BAPTIST CONVENTION HERE THIS WEEK

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

I believe it was Knute Rockne who said that a football team is not really good until it is defeated. If it wasn't Rockne who said it, the remark is well worthy of the genius of that master of men and gridiron strategy. The Lobos were defeated Friday night, but from the reports that we have of the game, the defeat is not one from which they should take shame, but rather valuable experience. They played a mighty good team and they lost largely on the breaks of the game, so they are in a position now to review their mistakes and more seriously anticipate conditions that might go against them in subsequent games. Probably the habit of winning and the ballyhoo that has been put forth about them had a great deal to do with the defeat. A football team, especially one of high school boys, is susceptible to a false feeling of superiority when they are in the habit of winning, and that attitude is very often fatal in a closely fought contest.

No doubt the loss to the Childress eleven will make a better team out of the Lobos, and heavens knows the boys are going to have to be good to win their district. Breckenridge seems to have had something of that psychological experience, having lost their first game in a very poor manner only to come roaring back along the touch-down trail as impressively as ever.

Before passing to comment on the opening of the conference season here next week, I should like to express a public hope that Cisco registration more of its big-time games at home next season. Only one game has been played here so far, that with Eastland. All the big three of the conference contests have been played away and fifty tons of such distances that it is difficult for Cisco fans to attend. If the columnist is supposed to boost the home town boys, he would mighty well like to see some of the games. Lacking a number of things, including time and the essential spondulicks, that privilege has been de-

BRITISH SAY 15 GERMAN PLANES DOWN

Fifth Week of Aerial Bombardments Is Ushered In

LONDON, Oct. 5 (AP)—Massed German bombers, escorted by innumerable fighting planes, ushered in the fifth week of the air siege of London Saturday and spanned England with their bombs but, according to the air ministry, lost 15 planes to the fierce fire of Britain's ground and aerial defenses.

The thrust at London were parried in a three-hour battle over the coast of Kent, where at least eight attackers were reported shot down. The few planes that broke through the coastal front, with its smoking batteries of ground guns and its interceptor patrols, met another screen of air and ground fire over London. One plummeted to destruction and the others scattered after dropping a few bombs.

Later in the afternoon intermittent gunfire was heard in Central London, but no planes could be sighted.

Meanwhile, the air ministry reported that British bombers, in a daylight foray Friday, wrecked a railway outside Cherbourg, in occupied France, used by Germany to send supplies up to the "invasion coast."

Other successful attacks also were reported made on an airfield at Bleville, near Le Havre, where a hangar was set afire.

It was a day of wide-ranging assaults for the nazis, however. Aside from London and the south-east coastal region, invading planes were reported over northeast and southeast England and the industrial Midlands.

In the great battle over Kent and the channel waters three of the eight German planes were seen to give into the sea, the British Press Association reported, while three others were reported turning to hurling, burning wreckage over the town of Ashford.

One fight of bombers, accompanied by about 40 fighting planes, came in from the southeast, only to be split up by fast-diving RAF patrols. One machine burst in midair and the two German crewmen were killed.

A half-dozen German planes were sighted from the Associated Press' rooftop observation post in London Saturday afternoon.

They droned toward central London and were met by a fierce barrage which turned the leaders back just as two British fighters roared into view. Dizzy aerobatics followed and one of the Germans made a sickening dive. The others vanished into protective clouds.

In east London three bombs fell shortly before Minister of Home Security Herbert Morrison and Shelter Director Admiral Edward R. G. R. Evans toured battered areas there.

One bomb dropped 100 yards from the mayor of the borough, who was setting out to welcome the two officials. Another blasted a hole in a cemetery, throwing fragments of tombstones over nearby house-tops.

Until a British fighter patrol cleared the skies, Morrison and Evans kept to refuge in a shelter crowded with 1,000 Londoners.

It should be emphasized, the captain said Friday, "that no special plans have as yet been made, and no date for the trip has been selected. The duchess is very eager, however, to visit the United States."

