ROOSEVELT HAS 54.4 PER CENT OF VOTE

PRESIDENT IS LEADING IN 37 STATES

Has 270 Electoral Votes Assured, Many More Likely

With approximately 75 per cent of the vote in Tuesday's national election counted in unofficial returns at noon today, President Roosevelt was leading Wendell Willkie, republican candidate, with 54.4 per cent of the vote. His plurality was considerably less than the tremendous majority he piled up in the 1936 election, when he won a second term over Alf Landon, but it was still decisive.

His total was 21,033,011 out of a storm of ballots that appeared certain to reach the predicted 50 million mark. But out of the recorded total of that unprecedented vote Willkie counted 17,591,792, a figure of impressive proportions which is certain to weigh heavily against the Roosevelt majority in the forthcoming term as the testimony of a strong and perhaps healthful opposition.

A great proportion of the Roosevelt popular vote came from the overwhelmingly democratic states of the south. Elections in most of the other states were closely fought, several of them resulting in neck and neck contests with the lead switching from one to the other as new batches of returns were tabulated. Heavy voting in the large industrial centers and in areas where the well organized large city political machines of the democratic persuasion gave Roosevelt dominance in the important industrial states.

The Roosevelt northern and eastern majorities were spread so generally over the states outside the south that although his pluralities in many cases were narrow, he was able to capture large blocs of electoral votes and build up an impressive total in the electoral college.

He was leading at noon today in 37 states and Willkie was leading in seven. Roosevelt was certain of capturing 270 electoral votes and Willkie was assured 59. Texas returns at noon gave Roosevelt 546,000 to 128,000 for Willkie.

Musical Program Presented at Lions Luncheon

Bruce Younger, program chairman for the Lions club luncheon today, presented Mrs. A. L. Thomas, piano and music teacher at east ward school, and Wilma Lee Thomas and John Slaughter in a program of music. John Slaughter sang three solos and played a harmonica number. Mrs. Thomas sang one solo and played a piano duet with her mother.

Dr. Looney announced that a style show will be sponsored at the high school Friday evening by the west ward P. T. A.

Ciscoans to Go to Putnam Thursday

Rotarians and Lions and their families will go to Putnam tomorrow evening for a community dinner at 7 o'clock. The Putnam P-TA will be host to the Ciscoans at a dinner and program at the school building.

The members of the clubs issued special invitations to all business men and others interested to attend the dinner whether or not they are members of the clubs. It is a community affair, it was announced.

30,000 OF ITALIAN ARMY SURROUNDED

Greeks Cut Lines Of Contact With Main Force

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Nov. 6 (AP)—Greek troops holding the heights around the Italian base city of Koritza in Albania were reported in frontier advices last night to have cut communications between the main Italian army and a force of 30,000 Italians in the Koritza area.

Koritza itself was believed still in Italian hands, however, since the Greek forces up to a late hour last night had not risked a descent into the plain around the Albanian fortified city, where the Italians have concentrated tanks and armored motorized units.

The Greeks have been firing on Koritza from their positions in the hills. Three times today warplanes bombed the Yugoslav frontier city of Bitolj, on the edge of Italo-Greek war zone, killing nine persons, injuring 21 and causing heavy property damage.

Authorities said they had not been able to identify the planes, and Italian, British and Greek diplomats immediately disclaimed responsibility. The Italians blamed the Greeks; Greek Minister, Raoul Rostti scoffed at the idea. An official Yugoslav announcement said any further attacks would be met "with all the means of our armed forces."

Nazi 'Pocket' Battleship's Attacks Convoy

By The Associated Press
One of Germany's two remaining "pocket" battleships was reported to have bounced on a convoy of British vessels in mid-Atlantic Tuesday in a new challenge to the royal navy—even as Prime Minister Churchill frankly told the British that the German submarine menace would, if not stopped, "touch the life of the state."

The raiding warship appeared about 1,000 miles east of Newfoundland. A brief message from the British passenger liner Rangitiki, 16,698 tons, said she was being "shelled by an enemy ship of the Graf Spee class" half-way between Ireland and Newfoundland. This would be either the Admiral Scheer or the Luetzow, formerly the Deutschland.

There was no further word from the Rangitiki—but two hours later an S.O.S. from the 4,952-ton freighter Cornish City said she was being attacked by the raider.

Still later, a message said the pocket battleship still was attacking the convoy. Meanwhile, British fighters beat off four day-time attempts by the Germans to raid London, where Churchill told parliament the civilian dead from air raids in England totaled 14,000 with 20,000 more wounded.

