Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

The earthquake that crumbled much of Rumania into ruins and reportedly played havoc with part of the rich oil fields upon which Hitler depends for fuel for his great war machine is another evidence of the fact that man proposes but God disposes. According to your particular belief in the part God plays in the affairs of men you may estimate the extent to which there was Divine motive in the catastrophe. Analysts of the war in Europe are particularly interested in the effect of the shocks upon the morale of the people in central Europe and particularly of that of the country of Rumania which Hitler now dominates, and in the extent of the loss of supplies which the nazis so badly need to make their war juggernaut go. There is no doubt that whatever the effects, they will serve the cause of Great Britain and her allies in the struggle, although the amount of damage and the degree to which enemy morale is affected are unknown factors.

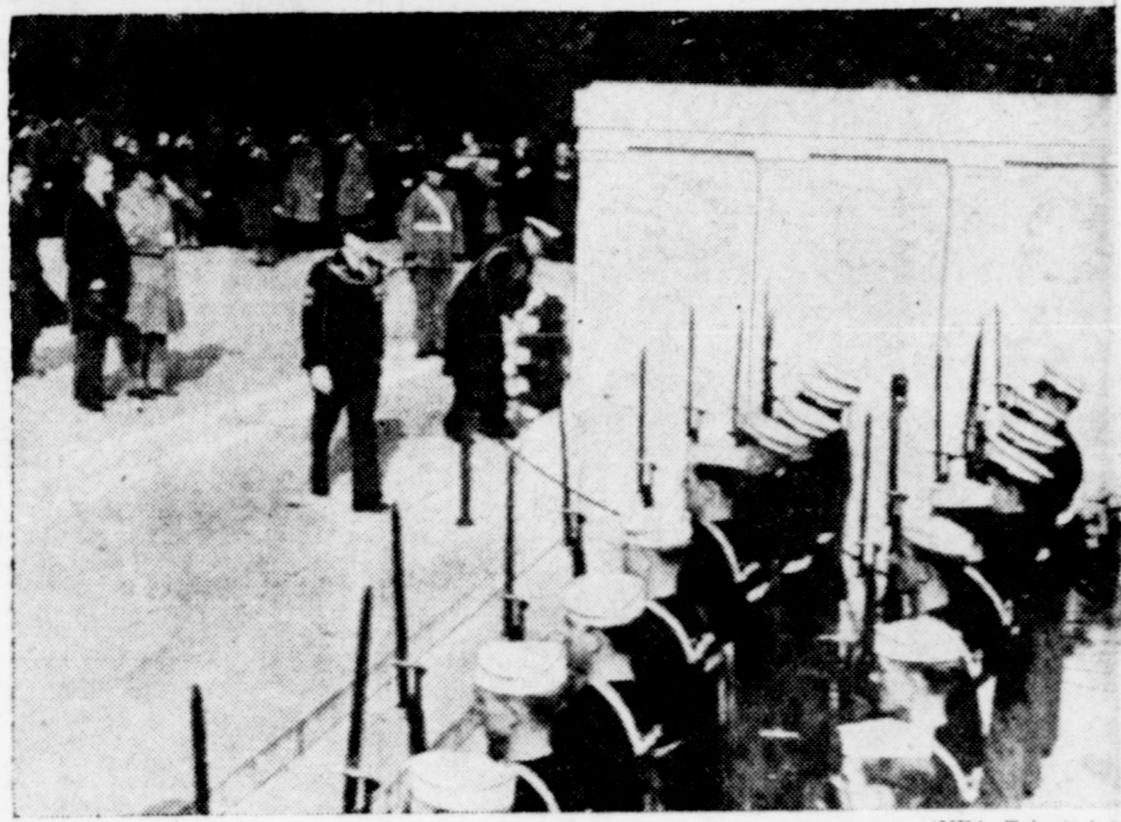

The loss in oil supply will make Germany and Italy dependent in that much greater degree upon the Russian sources and place a bigger card in the Stalin deck for the negotiations now under way between the Russian dictator and the axis powers. What Stalin will do with it remains to be seen, but one can hardly credit that enigmatic tyrant with motives other than those which would advance the Russian interests. Stalin has stood aside, conserving men, materials and supplies while allowing Germany and Italy—if Italy can be credited with having any value to either Germany or Russia—do the dirty work. He has simply inched along in his campaign, gaining by peaceful occupation a share of the advantages that the nazis fought for holding over the Hitler head the dire threat of his unlimited manpower and resources while maintaining the guise of an ally in aggression. There seems to be little doubt that the crafty soviet dictator is waiting for a moment of exhaustion before making a supreme assertion with the view of dominating the whole show and gaining advantageous outlets and resources in the south. If he had more magnanimous regard for the ambitions of his axis friends why did he not declare

