GREAT FIRES ROAR IN SUBURBS OF LONDON

Through the Editor's Spectacles
By GEORGE

The opponent of Cong. Clyde Garrett in the run-off campaign for congress—Sam Russell of Stephenville—has made much of Garrett's refusal to support the amendment to the Hatch act, or so-called "clean politics" bill. This amendment extends the Hatch act's ban on political activity by federal employes to employes of state and local governments and political institutions which are in whole or part supported by federal funds. (It is interesting to remember in connection with what is presently said in this column that these federal funds are collected in the states.)

If Clyde L. Garrett ever did a statesmanly thing he did that when he voted against this sly and pernicious measure which does nothing so much as it undermines state and local sovereignty and further extends the authority of distant and unsympathetic bureaucrats over the private lives of the people. This amendment to the Hatch act is couched in terms of a glowing probity. But for all its sanctimonious words, it is part and parcel of a philosophy which boils down to a single theory—a theory that the individual is responsible of taking care of himself and his local government is nothing more than a parasitical relic of days when American citizenship was a treasured privilege for which men and women were glad to pay the obligations it imposed. No prayer that the self-righteous Pharisee ever offered in the temple was more deceitful than this amendment.

It says that the people of a state cannot control their local political activities; that these people cannot regulate their elections and insure the purity of the ballot. It says, inferentially, but positively, that the people of the 17th congressional district of Texas are either crooks, politically speaking, or morally and politically incompetent to manage their public affairs. It says this can only be done by a federal bureaucrat, armed with an authority which escapes the courts. Did you ever stop to consider how much of this New Deal "reform" legislation seeks to avoid the courts? This fact alone should be a warning flag for those misguided zealots who demand such measures as this Hatch amendment, of the consequences and hidden meanings of which they know so little.

Clyde Garrett voted for the original Hatch measure. It regulates the political activities of federal employes and as such it has some merit. At least it comes within the purview of federal authority, and as such does no violence to our democracy. (We are still a democracy, are we

U. S. AND JAPS TO TAKE OVER BRITISH ZONE

SHANGHAI, Aug. 16 (AP).—Defense commanders of the Shanghai international zone issued a communique this morning confirming that the British defense sector is being divided between American and Japanese forces.

The Americans, in addition to the central district, embracing the Shanghai commercial and financial zone, will guard the west Hongkew area, north of Soochow creek and stretching to the settlement's northern boundary.

It is considered noteworthy that this section includes the special district court, which still remains outside of the domination of the Wang-Ching-Wei Japanese-sponsored "central Chinese government."

The Japanese get the extra-settlement western district, previously controlled by the British.

Previously, Wang Ching-Wei government spokesmen had said they would not permit transfer of the British sector to U. S. troops, and these Japanese had expressed hope that the U. S. marines, under Col. DeWitt Peck, would follow the British example and withdraw from Shanghai.

The communique said the motion for reallocation of the British defense sector was adopted by a majority vote.

The Japanese voted against it and reserved the right to submit alternative plans to the defense committee.

Pioneer Schools Elect Two Teachers

PIONEER, Aug. 16 (Sp).—Miss M. Cook, of near Dallas, has been employed to teach home economics and typing in Pioneer high school during the ensuing term, which opens September second.

Miss Leone Hoge, of Knox City, was elected two weeks ago to teach music at Pioneer. These two additions round out the faculty of 11 teachers.

The school lunch room will be ready to open the first day of school after an extensive program of repairing within the dining room to conform with specifications prescribed by the federal school supervisor.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Muller and son, Bobby, D., have returned from a few days' visit to the Gulf coast.

Predicts Victory

PIERCE BROOKS

Brooks, Elated Over Prospects, Speaks Here

Highly elated over the enthusiastic reception accorded him during his swing through the omnibus plain country, Pierce Brooks, candidate for railroad commissioner, predicted to a Cisco audience today that he will be overwhelmingly elected on August 24.

"My pledge of support to the progressive program of Governor O'Daniel and my pledge to aid in strapping the Sadler-Thompson machine of professional politicians," Brooks said, "have brought me enormous support. The swing is definitely to Brooks."

"My opponent, Olin Culberson, has sarcastically pointed out that I was defeated for lieutenant governor in 1938. Very cunningly, he has failed to tell the people that in the run-off of that year, despite the fact I was forced out of active campaigning by a serious accident, I polled more than 400,000 votes. Culberson has failed to tell the people that when he first ran for railroad commissioner, he failed to get into the run-off and was eliminated in the first primary with a very poor scattering of votes.

"Culberson is using the organizations of firemen in Texas as a stepping stone, but he has failed to tell the people that he has been a paid lobbyist and secretary of this organization for more than 20 years. He thinks it is okay for him to use the gasoline and fire

HOUSE PASSES NAT'L GUARD SERVICE BILL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP).—The house passed the national guard mobilization bill by a whopping 342 to 33 vote Thursday, after crushing an effort to restrict the service of militiamen and reserve officers to the continental United States and its possessions and territories.

