266 Votes Required to Elect

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Whichever candidate wins in the national election today, one thing appears to be certain. The hard-fought nature of the campaign and the strong opposition that has been encountered by both candidates will influence a more considered and responsible course of government than the country has had during the last few years. The worst thing that the country did for Mr. Roosevelt in 1936, it seems to this column, was the overwhelming majority it gave him. That majority removed almost entirely the sobering factor of opposition. It robbed the administration of the essential balance of having to take into consideration the views and desires of a great mass of people who are disposed to be critical. It resulted in a sort of carte blanche authority. No man can endure such popularity as that vote expressed without exaggerating his mandate and often becoming impatient of any restraint which appears to challenge that mandate. Mr. Roosevelt has apparently succumbed to that tendency in several instances, much to the hurt of his great opportunity to serve.

If he is re-elected in this election it is altogether probable that he will make a better president than he made in his second term. He will gain the caution that a large vocal opposition to his administration will provide. He will undoubtedly become more considerate of his responsibilities and the wishes of those who oppose him and who apparently have the votes and the influence to back up their opposition. That will be a healthful thing both for himself and the country.

On the other hand, if Mr. Willkie is elected he will be elected by so close a vote that the same sobering influence will impress themselves upon him. It would be a mistake to elect him by a landslide, just as it would be a mistake to elect any other man. The prudence that balanced forces of differing opinions imposes is even more necessary now than it was four years ago. There is certainly no doubt that the spectacular rise and sweep of Mr. Willkie's campaign is one of the most arresting phenomena in national politics. Mr. Willkie was almost unknown until a few months before his nomination and even then the possibility of his nomination was very remote, particularly since it was opposed by the old guard, standardized republicans. That fact makes all the more clear the reality that his campaign was not the campaign of an individual, but the emergence of an ideal which found in one man the ability to express it, to give it a philosophy and a practical, political body. If the republicans had nominated a Seven passengers and three crew members were aboard the ship when it was forced down in a snow storm. All were killed. A faulty radio beam was blamed.

TEN KILLED IN CRASH OF AIR LINER

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 5 (AP)—Ten persons were killed when a storm-lashed airliner ploughed into a mountainside near Salt Lake City, Utah, before dawn Monday. The terrific impact split the fuselage open. The dead were not identified immediately, but were listed by airline officials as: Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Muir of Detroit; Joe Cassero, Oakland, Calif.; E. A. Dybdal, Fergus Falls, Minn.; G. L. Stevenson, Sacramento, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. L. Wilson, Maywood, Ill.; Captain Howard Fey, pilot, Oakland; First Officer Thomas E. Sandegren, Alameda, Calif.; Stewardess, Evelyn Sandino, Oakland, Calif.

The United Airlines "Mainliner" headed east from San Francisco at 10 p. m. Sunday night. It stopped at Sacramento, Calif., Reno, Nev., and Elko, Nev., then headed for Salt Lake City. The transport radioed about 4:40 a. m. that it was 8,000 feet over Layton, 25 miles north of Salt Lake City, and was heading for the airport here.

Further efforts to contact the plane were futile. Hours passed and a severe overnight snowstorm continued. Hope for the ship's safety vanished.

Then, shortly before noon, U. A. L. Pilot William Haws sighted the wreckage from the air. The proud liner had smashed into a mountainside only 13 miles from its destination.

The wreckage was strewn over a wide area three miles northeast of Centerville, which is 10 miles north of Salt Lake City. The rugged Wasatch mountains tower to 7,000 feet in that area.

Ground parties struggled through foot-deep snow and tangled underbrush to reach the scene. There in the brush lay the wreckage. There was nothing to indicate any of the ten had survived even for a few minutes. Bodies of the passengers and stewardess were piled in a grotesque jumble at the front of the cabin. Much of the cabin's furnishings, including some of the seats, had been torn loose and thrown forward by the impact. The nose of the plane, which struck in a grove of scrub oak some 250 feet from the top of a ridge and bounced or skidded another 40 feet up the 25-degree slope, was broken away in the crash, exposing the control compartment and leaving it a mass

4,000 TROOPS CAPTURED BY GREEK ARMY

Defenders Thrust Forward In Bitter Bayonet Fighting

ATHENS, Nov. 5 (AP)—The capture of part of 4,000 Italian troops sent into Greece to cut communications was reported early today as Greece's skirted shock troops announced they had seized another hill in Albania and taken a quantity of Italian war material. (Belgrade, Yugoslavia, dispatches said the Greek general staff reported the capture of 30 tanks and Greek sources in Belgrade said their northern army was in possession of mountain heights surrounding 30,000 Italians.)