President Roosevelt stands at attention with his military aide General Edwin Watson, at left, as Naval Aide Capt. Daniel Callahan places a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington. ## NEW DRIVE IS MADE FOR WELFARE FUND

The Cisco Charity and Welfare organization had its regular meeting this morning in the chamber of commerce offices, with 17 representatives from cooperating organizations attending. Reports were heard on the first drive for funds for the winter season, and plans were made for the remainder of the drive. It was decided that November 20 would be designated "bundle day," at which time every family in Cisco is asked to gather all old garments that can be used for distribution by the welfare board, and place them in bundles on the front porch. Mrs. L. E. Vaughn, Joe Clements, Sam Kimmell, N. A. Brown and J. J. Tableman have been appointed a committee to arrange for picking up the bundles and taking them to the welfare office. The office is located at 108 West Sixth, just back of the Cisco Banking building, and is open every afternoon, it was announced.

Loboes Defeat Bulldogs 52 to 6 Monday

By GORDON SHERMAN
Pulling the throttle wide open on astonishing first half offense, the Cisco Loboes riddled a hapless Ranger eleven for 45 points in 24 minutes, and coasted easily through a slow second half to a 52-6 victory over a scrapping Bulldog eleven at Ranger Monday afternoon. The contest was a traditional Armistice day clash, and although without bearing on the conference race concluded very pleasingly a ring of three consecutive losses. In addition, it gave the Loboes the unofficial "Eastland county championship" for the third straight year, since the Loboes downed the Eastland Mavericks in the season opener. The Loboes counted 24 first downs to four for the Bulldogs, completely dismembered the Ranger running attack, and except for an 80-yard pass play which came late in the fourth quarter, thoroughly grounded the Bulldog aerial offensive at once. The Bulldogs never threatened, with the exception of the pass by which they scored, and had the ball not more than one-fourth of the contest. Score Quickly The Cisco lads doused the possibilities of an upset by the simple expedient of scoring the first time they had the ball. The Bulldogs kicked off to the Lobo 35, from where Taylor, Qualls (shifted to quarterback to replace the injured Warren), and Lasater collaborated to the Ranger 34. From there the big and fast Taylor roared 34 yards over left tackle to pay dirt. Some of the Ranger lads held on for a ways, but the big Lobo fullback insisted, and finally had his way. It was a beautiful run. Qualls converted from placement and the Loboes led, 7-0. A few plays later the Loboes were in possession on their own 31. Again it was Qualls, Taylor and Lasater on a drive featured by the red-thatched Qualls' 26-yard gallop, climaxed by Lasater's fine sprint over his own left guard for 31 yards and six more points. Qualls missed the conversion and the Loboes led, 13-0. Recover Fumble As the first period ended the Loboes recovered a fumble on the Bulldog 22. Warren came into the game, passed 22 yards to Qualls, Qualls converted and without further ado it was 20-0. Getting tired? Well, don't quit yet. I've got 38 more points to account for and the Loboes made 32 of them. A few minutes later the Loboes had possession on their own 34. Warren faded back, shot a pass to Qualls and the speedy receiver went 66 yards to count standing up. Qualls placement was wide and the Loboes led, 26-0. Sooooo, shortly thereafter the

FORMER CISCO ACCOUNTANT FOUND DEAD

H. D. Gorham, 44, well-known accountant of Abilene and a former resident of Cisco, was found dead in his Abilene home late yesterday afternoon by members of his family who returned from a motion picture show to discover his body stretched across his bed. A verdict of "death by his own hand" was returned by Justice of the Peace J. D. Perry, Jr., who said that his investigations showed Gorham had taken poison. No note was found. Members of the family were unable to assign any reason. He apparently was in good health, they said. The body was found by Mrs. Gorham and a daughter, Frances, who arrived home from the picture show about 5 p. m. Well known among members of his profession, Gorham specialized in the handling of income tax accounts and other government reports. For the past two years he had maintained his office in his home. The Gorhams had been residents of Abilene for four years, moving there from Cisco. Before moving to Cisco they had lived in Abilene for about five years. Gorham was born July 3, 1896, in Lake Charles, Louisiana. Survivors include his wife, a daughter, Frances, and a son, Harrison Drew, University of Texas student.