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP)—Capt. Vyvyan Drury, aid of the Duke of Windsor, says the duke and his duchess will visit the United States "as soon as official duties permit."

ELM CITY, N. C., Oct. 5 (AP)—George Batts suffered a black eye—and nothing more—when he was struck by a freight train.

Bombers Visit Alaskan Outpost

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Oct. 5 (AP)—The aerial-minded far north welcomed the vanguard of its first United States army air unit Saturday and looked forward to the arrival of more of the Arctic-bound warbirds.

Two big Boeing bombers brought 24 airmen here Friday on an eight-hour, 1,800-mile flight from Concord field, Washington. The big ships, flying at 14,000 feet, most of the way over the Canadian interior route, averaged 215 miles an hour of the first test of speed in reaching the nation's northernmost outpost.

The air corps' first winter assignment at newly constructed Ladd field will be experiment with flying conditions in the Arctic's temperatures of 50 degrees or so below zero.

Justice Takes a Holiday

HITLER discovered early in his regime that the courts could be turned into an effective instrument of totalitarianism. World opinion cast an aura of sanctity around the courtroom. There was a general feeling that Justice was an absolute and that anything that happened in a court of law necessarily had the blessing of the blind goddess with the scales in her hand.

Hitler took advantage of this popular feeling. A dictator could, if he wished, plunder, persecute and murder without any higher authority than his own decree. But even dictators must acknowledge the weight of world opinion.

In enlisting the formality of courtroom procedure, the Nazi leader started something.

THE Reichstag fire trial was probably the first instance in which Der Fuehrer used his new weapon.

All the trappings were there—the judges, the lawyers, the uniformed attendants, the routing procedure. Only the public was locked out. The public and the goddess of justice. Yet, when it was all over and the victims had been beheaded or put safely out of the way, it didn't look quite so much like outright persecution and murder. Instead there were "convictions" and "executions" and "sentences," and that didn't sound nearly so bad.

So Hitler just kept on, and Russia got the idea. Several thousand people who didn't see eye to eye with Stalinist policy were "sentenced" to death. Not murdered, mind you. There were "trials" and that took the sting off the official massacre.

When France's share of the war was over, the Vichy government decided something had to be done to cleanse the soul of France. So the former leaders of what was once a great republic were brought to trial and charged with "war guilt."

NEXT in the chain of trials may be that of Mme. Magda Lupescu, the unpopular friend of former King Carol of Rumania. There is some talk among the Nazi iron guards of asking Spain and Portugal to extradite Mme. Lupescu and Ernest Urdareanu, former Rumanian minister without portfolio.

To the dwindling democratic world, where justice still means something more than a dress rehearsal for murder, governmental trials in continental Europe no longer mean anything. Americans have long since ceased to be deluded.

The body is said to be susceptible to 1600 different diseases, nearly any or all of which can be brought out by a draft.

Steel men hail scrap ban, says headline, but there are still a number who would prefer to hail the scrap.

Boss Hague protests against voting machines, when all along he has had one of the best ever seen.

Berlin theaters are vexed because R. A. F. raids interfere with their performances. Folks just don't care to be around when a curtain of fire is being raised.

British golf club decides that a ball may be lifted from a bomb crater without penalty of a stroke, which is the only thing the duffer thanks Adolf for.

Uncle Sam's Selective Service

(Editor's Note: Below is one installment of a series of questions and answers on the peacetime military training program which has been prepared under the direction of the state director of selective service, J. Watt Page.)

History and Purpose

1. Q.—What is the purpose of the selective service program?

A.—The program's purpose is to train a body of reserves capable of meeting any military emergency that may confront this nation, and to select the men for this national duty by the fairest method possible—an enrollment of every man between the ages of 21 and 36, regardless of wealth or influence or social position. From this enrollment the United States army will choose those men whom it deems best fitted to receive a year's training.

