BRITISH AND NAZIS TRADE MATERIAL BLOWS

Hitler Warns "I'm Coming"; Taunted by Churchill

By The Associated Press
Waves of nazi bombers, carried by Adolf Hitler's "Luftwaffe" British cities, battered London last night in one of the heaviest battles yet over that part of empire.

RAF bombers promptly flew over Berlin again, and sirens howled in the German capital, too. British batteries at Dover also fired at the German bombers as they sardonically told Britons "I'm coming," by firing across the channel against German long-distance guns on the French coast.

RAF bombers also dived against German "big bertha" emplacements in the Low Countries, and a barrage balloon crashed in the Netherlands. The RAF planes had crashed to 11 British, most of them fell in daylight over many parts of the land.

There were no details of possible damage inflicted by the raid, although explosions could be heard on the capital's outskirts. Prime Minister Churchill in a booming speech to New Zealanders in England referred to Hitler as "that bad man," and said if Hitler "is inclined to his venture (invasion) we feel we shall give a good account of ourselves."

In announcing this move, an application was made to the chamber of commerce to secure 14 furnished apartments for the families which will be here. Joe A. Ark, chamber secretary, asked if anyone in Cisco who has a vacant furnished apartment contact him between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. on Saturday.

NYA Program for Aid of Jobless Youths Described

BRANCH OF WOOL, MOHAIR ASS'N FORMED

RANGER, Sept. 5 (Sp)—Sheep and goat raisers from this part of the country met at the Gholson hotel in Ranger Tuesday afternoon and formed a branch of the Midwest Wool and Mohair Marketing Association for the purpose of getting better prices for their fall and spring clips.

Branch headquarters will be opened next Tuesday in Ranger. It was decided at the meeting, J. F. Dunley, prominent goat raiser of this part of the country, was named as chairman of a committee to arrange the local marketing plan, with Mayor Hall Walker and John Thurman as the other members of the committee.

Sheep and goat raisers from Eastland, Palo Pinto, Stephens and Erath counties were present at the meeting at which L. F. Astor, manager of the Fort Worth branch of the association, the only one in Texas, was the principal speaker.

Tells of Experience

Dunley opened the meeting by telling of his experience in getting an average of six cents a pound more for his mohair by selling through the association than he had received from the associated "wholesalers" and told of the need of such an organization in Ranger where the wool and mohair would be graded locally before being shipped. He introduced John Astor, who speaks on the organization and its methods of operation.

Astor stated that the cost of production had increased 25 per cent in the last year.

Golfers Shoot Par in Scotch Tourney Here

One match in the Cisco Country club "Scotch" golf tournament, which is being held this week, turned out to be quite a thriller Wednesday afternoon when Mrs. W. B. Statham and Norman Houston, both top notch golfers in their own rights, teamed up to shoot a sensational 36, which is par in any man's language.

They played against Mrs. Pete Nance and Vernon Howsley, who cheerfully admitted that the blitzkrieg attack of pars and birdies showered upon them created a little too much pressure.

Other matches, just as interesting, though not so spectacular, have not yet been reported. Most of the matches will be played today, with finals on Friday. Similar prizes will be given the winners, runners-up and consolation winners in the three flights.

Former Cisco Youth Outsell All Others

A former Cisco boy, noted for his good work as a student in the Cisco high school, has made good in a big way with one of the companies, according to a letter from the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. to Edward Lee today.

He is Harold McCord who, in the month of July, outsold all other of the more than 1,000 salesmen of the company in the number of policies issued. McCord is located in Dallas.

SUPERVISOR SPEAKER FOR ROTARY CLUB

The National Youth administration was organized in an effort to provide 4,000,000 or more youths, handicapped by ignorance of how to work, with the means of earning their ways and filling important places in society, Jack Hale, area NYA supervisor, told the Cisco Rotary club today noon. Mr. Hale was presented by E. Hooks, program chairman.

These 4,000,000 youths, Mr. Hale said, represent about 40 per cent of the total unemployment in the country.