FIRES AND NEW EARTH SHOCKS IN RUMANIA

1,000 to 2,000 Dead as Disaster Rocks Nazi Dependency

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 11 (AP).—Huge fires burning out the heart of Bucharest and new earth shocks spread fresh terror in earthquake-devastated Rumania Monday night and made vastly more dangerous the national task of succoring thousands of injured and homeless. German and Rumanian soldiers, iron guards, police and voluntary workers combined to dig wherever possible in the flaming ruins for victims living and dead. From 1,000 to 2,000 persons were killed when the heaviest shocks in the recorded history of Rumania shook this Nazi-dominated country early Sunday. There was no way of counting the injured or homeless and the new shocks only added to the work of rehabilitations and the toll of the dead and injured. No Americans were reported killed or injured, but the American legation staff ignored the Armistice day holiday to make a definite check. What effect the disaster would have upon the military future of southeastern Europe could not be foretold Monday night. Rumania's rich oil fields lay like a vast tinderbox awaiting a match and the German soldiers guarding the wrecked wells and open fissures where oil oozed to the top of the ground were especially vigilant against danger of fire.

Blazes Controlled Some small blazes were detected in the rich oil fields, but thus far there had been no general outbreak which could not be controlled. But it was a different story in Bucharest, once one of the most beautiful cities in the Balkans. Thousands of soldiers and iron guards fought for hours a fire, which a high wind threatened to spread through the thickly built business district of the capital only a quarter-mile from the royal palace. Monday morning a tremor slowly buckled a twelve-story apartment house. The residents fled to safety. 200 Tenants Trapped. That apartment almost was a twin of the near-by Carlton apartment building, which is a mass of flaming debris and a pyre for 200 tenants trapped in its collapse early Sunday. An oil tank exploded at noon in the Carlton wreckage, setting the second blaze since rescue workers began digging for victims. It trapped an undetermined number of relief workers, who are believed dead. Also a suicide squad, tunneling toward an air-raid shelter for a group of trapped men and women was feared lost in the new attacks. The government ordered citizens all over the city to leave buildings found perilously weakened after the big quake Sunday. The apartment house fire spread and appeared out of control. Dust explosions hampered the efforts of hundreds of German soldiers and Rumanian firemen to localize it, and a square mile around the blaze was roped off. Tanks Clear Debris Tanks rumbled up and down Bucharest's streets, hauling away chunks of concrete. Army trucks carried away debris and peasant women under police supervision raked the ruins in search of valuables. Numerous other fires were reported. The most serious was at Galati, on the Danube river, where the death toll was not estimated. Sixty-five per cent of the homes in Giurgiu, chief Danubian oil port, were demolished and there were many casualties. A large hotel collapsed in Isai, Rothermann's big city in Pannania. Many were believed killed there. Seventy per cent of the houses at Focsani were knocked down, where there are 35,000 homeless.

Civilization Dependent on Knowledge

AUSTIN, Nov. 12 (Sp.)—Civilization's future hinges on advancing the front of knowledge. Dr. A. P. Grogan, University of Texas graduate dean, declared in reviewing work of the university's graduate school and outlining a far-reaching program for the school of tomorrow.

Training of research workers to push forward this front, he said, is a graduate school's primary task, a challenge that crumbling of European civilizations has dumped in America's lap.

"America must assume increasing leadership in the advancement of science and scholarship," he pointed out. "Today there is more need than ever for advanced training beyond the bachelor's degree in such professions as teaching, educational administration, engineering, law and medicine, in commerce and industry in such fields as petroleum, the cotton business, foreign trade, banking and finance, and in many phases of governmental activities."

Already in the south's top bracket, and with some 4,000 graduate degrees conferred, the University of Texas needs to "pick up" its graduate school to place even among the top 20 universities nationally, he reminded.

"Our task is to raise it at least to the top twelve," he insisted.

Mr. and Mrs. Mutt Lieske are parents of a son, Dwayne Lee, born on Tuesday, November 5. Mother and baby are reported doing nicely.

This morning the cold drove the thermometer to within two degrees of that low point at the similar hour when it registered 38 degrees. At 10:30 this morning the red line stood at 49 degrees. The brunt of the blizzard which swept over northern and middle-western states missed this section.

