After Deadliest Attack of War

After the London attack and during the night, the background shows the aftermath of the deadliest attack of the war, killing 4,000 people. (United Press)

NAZIS BLAST LONDON IN MIGHTY RAID

Beacon Fires Guide German Planes to Heart of City

LONDON, Sept. 10 (AP)—German warplanes guided by beacon fires set by incendiary bombs last night blasted explosives at central London early today in an attack accelerating as the hours wore on to the scope and ferocity of tonight's great raid. The all-time high was given at 3:40 a. m. London time.

The dark and cool of night increased steadily around the harbor and throughout the central London area.

Beacons guided the raid to the heart of London, where the heaviest damage was done. The attack was the most intense since the beginning of the war, and it was the most intense since the beginning of the war.

ENROLLMENT IN COLLEGE REACHES 70

Flier to Meet Students Interested in Aviation Thursday

Enrollment in the Cisco Junior college had reached 70 at noon today. H. R. Garrett, vice president and registrar of the school announced. A number of other students were scheduled to register this afternoon.

The institution opened its doors to students for the first time yesterday morning. Registration will continue through the week, although classes will begin tomorrow. Books will be issued at that time and the schedule will be run through. Class work will begin in earnest Thursday.

Meanwhile, the organization of a club in aviation will start this week with Big Robbins, operator of the CAA unit and instructor in flying, meeting prospective students at the chamber of commerce at 9 o'clock Thursday morning.

Approval of the aviation quota here has been made by the Fort Worth district office of the Civil Aeronautics authority and its recommendation forwarded to Washington, where an O. K. is expected to be a formality.

Summer Projects Of Homemaking Dep't Displayed

Marking the close of summer Homemaking projects, exhibits of accomplishments were on display in the homemaking department at the Cisco high school when parents and students met to discuss pleasure and disappointments of the summer's work.

Summer project work is an elective course that is taken by students especially interested in applying homemaking training to their home situations, according to Miss Billie Hubert and Miss Lorena Martin, of the homemaking department.

Only those girls enrolled in regular homemaking courses the preceding semester are eligible for summer credit. Choosing a project based on the outstanding need of her family, each girl plans her work with the assistance of her mother. They are encouraged to choose projects broad enough to meet various needs of their homes.

Requirements for credit are 90 to 100 hours of activity divided into group and home projects. During the past summer the group project carried on in the department concerned canning and refueling tables in the foods and clothing laboratories. They met once each week in three groups during June and completed this work.

Evidence of student activity this summer is on display in the exhibit.

Get the Work Done, Quickly and Well!

AGAIN there are whispers of congressional adjournment. Members itch to get back home and mend fences. The session has been long and trying.

But there is only one way to mend a political fence this year. That is to do the job in Washington and do it well before going home.

A long six weeks of debate have now flowed through the congressional mills on the conscription bill—longer than it took to conquer Poland—longer than it took to bring about the fall of France. And during that precious six weeks, only the national guard has been put in line for real training of the kind required of a soldier in 1940. Volunteers have been trickling in, but neither a great volunteering effort nor a national army setup has been provided.

The House plan for a 60-day delay, putting the whole business off until after election, is the merest political cowardice. Conscription is either right or it isn't. It is either needed or it is not. To take this "iffy" stand, this tentative dipping of a tremendous toe into the waters of preparedness, is to temporize and dally with a crucial problem that ought to be settled one way or another, and settled now.

ONE way or another, the conscription bill should have action, and have it without another moment's fruitless bickering. Legitimate debate or proper consideration of details, yes. But bickering, filibustering, personalities, no. More is on trial here than the bill itself—what is on trial is the ability of our republic to function cleanly, decisively, swiftly.

Scarcely less important is the tax bill, and the giving of specific powers to conscript industry as well as manpower. We do not believe that the average industrialist is unwilling to give his best service to his country regardless of who is at any given moment its leader. What the government must have is assurance of the ability to protect all of us against a few bitter-enders whose eyes might center on the temporary betterment of their own position rather than on the permanent betterment of the country. They are few indeed. What is needed is a means of assuring that they cannot stubbornly endanger us all, without unduly penalizing the majority who are willing and patriotic. It is a problem almost mechanical to find a formula.