The Germans returned for their usual night assault on London and the British answered with a bomb attack aimed at German-occupied Boulogne, France, and German gun emplacements on Cap Gris Nez, France. An air raid alarm in Switzerland indicated the RAF again was flying to Italy last night.

Cisco Gives FDR Four to One Vote

Fifteen hundred and 15 Cisco voters cast their ballots for the two presidential candidates in yesterday's general election, a figure comparable to the heaviest balloting in the history of the city. As expected, President Roosevelt, the democratic nominee, received the great majority of these votes. 1,209 of the voters registering their preference for him, Willkie received 306 of the total, giving Roosevelt a practical four to one majority.

In the west Cisco precinct the presidential returns were as follows:
Roosevelt 866
Willkie 240
In the east Cisco box:
Roosevelt 343
Willkie 66
Eighty-one voters wrote in the name of Corry, scratching McDonald for commissioner of agriculture in the east Cisco box. McDonald received 266 votes, however in this box. In the west Cisco precinct there was a considerable write-in, although McDonald received a heavy majority.

West Ward P-TA Sponsors Style Show, Program

Can you imagine Pop Garrett impersonating Mae West—or R. N. Cluck strutting out in the latest Paris creation—or Punk Thornton in a hostess gown—or Coy Warren in a slinky evening dress? No, you can't, you just have to see it to believe it. And you'll have the opportunity to howl over these and many equally incredible apparitions Friday night at the high school at 7:30.

So says the committee in charge of the West Ward Parent-Teacher association's womanish style show, which will combine a review of styles with business men for mennequins, and a musical and comical program, included on the program will be a pantomime by Mr. and Mrs. Leo Lipshitz; songs by both the high school girls' trio and boys' quartet; vaudeville acts featuring Droel Looney, and selections by the high school swing band.

The committee in charge includes, Meses. Sutton Crofts, W. W. Milner, James Moore, Harry Schaefer, C. E. Hickman, W. B. Chapman, D. Ball. Admission prices are 10 and 20 cents.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE
The election is over and the people have spoken. Mr. Roosevelt will be the president of the United States for the next four years. In the election the president shattered the tradition against the third term and established a new precedent in American political life. It remains to be seen to what extent, if any, the dire predictions of those who opposed this course come true, and the reaction of a victorious administration to the splendid vote of confidence registered by the people of the nation. One thing can be said with certainty, the column believes. That is that neither side in this campaign wished to destroy our nation and the freedom of its people. A great deal of bitterness was generated in the heat of the campaign and some things were said which in a more sober atmosphere would not have been said. Unfortunately, it does not seem possible to avoid such emotional and unreasonable outbursts when issues are hardfought, but we can take comfort in the fact that American people are sportsmanlike in the sense that they take their contests seriously but are prompt to forget when the issue is settled.

There is, however, a somewhat ominous note to the after election appeals for unity that come from both sides. Although these appeals have been made after all such campaigns, they are usually a matter of good grace and formality. But this time the insistence seems to justify a conclusion that a deeper and more serious division has come to exist, a division which, if not rejoined in a spirit of amity and common respect for the rights of all and the democratic decision of the majority, may bode ill indeed for the future. Calls for magnanimity on the part of the victors and a real and generous cooperation on the part of the losers should not go unheeded. We should certainly respect our form and system of government whether or not we agree with the result of the balloting. Our national security, both at home and abroad depends upon untried people. If this election does not re-

The Country 'Stands Pat'

THE people have spoken. Franklin D. Roosevelt is to be President of the United States for the next four years.

The American people, in riding roughshod over the tradition against third term for Presidents, have given President Roosevelt a tribute that should at once make him very proud and very humble. Many people have believed honestly that election of Roosevelt would mean the end of American democracy. The responsibility rests all the heavier on Roosevelt to demonstrate quite clearly that these fears were groundless.

The strong campaign by Wilkie should be a warning to the President. One of the arguments advanced in his behalf has been that his long experience in public life and in the presidency itself have taught him what may and what may not be done. The clarity and power of opposition which developed during the campaign are a clear signal for an end to miscellaneous experimentation, and concentration on such industrial progress as will solve the one most pressing domestic problem—unemployment.

AS to foreign affairs, it seems clear that American prestige abroad will have been enhanced by the people's decision to stand by the President. The weakness of American foreign policy has always been that other countries never know when a change of administration may bring changes in policy.

The imperatives of the international situation, however, are such today that our foreign policy is pretty much what it must be. Wilkie's virtual adherence to it was the proof of that.