LANDOWNERS TO VOTE ON SOIL DISTRICT

Educational Campaign to Precede Election December 14

About 90 per cent of the landowners and their wives in Eastland county can vote in the soil conservation election on Saturday, December 14, according to Elmo V. Cook, county agent, who is making plans for a series of community picture shows and educational meetings on the election. The issue to be voted on is whether or not a soil conservation district shall be established, including parts of Eastland, Comanche and Erath counties. All of Eastland county is included except the area north and west of Cisco and the area east of the Jake Hammond railroad. The boundaries of the section around Cisco that was left out of the proposed district are the canyon road and the base line road.

All landowners who live and own land in the proposed district and are qualified voters under the state laws can vote on the organization of the district. Agricultural leaders of the county are urging every qualified voter to vote on the issue as they think best. Voters are reminded that wives of landowners are eligible to vote, and so are heirs of undivided estates and their husbands and wives.

Qualified voters must cast their votes according to where they live in the county or in the district. Those who live in the school districts of Eastland, Olden, Union, Flatwood, Morton Valley, Triumph, Grapevine, Mangum, Cisco, Central, Sandy, Shady Grove, Lee Ray, Bedford and Reagan, will vote at the justice of the peace office in the court house, Eastland.

Those living in the school districts of Ranger, Colony, Cross Roads, Alameda, Bullock and Lone Cedar school districts will vote at the Ranger city hall.

Those living in the Scranton, Reich and Douthan school districts will vote at Scranton school.

Qualified voters living in the Pioneer, Cross Plains and Union school districts will vote at the A. C. Fare store, Pioneer.

Qualified voters living in the Rising Star, Hallmark, Crocker, Okra, Brooks and Romney school districts will vote at the city hall, Rising Star.

The county agent has announced a series of community motion picture shows and educational meetings on soil conservation, at which times questions will be answered about the purpose of organizing a soil conservation district. A schedule of the meetings and picture shows is announced elsewhere in this newspaper.

U. S. May Break Off Talks With Soviet

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP).—Slow-moving talks between the United States and soviet Russia toward a better understanding may be broken off entirely, it was believed as a result of soviet Premier Molotov's visit to Germany. The visit was interpreted generally here as an indication that Russia was prepared to collaborate even more closely with the axis powers and that efforts of the United States and Great Britain to improve their relations with Moscow were all but futile. State department officials, however, were silent over implications of Molotov's visit.

The Voices That Shouted "Peace!"

THE tumult and the shouting of the campaign die away, but there is one shout that must echo and re-echo in the president's mind as he sits alone to think of his tremendous third triumph. Yes, presidents sit alone sometimes. In fact, despite the constant impingement of problems and persons, the presidency is a lonely job and all presidents have felt it keenly.

The shout that cannot die out of the president's mind is the shout of the American people for peace. He cannot forget that the one thing both in his own addresses and those of his opponent that always touched off a roar of spontaneous approval was any passage that gave hope of keeping our great land at peace.

He cannot forget that of around 22,000,

000 Americans who voted for the opposing candidate, many, many of them so voted because they thought peace might thus be best preserved. He cannot forget that his own specific pledges of peace, so long as peace is permitted us, were the passages which drew the deepest response.

NEITHER candidate could honestly have made or kept a pledge that "under no circumstances whatever will the United States go to war." Neither did so. War or peace in the near future is not so much a matter of conscious American decision as of circumstances, and the acts of others. Yet a strong and determined will to peace can do much, and the American people have that will. They showed it throughout the campaign, showed it clearly to both candidates by their responses.

The campaign showed equally clear support of American foreign policy as revealed in action. There was no basic difference between parties here, and Mr. Wilkie's post-election statement shows clearly this unity. Exactly where this course will lead us, no man can precisely prophesy. The conduct of human affairs is not a mathematical science. But the course has been charted by the pilot and confirmed by passengers and crew.

THIS time we propose to prepare, hoping that this will serve us for peace, since unpreparedness has so often failed to prevent war. The nation is united in determination to gain strength in proportion to its great power. To the death it will defend its soil, its interests, its free way of life.

But it is peace the American people want—to keep peace if they can; to join war only if they must. Those great deep-throated shouts from both sides of the whole campaign reveal it clearly. Above the shouting and exultation of triumph may be heard clearly the voices that cried "Peace!"