The Greek defenders who are carrying the war into Italian-conquered Albania were said to have thrust forward 10 kilometers (more than six miles) in bitter bayonet charges to seize the heights of Mount Moravia in Albania, commanding the road to the Italian base of Koritza. Seize Supplies

Advices from the front said that the Greeks had seized supplies thrown from the air by Italian planes in an attempt to relieve fastest soldiers sent into Greece to disrupt communications. The number of prisoners taken there was not disclosed, but front advices said the surrender of the remaining force is pending. Munitions and guns also were captured.

The Greek high command communique reported that a trench mortar, machine guns and materials had been taken at various points of the front.

The high command said the enemy had bombed repeatedly many towns and villages in Greece, but that "our aviation successfully bombed and machine-gunned concentrations of tanks and troops at different localities."

Reports from Salonika said the Italians raided that important Aegean port city twice during the day and three Italian planes were shot down. It was said one fell in pieces in the city.

Fighting flared all up and down the 100-mile Albanian border, but the most intense struggles were declared to be at the two ends, around Mount Moravia on the north and in the vicinity of the Kalamas river on the south.

Seaver the coast, on the Epirus front, where the Italians were said to have made their only important gains in eight days of subdued blitzkrieg, the Greeks claimed they were holding their strongly fortified positions.

(Greek advices from Djevdjelia, Yugoslavia, town on the Greek-Yugoslav frontier, said the Italians launched a mighty attack on the Epirus front during the day, but failed to budge the Greeks.)

British Rain Bombs Along Axis Length

LONDON, Nov. 5 (AP)—Aerial blows at the axis from Kiel to Naples were reported by the British air ministry Monday, along with an official forecast that in another six months Britain will have passed Germany in aircraft, ships and guns. With the empire's achievement of armament superiority, said Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin, "the ugly Nazi regime will crumble up in Adolf Hitler's hands." The British bombed Naples again Sunday night, driving through low clouds and anti-aircraft fire to rain explosives on the oil tanks of the free customs district of Poggioreale and close to the industrial port's main railway station, the air ministry said. For seventy minutes another group of RAF bombers flew over the German naval base at Keil.

Petain Message Is Believed Assurance

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 (AP)—A message from Marshal Henri Petain of France was delivered here Monday and, although its contents were not made public, it was believed to contain assurances on the touchy subject of French colonial possessions in his hemisphere. There has been concern here just recent negotiations between the axis powers lead to axis penetration of these possessions. Ten days ago, President Roosevelt sent a message to Petain, Monday the French ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, handed Petain's reply to Secretary of State Cordell Hull and then engaged in long conferences at the state department.

Japs Shorten Lines in China by Withdrawals

HONGKONG, Nov. 5 (AP)—Indications that the Japanese army is shortening its lines drastically by withdrawing from several occupied zones, especially in south and central China, increased today.

The abandonment of its zone of occupation in Kwangsi province, south China, apparently was just about completed and Chinese columns following the retreating Japanese were said to be approaching Yanchow, Kwangtung province port through which the Japanese in Kwangsi were supplied.

Just off the coast the Japanese abandoned Waichow, an island they had used as a naval base. Chinese dispatches reported, without independent confirmation, that similar withdrawals were in preparation in the Chungshan district, across the Pearl river estuary from Hongkong from the port of Swatow, northeast of Hongkong, and from Yochow, strategic river port in northern Hubei province, southwest of Hankow.

Last week the Japanese were reported quitting Ichang, on the Yangtze river west of Hankow, high water mark of their Yangtze valley drive.

Chinese reports had it that the majority of Japan's garrison in Canton, chief city of south China, might be leaving and that several Japanese firms there were preparing to close.

RECORD VOTE BEING CAST OVER NATION

Dramatic Campaign Comes to Climax in Polls of Country

Cisco voters, overwhelmingly democratic in political affiliation like the rest of the Solid South, were going to the polls today in numbers to indicate the heated interest, which voters throughout the nation are taking in the election to choose a national administration for the next four years.

Shortly after noon today election boards in the two boxes reported that a total of 562 votes had been cast. Four hundred and 19 of these were cast in the west Cisco box.

