NUMBER 17

Through the Editor's Spectacles
By GEORGE

Petroleum is one of the world's most peculiar things. The chemistry of its effect upon the public mind is unpredictable. We go crazy over it, then we aren't even interested. We go crazy over the prospect of sudden wealth, and when the foundation for the wealth is realized we ignore, or even condone political policies that tend to destroy the prospect. Even in the midst of development we listen with unconcern to the grandiloquent schemes to load all the extravagances of government upon the resource, heedless of the fact that even a good horse can be ridden to death, leaving no horse at all.

The West Central Texas Oil and Gas association is making it its business to wake up the people of this section to the incalculable asset which they have in their oil resources, and the danger of destroying it which is contained in various tax schemes currently proposed. It is important to note that the West Central Texas Oil and Gas association is made up of your neighbors. Its membership is confined to independent oil operators. It is not an organization of majors.

This is no reflection upon the major companies. The point to be emphasized is that the membership of the West Central Texas Oil & Gas association is made up of hundreds of small operators, local business men who live in your community, attend the same churches, belong to the same club, and of occasion, and get just as mad on the golf course as others of you. They do get their pay in the form of weekly or monthly salary checks. Very often they get no checks. If they do get checks, the chances are that some chubby, pink-cheeked little demi-god from some government bureau takes the part of it that the state taxes, royalties, drilling and lifting costs and other "deducts" do not make away with.

Since there has long existed a false, if popular, conception of petroleum as another form of money, it may come with surprise to some folks that the stuff is actually a liability on society. If the column is correct in his recollection of statistics, the country at large—including all the suckers and the wildest spenders—has sunk more in looking for oil than it has realized in finding it.

That being the case, it is easy to see that by hiking the tax cost on oil production further, we are simply putting ourselves further in the hole, because we not only add to the charges against every barrel of oil taken from the earth, but we discourage the operation of thousands of wells on marginal production and the development of new resources. We do not take into consideration the loss of salaries, royalties, rentals and other incidental income from the exploitation of the petroleum resources and which represent even more value to

Aerial Sign Board for Army Air Corps

One of Uncle Sam's basic training planes at Randolph Field, Texas, cavorts high over the "West Point of the Air." As the flying cadet, pilot of the craft, slow rolls, he exhibits the Army Air Corps markings on his lower wing as a giant aerial sign board for all to see. Nearly 1300 student pilots are starting their career in military aviation every five weeks and graduate less than a year later as full fledged military pilots and Second Lieutenants in the Air Corps Reserves. Gibraltar Twice Bombed by Italy

LA LINEA, Spain, Aug. 22 (AP).—The British fortress of Gibraltar was twice bombed Wednesday, in attacks apparently intended to underline explosively Italy's "total, unconditional" blockade of all the vast British African areas, and the Mediterranean was alive with the threat of a broadened war.

From here, flames could be seen racing down the crest of the great rock—the site of long-range anti-aircraft batteries—toward the town of Gibraltar itself. But the British command there declared the fire was brought quickly under control and that the damage was only "slight." One of the attacking planes was reported brought down.

Actual and threatened warfare saw these other developments, as reported in dispatches from the Mediterranean area:

1. Italy's declaration that her blockade—similar to that which Germany proclaimed about the British Isles—was intended to bring a "total interruption" of all commerce between England and all her colonies and protectorates in the Mediterranean, the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden.

2. Greece's cancellation of all army leaves, while the officially inspired Italian press continued to attack that little pro-British kingdom. "We will not be caught by surprise," said a responsible Greek spokesman. "If Greece should be invaded."

Italian troops were reported massing on Greece's western frontier, Virginia Gaidy, the authoritative fascist journalistic spokesman, asserted Italy and Albania were ready to defend Italian Albania against "the Greco-British plan of offense."

Without giving the time or place, Stefani, the official Italian news agency, announced that seven British planes had been shot down in an air and naval battle in the Mediterranean. British warships were declared to have been bombed with "considerable effect." Bombardments of the British air bases on the Mediterranean island of Malta were reported to have fired buildings and smashed runways.

The British themselves reported from Cairo that their forces had bombed airbases and railway facilities in Italian-held African territory, including Ethiopia.

Mrs. Nellie Kilpatrick of Comanche, Texas, was expected to arrive here today but a letter from her home in Comanche, Tex., says she will not be here.

EASTLAND, Aug. 22 (Sp).—Plans for the inauguration of the Food Stamp plan on September 3 in Eastland county are nearing completion.