The program is divided into two phases—school and out-of-school projects. By means of the school programs thousands of boys and girls annually are enabled to pursue their training in public schools and colleges. In the out-of-school programs, other thousands are being trained in special skills in resident projects, of which there are 20 to 30 in Texas, including that at Ranger.

The latter has accommodations for 130 boys now, with more room being provided, he said. While no effort is made to turn out a finished product, boys in the Ranger center receive instruction in one of four shops—a machine shop, a woodworking shop, a radio shop and an airplane mechanic shop. Electric work is also taught.

"Although the NYA was not organized as a national defense project, yet we are endeavoring to give young men training in special skills which will be useful in national defense," Hale said.

GROGERS ARE PLEASED WITH STAMP PLAN

Substitute for Relief Food Program Gains Approval

The first experience which Cisco grocersmen had with the new Food Stamp program of the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation yesterday left them generally well satisfied with its workings.

Joe Black, issuing officer for Eastland county, and his mobile unit came to the city hall yesterday for the first time since the program was put into effect in the county, and issued stamps to 128 cases. He and his staff were still here today to issue the orange and blue stamps which enable their certified holders to purchase through regular retail channels the food which, before, were obtained from surplus commodity trucks visiting the community at regular intervals. The stamps, having the status of money within the limits prescribed, are issued only to clients certified by the case worker—who in Cisco is Miss Elsie Glenn.

There are two varieties, an orange stamp which is purchased at par, and a blue stamp which is given either to direct relief clients or to those who purchase the orange stamps in accordance with the amount of blue stamps purchased.

Each purchaser of orange stamps is given blue stamps to the extent of 50 per cent of orange stamps purchased. In addition each family is allowed two dollars worth of blue stamps for each dependent.

Yesterday, $541 worth of orange stamps were sold and $633 worth of blue stamps given away, plus the 50 per cent given with the orange stamps. This made a total of $1,444.50, approximately, issued during the day. Today's figures were not available.

Most of this sum will be spent with Cisco grocers, the greatest part of it representing new business which formerly was taken up in the distribution of commodities direct from relief trucks and therefore lost to regular business channels.

The mobile unit here is made up of Mr. Black, who is serving as cashier; Mrs. Lois Evans, file clerk; Mrs. Hazel Adams, book clerk, and Miss Betty Rue Logan, floor clerk.

The unit will be in Cisco on the 4th, 5th, 16th, and 17th of each month.

Deep Test Is Spudded North of Ranger Today

RANGER, Sept. 5 (Sp)—The Mitchell-Pierce Oil corporation of Weatherford was to spud in a deep test five miles northwest of Ranger, in Stephens county, this afternoon at 2 p. m.

The well is located on a 50-acre tract of land, formerly owned by S. J. Whitson. O. T. Clark of Prescott, Ark., and Kilgore, is general contractor and has charge of all work on the well.

Harry Mitchell of Weatherford, a member of the firm which is drilling the deep test, stated that "the company selected the Ranger field for its investment for two reasons: first, Ranger is located in an oil country which is nationally known for its high quality oil and its long lasting wells, and second, the Ranger field should produce a deep sand when tested, as other fields have done. Personally we believe it will."

"You will see in action," Mitchell promised, "a modern rotary drilling machine with a drilling capacity capable of drilling to a great depth, should it prove necessary."

Sheep and Goat Men Meet Friday

Sheep and goat raisers of Eastland county will meet at Lake Cisco parks tomorrow in the second annual Sheep and Goat day sponsored by the Eastland County Sheep and Goat Raisers association. Leading ranchers and specialists in sheep and goat raising will speak during the day and demonstrations will be conducted. Facilities of the Wright and Harrell ranch near the lake will be available. A barbecue will be served at noon.

The meeting comes to Cisco at the invitation of the chamber of commerce and local arrangements are in the hands of a committee headed by Ed Huestis. R. W. Mancill is in charge of the barbecue. Chevron for this has been donated by goat raisers. F. E. Harrell, G. P. Mitcham, J. L. Thornton and T. G. Caudle—vocational agriculture teacher and agricultural secretary of the chamber of commerce—are other members of the local committee.