This number of ballots indicates that the voting is following the graph of the first primary election when, approximately 1,400 votes were cast and that the total when the polls close at 7 o'clock might be near that figure. The majority of voters usually cast their ballots during the afternoon.

Fred Grist is judge of the west Cisco precinct voting box and W. W. Wallace is judge of the east Cisco box. The former is established in the Cisco State bank building and the latter in the Huestis Magnolia station.

Reports from over the nation indicated that the predicted 50 million votes would be reached. New York city and other industrial centers were casting record numbers of ballots as the sovereign citizens of the nation, stirred by one of the most dramatic campaigns in history and acting under the impulsion of challenging issues, one of which involves the status of the country with respect to the European war, went to their polling places to record their choices between Franklin D. Roosevelt, seeking a third term as president, and Wendell L. Willkie, whose meteoric rise from the comparative obscurity of a business career to become the candidate of a revived republican party, will be rated as one of the political phenomena of all times.

Roosevelt, whose two administrations spanned one of the worst depressions in history and a dramatic sequence of international events that led to a second World war, is seeking a third term on the claim that his experience and ability as a national leader will better serve to keep the nation on a sure and safe course during the international turmoil.

The social reforms achieved during the Roosevelt administrations are cited.

Willkie, however, challenges what he calls the national social-imperial course of the democratic administration, its vast deficit spending and the trend toward a dictatorship as threatening the democratic institutions of the nation and leading it perilously near physical involvement in the European conflict.

"Inside" Pan Americanism

WE of the United States usually think of Pan Americanism in terms of our relations with the remainder of the Americas. But there is more to it than that.

For instance: Argentina and Brazil have recently perfected some intimate and effective trade agreements; Argentina and Chile are discussing similar measures. President Vargas of Brazil is planning joint action by all countries affected to develop the Amazon basin. Mexico has had trade and cultural missions in many lands to the south. Cuba and Guatemala have made efforts to cultivate neighbors in the commercial and cultural fields. The River Plate economic conference at Montevideo in January is now an established institution.

This knitting-together of the American countries is certain to influence United States relations with them. In some cases bi-lateral agreements have been made which to some extent go against the Hull multi-lateral principle. In some cases it is possible that American markets in the south may be curtailed if those neighbor countries take to supplying one another.

BOTH these things might result. But offsetting them is an advantage. If these countries become less dependent on the United States in a trade way, they also become less dependent on Europe. Right now that might easily be more important than anything else.

Further, the more they can find ways to use up one another's surpluses, the less of a problem those surpluses are, which is good for all the Western Hemisphere.

IN short, the United States stands to gain from anything that helps to build sound governments and sound economies to the south, such as will be independent commercially as well as politically. We have faith that such countries and such peoples will develop purchasing power that will enlarge our market in the long run, even though greater independence cuts off the market for certain things from time to time.

We must look at it that way, because flabby, insecure governments and economies to the south present the worst possible danger of foreign penetration, either military or economic followed by political and military.

It's the old American spirit not to consider a draft capsule a bitter pill.

Sitting up till daylight would be more fun if it didn't take all night to do it.

STORIES IN STAMPS

Australia Honors Imperial Forces

A NURSE, a sailor, a soldier and an aviator are pictured on Australia's new stamp, above honoring Imperial Forces. This series of four values in a single design corresponds to the U. S. defense issue.

From a population of seven millions, Australia can raise an army of 250,000 men, necessary to defend interests in the Pacific. Compulsory military service was resumed last January. Recruits for foreign duty are expected to number 90,000 by June, 1941. Naval personnel has been doubled. The Royal Australian Air Force now numbers 34,331 men, as compared with 3453 in 1939. Approximately 10,000 are to be trained for air crews and 24,000 for ground work.

During the World War, Australia depended upon Britain for munitions. Today, they are turning out planes, guns and shells in factories "down under," supplying New Zealand and the United Kingdom, as well as Australia's army.

Court Saves Woman From Death Penalty

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 5 (AP)—Mrs. Annie Beatrice Henry, 24, sentenced to hang for the hatch-like slaying of a salesman, Monday by the state supreme court, whose opinion declared her appeal "presented a question of vital importance in the administration of justice."