The measure went back to the senate for action on minor amendments. It found that chamber busily debating the peace-time conscription law and discussing a report that Great Britain had offered to lease Caribbean naval base sites to the United States in return for much-needed American destroyers.

As it stood, approved by both branches, the national guard bill would exempt men with dependents, but other militiamen and reserves would be subject to the call of the president to a year's compulsory service anywhere in the western hemisphere, the American possessions and the Philippine Islands.

The changes made in the measure by the house were of such an unimportant nature that leaders predicted either ready approval of them by the senate, or quick action in conference to bring senate and house bills into agreement. In either case they expected the bill to be in President Roosevelt's hands in a few days.

With his signature, the administration will be in a position to start the first phase of its general program for getting an army, eventually to number 1,200,000, into uniform and under training. The second phase, as outlined by war department officials, is selective compulsory military training, which is contemplated in legislation now before the senate.

The day's debate on that measure produced an appeal from Senator Downey (D-Calif.) that an amendment be added to provide jobs building a network of super-highways for the conscripts after the completion of their year of compulsory training in the army.

TWO INCHES RAIN FALLS DURING NIGHT

Wide Area Is Drenched By Showers of Varying Degree

Two inches of rain drenched the Cisco country last night, definitely breaking a mid-summer drouth and heat wave which had reached serious proportions, and bringing prospects of an early fall season to stimulate business. The rain was the second of any consequence in the last week. An earlier shower registered one inch.

The precipitation was reportedly general over the western area, although it varied greatly in amounts. Three to five inches was reported at Hamlin. Stamford received more than two inches, bringing its total for the last two days to near five.

Haskell, Anson, Rotan, Roby, Albany and other areas in that part of the country received heavy downpours. Brownwood and the district south of Cisco likewise had heavy rains, measuring two inches in the Brown county capital. Coleman, Winters, Ballinger and communities southeast of Cisco reported heavy showers. Strong winds accompanied the downpours.

At 10 o'clock this morning the level of Lake Cisco had risen six inches with the total run-off not possible to be known for a day or so. Fresh water was being run into the swimming pools to replace that made murky by the rain, and afford VFW jamboree crowds today and Saturday clear pools for swimming.

Condition of the grounds at the lake where the Jamboree is being held was good, as sunshine today rapidly dried out the earth and removed effects of the down-pour on the footing there.

Father of Cisco Attorney to Be Buried Today

Frank B. Wright, father of Forrest D. Wright, Cisco attorney, died at his Wortham home late yesterday afternoon after a long illness. Death occurred a few days after Mr. Wright sank into a coma. He had been ill of heart trouble for a number of years, although last summer he was able to visit his son here.

Funeral services will be held at the family residence at Wortham at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Burial in Wortham cemetery will follow. Forrest Wright and other children were with their father when he died.

Survivors include Mrs. Wright; the son, F. D. Wright; two daughters, Mrs. Tom Kirven of Alabama and Mrs. Ben Nayphes of Denver, Colo., and one grandchild, Billy Butts Wright of Cisco, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Wright. Mrs. Forrest Wright and Billy Butts went to Wortham early today for the funeral.

Mr. Wright was a long-time resident of the Wortham community, where he engaged in stock farming before the central Texas area, famous as a cotton producing district, was turned to the growing of this staple.

Lutheran Young Farmers Meet

Young farmers of the Lutheran community, organized into a community club, of which A. P. Wende is president, held a meeting at the Lutheran school house last night to discuss common problems.

T. G. Caudle, Cisco vocational agriculture teacher, sponsor of the club, was present.

Shower for Guardsmen

Members of national guard units operating near Alexandria, Louisiana, finish off a hot day on the mock-war fields with a cold shower. Guardsmen from thirteen southern states are being concentrated for main part of Third Army maneuvers starting August 17.

Saturday to Be Big Day at Jamboree

Because of heavy rains over Texas which broke into the opening activities, the morning program of the Statewide VFW Jamboree at Lake Cisco was suspended today. However, visitors were beginning to arrive by noon, and the afternoon program was presented according to schedule. A big day is anticipated tomorrow.

An NYA band from Fort Worth, composed of about 33 young boys and girls, under the direction of H. Dydward, arrived at noon for this afternoon's program. An interesting NYA project display was on exhibition in one of the cottages at the lake, sponsored by the Ranger group.

Preliminaries of the burro derby were to be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock, with finals tomorrow at 5. The presentation of contestants for the VFW queen title will be held at the lake at 9:45 tonight.

The two day program will consist of political speeches, the awarding of VFW prizes, and the usual entertainment of Lake Cisco. A carnival, the Borderland shows, is expected to be a big attraction.