These include persons receiving old age assistance, persons working on WPA projects, persons awaiting assignment by WPA and those persons receiving direct relief from the county welfare department.

All of those persons will be mailed information as to how the food stamp plan will operate and identification cards, which identifies the individual whose name appears on it as eligible to participate in the food stamp plan, and instructions as to how and when to obtain their food order stamps.

Food stamps will be issued in seven different towns in the county. The main food stamp issuing office in Eastland will be open Mondays, Tuesdays, Fridays and Saturdays. The schedule of the mobile food stamp issuing unit which will issue stamps in six other towns in the county is as follows:

Father of G. R. Kilpatrick Dies

Funeral services for W. W. Kilpatrick, 88, veteran Comanche merchant and father of G. R. Kilpatrick of Cisco, who died yesterday at 2:10 at Comanche, will be held at the First Baptist church there at 4 this afternoon.

The aged merchant, who made his home at Comanche since 1891, succumbed to heart ailment, with which he had been troubled for several months. His wife died three years ago.

Mr. Kilpatrick passed his 88th year on February 29.

He is survived by three sons, G. R. Kilpatrick of Cisco; H. H. Kilpatrick of Comanche; and O. H. Kilpatrick of San Angelo; one daughter, Mrs. C. A. Greene of Comanche; eight grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Cisco Lobo to Play in All-Star Game at Wichita

Troy Stewart, center and co-captain of last year's Cisco Lobo football team, has been invited to play in the annual Oil Bowl all-star game at Wichita Falls on Labor Day. The game is played by two teams chosen of stars of AA and A class high schools. The boys are awarded sweaters and their expenses are paid.

Matty Bell, SEM coach, and Ted Jefferson will coach the team, which Stewart will play and "Goats" Hayes and Blair Cherry the other team.

They will leave Sunday and practice with their team a week before the game.

Wanted: Homes for These Refugees

Tagged for "The U. S. committee for the care of European children," these are some of the 138 British refugee children first to come over who have not been sent to specific homes, the children arrived in New York on the "Samarra." Chairman Marshall Field, center, is shown greeting the tots.

50 CARS WITH GARRETT ON TOUR TODAY

Forty-five cars and two buses, loaded with Garrett-for-Congress boosters, pulled out of Cisco this morning on a swing around the 17th congressional district, making brief addresses at each stop. The Ranger high school band was playing for the tour.

Cars from Stephenville, Ranger, Eastland, Breckenridge, Cisco and other communities were in the group which left here this morning. Others were being added and it was expected that more than 50 cars would escort the congressman on the swing through his district.

To Be at Former Randolph Office to Interview

H. R. (Pop) Garrett, vice president and registrar of the Cisco Junior college, will be at the office in the administration building of the old Randolph college from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. each day to interview those who may want to discuss enrollment or other college business, he announced.

Mr. Garrett said he would be at the office during that period each day with the exception of the noon hour.

The building is located on Randolph Hill immediately north of the Cisco business district.

Two Workers Die in WCHA Explosion

WICHITA FALLS, Aug. 22 (AP).—Two pipe line workers were blown to their deaths Wednesday when a sixteen-inch trunk line of the Lone Star Gas company exploded two miles east of here.

Dead are George Capps and Orvil Gee, both of Petrolia.

The bodies of the workers were hurled sixty feet from a thirty-foot crater that was blasted at the side of the road. The blast blew pieces of pipe, steel, mud and tools hundreds of yards.

A leak in the line had been repaired by C. L. Dickey, farmer living across the road from the scene of the blast. Cause of the explosion was not immediately determined. The flow of gas through the line was shut off in a few minutes and there was no fire following the blast.

Young Demos Head Speaks for Brooks

Joe Bailey Irwin, chairman of the Future Democrats of Texas and student in Southern Methodist university, spoke in behalf of Pierce Brooks for the state Rail commission this morning in Cisco.

Attacking the machine politicians, Joe Bailey stated, "The old political ring is out to defeat Pierce Brooks in the same way they unsuccessfully fought Governor W. Lee O'Daniel, but they will meet with little success. Ernest Thompson and Jerry Sadler have formed the triumvirate and after getting whipped at the hands of the Governor, are out trying to stop the Brooks crusade. The people from every section of Texas will give Pierce Brooks a sweeping majority Saturday. The swing is to Brooks."

