight on for the Allied cause.

The channel island victims almost equalled the acknowledged casualties in the whole series of Nazi raids on England itself.

They were among the few civilians remaining after their fellow islanders packed up and left, leaving behind unharvested crops, livestock and boarded-up hotels which once thrived in that holiday paradise.

Some men who crawled beneath their cars and trucks were burned to death from fires caused by direct hits.

He Followed Advice And Got the Job

A German military mission, arriving here tonight, was understood to have come to see to it that the soviet kept to the original territorial demands.

The red troops marched unopposed into Bessarabia and northern Bucovina, after King Carol's government had ceded those areas in yielding to Moscow's ultimatum, while German sources promised that the Nazis "definitely will set things later on."

Red soldiers were reported tonight without official confirmation to be moving on Botoshani, which, like Dorohoi, is in the northernmost district of old Rumania.

It was learned also tonight that at one point—name not given—on the Bessarabian frontier Rumanian troops fired upon the Russians with machine guns, killing many.

The Russian move brought unrest to the entire European southeast and Asia Minor.

FATHER STUDIES TOO DANVILLE, Ind., June 29 (P)—Both Albert V. Wade and his daughter, Virginia Ruth, got college degrees this year. Wade received a master of science from Butler University, Indianapolis, and his daughter a bachelor of science from Central Normal college here. Both are school teachers.

BIRD COMMUTERS HOUSTON, June 29 (P)—C. E. Buehner, businessman who bands birds as a hobby, says many of his feathered friends are pretty regular commuters. "I have records of birds that were banded one year and then set loose," he says. "The next two years they came back within several days of the previous dates."