2. Q.—Is the selective service program a newly-developed plan?

A.—No. The selective service program was put into effect during the World War after the volunteer system of recruiting soldiers had failed to supply the nation's needs. After the war—in 1926—the United States congress instructed the army and navy to work out a comprehensive selective service plan, and the program now being put into effect is the result of years of active planning by the nation's military authorities.

3. Q.—How many men will be affected by the selective service program?

A.—Military authorities estimate that approximately 16,500,000 men between the ages of 21 and 36 will be registered under the program in the United States and its territorial possessions. In Texas approximately 900,000 men are expected to register. Approximately 5,000,000 are expected to be available for the training program.

4. Q.—Who will administer the program?

A.—The president of the United States will name a national director of selective service. In each state the governor will serve as the coordinating head, and will appoint a state director of selective service. Governor W. Lee O'Daniel has named Adjutant General J. Watt Page to hold this position in Texas.

5. Q.—When will the selective service program go into effect?

A.—President Roosevelt has issued a call for the registration of all men between the ages of 21 and 36 who are living in the United States and its territorial possessions. This registration will take place on Wednesday, October 16, and the first class of men called will probably begin their training about November 15.

6. Q.—How long will this program last?

A.—The present selective service law, just passed by congress, will remain in effect until May 15, 1945.

Diphtheria Bug Discovered Only 56 Years Ago

AUSTIN, Oct. 5 (Sp)—"Under one name or another diphtheria has been recognized as a distinct disease for more than two thousand years. Nevertheless, the germ responsible for this communicable and dangerous childhood infection was not discovered until 56 years ago. The discovery five years later of antitoxin resulted in the development of present methods of prevention and treatment that has markedly reduced the diphtheria death rate," states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer.

In 1913, Schick, a Viennese physician, devised a test to indicate whether an individual is susceptible to diphtheria. In the same year Von Behring, one of the discoverers of the diphtheria organism, demonstrated that diphtheria toxin, neutralized with antitoxin, could be used to produce immunity in human beings. Today, toxoid is generally, and most effectively, used as the protective agent.

For more than 30 years antitoxin has been available for the treatment of diphtheria. If antitoxin in adequate doses is administered during the first day of the

BRUCE CATTON'S AMERICAN ROUNDUP

LOOPHOLE MIGHT PERMIT TORPEDO BOAT SALE TO BRITAIN DESPITE RULING BY JACKSON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—When Attorney General Jackson handed down his famous ruling that it was okay to swap U. S. destroyers for British naval base leases, he specifically turned thumbs down on any deal which would involve the fast motor torpedo boats now building for the U. S. navy.

Nevertheless, such groups as the William Allen White committee are arguing that those boats be turned over to the British—and they believe, now, that it could be done legally in spite of Jackson's ruling.

What Jackson said in effect was it was legal for this government to sell naval equipment which it no longer needed, but that it would be illegal to sell to any warring nation warships which were built in this country especially for sale to that nation. The still unfinished motorboats would come in the latter category.

Now, however, it is suggested there is a way around the bar. Of the 23 motorboats involved, three are already in service and the rest will be shortly. Once they have been commissioned and put to work by the U. S. navy, it is argued, the government could easily classify them as "surplus" naval material and trade them off just as it traded the destroyers.

AS it happens, the British navy has always been a lot keener on these fast little boats than has the U. S. navy. Britain built a fleet of them in the last war—tiny craft carrying a couple of torpedo tubes and zipping along at 40 or 45 miles an hour—and got a lot of use out of them in the narrow waters of the channel. The U. S. navy never caught on. It is because these boats are designed for fairly sheltered waters where the U. S. navy figures to do most of its fighting far out at sea.

About two years ago, the British brought out a new design big enough to operate in open water. Navy men here got interested, and the British sent a boat over to show what it could do. It stood pretty well, and the order for nearly two dozen was placed.

Right now, boats of this type figure to be Britain's best defense against invasion, the idea being that they could lurk in harbors, dash out to torpedo troops, while their great speed would make it hard for the German force to stop them.