Bud Booth of Moran is commander of the 17th district, H. R. (Pop) Garrett is post commander, L. E. Vaughn, past commander, and A. L. Clark, adjutant. They are being assisted by Roy Phippen, W. H. Hayes, P. G. Berry and others in arranging and directing the program.

Minister Announces Sermon Subjects

Subject of tonight's message at the Church of Christ will be "The Foundation of the Church," it was announced today. Hugh S. Boydston of El Reno, Oklahoma, is bringing the sermons nightly.

Saturday night Mr. Boydston will speak on "For We Walk By Faith," Sunday morning on "The Name Christian," and Sunday night on "Revelations."

The Monroe doctrine was created to prevent the Holy alliance from restoring Spain's lost empire in the Americas.

NAZI PLANES IGNITE PARTS OF DISTRICT

Arsenals, Warehouses and Food Plants Are Targets

(By Associated Press) Great fires roared in London's suburbs late today, the German news agency, DNB, reported, as waves of Nazi warplanes fought a terrific air battle with British fighters over the British capital.

Arsenals, warehouses and refrigerating plants were among the objectives in the London vicinity, the agency said.

DNB said a Nazi bomber unit which returned from a raid reported 19 British planes destroyed around London. Six German planes were reported missing.

Raids in the vicinity of London followed day long bombings in many other sectors of the British Isles.

1,000 GERMAN PLANES RAID BRITAIN LONDON, Aug. 16 (AP)—Britons dug their heels and wounded early today out of the bomb ruins of the biggest air attack in history, executed by an armada of more than 1,000 German planes which struck eight miles from the heart of London and spread destruction from the Scottish borders to lands end.

Enemy planes came back after midnight over the Midlands and northeastern and southwestern England. Explosions were heard in the southwest and residents of one town there detected a continuous rumbling some thought might be naval gunfire.

The battle of machinegun fire was heard, and flashes in the sky as bombs fell in northwestern England. Some whistling bombs were dropped. The pre-dawn raiders roared over the Midlands in small waves.

In the last dusk-hazed fury of the fighting yesterday, planes were reported plunging in smoke-trailing death dives at the rate of one a minute.

Claim 144 Planes The British total claim for the day—144 German planes to 27 British—dwarfed previous reports on successful assaults since last Sunday. Yesterday's fierce air siege overshadowed all earlier Nazi raids.

What the British losses would amount to actually in dead and wounded, splintered homes and smashed buildings remained obscure despite communique compiling reports from cities from the English channel to the Irish sea.

Listings of deaths were scattered and the ministry of home security summed up the assaults with the comment: "Little success at a high cost."

London echoed with the band-sheer wail of alarm sirens as the tide of Nazi bombardment ripped close about the sprawling city, heart of an embattled empire.

Big dark dive-bombers screamed down within a few hundred feet of the ground to dump tons of explosives at the Croydon airport in the suburbs, eight miles south of Charing Cross, mid-London.

Other raiders smashed at objectives down the Thames from London. Joint air ministry and ministry of home security announcements (Continued on Page Four)

Sanity in South American Sales

FUNK fulminates in Koenigsburg and Molotoff mutters in Moscow. Both misrepresent the American ideal of trade relationships with South America. Funk wants the world to believe that the United States seeks to monopolize South American trade by embargoing and boycotting others out of that field. Molotoff wants the world to believe that the United States plans to exclude others from South American trade by conquering and dominating countries down there. Both have amply demonstrated their own familiarity with the technique which they charge against the United States. But—

THE United States, as we understand it, has no wish to exclude anybody from South American trade. That goes for Germany and Japan, as well as for everybody else in the world. The United States doesn't even object to a straight barter deal which is made on an even-steven basis and leaves no aftermath of later control in the form of balances useful in trade with only one country.

Anybody with half an eye knows that there are vast regions of South America which must trade with Europe. Vast quantities of South American products are needed in Europe and not needed in the United States. It is desirable and inevitable that such products in one way or another find their way to the place where they are needed.

Nobody questions this; nobody considers it an evil. Even if the United States could corner the whole of South American trade it would not be desirable. The United States has never had any thought of trying it.

WHAT the United States is interested in is this: it wants to assure that no South American country is placed in a position where it must of necessity barter away its economic and political independence with its beef, coffee, wheat or bananas.

Had the totalitarian countries not exhibited such a wolfish insistence on mixing into the internal affairs of countries with which they trade, nobody would have minded the trade itself.

Any time they want to give up intrigue and go back to hoss-tradin', Uncle Sam is willin'.