A crowd of between 400 and 600 sheep and goat raisers and interested people is expected, according to County Agent Elmo V. Cook.

The program will be as follows: Welcome—B. A. Butler, president Cisco C. of C.

Sheep and Goat Raising for Beginners—Dr. R. H. Hodges, Ranger rancher.

Building and Preserving Pastures—W. H. Dameron, superintendent, Sonora Experiment station.

Noon—Barbecued chevon.

Sheep and Goat Management—W. R. Nisbet, extension sheep and goat specialist.

Future of Wool and Mohair—A. K. Mackey, secretary, Texas Sheep and Goat Raisers, association.

Goat Production for Meat—R. Beal Pumphrey, representative of San Antonio stockyard.

Educating New Raisers—W. I. Glass, district agent, A. & M. extension service.

Miss Helen Crawford plans to leave Sunday for Cameron, where she will teach in the public schools.

PROGRAM TO AID INDUSTRY TO BE TALKED

Meeting to Take Place at Laguna Hotel Next Tuesday

Business men of Cisco are being invited to be guests of the West Central Texas Oil and Gas association at a special breakfast at the Laguna hotel next Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock. The breakfast is sponsored by the Cisco chamber of commerce, which named as a special committee to assist local members of the association, R. L. Ponsler, Edward Lee and E. P. Crawford. There will be no charge for the breakfast.

The purpose of the dinner is to bring to the attention of the business men of the community the important economic stake which they and their community have in the oil and gas business and seek to enlist their support of programs which will enable the industry to operate more profitably and to better advantage for all.

A campaign to secure associate memberships in the association at a rate of only $1 per year will be discussed. This associate membership will entitle the member to receive all information about the activities of the association, and it will bring him in close contact with the workings of the organization in its efforts to improve conditions of the oil industry—particularly the independent branch of it.

Breckenridge, Eastland, Ranger, Rising Star, Brownwood and other communities in the region embraced by the West Central Texas Oil and Gas association have responded enthusiastically to the program and large numbers of associate members have been obtained.

The enrollment of large numbers of business and professional men who are not oil operators tends to give the association more authority as well as to supply the associates with better understanding of the problems which the oil and gas operators face and which inevitably reflect upon the general economic welfare of the communities affected, it was explained.

That is the purpose of the campaign, it was pointed out, since the small fee charged for associate memberships is not sufficient to defray even the expense of mailing the literature each will receive.

Cisco oil operators are eager that Cisco make a showing comparable with that obtained in other communities.

New Callahan Test May Spud Saturday

BAIRD, Sept. 5 (Sp)—The Holmes-Johnson No. 3 Ace Hickman, in the newly discovered shallow field a few miles south of Baird, is expected to be drilled in Saturday, according to Earl Johnson. Johnson recently secured his first production in that area, opening a new field. The discovery well is making around 8 to 10 barrels a day, Johnson said.

TO CAMERON SCHOOL

Miss Helen Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Crawford, will leave this week for Cameron, where she has accepted a place on the Cameron high school faculty as instructor in Spanish. It will be her first year with the Cameron school.

SERIAL STORY

LOVE ON THE RANGE

CHARLES FRIGGINS

COPYRIGHT 1936, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CARRIE LANE—an eastern girl who came into the frontier west to find a home.
MARK DEEEL—a homesteader who keeps his business to himself.
ASHTON OAKS—a land agent, with town lots to sell.

YESTERDAY: A second busy day ends and Carrie is left to spend the first night in her prairie home alone. She awakens early in suffocating heat, rushing to the window she sees flames along the horizon. She is alone, with a prairie fire sweeping toward her.

CHAPTER IX

The picture of Carrie Lane standing there in the moonlight by her soddy, the memory of Carrie Lane close in his arms, left Mark Deeel shaken, blotted out all other thoughts for him on the long, lonesome ride back to town from Rock creek.