THE White committee, by way of expanding and probably play an increasingly important role in the months ahead. Its present platform, consisting of the transfer to the British of the army's giant flying fortress bombers, actually reverses a victory for the "moderates" on the committee—the more extreme members having urged that a committee work for immediate S. entrance into the war.

Particular thought is being given right now to strengthening the committee's representation in Washington. One step in that direction was taken recently when the committee brought John B. Anderson, playwright, movie scientist and former foreign correspondent, here to audit its public

Meanwhile, a lot of work is being done out in the country. More than 600 local committees are being formed to form new ones in districts represented by isolationist congressmen, although it was admitted this job was probably undertaken too late to be much a factor in the coming election

Airplane Will Be Used to Trap Texas Antelope

An airplane will replace hard-riding horsemen when the Texas Game, Fish and Oyster commission resumes the trapping of antelope in west Texas next month, it is announced by the executive secretary of the game department. Trapping of antelope on over-grazed areas and the transporting of them to less heavily grazed areas is necessary because the fleet game animals will not jump fences higher than three feet.

The game department, using a technique developed by the New Mexico game department, trapper 200 antelope near Sterling City last fall. Horsemen were used to round up the antelope and drive them through a series of pens into a net corral, where they were picked up, placed in crates and transported to their new homes, sometimes more than 200 miles distant. Despite the fact that antelope are extremely wild when attempts are made to drive them, so successful was the trapping of them last year that only six of the animals were killed.

Experiments by game managers in attempting to turn antelope in any direction desired, by the use of an airplane, has proved successful, the executive secretary said. With a plane flying no lower than 500 feet, an antelope can be directed. It is expected that not only will the game department be able to cut its trapping crew from a dozen men to four, but that twice as many antelope can be trapped in half the time. This will mean an appreciable saving to the department and also that more areas suitable for antelope which are not stocked can be populated with the pronghorns.

There is now a closed season on antelope in Texas, due to the fact that the animals decreased to a few thousand because of over-shooting. The game department is working toward an open season. This will mark the first attempt by any game department to round up and trap antelope by use of an airplane.

If the rounding up of antelope with an airplane is as successful as is expected, several hundred additional sections of west Texas land may soon be populated with the excellent game animal. More than 200 sections of land were stocked with the pronghorns trapped last year. Antelope will not thrive in wooded areas, but there is much open land in west Texas upon which they will do well.

Antelope trapping is one of the half dozen game restoration projects being carried on by the game department under the Pittman-Robertson program with the aid of federal funds, which are obtained by an excise tax on arms and ammunition.

SERIAL STORY

THIS COULD BE YOUR STORY

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN

COPYRIGHT 1930, NEA SERVICE, INC.

All characters, organizations and incidents of this serial are entirely fictitious.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
SUE MARY JEFFERSON—stenographer in a law firm, alone in city, seeking new friends.
JOE STEFANSKI—ambitious college educated worker, in love with Sue Mary.
NICK ALEXANDER—leader of the Youth Progress group.
VERA OLIVER—active worker, who combines social and political duties.

YESTERDAY: Nick insists Sue Mary meet him at the office tonight. She fears a plot to involve her, keep her quiet. There is a call from the hospital. What if Joe dies? Terrified. Sue Mary dials the number.

CHAPTER XXIV
SUE MARY hung up the receiver and leaned forward over her typewriter, resting her shaking arms on the carriage. Word from the hospital was not encouraging, but at least Joe was alive. "Mr. Stefanski regained consciousness for a few moments," a nurse told her sympathetically. "He asked for you, and then went off again. The doctors think they may operate to relieve the pressure. If they do, it will probably be tonight. You can call later, or if anything comes up suddenly, we will let you know."

"But I could see him—" "You can see him, but he won't know you," the nurse explained. "And you can't stay for more than a few seconds. Mr. Stefanski needs absolute quiet now. But you mustn't worry."

The hands of the office clock seemed to fly now that she knew the doctors were to take some definite action on Joe's case. Before that, time had dragged; now each minute was precious and time flew. She couldn't work. She couldn't think. She finally told Miss Grant her head ached and she wanted to leave early.