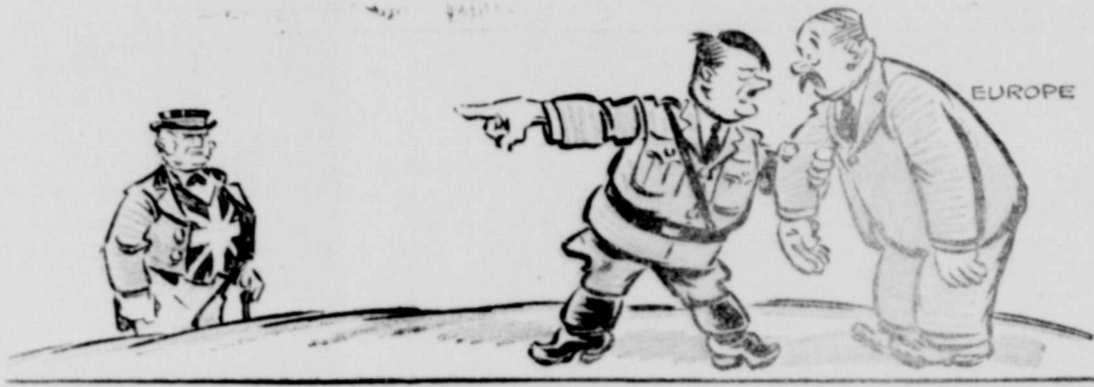

A biologist finds flapping ears an indication of stability and integrity. Republicans have been saying that about their elephant for years.

SOME LAWS THAT CAN BE DISPENSED WITH

Recently this column had something to say about laws that could be repealed to the advantage of the entire people, the better enforcement of meritorious measures, and some changes that should be made in others.

The bar association is now attempting to revise and simplify the rules of court procedure, and it is devoutly hoped that their labors will not be in vain.

I also suggested that some relief measure should be instituted to at least slow down the fast-growing official racket of long-term officials neglecting their duties in positions to which they were elected by running for other offices with two or four years unexpired term yet to serve.

The state is not presumed to defray campaign expenses for any candidate.

The state is entitled to every working day of every official holding a state commission.

If these long-term officials did not like the jobs to which they were elected they should have made more congenial selections when they first announced. They have no right to use their positions as stepping-stones to higher places. If they did not wish to work they should not have hired themselves to the state.

When a business firm engages the services of an employe he deducts his salary—or wage—for the time he voluntarily absents himself from his duties without permission. It is beyond the issue to say he is keeping his office in goodshape. That is not the question. If a subordinate can carry on the official duties as well as the absent head of his department—which doubtless he can—let's turn the office over to the subordinate. Why maintain a high-salaried official at the head of any department when a clerk, at half of the salary, can perform the duties just as efficiently.

The people should nip this racket in its incipency.

I am informed by competent legal authority that the nuisance can be abated only by a constitutional amendment. I believe that the board of control, or the comptroller, would be clearly within rights to hold up the salary of any official for time he is unduly or willfully absent from his office. If this can be done, a constitutional amendment would not have to be resorted to. At any rate, were I the comptroller, these dissatisfied long-term officials would draw their pay checks for the time they absented themselves from their duties only at the end of mandamus proceedings. That might discourage these official racketeers.

Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Picture of a perspiring reporter trying to get a little information out of the navy department these days (the war department is just as tough):

Reporter — Hello, Commander, one of my papers down at Tallahassee hears a report that you are building a cruiser named the Tallahassee. Can you tell be about it?

Commander—No, I don't believe I can.

Rep.—Well, you can tell me if there is to be a cruiser named the Tallahassee, can't you?

Commander.—We are not allowed to give out any information about ships under construction.

Rep.—Well, but my paper says definitely that there is to be a cruiser named the Tallahassee. That story is already out. What I want to know is what size given by the American Red Cross. Some 16 scouts learned to swim during the camp period. Many other tests were passed during the camp.

Sunday Services
A Sunday service was conducted each Sunday—Rev. L. S. Jeffrey, rector of the Episcopal church, brought the message the first Sunday, and Dr. Jewel Daugherty, past president of the council, spoke at the last Sunday service. Many visitors were present both Sundays.

The large rock mess hall accommodating all who came. The mess hall is something that the council has been needing for a long time, as it not only gives a place for the scouts to eat, but serves as an auditorium and a place of refuge in case of bad weather. The mess hall is being paid for by public donations.

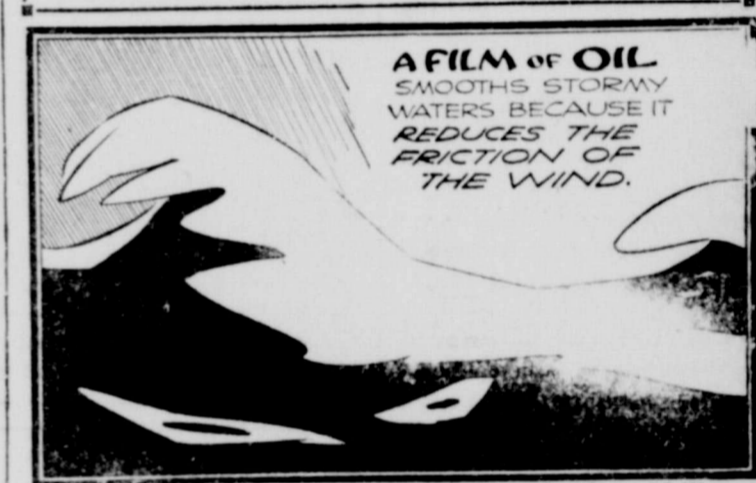

'All Depends'
Rep.—(Recovering from a near faint) ... size, number, etc.