He had told her he loved her, he recalled now, trying to piece together every fragment of the moment, and she had whispered she loved him, Carrie Lane, whom he'd seen first in the land office only a few days ago, loved him!

Over and over, Mark glowed with that thought as he rode through the night to Sioux Springs; over and over, Mark relived every unbelievable moment of it throughout the next day. When he went to sleep, 24 hours after he had said goodby to her, it was with Carrie's whisper, "I love you," ringing in his ears.

He was dreaming of her when he awoke. But in the dream the moonlight had changed to stifling darkness; the cool breeze had become scorching. The parched meadow was on fire. With Carrie, sense-stricken, he dreamed he was fighting through the night to the shadowy well. Ed Taylor had dug, as flames licked the new soddy, smoke choking them every step of the way.

Like lightning, Mark bounded out of bed, rushed to the window. There WAS smoke in the air. In the first dim light of dawn, the sky glowed fiery red toward the north—and Rock creek!

"My God," moaned Mark, "Carrie—Carrie!"
He dressed, ran from the house toward Newt Gale's livery stable for a horse and, turning the corner, found the town suddenly alive. The dusty main street of Sioux Springs was a wild melee of running, shouting men.

Mark joined them, drew up panting in front of the livery stable where a crowd gathered around a foam-flecked horse and a mounted, bareheaded youth. Mark recognized the lad instantly, the Sage boy from upper Rock creek. The Sages lived north and east of Taylor's and Carrie. The fire might be dangerously close to Carrie's claim.

Mark pushed through the crowd, gained the boy's side.
"How bad is it?" he asked, breathless.
"Pretty bad," said the boy. "I had been burning quite a spell when the Blakes discovered it and rode over to wake us up. Pa sent me right in for help. There's nobody much over on that side to fight fire."

"Has it reached the creek?" Mark shouted another question.
"No, but it's heading straight that way—fast. It'll reach it without anybody stopping it."

Mark knew what that meant, paled suddenly at the thought. The crowd knew it, too. Once over Rock creek there might be no stopping a prairie fire. The least wind was in danger.

There was a shuffling of feet, a sighing, explosive silence. These men wanted someone to take the lead, Mark felt, and he seized the opportunity.
"All right, young Sage," he said, turning to the men for tacit approval, "we'll turn out the town and go back with you."

The men scattered in all directions.

It was an unforgettable scene, that dawn in Sioux Springs; the sky hanging low, dull, suffocating; wagons rumbling, homesteaders yelling; a handful of women, white-faced, standing in a knot by the store, horses galloping off in the dust toward the fiery blotch on the horizon from which a great, black cloud of smoke now rose toward the heavens.

Mark was one of the first to ride north, Newt Gale at his side. Together they had hastily grabbed up old coats, sacks anything with which to fight the grassfire. Others carried slickers, shovels, horse blankets dipped in a tank at the last minute and still dripping water over the horses' flanks. The wagons came last, loaded with plows and men instructed to cut wide furrows ahead of the fire, to build back fires if necessary.

Spurring his horse across the hot, dry prairie toward the smoke, Mark noticed jackrabbits, grouse, even the field mice scurrying away from the direction of the flames. He pictured Carrie alone in her soddy, pictured her terror on awaking in the darkness, seeing the flames, fleeing, perhaps, the darkness, and losing her way in the darkness. He tried to recall how she had looked that night in the moonlight, her firm little chin tilted up to his and her eyes bright as coals. But somehow in the peril of the moment he could not recall that precious moment.

Reaching a little knoll from which he could look down across the broad Rock creek valley, Mark realized the fire was even worse than the Sage boy had described it. East of Taylor's it had licked its way savagely through the short, dry grass to a point less than three miles above Carrie's claim. It was now sending up a thick, black smoke as it burned through the longer grass of the bottom lands. He could not see Carrie's claim.

But Mark was heartened by two facts: the fire had not reached the creek and it was still above Taylor's. Ed and his wife would surely pick up Carrie and take her into town before the danger became serious or escape was cut off. If the fire reached a point below Carrie's there would be no escape except north and west into practically unsettled country. He raced to join the others at a fringe of flame.