At the hospital she stood quietly in Joe's room, looking down at his white face, the shock of blond hair showing beneath the bandage; at his hands, so big, so capable, and now so helplessly limp on the sheet.

She wanted to touch them. Wanted to lean forward and kiss his lips, but the nurse was beside her, murmuring that a doctor was coming in to change the dressing and she must go.

SUE MARY went across the street to a little park and sat on a bench until her trembling legs could carry her back to the apartment. She picked up a paper someone had discarded and stared at the headlines.

It seemed that she had been removed from the world itself these last few days. None of the crisis in Europe or here had existed for her. And yet, she told herself, you, yourself, are involved in a vital problem.

"G-men investigate alleged subversive group," she read. In an eastern city an inquiry was being made by department of justice officials in an effort to stamp out possible fifth columnists.

She looked up and found a sudden strength welling up within her. Federal agents—until this moment the words had been one connected with the movies and thrill stories. To be sure, it was in the news, but it had never been a reality to her.

The girls in the office kidded about the strange men coming and going, since the national defense program had brought so much activity to the law office. But G-men still were people in a little boy's world. Until this moment.

Now her thought began to crystallize. Government men with the power to handle all situations. The power to act and the ability to recognize truth. They would keep a confidence. They would listen and judge and not rush off hysterically on a witch hunt. She stood up and walked back to the hospital to find a phone booth.

It was late afternoon and she wondered frantically if she could contact anyone at headquarters. She found the address and ran out to flag a taxi.

The big federal building was cool and dim and nearly empty. There was still one elevator running and she made herself walk slowly and quietly down the hall.

THE young man in the outer office was locking up his desk, but he didn't hurry her. He asked her name and a few questions about herself.

"What do you want to see Mr. Flanagan about?" he asked. "He's still here, but he's had a hard day, and so many people demand to see him. So many people come in here," he explained, patiently. "They all think they have valuable information about spy-plots."

She nodded her head in agreement. "Yes, I can imagine that. You see, that's why I hated to come. I might be wrong, too."

"Only—well, I didn't dare wait any longer. Something is to happen tonight. These people—I think they are doing something that will hurt the government and—nice people here in town. Maybe I'm wrong, but an organization I belong to has a strange platform. I didn't know what it was all about. But I do now. And I'm beginning to wonder. It's called the Youth Progress group."

"Youth Progress—" he repeated slowly. "Maybe you had better see him. We know that outfit."

SITTING across the desk from Mr. Flanagan, Sue Mary managed to get her facts in order. He and let him go through with his plan."

Flanagan smiled and patted her hand. "Not frightened, are you?" "No—now that I know what to do."

"We know about this Nick Alexander; a young fellow with a leftist turn. There are so many of them; blind, dissatisfied, led by smarter, older men who can mold them into tools."

He came around the desk and gave her his handkerchief. "Now don't worry. We'll clean the whole thing up. You go to the office tonight just as Nick wants."

She told him. Slowly the whole picture came out.

"I didn't think much about it until I heard Nick and Vera planning to get the papers that young Mr. Ross Clark will have at the office tonight. He's not like his father. Young Mr. Clark, I mean. He's stupid and in debt and easily led."

"Nick and Vera mean to use the information to hurt Governor Russell Miller. And they believe it will be enough to hurt the whole campaign platform. Destroy the people's faith and help their own cause."

"And then—then—" she added, "there's the picket line at Smithson. Nick's mixed up in that, too. I saw his picture in the paper. He's trying to keep the trouble going on out there. I know that."

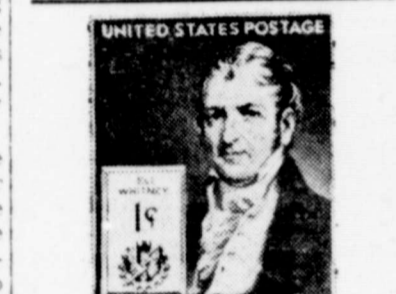

"The YP insist we don't need to spend money on national demonstrations. They keep talking it and printing it in their paper. And they mean to hinder production whenever they can."