BRUCE CATTON'S AMERICAN ROUNDUP

HATCH ACT FAILED TO CUT DOWN ON CAMPAIGN SPENDING BECAUSE OF TWO MAJOR LOOPHOLES

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — Despite the limitations imposed by the Hatch act, the presidential campaign of 1940 may go down in the records as one of the most expensive ever waged in America.

The Hatch act provides that no party may spend more than $3,000,000 on a presidential campaign. It also limits the sum any individual may contribute to a campaign fund to $5,000, and prohibits the solicitation of federal or federally paid state employees for campaign contributions.

But the act contains a set of loopholes big enough to drive a platoon of tanks through, and evidence is mounting that full advantage was taken of all of them. Net result apparently has been that as far as holding down campaign expenditures is concerned, the Hatch act might almost as well not have been written.

ORGANIZATIONS ARE LEGION
FIRST of all, there is the $3,000,000, over-all limit. What the act says is that no "political organization" may spend more than that sum. It apparently does not cover the sums that separate organizations could spend.

Senator Hatch recently pointed out that in passing on this point a court should take into account the debate on the floor of the Senate, in which it appeared to be the wish of the Senate that the $3,000,000 limit should apply to the total spent for any one candidate. However, most of the Wilkie committee officials who testified recently before the Senate campaign fund investigating committee reported that their lawyers had advised them that each separate committee could spend up to $3,000,000. These committees were legion on the Republican side—the Associated Wilkie Clubs, the Wilkie Magazine Club, the Anti-Third Term Committee, the American Writers' Committee, the People's Committee for Defense Life Insurance Savings, the Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government—and half a dozen more. All but two of these asserted they were completely independent of the national Republican committee.

MAN MAY SHELL OUT ON ALL SIDES
SENATOR GILLETTE, head of the Senate committee, points to the second loophole in the limit on individual contributions.

A man may not give more than $5,000 to a national campaign fund. But he apparently could give a similar sum to each of the 48 state funds, if he chose, and in addition could make further $5,000 contributions to assorted county committees to the limit of his capacity to pay.

Nor has the ban on levying contributions on officials been entirely effective. A government official in Washington, for example, could not circulate the workers in his department asking for contributions; but the Democratic National Committee could (and in some instances did) circulate the same workers in their homes. Similarly, a political committee can't try to shake down a postmaster for a contribution—but it can do his wife, his father and all his in-laws.

The courts may eventually hold that some or all of the dodges cited here are in fact violations of the Hatch act. But competent lawyers seem to believe the courts won't do anything of the kind—and, as Senator Gillette remarks, "an act of that importance ought not to be left open to two such logical and reasonable interpretations."

Adds Senator Gillette: "There's no question in my mind that here's a field that must be gone into seriously if we are to prevent wholesale debauchery of our election system."

Loboes---

Loboes had the ball on their own 29. Lasater, Taylor and Donovan carried to the Bulldog 37. From there Warren hit Qualls with another aerial, and, of course, he scored, making it necessary to add on another six points, which, if all this addition isn't too much for me, made the score 32-0.

Taylor Scores
Almost immediately Taylor added to the general confusion with another hair-raising run. From the Lobo 29 he broke over tackle, and once clear of strenuously objecting linemen (2), opinionated halfbacks (2) safety one (1) safety man, he took on the aspects of a run-away box-car. The gallop carried 71 yards and was great fun watching besides adding six more points, which the bristling Lasater increased by one when he plunged for the conversion.

Well, the time-keeper was fumbling through his pockets for a whistle, having had crackers for lunch, when Warren heaved another touchdown pass to Qualls, this one from the Ranger 34. The time-keeper found his whistle and Lasater plunged for the conversion at the same time, so the count stood 45-0 at half-time.

Since there was no cover in sight, the Ranger lads decided to take to the air after the half. This worked very well for a play or two, until the tall and enthusiastic Taylor snared one on the Lobo 41. A play or two later Lasater slammed the Bulldog line fore away from several tacklers, and legged it 58 yards to score standing up. Qualls plunged for the conversion, and brought the Loboes' grand total to 52 points.

Bulldogs Score
For the rest of the contest the Loboes threatened often, but penalties or fumbles thwarted each drive. Late in the fourth quarter Woods, Bulldog back, took a pass thrown from his own 20 and outran the Lobo secondary to pay dirt. An attempted plunge for the conversion was stopped short, and the score stood 52-6.