Like the other homesteaders, L. Mark swung off his horse and, shouting the long front of the prairie fire. The two Blake boys were assigned to hold the horses while the men advanced.

It was a stifling, scorching job. Mark ran along the edge of the burning grass beating and pounding and shaking whenever a sudden breeze snipped the smoke and the fire set up into his face. He could feel the hot, smoking sod burning almost through his boots.

But there was little wind. That was something to be thankful for. They might be able to beat out the fire before it reached Rock creek.

If there had been a wind—Mark winced at the thought! The fire leaping Rock creek, roaring up the knoll to Carrie's soddy, turning the rich, new prairie lands into desolation; licking on to Taylor's, to Blake's, to Wilke's, destroying everything in its path. He thought of the well then and wondered whether Carrie had remembered she might find refuge there. A family had been saved in a well once in Iowa, Ed Taylor had grimly recalled, that night at the claim.

By noon, Mark noted the fire was burning more slowly, lagging in the still, lifeless air of midday, and the fire fighters seemed to be making headway. A wagon had come out from Sioux Springs with food and coffee; grimy fighters were lined up now to fill tin coffee cups at the tailboard and to plunge big, blackened hands into a huge box of sandwiches.

Newt Gale was in line just ahead of Mark, came away with two bulging sandwiches and his coffee.

"Hell," nudged Newt, "ain't had so much excitement since you punched that agent Oaks. Say, didn't see him out here today, did you, Mark?"

"No," Mark answered, and added that the fight might be a lot more exciting before the day was over. Afterward he was to know how grimly prophetic were those words.

At 4 o'clock the fire had eaten to within a mile of the creek, but it was slowing down. At two or three points it had been checked or stopped. With a sigh of relief, Mark realized the blaze would die out at the creek, with no danger to Carrie or the Taylors. Perhaps they had seen the townsmen and had not even fled. If the fire were licked by night he would ride over to the claim to see them before returning to town.

Then the unexpected happened. Thunder crashed directly overhead and Mark, looking up startled, saw lightning.

"Looks like we're in for a little rain," someone offered.

"More than that," observed Mark, suddenly grave. To the east the sky was black, ominously silent, while above, the gray-greenish clouds of a hail storm had gathered without their notice. The air, all at once, seemed charged, motionless.

"Don't like this a bit," put in Newt. "Hope it ain't more'n rain."

"So do I," said Mark, and at that moment the first tiny whirlwinds announcing a storm, stirred the flames, blew cinders and smoke into their eyes.

There was no more warning. Lightning flashed, Mark felt the first cool rush of air, carrying with it a few drops of rain and fine hail, and the wind came. Sweeping down out of the east so that Mark had to brace himself against it, with the roar of a hailstorm behind it, the gale caught the fire, hurled it across the valley, scattering sparks, embers, whole tufts of blazing grass.

Nothing could stop the fire now. Mark knew; the flames were across Rock creek. And Carrie might not have left her claim at all.

Balance on First Anniversary of War Makes Bloody Bookkeeping

Editor's Note: Sunday, Sept. 1, was the first anniversary of the war in Europe. What has the great conflict done to the world in that time? This is a first effort to appraise the results—a task which really is a job for future historians.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY AP Feature Service Writer Strike a balance on the first anniversary of the new World war, and you're deep in bloody bookkeeping!

Already 800,000 human beings have worn the uniforms of their nations to death and three million more have been wounded.

Those are conservative estimates based on official communications and adjusted to the U. S. army's unofficial mortality tables for modern warfare.

Nor do these totals account for civilian casualties, in themselves astronomical.

Take hapless Rotterdam as an index. One-third of that Dutch city was destroyed by German high explosives in 20 minutes. Perhaps 100,000 persons died in that worst holocaust of its kind in all time.

Eight Million Homeless

Mechanized warfare and the conflicting crusades of races, creeds and nationalities, have created homeless refugees at the most staggering rate known to civilization. More than 8,000,000 Europeans have been forced out on the high roads—7,000,000 in France alone.