Edgar A. Poe Changes Name

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 22 (AP).—Edgar Allen Poe Wednesday became Edgar Allen Spalding.

In receiving court permission to change his last name to that of his stepfather, the 26-year-old employee of a wire service said having the same name as the famed poet caused him no end of trouble, that facetious friends were constantly asking him to quote The Raven or else quoted the poem to him.

Mrs. Jim Robinson and children have returned to Cisco for the winter after having spent the summer with relatives and friends in Midland.

GERMANS USE TORPEDOES FROM PLANES

Houses Smashed as Aerial Weapon Launched on Britain

LONDON, Aug. 22 (AP).—Aerial torpedoes—propeller-stemmed cylinders of destruction—were loosed by Nazi bombers last night in attacks which smashed houses by the row and buried uncounted victims in the ruins.

(This certainly was a new application of an old weapon if not the debut of a new weapon. The possibility remained, of course that the torpedo-bearing planes, low in fuel, merely jettisoned their loads to lighten themselves for return to base.)

(Lacking naval targets, they might have chosen land targets rather than loose torpedoes aimlessly at sea.)

The torpedoes were hurled, along with shriek bombs, at one southeast town after a day of ceaseless hit-and-run attacks by lone Nazi raiders while the royal air force kept up its steady counter-punching at German bases.

Cottages Smashed

A whole row of eight little worker cottages was smashed into a tangle of debris where the torpedoes were launched horizontally. Numerous other residences were wrecked.

Not one brick was left upon another where the adjoining houses had stood.

Late into the night firemen and rescue squads dug into the ruins for bodies. Beneath other homes voices were heard faintly and rescuers believed they might find some still alive who had sought shelter in basements and were trapped.

The ceaseless Nazi aerial invasion brought a change in tactics—darting attacks by individual planes where only a few days ago they had come in compact, roaring hundreds.

Solitary raiders appeared here and there along that "corner of hell," the southeast coast, over the industrial midlands, over Wales, and northeast England.

There were civilians dead and many civilians wounded, but as always, their number was not stated.

The air and home security ministries said inhabitants of one town were machine-gunned.

WM. F. KEOUGH DIES AT HOBBS ON WEDNESDAY

Word received by relatives last night stated that William F. Keough of Hobbs, New Mexico, died at his home late Wednesday evening. His sudden death was attributed to a heart attack. He is survived by his wife.

Mr. Keough, who until about four years ago made his home in Cisco where he was an independent oil operator, was the uncle of E. J. Keough of Cisco, Miss Helen Keough of San Antonio, Lawrence Keough of Dallas, and Mrs. James Fitzpatrick of Los Angeles, Calif., all well known in Cisco.

Funeral services will be conducted from the Catholic church in Hobbs Friday morning at 7 a. m., and the body will be brought here, to arrive by train at 5 p. m. Funeral services will be held immediately in Oakwood cemetery, with the Rev. Father Byrne of Ranger officiating.

Pall bearers at the Cisco services will be: S. E. Hittson, Fred Cook of Putnam, J. J. Collins, Ike Parma, Connie Davis and George Ruppert.

Musical Program at Park Tonight

After a postponement from last week due to inclement weather, one of the most interesting amateur programs to be offered at Cisco will be given at Poe Esta park tonight at 8:15. Approximately thirty boys and girls will display their talents.

This is the fifth in a series of weekly entertainments sponsored by the Cisco WPA Recreation project. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Two-Tone Gourd at Sanatorium

Curious two-tone ornamental gourds, which most people people at first sight will probably swear were deliberately painted as a hoax, are grown in the back yard of the Brown sanatorium on West Sixth street. The gourd has its upper half a bright yellow and its lower half a vivid green. The two colors join as sharply as a painted line.

Other curious colors are also produced by the vines.

Lunch Project to Start as Soon as Possible

Supt. R. N. Cluck of the Cisco schools said today that he had been asked so many questions about the hot lunch project in the Cisco schools next term, that he wanted to make the following statement:

The project has been approved by the school board and it will be conducted in the schools similar to the manner in which it was carried on last year. We expect to start operating the lunch rooms as soon as possible after the opening of school.

"There are so many duties incumbent upon the teachers during the first few days of school that it will be impossible to start the project for a few days, but the program will be started with as little delay as possible.

"I have already requisitioned the commodities for the month of September, so no delay will be caused for these supplies.