No President ever made a more solemn pledge that the country had no commitments abroad; none ever pledged more explicitly a peace policy so long as the actions of others left peace remotely possible. These pledges the re-elected President must not forget.

THERE is a task before us—a double task involving maximum military preparedness at the fastest possible pace, and also the rebuilding of a better economic structure on the firmest possible foundation. These are tasks which require a united people for successful completion. The election results show that the people are determined to continue to move forward along the general line laid down during the past eight years. To the weight of a third consecutive verdict to this effect is now added the international situation, demanding the utmost co-operation from every American.

It will be forthcoming. It is in the best tradition of democratic government to accept with grace the verdict of the people, and to support wholeheartedly the President who is the choice of the majority.

In such a course lies the only assurance of victory over our domestic problems and of the stability of free government in a world which has gravely challenged it.

One, Two, Three

an authority that cannot be denied. It provided that result with an ultimate rightness. The task before us now is to accept the verdict of the nation, close ranks and go forward in unity of mind and purpose behind a leadership that asked and was given the responsibility for directing the national course through the dangerous years ahead.

sult in that, the column believes you will agree that our democracy has failed in a very vital particular. Tuesday's voting was of itself, without regard to the winner or loser, a mighty challenge to dictatorships abroad. It will cease to be that if either winner or loser refuses to "play ball."

There is another thing which sticks out of this election like a sore thumb, another fact that ought to give pause to the mind sobering from the intoxicating influences of the campaign, another thing which counsels against the emotional influences that sometimes sweep us along. It is this:

We have just seen how easy it is to destroy a tradition. We can appreciate how easy it would be for an inflamed electorate with equal facility to sweep away other traditions and institutions, particularly since none now living have had actual experience with the ills that originally gave rise to those institutions. The cautions embedded in history have less influence than the resentments that arise from personal experience, and the further we get from these historical signposts the less is their influence. In our calmer hours we appreciate their value, but at times when the future holds a dread uncertainty and worries or excitements crowd the moment, we are likely to take refuge in the plausible and to ignore the lessons of history as rules that dead men lived by, unfitted to the present.

It seems to the column that if the election yesterday means anything to the voter today, it ought to mean a conviction that he or she is responsible for the security of the kind of government we have. Those who have read this column in the years that is has been published, will agree, I think, that the constant, underlying theme has been faith in the ideal of local self government as the only true democratic form. It firmly believes that government that is kept close to the hearth of the people is the only free government. It resists concentrations of power remote from the individual. Such a belief places emphasis on the responsibilities as well as the privileges of the individual. It presupposes a real faith in the individual.

The column has that faith. It believes that the American citizen, the normal man or woman, is fitted with the ability to choose for himself or herself, to decide questions of momentous concern when the issues are fairly and clearly presented. If at times has shot straight from the shoulder, it has done so because it has confidence in the fair-mindedness of the reader and in the ultimate rightness of that reader's decision, whether or not it agrees with the reasoning or conclusions of the column. It has expressed its opinions plainly. It hopes that it has stimulated yours. Only in frank, open discussion can the people of a democracy be assured of what is their absolute right—the right to know the facts. That is the function of a free press and speech.

The function is not always honestly served. But it is good to live in a land where people can, without fear of reprisal, speak their minds openly. The exercise of that privilege endowed the result of Tuesday's election with

Reported Dead, Texas Flyer Planning Return

DALLAS, Nov. 6 (AP)—Two cablegrams received by relatives here Monday assured that Harold C. Phillips, former Love Field Army Air Corps instructor, reported killed last week in combat with Nazi attackers over London is still alive and hopes to see his family in Texas by Christmas.

One message was received by Phillips' mother, Mrs. T. W. Christie, who is in a hospital here. Another came to his wife in Graham. The later read: "I am all right. Letter follows. Hoping to see you Christmas. Phillips flew a bomber to England late in August and was scheduled to return and fly at least two bombers a month to the Royal Air Force, relatives said.

It was assumed here that Horace Heising, other flier with Phillips in the plane reported shot down over London, also was safe although no word had been received.

SERIAL STORY

GOAL TO GO

BY W. H. PEARS

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY, Bill recalls the accident that injured his father, Buck Mentor hadn't hesitated when he saved the life of a workman, unknown to him, but it left the one-time All-America back an invalid. There was hope that an operation might restore his health, but there wasn't enough money. Sunday mornings the West varsity, angry over their defeat and Landis' announcement that the wrong play had been called, visit Buck. They have a plan to oust Landis, get the job for Buck.