Precious property accumulations of lifetimes, centuries, have vanished. A gruesome index is the collective loss at sea. More than 800 vessels have gone down, accounting for 3,000,000 tons of ships and cargo. With them went approximately 7,000 lives.

All this has happened since Adolf Hitler's juggernauts cranked up a year ago September 1 and started into Poland.

All this has happened—and infinitely more.

Turn To Berlin and Moscow

In 365 days the little Austrian corporal has become the most feared man of our time.

With the help of Josef Stalin and Benito Mussolini, he has changed the courses of nearly a score of nations and fragments of nations.

More than 185,000,000 people have turned their faces toward Berlin or Moscow. Some 34,000,000 of these are now breaking their necks trying to face both ways at once.

Under the muzzle of guns, zones of influence have widened from Berlin to Moscow. Today they embrace 1,500,000 square miles of Europe alone, an area half the size of the United States.

That's not counting the plans for Italy. Mussolini has hardly dipped in his car yet, except along a tiny strip of the coast of France. Craziest Pattern in History

Future historians will inherit from this era the craziest pattern of war in all history. Before them will be the awful scheme of September 1, 1939. Contrast that with the band-playing, blood-tingling enthusiasm for physical combat when the first World war descended in 1914.

Before the historians, too, will be the spectacle of the rich democratic empires of France and Britain, raggedly prepared for modern war.

It was seven months before the democracies completely realized they were face to face with the deadliest mass destroyer yet known—an army headed by the world's greatest air force and 14 panzer divisions that cut like a torch through the armies of the west.

During that seven-month period from September until May, 1940, no such great war songs were born as "Tipperary" and "Long, Long Trail." Instead, there was the shabby humor of Britain's tin pan alley. "We're Going to Hang Our Washin' on the Siegfried Line." And, of course, the Germans' hoarse songs of conquest.

All Nations Affected

Nor was this eerie war confined to the continent of Europe. The British blockade and German reprisals, whatever their aims against the enemy, affected the economies of all nations.

In America the effect was electric. The stock market gyrated wildly, and within twelve months the accent of our national economy changed from a peacetime drive to whip the depression into a drive for armaments.

The spending rate for our army and navy was stepped up six-fold to 12 billion dollars annually, despite the national debt of close to 50 billions of dollars.

We called out the national guard by sections and considered conscription. We put on paper a two-ocean navy, convertible into fighting reality by 1945.

Agree to Hemisphere Solidarity

We took a broader view of the Monroe doctrine, invited the 20 other American republics to help us enforce it. Oddly enough, they agreed to hemisphere solidarity.

One of the nation's major parties scuttled precedent, nominated a man for a third term in the White House.

J. Edgar Hoover's FBI headed up non-uniformed forces charged with stamping out "fifth columnists." We set out to fingerprint the nearly 4,000,000 aliens in our midst.

And for the first time in many a year, the congress enacted two pieces of major legislation for national defense—with practically a unanimous vote in both houses.

The doldrums, an ocean area of high temperatures and frequent dead calms, extend 15 degrees north and south of the equator.

In 1939 United States farmers harvested 88,803,000 acres of corn.

Values on Oil Production Are Assessed

"Every county in the West-Central Texas district assesses a value on oil production and oil properties, for both county and state ad valorem properties. Every school district in which oil production is located also assesses an ad valorem value on these same properties.

"This assessment is worked out on the basis of so much per barrel being assessed against each well for each barrel of oil produced on an average day during the year. In addition to this per barrel levy, a valuation is also placed on all pipe, pumping equipment, and other physical properties used in producing oil. On top of this, the landowners who receive royalty payments also have their royalty interests assessed a value, and the total of the county and state ad valorem tax rates are applied to this total valuation.

"For instance—in Jones county, oil production is assessed on an average valuation of $250.00 per barrel per year. The average well in Jones county has an average daily production of approximately 13 barrels per day. This gives an ad valorem valuation for state and county tax purposes on the production of the average well of $3,250.00.