Frowning on the "loose and highly prejudicial procedure which the record shows was tolerated" at the trial at which Mrs. Henry, former Shreveporter, was found guilty March 29 of killing Joseph P. Calloway, 42, of Houston, the high tribunal set aside the lower court's verdict.

But at the same time the supreme court upheld the conviction and death sentence imposed on Finnon Burks, 23, companion of Mrs. Henry when Calloway, who had given the couple a ride in his automobile, was shot to death as he prayed for his life in a rain-swept rice field near Lake Charles on St. Valentine's day.

The ruling noted the fact that the courtroom during the trial was jammed with spectators, some of whom made hanging motions to the jury, shouted to the jury-men to hang Mrs. Henry and even set on the jury box steps.

When informed of the ruling later in the day at Lake Charles, District Attorney C. V. Pattison declared he again would bring Mrs. Henry to trial on January 20, 1941, and again ask the death penalty.

Nazis Claim Three British Ships Sunk

BERLIN, Nov. 5 (AP)—Three British ships, totaling 35,414 tons, have been sunk by a single German submarine, and five others, including a destroyer and a 19,000-ton merchantman, have been badly damaged by Nazi bombers, the high command announced Monday.

It listed the U-boat's victims as the auxiliary cruisers Laudentic, 18,724 tons, and the Patroclus, 11,314 tons, and the armed merchantman Casanare, 5,376 tons.

The submarine was in command of Lieut.-Com. Kretschner, the communique noted, with the observation that the tonnage sunk by his craft had thus been increased to 217,198. He is the second U-boat commander to top the 200,000-ton mark, the high command declared.

member of the old school, it is seriously to be doubted that they would have had a chance against the superior political organization of the democrats and the popularity of Mr. Roosevelt.

All in all, the campaign, despite its sharp cleavages and its bitterness in certain sections, promises to be a healthful thing for the country. Pressures which once were futile to halt the trend of governmental policies, even when these policies were distrusted among the party of the administration itself, now have tangible and organized forces behind them. Certainly these will compel a greater degree of moderation in the pursuit of objectives where certain of the dearest American traditions seem to have been violated.

Whichever way the die falls today, neither side can count all lost.

BRUCE CATTON'S AMERICAN ROUNDUP

VOTE IN EAST WILL PROBABLY SWING ELECTION; NEW YORK TREND ENCOURAGES WILLKIE BACKERS

This is the last of three sectional pre-election roundups.

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Most uncertain of all the presidential battlegrounds this year is the east. One thing does seem apparent.

The candidate who gets the bulk of the eastern electoral votes will almost certainly win the election.

Latest reports here have the Willkie people encouraged about New York state and the Roosevelt people blue. Even so, the state is still considered very much in the doubtful class.

By all reports, the traditionally heavy Republican vote upstate is going to be heavier than ever this year. At the same time the Democrats appear likely to get something less than their usual top-heavy majority in New York City.

Two fairly reliable estimates say (a) that Willkie will "come down to the Bronx" with an up-state majority of 750,000 votes or better, and (b) that Roosevelt will be hard-pressed to run up that big a majority within the metropolis.

FISH HAS FIGHT ON HIS HANDS

NEW YORK'S senatorial fight is a scrap between Senator James M. Smith, strong New Dealer, and Congressman Bruce Barton, one of the Willkie inner circle. Outcome of this fight probably depends pretty largely on the presidential vote.

An interesting minor contest in the state involves Congressman Ham Fish, most vocal of the House isolationists. Fish has served 10 straight terms in the House, but is getting more of a fight than usual from Republicans in his district who don't like his isolationism.

Fish's Democratic opponent is Hardy Steebolm.

Maine and Vermont seem certain to follow the course of 1936, and will probably be joined by New Hampshire. The Democrats have run into trouble in Massachusetts, where the President's pro-British policy is not over-popular. In that state, however, the Democrats are aided by a powerful state ticket.

Senator David Walsh is running for re-election, and has been a potent vote-getter for many years. He is an isolationist and has fought the Roosevelt foreign policy but is now off the reservation. With him on the state ticket is another candidate with heavy voter-appeal—Attorney General Dever who cracked the Republican landslide of two years ago and who is now running against Gov. Leverett Saltonstall.

F. D. R. LEADS IN NEW JERSEY

CONNECTICUT likewise is considered debatable ground—the only New England state, by some ways of figuring, in which the Democrats have an edge. Democratic Senator Francis T. Maloney, a first-termer, is running here against Republican Paul L. Cornell.