CHAPTER III BUCK MENTOR said. "Go ahead." "We're going on a strike," Don Hart blurted. "We're through with Landis' dirty tricks," Calvert added. "He sent me into the game last night to run off that razzle-dazzle. Now he's ducking the blame. We won't stand for it." Buck Mentor, looking from one angry face to the other with grave gray eyes, said nothing. "We've talked to our folks," Drowsy explained. "They haven't forgotten all the cold, rainy days he sent the squad home with sniffling and sore muscles. They're still pretty mad at Landis." "And they're dead set on winning the big game against East this year," Hart said. "If we refuse to play for Landis, they'll back us up." The boys were silent, waiting for Buck to speak. He took a long pull on his pipe. "You fellows know there's nothing in the world I'd rather do than coach you."

Dot walked scarlet-tipped fingernails up Bill's sleeve... "I'll bet you're really not such a woman-hater, Bill."

"Attaboy, Buck! Bill knows how you want us to block and tackle. He can help you." "No, wait, I haven't finished. It's impossible the way you've planned it." "Why?" Hart demanded. "You fellows are like soldiers in an army," Buck said slowly. "You can't just quit when something doesn't please you. Not even if you think the general's giving you a dirty deal. That's called desertion. You've got to stick out your jaws and ask for more." Calvert scuffed his toe on the threadbare carpet. "But, gosh, Buck, we thought..." Buck's voice was gentle. "Sure, fellow, I know what you thought. It's not easy for me to refuse. I'm just about bursting inside that you fellows want me. But if Landis is really a poor coach he won't last. In the meantime, give him all you've got. Then if he fails he won't have an alibi." "Gee, Buck, do you really mean that?" Drowsy asked.

"I do, Drowsy." The boys talked in low tones, then Hart said, "Okay, Buck, what you say goes. We'll stick." "Good stuff, fellows!" As the squad moved slowly toward the door Buck turned to his son. "Bill, can you practice with them tomorrow?" "I usually squeeze in a little time before work, Buck. But why?" "I'm not sure, Bill, but somehow I feel that seeing you take the same medicine I prescribed for them may help..."

WHEN his last class was over, Bill dashed for the locker room. A sense of excitement gripped him as he put on Buck's worn uniform. The shoulderpads were bulky and obsolete, the jersey faded and torn; but to Bill it was a suit of shining armor. As he jogged out on the practice field, Landis turned. He was a heavy man with a meat-red face and practically no neck. He barked commands like a drill sergeant, yet never seemed quite sure of himself. "Working out today, Mentor?" "If it's okay Coach." "Makes no difference to me. You can scrimmage with the scrubs now!" Bill went into a huddle. He ran off several routine plays without much gain. The varsity squad was charging in hard and fast. The scrubs were determined but out-classed. "Too bad you guys can't roll like that under pressure," Landis commented sarcastically. The boys scowled but remained silent. From the varsity backfield Bullethead Peskin called with a sneer: "Hey, Mentor, why doncha give us some of those too wonderful plays of your old man?" Bill took a threatening step toward Peskin, but Landis cut in sharply. "All right, all right, get going now!" Still smoldering, Bill called his squad into a huddle. "Let's show Coach what we can do," he begged. "Here's one Buck taught me. It's no razzle-dazzle, but if we get it timed right it may fool 'em. Now listen..." Bill took the pass from center, drove forward. Just before he reached the line he handed the ball to the wingback, who started a sweep around right end. Bill's heart pounded as he blocked out a defensive guard trailing the play. He wanted desperately to be able to tell Buck that his play had fooled the varsity. Then he heard Landis' whistle shrill and saw the ball carrier sail into the clear. The play had worked!

Hands on his hips, Landis glared at Bill. "I suppose you think you're quite a coach, eh, Mentor?" "No, sir." "Well, get this straight. You can teach the scrubs all the Buck Mentor plays you want, but no varsity of mine will ever run them. In fact, Mentor, I'd welcome the chance to smear a few All-America plays!" Bill turned to the scrubs with a grin. "If any of you fellows are interested in Coach's idea, drop around at the house. Buck'll give us a little skull practice. So long."

It was nearly Bill's quitting time when Bullethead Peskin swaggered into the drug store. Dot Skelton clung to his arm. Bullethead led her to a booth and gestured imperiously for Bill. "Gimme a hot chocolate, and Dot here wants—" "Thank you," Dot snapped. "I'll do my own ordering." She curved her full red lips in a teasing smile. "How are you, Bill? Don't you think it'd be nice to say hello to me?"