Rep.—Just a minute, Commander. (Reporter puts down receiver, mops brow and struggles to get control of himself. He takes a deep breath and launches off again.) Now, Commander, can you tell me approximately where it is being built? I know, I know, not the specific shipbuilding yard; but is it on the west coast or the east coast?

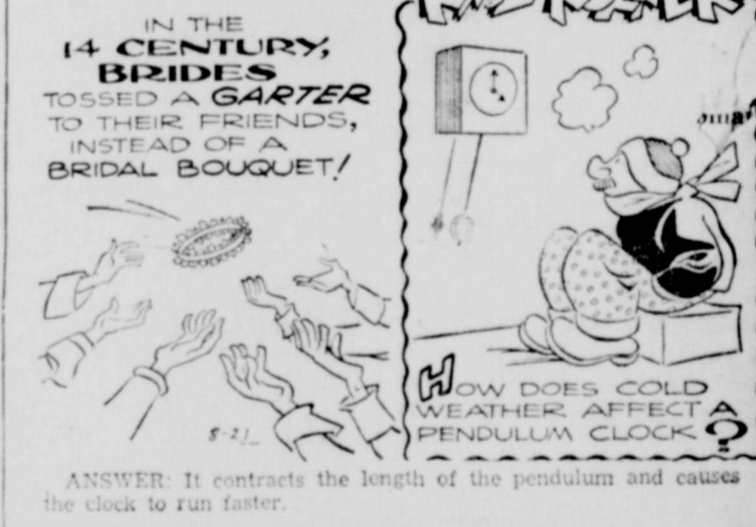

Commander.—Wait a minute, I'll have to call on another phone. (Reporter waits.) Hello. They tell me that that is not privileged information, young man. But I'll give you a tip. All of our cruisers are being built in the United States.

Builds Model Of Ship

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 16 (AP)—Walter Hull, whose great-grandfather commanded "Old Ironsides" in her famous battle with the English ship Guerriere in the war of 1812, is finishing a scale model of the ship that relative Isaac Hull piloted to victory.

A sailor since childhood, Hull has built many models for the Milwaukee public museum, and the American frigate Constitution, better known as "Old Ironsides," will be placed on exhibition there.

WASHINGTON.—First repeat performance in the European war is likely to be staged in Finland.

Foreign correspondents have left Helsinki, although communications from that city are not subject to censorship. News of what is happening there comes from German dominated news outlets in Stockholm. More reliable information filters through official diplomatic communications.

The Communist party is outlawed in Helsinki, but recently 400 members of the Soviet League of Peace and Friendship staged a demonstration there, and clamored for union with the U. S. S. R.

Twenty-four hours after the March 13 peace treaty was signed the Finns began construction of a new Munsterham line. And Finland's defenses have been strengthened by a flow of supplies from the United States, which have been coming in steadily since then.

When the Finns had to fight for winter they were handicapped by a heavy snow cover on the ground in September, 1939, but was melted.

NO HELP FOR FINNS
SIDE by side with the German preparations, Finland prepared a program designed to help the Finns fight against the Soviet spring and summer.

It seems probable that Finland is sufficiently concentrated on its own defense to neglect other Russian requests for aid. The financial aid which the Finns will be about to receive from the United States.

ter Russia's mechanized units will hang down, and the skillful Finnish skiers in white uniforms will have the advantage.

Also the ice on Finland's lakes is not thick enough until January and February to bear the weight of war vehicles.

Finland can expect little help from other countries.

An official of the German government here privately reports his country unwilling to help Finland in the event of another Russian invasion.

He says Finland has not been properly grateful for Germany's assistance in her fight for independence. That was 23 years ago.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S BIOGRAPHY SOON

THE first biography of Eleanor Roosevelt will be published on her birthday this year. But that is an accident.

Ruby Black, Washington news editor and author of the book, was curious to know why the publishers had decided to issue it not on Oct. 11, less than a month before the presidential election.

The second thought, she decided the publishers were publicly going to ask Mrs. Roosevelt's birthday and write them a congratulatory note about it.

● SERIAL STORY

MURDER INCOGNITO

BY NORMAN KAHL

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MARTIN SAYLER — a lawyer with too many enemies.
DALE APPLEBY — Sayler's stepson.
RHODA WATERS — Appleby's fiancée.
HAZEL LEIGHTON — Sayler's sweetheart.
WINSLOW MARDELL — a gambler.
GEORGE BARBOUR — Sayler's law partner.
LIEUTENANT O'LEARY — police investigator.