Roosevelt is given the advantage in New Jersey, though by no such margin as was his in 1936.

Republicans are banking on Senator Warren Barbour, seeking re-election with Jimmy Crooming as his Democratic opponent, to help the national ticket. Former Navy Secretary Charles Edison is the Democrats' candidate for governor. He's opposed by Robert C. Hendrickson.

Pennsylvania, too, could go either way with the Republicans slightly more hopeful than the Democrats since John Lewis' speech. Figuring is that of all union groups the Pennsylvania miners are most likely to follow Lewis' lead, and that his influence may tip the state into the Willkie column. Senator Joe Guifey seeks re-election against Republican Jay Cooke.

Health Officer Warns Against Carbon Monoxide

AUSTIN, Nov. 5 (Spe.)—To minimize the danger of carbon monoxide poisoning during winter weather, motorists are urged by Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer, to check up now on the exhaust systems of their automobiles for defective connections and leaks.

"Cold weather will soon be here, and it will be necessary to drive in closed cars. Carbon monoxide may seep inside from leaky connections and overwhelm occupants of the car," Doctor Cox warned.

He said that "warming up" a car in a closed garage is the greatest cause of carbon monoxide deaths. Leaks from manifold connections, cracked manifolds, defective mufflers, leaks from loose muffler connections, and leaks from hot air heaters or connections are potential sources for release of carbon monoxide and should be checked, Doctor Cox pointed out. "Pay particular attention to those items and remember that proper carburetor adjustment causes minimum production of carbon monoxide and that the highest proportion of this gas is produced by an idling motor."

The state health officer said that headaches which occur during long drives may be an indication that carbon monoxide is leaking into the car. "Sleepiness, dizziness, fatigue and in extreme cases, paralysis, are other symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning. Truck drivers on long drives are particularly vulnerable," Doctor Cox stated.

Carbon monoxide is colorless, odorless, and tasteless. When it is in the air it gives no sign of its presence and is taken into the blood instead of oxygen. Suffering or collapse result from lack of oxygen.

The same carbon monoxide produced from exhaust gas of cars may also be a by-product of the incomplete combustion of fuel in homes, whether the fuel be gasoline, wood, coal, gas or oil. Such incomplete combustion is usually brought about by using heating apparatus improperly adjusted or constructed. Periodical check-ups of heating equipment and connections should be made to forestall any possibility of carbon monoxide poisoning.

GOAL TO GO

BY W. H. PEARS

COPYRIGHT, 1946, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Bill Mentor watches his West high school team lose to Benton, 6-0. With a chance to score, Coach Landis called a spectacular razzle-d-zzle. Even Helen's kiss fails to cheer Bill up. At home, he reviews the game with his invalid father, Buck. The former coach admits Landis was grandstanding, wishes he could coach the team.

CHAPTER II
BILL MENTOR eased his hard young body into patched pajamas. For a moment he stood listening to Buck toss restlessly in the next room. Then, frowning, he drew from the dresser drawer a packet of yellowed clippings. Some were nearly 20 years old, but he studied them eagerly as if he didn't know every word by heart.

"BUCK MENTOR PICKED FOR ALL-AMERICA," "BUCK MENTOR STARS IN SEASON'S UPSET," "BUCK MENTOR TO COACH ALL-STARS."

A warm glow spread up through Bill. His dad! It was something for a fellow to live up to, all right. Slowly, indignation replaced his pride. Those rummies on the board had turned down Buck without an interview. J. Conrad Skelton had written a letter. It would be bad for the team's morale to have an invalid coach, he thought, but if an opening occurred later...

Bill gave a scornful snort. Any dope could put the squad through grass drills and stuff like that. It was brains that counted. And there wasn't a fellow on the team, except maybe Ballethead Peskin, who wouldn't fight for Buck. The last clipping was two years old, but still a fresh sorrow in Bill's mind. He reread the comment of a widely known sports columnist:

"... today the driving steel legs of Buck Mentor are still, still because he saved a little Italian workman whose name he didn't even know, from death under a falling beam. We salute you, Buck Mentor, All-American guy..."

Bill remembered those weeks of running from school to the hospital and finally how the doctor had broken the news to him: "With canes, your father can walk a little, son, but your job is to keep him quiet. In a year or so I'd like him to go east and see a famous friend of mine. If anyone can operate successfully on Buck, he can."