"In my opinion this hot lunch project is one of the most beneficial of the WPA activities that the school has secured. The effect of planned and nutritious feeding of underprivileged children has been reflected in improved grades, better attendance and raising the average health level."

SERIAL STORY

MURDER INCOGNITO

BY NORMAN KAHL

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MARTIN SAYLER—a lawyer with too many enemies.
DALE APPLEBY—Sayler's stepson.
RHODA WATERS—Appleby's fiancée.
HAZEL LEIGHTON—Sayler's sweetheart.
WINSLOW MARDELL—a gambler.
GEORGE BARBOUR—Sayler's law partner.
LIEUTENANT O'LEARY—police investigator.

YESTERDAY: Ballistics tests show it was not Riggs' gun that killed Sayler. O'Leary releases the suspects, holds Riggs in jail, then calls on Hazel Leighton. She is writing a letter: "I tried to put the deal across . . ."

CHAPTER IX

As long as Lieutenant O'Leary said nothing, but just sat there quietly watching the surge of conflicting emotions playing upon Hazel Leighton's face, he realized there was a chance she would tell him what he wanted to know, what the letter was all about. Hazel was fighting with herself . . . fighting to keep herself under control. The knuckles of her clenched fist were white and she was rocking faintly on the balls of her feet as she looked out the window of the solarium.

She turned finally and walked back toward the officers. She looked very tired. "I may as well tell you. The letter makes it look so much worse than it really is." "Who's Jed—the man you were writing to?" O'Leary asked. "I'm going to marry him some day. I hope. He's in Los Angeles now . . . waiting. You see, we were going to nick old man Sayler for a neat little piece of change. We figured on a nice, juicy breach of promise suit or a settlement a few months after marriage. "Neither plan worked out. Sayler got wind of the scheme. He found a letter from Jed . . . just like you did. He pinned me down with it one day, and I got sore. I told him what I thought of him and what I was going to do. "After I was through talking he just laughed at me. He told me he had left his dictaphone running and that everything I had said was recorded. I would have killed him then, but I didn't have a gun. When I left him he said he would be happy to give me $5,000 for the year's trouble I had taken."

Carroll's lack of sleep was not so evident now. "That's all? So you came over last night to collect the $5000?" "Yes . . . I suppose so. Really I don't know why I went there last night. He told me to come and I came." "O'Leary had risen and was picking up his hat. "Thank you, Miss Leighton. The sergeant and I will be running along now. I'd advise you to find some other way to make money in the future . . . and don't leave town just yet."

WINSLOW MARDELL was just leaving his hotel when the two detectives entered. He smiled a greeting and led them to a corner of the deserted lobby. "Just going out to lunch. Will you gentlemen join me?" he invited. "Thanks," said O'Leary. "We'll just keep you a second. We want to know how you happened to . . ."

ardily inside the house, but Carroll refused to lead the way. When they were finally settled in as masculinely appointed living room and three tall, cool-looking drinks had been set before them, O'Leary and Carroll settled back in their chairs.

"Our mission isn't a very pleasant one," O'Leary said. Barbour's forehead wrinkled slightly. He waited for the lieutenant to go on.

"We found some papers in Sayler's safe last night, Mr. Barbour—some papers about you."

Beads of perspiration settled on Barbour's face, and he said quietly, "So you found them?" "Yes. Didn't you expect us to?" "I suppose I did. You know all about it, then? About the audit?"

"Yes," O'Leary acknowledged. "Why did you take money out of the partnership? You did, didn't you?"

"Yes, I took it," Barbour said bitterly. "I deserved it. Martin was getting words of cash from his dirty business. I never got a cent of that . . . wouldn't have wanted it. But meanwhile he wasn't handling any of the legitimate practice. I was doing all of it, but he was still getting his half of the profits, according to our partnership agreements. So I finally decided to take justice into my own hands."

O'Leary nodded sympathetically. "And Sayler suspected, so he called in the auditors." "That's right. He was going to expose me, have me jailed and disbarred unless I got out and promised never to practice law in this city again. He had me both ways. It would have ruined me completely. He wanted a definite answer last night."

Carroll looked intensely interested. "Did he get it?" "He did—I promised to quit. Get out completely."

O'Leary finished his drink and rose to go. "I'm awfully sorry, Barbour. You should have found another way to straighten things out. Unless the shortage is covered, it will probably show up again when Sayler's executors check over the partnership."