YESTERDAY: O'Leary questions Dale about Sayler's business and possible enemies, and about the five dinner guests. A window of the study is discovered unlocked. O'Leary finds a release protecting Sayler from a breach of promise action. He summons Hazel Leighton.

CHAPTER IV

WHEN Hazel Leighton walked into the study, it was quite apparent she had completely recovered from the shock of finding Sayler's body. Aloof and self-composed, she stood poised in the doorway for a moment, as if waiting for Lieutenant O'Leary to acknowledge her presence.

The police officer was still seated at Sayler's desk, engrossed in several documents he had spread before him. Lights in the room were coming from a series of lamps along the walls and from the desk lamp. O'Leary finally looked up, and there was the trace of a smile on his face.

"Miss Leighton?" Hazel nodded. "I'm Lieutenant O'Leary. Come over here and sit down, please." The lieutenant didn't get up. It was not so much his lack of training in the common courtesies as it was his adherence to the old school of technique in criminal investigations — never give the suspect an even break . . . keep yourself at ease; let the suspect grope and falter.

Calmy Hazel walked toward the lieutenant. It was only when she reached the dark, jagged stain in the middle of the room that she hesitated a moment and carefully stepped around it. O'Leary motioned her into a chair that had been placed to the side of the desk, at his right.

"Miss Leighton, I understand it was you who first came upon the body," he said.

She lighted a cigaret. "Yes. It was pretty much of a shock."

"Did you enter this room at all?"

"Not until the others came. I just screamed . . . I couldn't help it. And then I felt weak, so I hung onto the door and stared at the body until Dale and the rest came from the drawing room."

"You didn't touch anything?"

"Not a thing."

O'Leary pushed an ash-tray within Hazel's reach. "Did anyone else touch anything — the body, for instance?"

"No. Mr. MardeLL wanted to turn it over, but Dale told him not to . . . said to wait until you came."

The lieutenant fingered the check he had taken from the desk drawer. "Miss Leighton, did you know that you were to get a $5,000 check from Mr. Sayler tonight?"

For a moment, Hazel's eyes faltered, and she tamped out her cigaret with quick, nervous movements of her long, slender fingers. "Why, yes," she said slowly. "Mr. Sayler was a lawyer, you know, and the check was part of a business matter he was handling for me."

"What kind of business?"

"I don't think that matters. It was personal . . . nothing at all to do with — with what happened here tonight."

O'Leary held out a single sheet of paper, clipped to a tan legal jacket. "Did it have anything to do with this?"

"Why, I don't know. I can't —" "Maybe I ought to tell you what this is," O'Leary interrupted. "It's a release — a release from possible future breach of promise action against Martin Sayler. There's a space down here for you to sign. You won't need to now."

Hazel sat forward in her chair and rested her elbows on the desk. "I can't understand it. I haven't the faintest notion what you mean."

O'Leary looked straight at the blond woman and gestured mildly with a cigar he took from his vest pocket. "Oh, yes, you have, Miss Leighton. I'll tell you what it means. Sayler was going to give you $5,000 so you wouldn't sue him. And he was going to make sure that you couldn't sue. Maybe you'd better tell me the rest."

Hazel sat very rigidly, her blond hair glimmering in the glow of the desk lamp. Little spots of angry red rose in her cheeks. "All right, Lieutenant," she said. "I'll tell you. Maybe that's better. Then you won't be getting a lot of ideas about something that isn't so."

"O'Leary struck a match and held it to his cigar. "Right. It would be a lot better all around if you told me everything."

"Sayler was one of the lowest persons I ever met," Hazel said. "Funny about that . . . I thought I loved him. He's got a kind of veneer that doesn't show up so badly under the right kind of light. We went together for almost a year. He wanted me to marry him, but I wasn't sure. "And then, last week, he made me an offer . . . this offer. I was never so insulted in my life. I had known his attitude toward me was changing. But I didn't know what a rotter he was until he told me the wedding was off and offered me $5,000 to be a good girl. I slapped his face."

O'Leary leaned back in his swivel chair. "Why were you here tonight, then, Miss Leighton?"

Hazel avoided the officer's eyes. "I don't know. There was something about that man . . . I can't tell you exactly what. He asked me to come, and I knew why he wanted me here. I didn't want to come. I had no intentions of coming. Until tonight . . . and then something just seemed to draw me here. I wish I hadn't now."

"I can understand that," said O'Leary.

FROM the vestibule doorway Sergeant Carroll stepped into the room. "Look, Chief," said the Sergeant. "The boys have been doing a little checking, and the medical examiner telephoned. I thought maybe you wanted to know."