"And Joe—my fiancee—was hurt at the factory. He's in the hospital now. He was hit on the head when coming from the plant. Maybe—maybe he'll die."

"You can't let things like that go on. Those people are dangerous—frantic lest he not understand and believe her."

"So that's their game. There have been so many things to check on these last few months

STAMP NEWS

MOST important invention in the history of United States was the cotton gin, made by Eli Whitney, who is honored on the U. S. 1-cent stamp above, first of the inventors group of the Famous Americans series. The Whitney stamp will go on first-day sale at Savannah, Ga., Oct. 7.

Whitney was not a southerner. He was born in Massachusetts, educated at Yale, went to Georgia to teach. During his stay there, in 1793, he made his cotton gin, a simple machine that picked the lint from cotton seeds, 300 times as fast as by hand.

As a result cotton culture spread throughout the south, with a corresponding increase in slavery. If any one man can be blamed for the Civil War, it is Eli Whitney.

Whitney realized small profits from his cotton gin. He made his fortune from his inventions in firearms.

Loboes Slump In Second Half To Lose To Bobcats

LOCALS RUN UP 13 POINTS EARLY GAME

Cisco Loboes suffered a down in the second half of game with the Childress Bobcats Friday night at Childress Friday night. The Bobcats turned a 13-0 lead in the first half into a 19-0 victory. The Childress team led their comeback by recovering the first kickoff in the second period after it had struck away and bounded beyond Loboes' reach on the 15-line. They counted twice in the fourth period to win game and made a successful attempt against their goal line to off a Lobo rally that came in inches of tying and possibly winning the score.

The defeat took little glory from the Loboes, except that the spectacular scoring spree of the boys in the first half seem to have left them too chesty in their good in the decisive part of the game.

Warren Runs for Score
Warren, who was injured in the first period, measured up to add notice of his prowess when he broke over a Childress tackle in the game was not five minutes and ran 32 yards for the Cisco counter. Qualls' kick point was good. In the second period the Lobo quarter back another scoring punch cashed it for pay when he led the team in a series of end runs and explosive line smashes. Cunningham missed the kick.

RAIDS HELPED AMERICAN NAVY

The United States Navy is the greatest in the world today. It received its first test in a war with pirates, who maintained in the same port of Algiers for three centuries, pirates of Tunis and Tripoli had a tribute from all ships passing through the straits of Gibraltar. Ships of the infant United States seemed easy prey until the navy took the end of the Revolutionary war meant the end of the pirates. In Washington's first administration, however, ravages of pirates prompted Congress to authorize construction of six frigates to quell the attacks. Later, after creation of a Navy Department, the attacks were ended and America fought its naval war.

That British and French had been able to do, the Americans accomplished. The Barbary pirates were beaten, peace terminated at the mouth of a canal.

More important, however, was that the Americans realized, to be shown later in the of 1812 in naval victories, the "invincible" British war-

Scrap Iron for Japan---a Race Against Time

Junk that is now a precious prize in a race against time appears in the above photo, showing a long line of carloads of scrap iron at a Portland, Ore., dock, awaiting shipment to Japan. West coast docks are weighted with thousands of tons of the metal as Japanese shippers feverishly strive to beat the Oct. 16 deadline of U. S. embargo against shipping scrap outside the western hemisphere.

which he went over. The kick for point failed, and the half ended with the Loboes leading, 13-0. But the game took an unfavorable turn immediately after the kickoff, when Childress recovered the fumbled ball and Bates scored at the end of a series of end runs and explosive line smashes. Cunningham missed the kick.

Bates scored twice more in the fourth period, once in a sustained drive up the field and again from the one-foot line. Cisco threatened immediately thereafter, Warren tossing a beautiful pass to Qualls for 43 yards to place the ball on the Childress 30. A series of passes and runs carried the ball against the Childress goal line and Warren attempted a pass to Qualls, but a Childress player intercepted and was downed behind the goal line. No safety was allowed after the play.