"To this is added a valuation of $1,250.00 per well for equipment. This makes a total of $4,500.00 ad valorem valuation for the average well in Jones county. To this total is applied the total of county and state tax rate, which for 1939 was $1.37. This figures out a total of $61.65 state and county ad valorem tax for the average producing oil well in Jones county.

"In addition, the average producing well in Jones county pays a total of $35.00 per year school tax to the school district in which the well is located. This runs the total direct ad valorem tax to over $90.00 per year per well. Approximately the same formula is used in setting up ad valorem values, in not only all of the other counties of the West-Central Texas district, but also in practically every other oil producing county in the state.

"We have not yet found an instance where any person, who was contending that the tax on oil raised, who admitted that there was any such thing as the oil producers and the oil production in this state paying any ad valorem tax. The records of every producing county in Texas will show that this is being done.

"Some people, who admit that the 'stripper' wells can not pay any further taxes, contend that there should be a sliding scale on the gross production tax on oil production. In other words, they offer the idea that the small wells could pay a small amount per barrel, and that as the production of the wells increase, the tax should be increased.

"This idea is unsound for two very practical reasons. The first is that such an arrangement would not be 'equal and uniform taxation.' The second is that the added expense that would be necessary to keep daily records on the production of every individual well in the state would be so great that any differential in the per barrel tax would be more than absorbed by the added expense of this detail and routine.

"All the people of West-Central Texas, and of the rest of the state, have the fond hope that they, as individuals, will get more direct benefit from oil production. Every person who owns as much as an acre of land dreams that some day someone will drill an oil well on his property. Every business and

Industry Grows At End of First Year of War

NEW YORK, Sept. 5 (AP)—American industry headed Saturday for the second year of the war under momentum of a rising production trend, propelled by increasing arms spending.

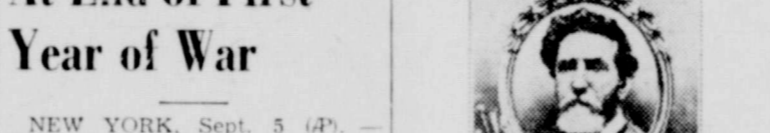

The late summer upturn seemed to gather speed this week in some markets and industries. Wall Street, after the quietest summer in many years, felt an early touch of autumn pep. Stocks and bonds joined the forward march in more active trading.

Worth street—textile trading center noted for its ability to sense how the business winds are blowing—saw an unusual run of buying just before Labor day, when things ordinarily are dull in the wholesale markets.

Swollen war industry payrolls made the cash registers ring out tunes of better business in many communities as cool weather sent big crowds of shoppers into retail district for autumn clothes, household goods and school supplies.

DESDEMONA

At 6:30 Friday evening at the Masonic hall the members of the Desdemona chapter of the Eastern Star entertained with a covered dish supper and a program, in honor of Rob Morris, the founder of the Order of the Eastern Star. The program consisted of a song, "God Bless America," by the audience, with Miss Mary Alice Brown as pianist, and Connell Taylor as leader of the singing. Mrs. Clarence Ragland then read a poem, "The Level and the Square," written by Rob Morris. Miss Dorothea Rushing played a piano solo, after which Mrs. I. N. Williams gave a reading. The audience then sang "America," and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Orville Richardson. Then followed the supper of fried chicken, green beans, creamed peas, mashed potatoes, fresh tomatoes, pickles, several kinds of salads, pies, cakes, bread and iced tea. The members of the chapter had as their guests members of their families and those whose families could not attend had some invited guests. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. R. J. Krapf of Midland, and her son, Urban, of Gladewater, and Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Anderson of Gorman, and their adopted son, 8 months old, whose mother, a sister of Mr. Anderson, died a few weeks ago. The baby had been named Arnold for his uncle. Mrs. Anderson is still a member of the Desdemona chapter and Mrs. Krapf transferred her membership to Midland recently, after having been a member here for 18 years.