"Go ahead, Sergeant," O'Leary said.

Carroll looked unsubtly at Hazel Leighton. "I figured maybe—" "It's all right, Miss Leighton won't mind."

Carroll shrugged. "Okay. Well, first of all, we checked the phone company like you said. They'd know if any long distance calls were made here tonight. There wasn't any."

O'Leary nodded. "Which means Sayler never reached his desk. He was killed right after he left the others in the drawing room — on his way back to the desk."

Carroll squinted. "Right. And here's what the medical examiner has to say. He made a quick check and he said the bullet hit Sayler from the right at an angle, and struck his heart. It knocked him off like a building collapsed on him."

"Which means that the shot must have been fired from somewhere near that window . . . right?"

"Right . . . Only it wasn't — not through the window, anyway."

Sims' Grandson Was Dunkirk Hero

Lance-Corp. Harold A. Sims, above, grandson of Admiral W. Soden Sims, who commanded U. S. fleet in Europe during World War, is the first American serving with British army to be decorated in current war. A wireless operator and tank gunner with Royal Inniskilling Dragoon Guards, he was awarded military medal for gallantry under fire at Dunkirk. His father, Commander George Sims, served U. S. in World War.

O'Leary's eyes became quizzical, but he waited for Carroll to continue.

"The boys have been going over the grounds with a comb," the sergeant explained. "There ain't any footprints. The ground is pretty soft outside this window, and if anybody was hanging around there'd be footprints sure. And the window ain't been touched . . . not from the outside. The only way to open that window is with a crowbar or something sharp, unless it's opened from the inside. That'd leave a mark. There isn't any. Maybe the fingerprints we took on the inside will show something."

O'Leary grunted. "They won't show anything. The housekeeper's, Barbour's, Sayler's, a few cops — they'll be a smear. Anybody who'd try a job like that would be smart enough to wear gloves."

"Yeah, sure," Carroll assented. "We just thought we'd better, though—the old routine."

"The angle of the shot is all wrong for any of the other windows?"

"Right."

"And no shot could have been fired through this window—the one that would give us the right angle?"

"Right again," said Carroll. "There's only one answer I can see, Sergeant," O'Leary said. "Whoever committed the murder was right here in this house—is probably still here."

Hazel Leighton gasped. She stared at O'Leary as if he were a madman.

"That," said Carroll, "is just

● STORIES IN STAMPS

Union With Soviet Ends Stamps of Three Nations

UNION of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania with Soviet Russia marks the end of independent stamp issues from these Baltic countries. One of Latvia's final issues as a republic is the stamp above, showing the coat-of-arms and three stars.

Acceptance of the three nations into the Soviet Union as the 13th, 14th and 15th autonomous republics of the U. S. S. R. adds 64,000 square miles of territory and 6,000,000 people to Russia. Only a small percentage of the inhabitants are Russian.

Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania came into existence in 1918. All were former provinces of the Russian Empire, attained their independence under the principle of self-determination of President Woodrow Wilson's "Fourteen Points."

In 1939 the republics signed mutual assistance pacts with Russia providing for the establishment of Soviet naval and army bases within their borders. These pacts paved the way for final inclusion in the Soviet state.

not?) But Clyde Garrett voted against the amendment to the Hatch act, and in doing so, Mah Frans, he voted against extending the dominion of federal swivelchari-teers, as someone has called them, over the people of his district and against adding more powers to a growing American Gestapo. In doing so he stood with Hatton Summers, one of the ablest and most courageous statesman that Texas ever sent to Washington, who condemned this unwarranted and undemocratic extension of extrajudicial authority over the private lives of the people as an insult to Americanism and a step toward destruction of free government. Take the responsibility for democratic government away from the people and vest it in Washington, and you take away democratic government. And that is exactly what this amendment to the Hatch act tends to do. Responsibility for clean government should be vested in home rule. Clyde Garrett lost his vote against this pernicious measure. But he ought to be honored for standing against it in the face of criticism. And if Sam Russell, who says he would have voted for it, intends to go to Washington and there support such bills to entrap and destroy the rights and privileges of the individual, then he has no more business in Washington than the columnist has in trying to fly an Atlantic clipper to Berlin.

state, county and local governmental agencies supported or benefited in some measure by federal money; or perhaps, as some authorities say, a farmer who draws a benefit check from the AAA—let one of these exercise his American right to openly support some candidate and that hapless citizen can be accused of pernicious activity and forced out of his job or denied his benefit. He is helpless to defend himself.