Warren suffered injuries to his neck and knee in the third period but remained in the game.

The defeat was the first suffered by the Loboes this season, but it has no bearing on the conference race. Childress presented a big, rugged team which showed less smartness and all-around play than the Loboes, but it had plenty of power, which it used to good advantage during the middle second half slump into which the Loboes appeared to drop after their first half sweep and the break went against the team on the second half kick-off.

Next week the Loboes go into the conference schedule, entertaining the Mineral Wells Mountaineers here. Mineral Wells suffered a reverse at Sweetwater Friday night, bowing to the Mustangs, a team which Cisco defeated, 19 to 0.

With all the progress man has made, fire has been one of his most destructive enemies and will continue to be so as long as it remains uncontrolled."

Fire prevention is a community obligation, and under the laws of the state, city officials of every Texas city and town are charged with the responsibility of fire prevention. The Story of Your Newspaper

I AM THE ADVERTISING MAN...

This is one of a series telling the story of your newspaper. The Cisco Daily Press is presenting these articles in connection with National Newspaper Week, Oct. 1-5.

I'm the advertising man. I am the oil on the wheels of progress. They might move without me, but they wouldn't move so smoothly or so efficiently.

I am the link between the people who want to sell and the people who want to buy. It is my job to bring people together—to bring people who want jobs to people who want help—to bring people who have lost a treasured possession to people who may have found it—to bring the person who seeks shelter to him who has shelter to offer—to bring buyer and seller together, as a carburetor mixes air and gasoline to produce a mixture latent with power.

I am an agent of progress. Who has built a better mouse trap? I am the signpost that directs the world to his door. Are there newer and better products, newer and better ways of doing things? Through me the world learns of them. In that way I serve progress.

The little girl who has lost a beloved puppy, the aging man who wants to sell out the business to which he has devoted a lifetime, the innovator with a new machine or a new process, the great merchant with his fairland of new things to sell—all these I serve, and many more.

WTCC Emphasizes Long-time Gov't Fiscal Program

ABILENE, Oct. 5 (Sp)—Good government in Texas, how it is needed, how it may be had, is engaging the close attention of the West Texas chamber of commerce. The organization is, this year, giving unusual emphasis to its long-time work program of fostering better fiscal management and budget making in state and local governments. In the making is a complete plan to be submitted to the people of Texas and to the legislature, covering these objectives:

1. Providing centralized control and up-to-date budget procedure of state receipts and disbursements.
2. Giving greater standardization to and mandatory requirements for budget making in local political subdivisions.
3. Setting up adequate provisions for the collection of delinquent taxes, and basing of local budgets upon 100 per cent collections.
4. Modernizing and improving for local political subdivisions the debt-incurring and debt-paying practices, for the benefit of the taxpayers.

State Budget

Already drawn and approved by officials of the west Texas chamber is the plan submitted by Dr. George C. Hester, counsellor of the WTCC's Public Expenditure commission, and D. A. Bandeen, manager of the organization, for reorganizing the financial management functions of the state. This was announced by WTCC's President J. S. Bridwell, in Fort Worth, after an all-day meeting with Jas. D. Hamlin, chairman of the Public Expenditure commission; Dean J. Thomas Davis, vice-president of the WTCC; and Hester and Bandeen.

The general objectives of the plan—Point No. 1 in the WTCC's whole program—as announced by Bridwell, are:

1. To achieve a modern, scientific and complete budget for the state containing all of its financial plans, instead of piecemeal, incomplete and separate plans as at present.
2. To achieve centralized control and supervision of all state receipts and disbursements, instead of diffusion of this control in more than 100 different departments and funds.
3. To achieve centralization, and control of accounting and independent auditing, instead of uncorrelated auditing and accounting scattered through the many departments and funds.
4. To achieve more effective centralized control over things being purchased, and over personnel by a classified civil service system, instead of decentralization and the spoils system with state employees.
5. To achieve better budget management and execution, with savings and unspent balances reverting to the treasury of the state, instead of no-budget execution and expenditure of balances as at present.
6. To achieve reorganization, consolidation and coordination of administrative agencies so as to eliminate unnecessary duplication of work, personnel, rentals, traveling expense and other overhead items, which admittedly is needed in the state's governmental structure.