The Loboes had another touchdown called back in the last few seconds of play when Donovan cracked the Ranger forward wall for 19 yards and a touchdown. The Lobo halfback simply ran over three or four tacklers and broke into the end zone with plenty to spare. But the officials detected a Lobo blocker using his hands a little too energetically, and the touchdown was called back, with the Loboes drawing a 15-yard penalty. All of which was very disappointing. One play later the game ended with the count still 52-6.

Outstanding for the Loboes were:

Edgar "Slim" Taylor, who scored two touchdowns on runs of 34 and 68 yards, and generally turned in a very creditable performance.

Garland Lasater, who scored two touchdowns, and plunged for one conversion. He was the heart and soul of the Lobo offense with his slamming blocks and a good share of the defense, to which he contributed several jarring tackles.

Coy Warren, who completed seven of nine passes, four of them for touchdowns. Although he played but part of the game, and that on a badly injured ankle, his performance was little short of astonishing.

James "Roste" Qualls, who scored four touchdowns on fingertip catches of Warren's passes, and converted three times. In addition, he called a fine game from a position to which he completely unaccustomed.

Curtis Gambin, who played a smashing game at end, contributed the pay-off block that enabled Qualls to coup a touchdown and caught several passes for long gains.

SERIAL STORY

GOAL TO GO

BY W. H. PEARS

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Bill takes Dot to the dance, fights with Bullethead. Dot is delighted to have been the cause of the quarrel, assures Bill that she influenced her father to fire Landis. Buck hears of the fight, but Bill refuses to explain. Buck writes a letter, gives it to Bill to mail. He feels he has lost his son's confidence.

CHAPTER VII

WHEN Bill left the house next morning he had every intention of dropping Buck's letter into the first mailbox. But before he could do so, Drowsy Peters moped up beside him. "How's the great lover?" "Don't kid," Bill begged. "I'm too low to take it." "Me, too," Drowsy said. "I saw Helen last night." "How is she?" "Lousy. She's been crying. You know, Bill, I feel like a heel. I got you to go after Dot. Now I wish I'd shut up. Can she really help Buck?" "I've got to risk it," Bill said. "It's our only chance." Drowsy shrugged. "I hope she ain't just stringing you along, kid."

BILL thought about this remark all during classes. At noon he managed to see Dot for a moment and she agreed to meet him after school.

When Bill arrived for work, Julius Peskin was waiting at the door to pounce on him. "You've got a nerve, Mentor," he shrielled. "Coming here after the way you brutally assaulted Walton!"

"I hit him just once, Mr. Peskin," Bill said quietly. "In self-defense."

"Ha! You stole his girl, didn't you?"

Bill saw that it was useless to try to explain. "That needn't affect my job here, Mr. Peskin. I'll work harder than ever if you'll let me stay."

"Should have thought of that before you struck Walton," Peskin snapped. "You can finish the week out, Mentor, while I get a new boy. Now get busy polishing that dirty fountain!"

The fountain was not dirty, but Bill polished it vigorously. His first thought was that maybe Dot would explain to Peskin. But, like Drowsy, he was beginning to wonder about her powers. Suppose she was just stringing him along? Bill's knuckles whitened. Tonight he'd find out for sure.

But Dot shied away from a direct commitment and turned on the tears.

"Bill, how can you doubt me so? Didn't I have Landis fired? Haven't I been talking to Father all day about Buck Mentor?"

Dot sank down on the bench in front of Peskin's. With her head to Bill, she assumed a crushed attitude. Bill said desperately. "Look, Dot, I didn't mean to be ungrateful. Honestly, but Buck and I are in a tough spot to find another job."

"I—I can't perform a miracle in a few hours, Bill."

"What did your father say when you talked to him?" Bill asked, apace.

Dot hesitated. She was undisputed queen of West high. During her reign only one boy had ever resisted her charms. Only one had ever questioned her power. That boy sat by her side now, still doubting her ability to rule her small domain. Dot rose to the challenge with a toss of her auburn hair.

"Bill Mentor, I'm getting sick and tired of your questions! If you don't choose to believe me, why, we'll just drop the whole matter."

It was his last straw of hope. Bill clutched it. "Don't be sore, Dot. I—I believe you."

He heard footsteps, and as he turned his head bounded into his throat. "Helen!"