The police car ground to a furious stop before the gilt doorway of the Hanford Arms apartments. The doorman nodded cordially as the officers passed. O'Leary walked to the desk and asked the clerk to tell Miss Waters that he and Carroll would like to see her briefly. The clerk frowned profession-

Malta Caught in Middle Of Mediterranean War

ITALIAN air attacks on British naval bases at Malta bring 1940's brand of war to the little Mediterranean island that has been the scene of fighting since the Roman Empire. One of the chief targets of Italian bombers was Valletta harbor, pictured on the 1937 Coronation issue above.

Colonized by the Phoenicians in the seventh century B. C., Malta passed under control of Rome and Constantinople. In 1090 Normans ousted the Arabs, introduced feudalism.

The Knights of St. John established their order at Malta in 1530, and in 1565 successfully defended the island against Mohammedans. This great siege of Malta checked the advance of Mohammedan power in southern and western Europe.

Britain seized the island in 1814 with the help of the Maltese. During the World War the island was an important base for naval operations.

DRAFT, AID TO GREAT BRITAIN ARE FAVORED

Nominee Challenges President to Series of Debates

ELWOOD, Ind., Aug. 22 (Spc)—Wendell Willkie, republican nominee for the presidency, officially accepted that nomination here Saturday afternoon before 250,000 cheering townfolk and visitors with a pledge to restore the nation to an economy of work.

"I shall not lead you down an easy road," he said. "If I am chosen the leader of the nation, as I have been chosen leader of the republican party, I shall lead you down the road of sacrifice and service to your country."

The nominee declared that American prosperity cannot be rebuilt without hardship and suffering. "I am proposing that kind of a program," he declared. "Every man, whether he works with his hands or his mind, will have to work a little harder. Every housewife will have to plan a little more carefully."

"I speak plainly because you must not be deceived."

What is needed today, declared the nominee, is a new leadership with faith in America and the American way of life which will restore opportunity to our youth.

Challenges Roosevelt

Charging that the present administration is leading the country down a road to social division, economic disaster and ultimate totalitarianism in a program paralleling the tragic course of France, Willkie asserted that the American way of life is in competition with the way of life which Hitler represents and that it is fully competent to win the struggle.

"I challenge Hitler to any contest he chooses in 1940 or after, and I promise you that when we meet him we shall beat him on our own terms and in the American way."

The nominee evoked sustained applause when he challenged President Roosevelt to meet him on the platform in a series of joint debates over the country during the next two and a half months of the campaign.

While declaring that some believed the president was deliberately trying to foment war, Willkie placed himself in agreement in principle with much of the foreign policy of the New Deal.

It is not desirable, he said, to adopt a program committing the United States definitely to a certain course in an uncertain future. "The best that we can do is to adopt certain principles."

"In the foreign policy of the United States I would do everything to defend American democracy and I would refrain from doing anything to hinder it."

Favors Selective Draft

Willkie declared himself in favor of some form of selective conscription as the "only democratic way in which to insure the trained manpower we need in national defense."

Brushing aside the theory of American isolation from Europe, the nominee asserted that a German victory over Great Britain and the impact of a victorious totalitarian economy upon the western world would be calamitous.

"We must honestly face our relationship with Great Britain," he said. "We must admit that loss of the British fleet would have a serious effect."

If control of the Atlantic is lost to Britain and the United States is forced to build a two-ocean navy, this country might be exposed to attack in the Atlantic and its vital foreign trade profoundly affected.

"We might have to change to some more totalitarian form of government. The objectives of America are in the opposite direction."

No Military Involvement

While stating that he was in agreement with the principles of American defense and interest in the present conflict, Willkie asserted he did not take such agreement as implying military involvement in the hostilities.

"There have been occasions," he charged, "when some of us have wondered if he (Roosevelt) was not deliberately inciting us to war."

The nominee condemned "dabbling in international affairs and manufactured panics" and asserted that the first duty of a president is to preserve peace. He repeated the advice of Theodore Roosevelt to "walk softly and carry a big stick," said this was still good policy and vowed that he would not, as president, be placed in the position of shouting insults without even beginning to prepare to take the consequences.

"If I am elected president of the United States I should threaten foreign governments only when our country was threatened by them and only when I was ready to act," Willkie said.

Charged Defense Neglected

Willkie accused the New Deal with having neglected defense against aggression from without and with having undermined economic strength from within. He asserted the country could become secure only by becoming strong and prosperous. The present administration, he said, is leading it down the tragic road which France took under the Blums, a road which he asserted could end only in prostration and dictatorship.