Expected Results
President Bridwell said the main virtues of the plan being offered are:

- (a) That it utilizes the constitutional and other offices and boards already created insofar as practicable, and reduces the number of agencies in the state's administrative system.
- (b) That it enables getting the job done in the democratic way rather than through dictatorial procedure, yet enables a strong executive budget as contemplated by the constitution of the state.
- (c) That it makes possible better legislative procedure by enabling the legislature to obtain full and complete information upon which to determine policies and make appropriations, while at the same time giving the legislature its rightful check on administration through the auditing function.

Much information has been collected and exhaustive studies have been made by Hester and Bandeen on financial practices in other states, and the WTCC plan to be submitted blends the best experiences in other states with the Texas constitution and practices. President Bridwell said: "Full explanation of Texas conditions as they now exist, the remedy proposed and practices in other states, will be published soon. A bill is likewise being drafted for submission to the legislature for putting the plan into effect. On issuance of our pamphlet covering the plan, and preparation of the bill, a statewide meeting will be called by the West Texas chamber of commerce to launch a campaign for passage of the bill."

aid him in two of the best contests this year. I recognize the fact that during the past few years the record of the Cisco teams has been such that there is more customer money afield and no criticism of a wiser choice so far as finances is concerned is intended. But it is also true that it is hard to raise public enthusiasm by long distance.

However, Cisco will be permitted to see its boys in action on home sod this week when the Mineral Wells Mountaineers come here for the opening of the conference series. The Mountaineers lost to Sweetwater, but it is foolish to judge what a team will do when the doing counts by what the same team does when the doing doesn't.

Mineral Wells has a good team and it will be in dead earnest here next Friday. Moreover, the Mountaineers will have the same psychological influence that the Lobos gained at Childress. They will certainly be anything but overconfident. Who knows, it may be a good thing indeed that Cisco lost Friday night.

Cisco people ought to make the contest here Friday a rousing demonstration of the old-time football spirit. A sort of home-coming, if you please. It will be played in the afternoon, and it would not be a poor idea to close the stores for the time and allow everybody who wishes to see a game and back the home club with a demonstration of support that will spur the Lobos on to their best effort. Let's give our boys a big hand Friday.

This science and the physician are usually well equipped to fight diphtheria. Indeed, the deftness are almost perfect. However, parental recognition of this fact coupled with intelligent action must be more general than it is today if diphtheria illnesses are to be drastically reduced.

OLD MOTHER NATURE still rules in spite of modern civilization and the wonders thereof. The cardinal physical requirements remain the same fundamentals—fresh air, water, exercise, rest, sleep and simple foods. Old age should have been the rule instead of the exception in the time of our ancestors. Their lives were geared down to a speed approved by nature, and their living habits necessarily simple. But, in those days, scourges of typhoid, malaria, cholera, smallpox, diphtheria and other unconquered diseases cut down the life span.

In these modern days, the great majority of people seem to think that public health efficiency automatically takes care of their own physical welfare. They disregard all of Nature's laws and live on a low health scale, simply because they refuse to be guided by common sense.

AIR IS FREE, yet how many breathe enough fresh air to keep plenty of oxygen going into the blood?

WATER IS CHEAP, but every physician will tell you the vast majority of people do not drink enough water.

EXERCISE IS FREE, but laziness, or a supposed lack of time, keeps most of our tissues inactive, and makes us old before our time.

REST IS POSSIBLE to practically all if they manage their affairs properly.

SLEEP is the most abused natural restorative of modern living. You can not "make up" sleep. Nature requires so many hours sleep in each twenty-four.