"Hello," Bill said. Dot pouted. "Must you always say it like a parrot?" Bullethead was turning green about the mouth. "Say, Dot, what's the idea of talking to this soda jerk?" "You hush up, Walton!" she flared. "I like Bill. He's a gentleman, which is more than I can say for some fellows..." She walked scarlet-tipped nails up Bill's sleeve. "I'll bet you're really not such a woman-hater, Bill."

He gulped. She was pretty, all right, with her Auburn hair and green eyes, but he wished she'd let him alone. She pulled that line every time she came in. He forced a grin. "How about a hot fudge sundae?" "Oh, dear, my figure..." She twisted around in an obvious effort to draw Bill's attention to her slim curves. "But if you say I'm not too plump, Bill, I'll give in." Bill shot an embarrassed glance at Drowsy Peters, who grinned back impulsively over his coke. "You're not too plump," Bill said gruffly.

Dot was coy when he returned with the order. "Bill, why don't you ever come to the dances? Or ask anyone for a date?" "I work every night," Bill said, and hurried behind the fountain. Bullethead Peskin belched; "Hey, Mentor, we want water. And slop some extra chocolate on Dot's sundae." Bill hesitated, red spots of anger coloring his cheeks. It was past his quitting time, but if he ignored the order it might mean his job. For Buck's sake he swallowed his pride and obeyed. Then, without a glance at either Dot or Bullethead, he joined Drowsy.

Drowsy blinked at him like a sleepy kitten. "You ain't smart, Bill."

"Why?" "Giving Dot the brush-off. She's been trying to get a tumble out of you for six months." "So what?" Bill asked, then added, his heart jumping curiously. "I—I got a girl." "Only this you dope: J. Conrad Skelton runs the board, Little Dottie runs J. Conrad..." "You mean, I..." Drowsy was patient. "I mean, Willie, that this Landis don't know which way is up. He won't last. If you're in solid with the Skeltons when the ax falls you can do Buck a lot of good..." (To Be Continued)

Garner Takes Walk For First Time

UVALDE, Nov. 6 (AP).—Vice-President John N. Garner took a walk Tuesday.

Unlike his wife, secretary and hundreds of Uvalde citizens, he did not vote in the general election. When his precinct closed at 7 p. m., he had cast no ballot there and county officials said he had not voted absentee.

Secluded in his big brick residence, he gave no reason for breaking his voting habits of many years.

Election attaches said they could not recall when the Vice-President had failed to vote heretofore. At many elections Garner has voted ballot No. 1 and Mrs. Garner No. 2. This year Mrs. Garner voted at 8:15 a. m., fifteen minutes after the polls opened, but Mr. Garner was not with her. Asked when Mr. Garner would vote, Mrs. Garner replied, "We don't know." It was the first general election in forty-four years that Uvalde has not had the opportunity to vote for Cactus Jack. He ran for his first public office—county judge—in 1896. He was elected and has been running since.

In sharp contrast to the last general election night, the Vice-President and Mrs. Garner did not sit up to receive returns, but retired about 7:30.

There were no neighbors dropping in as in 1936 to exult over the news of another Roosevelt-Garner victory. The house was dark except for one room where Garner's secretary listened to a radio.

Except for a brief visit to Washington in September, Garner has been in Uvalde since late July, when he abruptly left Washington while Congress was in session. He has hunted doves and fished on the spacious ranches of Southwest Texas and declares himself to be in excellent health.

SEEK TRADING BURGLAR INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 6 (AP).—Police are looking for a burglar who couldn't make up his mind what he wanted. He broke into Roger Kiley's house Tuesday and took a suit of clothes. Then he broke into George Dean's home, stole a dress and left the suit in its place.

How Winter OIL-PLATING maintains needed lubricant in advance—for Safe Quick Starts

Here's a short easy Quiz that can save you harsh starting wear all Winter... When you park, does all the lubricant drain down sooner if the cylinders slant like the sides of the letter V, or if they're straight up like the letter I?

Answer: All the lubricant DOES NOT drain down for hours—days—weeks—in any type of car engine that's OIL-PLATED by changing to Conoco Germ Processed oil for Winter.

Processed into this patented oil is the magnet-like ability to keep inner engine parts surfaced with rich slippery OIL-PLATING

...as close-fitting as other protective plating on your car... and just as drainproof!

Then before you can even get near your car, the waiting engine is already OIL-PLATED against the worst Winter wear. And out goes the dread of the starting period. Do you ever read or hear of any Winter help that's more positive? Change today then—simply, quickly, economically—to this patented Germ Processed oil that OIL-PLATES, warding off excess wear to keep up mileage.