"This administration does not preach a doctrine of growth. It preaches a doctrine of division," he said. "The New Deal theory that we shall never be able to produce more than we have now and that we should redistribute the wealth we have now by taking from the haves and giving to the have-nots does not redistribute wealth, the candidate declared. "It distributes poverty."

"I was a liberal before many of these men ever heard of the term," Willkie said. "I learned my liberalism right here in Elwood."

His liberalism, Willkie said, stemmed from convictions he reached while watching economic power become unduly concentrated in private hands in his home community. He reminded his hearers of his support of the reforms advocated by the elder LaFollette.

But his own liberalism, he said, was based on the Jeffersonian concept that the primary purpose of government is to keep men from injuring one another.

For Regulation

The nominee declared that free enterprise must be regulated, condemned monopoly, advocated equality of farm and factory prices, and stated his belief in wage and hour standards, federal old age benefits and unemployment insurance, collective bargaining, the encouragement of cooperative buying and the extension of rural electrification.

The end of such measures, said Willkie, is the proper distribution of the wealth of the country. He declared that for the New Deal doctrine of scarcity must be substituted a doctrine of production, for only in making things does liberalism really consist. There is no limit to a man's production and no limit to the horizon of American enterprise, he asserted. "I stand for the solution of the problems of prosperity and unemployment by private enterprise in America."

Willkie asserted that the "few scraps of cash or credit" which the New Deal relief has given the "forgotten man" is not what the "forgotten man" wanted the country to remember. "What that man wanted us to remember," he said, "was his chance or right to take part in a great American adventure."

Charged Tax Evasion

He charged the New Deal with having drained all the money of the rich away from private enterprise where it would give employment in production, and into tax-free securities, and asserted that as president he would propose tax-levies in a primary purpose of raising money to meet governmental expenses, and proportionately and fairly distributed.

American industry, he said, for the first time in its history has stood still for a decade. There are, he declared, no more jobs today than 10 years ago, while living standards have declined. The victims of this condition are, he continued, the very ones the New Deal proposed to help. And, he added, unless something is done at once about conditions "130,000,000 will become the victims because this administration has been unable to provide for their defense except on paper."

To accomplish this, Willkie declared, the New Deal has spent 60 billions of dollars.

"I say there must be something wrong when, after the expenditure of such a fantastic sum, we have less opportunity than before."

The nominee declared that the New Deal seeks its objectives by spending as much as it can. "I propose to do it by spending as little as possible."

Party Lines Down

"Party lines are down," Willkie told his audience as he began his acceptance address. "We go into a crusade." He asserted the republican party now embodies true democratic principles as opposed to a New Deal party.

The candidate reviewed the history of his ancestors and their struggle against oppression and autocracy in central Europe, and how they finally came to America to secure what they could not obtain there, bequeathing to young Willkie a deep devotion to the ideals of democracy, a hatred of special privilege and all forms of oppression, and a conviction that without a doubt the United States of America is the greatest country on the earth.

"I still adhere to these convictions. I pledge myself to the boy I was and to all who have faith in me that I will never let them down."

Willkie was introduced by Cong. Joe Martin, chairman of the republican national committee.

The Most Important Initials

WASHINGTON is full of alphabetical agencies, HOLCs and RFCs and CCCs. But the most important initials of all are not yet known to the country.

They are NDAC.
That's the National Defense Advisory commission. Right now it is the most important of them all.

The men and women grouped in this body, which is charged with co-ordination of the civilian end of the defense effort are giving a living demonstration, day by day, that it is possible to serve their country without regard for partisanship. They are not all New Dealers; they are not all eventempereds. But faced with a national emergency, they are giving a daily demonstration of service beyond party and beyond personal interests.

It is probably true that nothing done in a political government can be 100 percent devoid of politics. Thus the defense commissioners have had their share of problems. Senators and congressmen have been plaguing them for war industries plants in their particular constituencies.

There is a limit to the amount of this pressure that ought to be applied. It was all right in the old days for congressmen to work for an appropriation to dredge Goose Creek.

That was pork, but it didn't matter
then. It matters terribly now.

New defense plants ought to be located wherever the best thought and study of army and defense commission authorities decide they ought to go. It is the nation that calls now, and nobody cares a rap whether Goose Creek gets its slice of pork or not.
There is every sign that the commission has worked with only the national view in mind.
But it should not be plagued with political requests.