She said, "Yes, Bill, I came down to see you. I'm sorry, but I overheard what you just said."

BILL was so glad to see her he couldn't speak. He realized how badly he needed someone to confide in, someone he could trust. Her loyalty made his cheeks burn.

"It—it was swell of you to come," he muttered.

Dot bounced to her feet. "Well, I guess I'm intruding."

"No, you're not," Helen said crisply. She moved closer to Dot, her face white and set. "It's time you were honest with Bill."

"I like that!" Dot flared. "What business is it of yours how I treat Bill?"

"I happen to really like Bill," Helen said. "And I don't want to see him made a fool of by someone who makes promises just to keep a boy interested. Bill was the only boy in school who didn't jump when you snapped your fingers, so you decided to make him jump."

"That's not true," Dot spoke defiantly, but her eyes avoided Helen's.

"Oh, but it is, Dot. Bill's poor. He hasn't much time or money to spend on a girl. What other reason could you have for wanting to go out with him?"

Bill interrupted feebly. "Dot's promised to help Buck, Helen."

"Yes, I know all about that," Helen said grimly. She turned to Bill. "You're smart, Bill. Can't you see how ridiculous it is for her to pretend she can run the school board?"

"She helped get Landis fired," Bill objected.

"Oh, Bill, where's your common sense? Landis was fired because he was a bad coach, because Pat Hurly and every West high supporter wanted him to go. Dot had nothing to do with that?"

Husky H-SU Tackles

TRUETT RATTAN

BOB RUSS

Bob Russ, San Angelo senior, and Truett Rattan, Matador junior, are hustling contenders for tackle berths on the Hardin-Simmons University grid machine. Russ and Rattan are 200-pound twins in the forward wall of Coach Frank Kimbrough's eleven at Abilene.

"Is . . . that true?" Bill demanded.

"You can believe her if you like," Dot retorted. "I'm sick of this childish talk. I'm going home."

Helen planted herself squarely in front of Dot. "Bill and I are going with you."

"Why, you're—you're crazy!" Dot gasped.

"What's the idea, Helen?" Bill asked, puzzled.

"We'll settle this now, Bill. If you don't see Mr. Skelton, you'll always think Dot might have helped Buck. The only way to find out is to ask him."

"He—he's not home," Dot said. Suddenly Bill realized that Helen was right. Dot might be lying, but J. Conrad Skelton would tell the truth. "We can wait for your father Dot," Bill said.

Dot was almost whimpering. "I—I don't want you to. I won't be bullied."

"We're going anyway," Bill said stubbornly. "I've got to know where we stand tonight."

WALKING next to Helen, Bill felt free of worry and doubts. If Dot had been lying to him all along, he could take it better with Helen by his side.

They reached the big house and Dot sullenly showed them into the library. J. Conrad Skelton sat at his desk. He was a tall, thin man, with a gold-rimmed eyeglasses set atop an ascetic nose. Pursing his lips, he said coldly. "What is the meaning of this intrusion, Dorothea?"

Bill stepped forward. "I'm Mentor, sir, and this is Helen Welch."

Skelton frowned. "Mentor, eh? As, yes, your father wrote me last summer about a job." He paused. "Recently, I believe, you were involved in a fight over my daughter. Reprehensible, Mentor."

Bill just has to know whether his father has a chance for the job of coaching West.

"What impudence!" Skelton snapped. "You come here at 11 o'clock and ask me to divulge board business. Dorothea, take them to the door."

"That's not fair!" Helen protested hotly. "It's Dot's fault we're here, Mr. Skelton. She promised Bill that you'd give Buck a chance."

J. Conrad Skelton scowled. "Is that true, Dorothea?"

"Why—why, I . . ." "I'll discuss this matter with you later, Dorothea. Leave the room."

Skelton turned to Helen and Bill. "Let me assure you that my daughter does not direct the activities of the board. If what she said misled you, I'm sorry. But I pride myself upon being a just man. For this reason I feel that it is only fair to inform you of the truth. At no time since the resignation of Mr. Landis has the board considered the name of Buck Mentor."

Undoubtedly his manpower, his resources and his ponderous armed strength would have been sufficient to make an axis thrust in that direction promptly effective and cut the British empire in two, rendering it virtually helpless. There seems to be only one answer: Stalin is craftily waiting for the warring nations to exhaust themselves against each other and then step in and grab the loot.