With Bill's job and Buck's savings they managed to get along, but now, two years later, Bill realized that Buck's operation was farther away than ever. Slowly the boy replaced the clippings, unashamed of the tears that burned his eyes.

WHEN Bill awakened, Buck had breakfast ready.

"Sausages," Bill said, smacking his lips. "You should have called me sooner."

"Nothing doing, fellow. Sundays your morning to sleep in." Bill finished eating and unfolded the Sunday paper. "Jumping Jacob, Buck, get this!"

"The older man read aloud: 'Coach Landis defended his boys, but admitted the wrong play had been called.'"

"What do you think of that?" Bill gasped.

"Maybe it's true, Bill. Maybe Calvert did blunder."

"If Landis didn't order the play, why did he replace Peskin?" Bill demanded.

Buck said thoughtfully, "If that's true, Landis has managed rather capably to duck the blame."

Bill's black eyes smoldered. "Gee, what a dirty trick! I'll bet those guys won't take it lying down."

"I'm afraid it won't give them too much confidence in Landis."

Bill carried dishes to the sink, began to scrape them. Buck wheeled over and took his arm.

"Look, fellow, this is your day off."

"Nothing doing, Buck. I—"

Shadows crossed the man's deep-set eyes. "Bill, I feel like a heel already. Don't make it worse. If I were doing what other men do for their sons you'd be playing football and leading a normal 16-year-old life. Instead you make a living for both of us. Bill, I'm sorry."

Bill cocked a big fist threateningly at his father. "Buck, that's hokey, and you know it. Who does all the work around here?"

"No, Bill, you're the anchor man on this team. But it won't always be like that. If there's a job anywhere for a guy with rubber legs I'll find it."

Bill scowled. "Will you forget it, Buck?"

Their hands met in a crushing grip. Bill swallowed hard. Buck stared at the worn lineoleum and said huskily, "I—I'll do dishes. Bill. Okay?"

"Okay," Bill said.

HE went out on the porch intending to read the newspaper, but he lost interest in it when he saw Helen on the steps.

"Hello, Helen."

He sat beside her in the pale sunshine. It fell gently about them, striking warm, deep tones from Helen's chestnut hair. Locking slim hands around her fuzzy wool skirt, she gazed up at him shyly.

"I was kind of hoping you'd come out, Bill. It's too perfect a day to sit here alone."

For the first time Bill noticed that it was a perfect day. The still, warm air was spiced with autumn haze. Now and then a tinted leaf detached itself from the tall maple and whirled lazily to the ground. "It's nice," Bill agreed, inhaling deeply. Their fingers touched, laced together. Helen studied him with wise feminine eyes. "You're worried about something, Bill." He nodded. "It's Buck. He's pretty low about not working."

"I know, Bill."

"But I'm tickled pink to work for him, Helen."

"You're pretty grand to him, Bill. Oh, why couldn't the board have given him a chance? I know he could coach rings around Landis."

Bill was sober, his thoughts divided between Buck and Helen. Something had happened which he didn't understand. Yesterday

Helen had been just the neighbor girl who listened to his problems and talked football with him. But now, as he sat sharing the silence with her, he felt like singing. It was funny...

"Bill, look!"

HE stared at the bunch of boys coming down the street. They walked quietly, without the usual horseplay and laughter. Their faces were grim, determined. Bill saw they were all members of the varsity squad.

Even Drowsy Peters, the manager, looked wide-awake for a change. "Harya, Bill, is Buck at home? We want to talk to him."

"Sure, fellows," Bill said, puzzled. "What's on your minds?"

"Plenty," Don Hart growled. "Darn right!" Calvert mumbled.

"Okay," Bill said, rising. "Come on."

They filed into the house overlooking the tiny living room. Buck wheeled in from the kitchen and flashed his big grin at them. "Welcome, fellows."

"We've got something important to tell you," Don Hart announced. "It's about the game last night."

Calvert said:

"Hey, I'm supposed to do the talking," Drowsy complained.

"Well, go ahead."

Drowsy knuckled his sandy hair, dropped his eyelids. "It's like this, Buck. We held a meeting this morning and made up our minds to do something right, fellows?"

They assented in a chorus.

"What is it?" Buck asked.

"We're through with Landis," Drowsy said defiantly. "We want you for coach, Buck, and we've 'doped out a sure way to get you hired!"