If the bureau finds that he acted in violation of the amendment to the Hatch act, he must be discharged by the state or local agency employing him or that agency faces loss of federal assistance. Under the terms of the measure there is no appeal from the bureau's findings of fact. The poor devil would be denied his right to appeal to a court for relief. The measure attempts to by-pass the court! Did you ever stop to consider what that means? Think of it! The only thing that stands between you and the penalty for murder in Texas today is the courts. You need not have killed somebody. You need only to be accused of it. Yet this measure would deny appeal to the courts to protect the citizen against the findings of the bureaucrat! Think what a weapon is thus placed in the hands of a personal enemy, or even so ambitious soul who covets a job held by someone else! And, remember, there are thousands in the 17th congressional district who conceivably come within the purview of this dangerous measure!

Does he know what this Hatch amendment is? Does he know that it doesn't affect the governor, the mayor of the cities, the legislators or any of the heads of the so-called executive departments of state and local governments? These are exempt. They can draw as much federal assistance as they may and still engage in politics as actively and openly as ever. The fellow with plenty of means and influence likewise has little to fear. He can pull wires, exert pressure and otherwise wriggle around the prohibitions of the amendment.

But let some little fellow—an employe of your county agent's office; a teacher in your schools who draws some or all of his or her support from federal grants; a clerk in some of the numerous should not be given this further opportunity to persecute individuals or dominate local government.

Three From Area Enlist in Army

CROSS PLAINS, Aug. 16 (Sp.)—Three from this area, one a local man, were enlisted in the United States army last week, according to Sgt. W. Parham, in charge of the recruiting office at Abilene. Accepted by the army were Jack E. Coleman, son of Mrs. Ruby Schaffner of Cross Plains; R. D. Bowman of Rising Star; and Hoyt B. Hopper of Rising Star. All three were assigned to field artillery, Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

Commr.—That all depends. —Rep.—Depends on what?

Commr.—On the speed of the workmen. On unforeseen circumstances. We can't always tell about things like that, even when there's not a national defense campaign on. You see, ship contracts don't specify the actual completion time; they just set the date limit by which the ship must be completed.

Life Holds Something Stronger Than Forces of Destruction, Decay

Text: Psalm 23

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

THIS lesson is confined to the 23rd Psalm, usually called the Shepherd's Psalm. There is not a purer gem in all literature, and the lines of this Psalm, constituting six brief verses in our modern presentation of it, have taken hold of human experience as perhaps no other single passage has done.

Why is this? In part, it is due to the simplicity and beauty of the Psalm itself; but it is not due also to the contrast the Psalm offers to so much that is in our daily life and in the experience of the world? It is a Psalm of peace; it is a Psalm of refreshing. Even to read it when we are in the midst of trouble is to find an atmosphere and place of peace. It is a good Psalm to read, even when people are in the midst of want and danger, as great multitudes of human beings are today. It reminds us that these sad and dark experiences are not all of human life; that they are not indeed of God's purpose and planning; that there is for man a life of peace and quiet, of faith and strength, that goodness and loving kindness have not departed from the universe.

AND the Psalm strikes an even deeper note in its sense of security, even though one walk "through the valley of the shadow of death." There is in life something stronger than the forces of destruction and decay.

We speak of this Psalm as the Psalm of David, because we think of David as a shepherd as well as a king. If David really wrote it, the contrast between the Psalm and much of his own life is very striking, for David was a man of blood and war and the Bible represents him as being forbidden to build the temple because of that fact.

But there was in David also something very fine and gentle as well as something strong and courageous. We see him first of all as the young shepherd boy, going out with great daring to kill Goliath. But there was a later passage in his life that revealed the quality of his spirit.

HARD pressed in battle, he had made a casual wish that he might have a drink of water from the well of Bethlehem. Valiant and loyal soldiers heard that wish and risked their lives to bring him a canteen of that water. But David would not use it to slake his thirst. Men had risked their life blood to bring it. It was something sacred, and he poured it out on the ground as an offering. It was a great act of faith and of worship which only a man who is essentially a poet could have conceived or performed. It was this quality in David that made him capable of writing such a Psalm.

It never grows old or worn out. Men have read it hundreds of times; yet it comes with vitality and freshness as a lesson still to be studied, but even more, to be enjoyed.

Greek Cruiser Is Sunk By Mystery Sub

ATHENS, Greece, Aug. 16 (AP)—A mysterious submarine sent the 2,115-ton Greek cruiser Helle to the bottom of the Aegean sea Thursday within half a mile of a Greek island quay, and tonight the government, wary of a fatal snap in the tension with Italy, forbade all Greek ships to leave port.

Official sources indicated, without saying so openly, that they believed the attack was an effort to force Greece into some retaliatory act. The ships-in-port order reflected the Greek official desire to counter any repetition of the incident.

Popular Greek feeling ran high. An unestimated number of civilians injured on the quay at Tinos island when two of the submarine's torpedoes exploded against it were among 40,000 religious pilgrims who had gone to pray beside the island's health-giving waters.

Naval protection was promised for the return of the pilgrims to the mainland, since many are crippled or infirm. Telephonic communication to Italy was cut off after the Helle was sunk, and a strict censorship imposed on all calls abroad.