PEOPLE of the caliber of William S.
Knudsen, Edward R. Stettinius, Sidney
Hillman, Leon Henderson, Ralph Budd, Chester Davis, and Harriet Elliott can give the country devoted and non-political service if they are let alone. They have already shown that, at a considerable personal sacrifice, they are willing to do so.

Quite regardless of the fact that a democratic administration is in power, they should be accorded co-operation by anyone on whom they call, of whatever party or group. By the same token the democratic party ought to claim no credit for what the commission accomplishes.

A giant preparedness effort like the one we now face must have one agency like this which is clearly and obviously above party,

SHALL THE PEOPLE CONTROL THE STATE RAILROAD COMMISSION?

PIERCE BROOKS is not a professional politician. He has never held a public office. He is not controlled by any political machine. PIERCE BROOKS has pledged his support and co-operation to Governor W. Lee O'Daniel and will not continually oppose him as some commission members have done in the past. PIERCE BROOKS favors the payment of maximum pensions to the old folks of Texas. He campaigned, at his own expense, for the constitutional amendment providing pensions and other Social Security provisions. He campaigned for the "bread bonds" to relieve statewide suffering when the depression struck Texas. PIERCE BROOKS believes the truck load limit should be raised in fairness to the farmers and shippers of Texas, and will urge legislation to this effect. PIERCE BROOKS WILL REPRESENT THE PEOPLE—NOT THE POLITICIANS!

(From Abilene Reporter-News)

When Marjorie Louise Noell became the bride of Aaron E. Atherton of Fort Worth at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon in the Gainesville home of her aunt, Mrs. Aubrey L. Fields, she wore her mother's wedding dress and finger-tip veil.

The dress was styled princess fashion of net and lace, with a point de Venice flounce and hand-tucked panel from the high neckline to the hem of the full skirt.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Margaret Noell, of Abilene gave the wedding music and also played the accompaniment for Joedene Poynt of Dallas, former student in Hardin-Simmons university, to sing "Beaute and At Dawning." As the ceremony was read, Mrs. Noell played Meditation, by Logan.

Mrs. Fields served as her niece's attendant, while serving as Mr. Atherton's best man was D. W. Shephard of Gainesville.

Mrs. Atherton, who has resided in Abilene five years, formerly lived in Cisco. She has been engaged in government work here and has held membership in the G. A. P. club and the Junior unit of the Woman's forum.

FINAL WORD From Sam Russell

To the Voters of the 17th Congressional District:

I am ending this campaign in the same manner in which I began it—clean and above board. I have not engaged in mud-slinging or dirty politics, but have carried my program to the people in whom I have always had complete confidence, believing that I had a program which would be for the best interest of the public as a whole in this great district.

I was, and am, of the opinion that during these perilous times the district needed a man to represent them who had the ability, courage, and fighting spirit to work and fight for the best interest of America. To that end, I have not only dedicated my service, but my life as well.

I have made no rash promises. I have not promised anyone a job to get them to work or vote for me. I have no positions to offer for the purpose of securing political preferment. But I do have a burning desire to render ardent and faithful service to my people, and this, I promise to do.

I ask you to not be misled by last minute personal attacks that are being made against me. The district is literally covered by hirings of my opponent, and large sums of money are being spent to over-persuade the voters.

I am a poor man and have paid every cent of my expenses out of my own pocket, but I am meeting these unfair attacks, the best I can, with the voluntary aid of my friends.

In answer to such attacks, I have served my home people, where I was born and grew to manhood, and have lived all my life, for over twenty-one continuous years in an official capacity, without a single defeat, and on July 27th, they gave me the largest majority that any candidate received in his home county. This vote of confidence of my home people, who know me best, answers all charges made, or to be made, against me.

If you believe in clean politics, if you believe in honesty, and faithful representation, and feel that I can give you such representation may I have your vote and influence on the 24th day of August, for which I shall be eternally grateful. Respectfully yours, SAM RUSSELL, Candidate for Congress.

The WCTOG will shortly invite laymen to join the association as "associate" members at $1 each. The charge will probably just about cover the cost of postage for mailings of information the association will send each associate member. But the charge is not to cover costs, but to give each person joining a sense of obligation. The dollar that is handed over will be an investment. It will enable you to learn a great deal about a neighbor's business which has direct income value for you. If that business through your carelessness should be lost, you would lose a great deal more than one dollar.