California nudists ask governor to make nudism compulsory in all schools. They probably figure the kids should be taught the naked truth.

Nazi rabble-rousers, who are boasting that "soon we shall own the world," are much peeved to discover certain sectors are still peddling 99-year leases as defense bases.

Never has the U. S. army had as tough a task as trying to make minute men out of softies who have been taking two hours for lunch.

Searchlights were so bright during air raid over London that birds began to chirp. The bird was early, but the worm merely turned over in his sleep.

Buick to Have New Streamlined, Wider Bodies

FLINT, Mich., Sept. 10.—New streamlined bodies, wider even than the popular "torpedo" models, will be found in the 1941 Buick line, it was disclosed by officials of the Fisher body division of General Motors, coincidentally with the announcement of the new cars. Outstanding among the new designs is the "sedanet," an entirely new body type that combines features of the sport coupe and 2-door sedan, and supplants these models in the special and century, or 40 and 60 series.

rear deck to which the public has become so accustomed in coupes. The solid steel roof flows in a single, gently sweeping curve from the windshield to the rear bumper.

Sides are curved similarly from the wide front end to the tapering rear. To show the extent to which the streamlining of the sedanet has been carried, Fisher officials point to the fact that the safety plate glass in the rear window is curved in two directions to conform to the body contours, and that all hinges, as well as the running boards, are fully concealed. Accommodations for rear-seat passengers are all that could be desired. The rear seat is full-sized with the cushion placed above the level of that in front, as in sedan models, to give the occupants an unobstructed view of the road.

County Agent to Demonstrate Killing Trees

Three demonstrations of killing undesirable trees with poison have been announced by Elmo V. Cook, county agent, for next Monday and Tuesday. At 2 p. m. Monday, September 16, a demonstration will be held on the L. M. Cawley farm, five miles southwest of Carbon near Long Branch at 9 a. m. Tuesday, September 17, a demonstration will be held on the Wayne D. Thurman farm, six miles southeast of Cisco in the Shady Grove community, and at 1 p. m. Tuesday the third demonstration will be held on the L. N. Carlie farm, six miles north of Rising Star where the highway crosses Sakonno creek.

as much as one thousand per acre (ten times) by cutting out underbrush and spacing of trees for maximum production. Killing undesirable trees and non-producing pecans may be done at a cost with poison, estimated at approximately two dollars per acre. Tree poison is made of arsenic, lye, sal soda and water. It is incorporated with little labor by cutting through the bark around the tree and applying poison in cuts.

Of the thousands of acres of five pecan groves in Eastland county it is estimated that less than one-tenth have been properly thinned for minimum cost production. In addition to increasing yield of nuts, thinning helps control insects and increases the production of grass for use by the stock.

DEFENSE PROGRAM "ROOM" MAY NOT BE "JOBS FOR ALL"; UNEMPLOYED ARE UNWELLED

BY BRUCE CATTON
The world just about has seen all of the propaganda that has been concocted in this country to make the people believe that the government is doing a good job of handling the defense program. It is a good job, but it is not a job that has been done in a way that has made the people believe that the government is doing a good job of handling the defense program.

labor they can sell in an active market.

It is not a question of dialectics. It is a simple mathematical equation, as simple as the fact that two and two make four. You simply cannot get business where no business exists. And no man in his senses is going to invest his capital in an enterprise that is already behind the eight ball. Our standard of living was not built on such a Santa Claus method.

For a long time the oil industry has been a political "fall guy." It has taken it on the chin. It's real relation to the general economy has long been misunderstood, or simply ignored, in the narrow view that its only contribution to the country's prosperity occurs at the mouth of the well and if the country doesn't get its benefits there, these benefits are lost to the people. The fact that oil only begins its evaporating journey through the multifarious channels of business when it is pumped from the earth, was not accepted for such an extent that the people of the country were deceived to demand that an unreasonable leveling of the playing field should occur.