At 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, at the Methodist church, the pastor, Rev. W. E. Anderson, organized the Women's Society for Christian Service, with 13 charter members. This society takes the place of the Women's Missionary society of the Southern Methodist church and of the similar organizations in the other branches of Methodism, which were united the past spring. Officers elected were: Mrs. Charles Lee, president; Mrs. Alice Harrison, vice-president; Mrs. Guy Bruce, corresponding secretary; Mrs. S. E. Snodgrass, recording secretary; Mrs. W. C. Bedford, treasurer; Mrs. Claude Pair, chairman of missionary education; Mrs. L. M. Fox, chairman of Christian social relations; Miss Mollie O'Rear, chairman of local church activities; Mrs. Bell Smith, chairman of work of young women and girls; Mrs. John Ryan, chairman of children's work; Mrs. G. S. Brauce, chairman of literature and publicity; Miss Olga Smith, chairman of supplies. Besides the officers, the other charter member was the pastor, who is always an ex-officio member of all branches of the church work, but has been an active member of the Desdemona society for the past two years. Five of the members are from the Victor church, and one from Salem.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Hensley and daughter, Sandra, of Fort Worth visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Davis, Monday.

The revival at the tabernacle that had been in progress for two weeks, with Rev. Orville Richardson, pastor of the Baptist church, doing the preaching, and Connell Taylor as song leader, closed Sunday night with an attendance that broke the record, as every seat was filled and many sat in cars or stood at the outer edge of the tabernacle. During the revival there were prayer groups of men, women, young people and children that met just before the evening services and did much to help in making the meeting very successful. More than 30 united with the church, almost all of them being on profession of faith. The baptismal service will be next Sunday afternoon at the Baptist church at 3 o'clock.

We are glad to report that Mrs. A. C. Brown had improved enough to be able to be brought home Sunday morning from the Blackwell sanitarium at Gorman. Her son, Dr. Audie Brown, of Richardson, near Dallas, has been with her since she became ill on August 11, and will stay several days longer. Mrs. Floy Morrison of Gorman came over with Mrs. Brown, and will remain as her trained nurse. Miss Lucille Fair, who spent her childhood in Desdemona, but now lives near Victor, has taken the position of house-keeper for Mrs. Brown and family.

The sympathy of the community is being extended to John O'Rear, Miss Mollie O'Rear and Mrs. Annie Daniel, whose brother, Lee O'Rear, died Saturday afternoon at his home at Wellington, in west Texas. Funeral services were held there on Sunday afternoon. On account of a delay-

Suppose You Had to 'Order' Electric Service

WHAT a nuisance it would be! In fact, it's hard to picture yourself "ordering" electricity. But if you did. Where would you keep it until ready to use? You can't keep electricity on the shelf . . . or in the pantry . . . or out on the back porch. Of course you don't have to "order" electricity. Of all the things you buy, electricity is the most convenient to purchase and to use. You never wait for Reddy Kilowatt to deliver your order so you can turn on the light, so you can make the coffee, sweep the floor, hear the radio, or iron the baby's dress. No. You simply turn a switch. It's that easy! It's already there, in your home, right at your fingertips. We believe you'll agree that Electric Service—with all the comfort and convenience it brings to your home—is marvelously efficient . . . an invisible servant at your command day or night . . . something you needn't "order" or bother to store away, but something as dependable as the air to breathe. And almost as indispensable in this day and time. But good Electric service doesn't "just happen." In its natural form, electricity is worthless. It must be harnessed and converted into useful, controllable energy. In other words, it must be manufactured into a usable product so safe to use that a child can turn the switch. Our power plants generate electric current, forcing it along the line to your home. So long as the huge turbines run, then the current circulates in the wires leading to the numerous switches in your home. But if the plant stops for a single minute, then your electric service is gone. It can't be stored up. Power plants lines, and distribution equipment require a large investment of millions of dollars. Hundreds of men and women work "behind the scenes" to maintain and operate the system . . . filling your need at an instant's notice and without delay or interruption. We appreciate the compliment that you accept Electric Service so casually. We try to make it just that good . . . good enough that you use it without a second thought.
