Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

The president's inaugural address to the American people to justify the nation's defense in the cause of the democratic way of life, and a rebirth of the democratic spirit was a message to the real defense of this nation. Only by maintaining the integrity of the democratic way of life, processes by which it states and the individual it means, is that defense worthy. If America resort to the ways of dictatorialships, if tyranny rule by unrestricted fiat essential to the preservation of the geographical form of the national unity, then the battle into which we have entered is useless. We best, under such circumstances, simply to accept the rule of the masters of an armed Europe. It would be more economical, far more practical.

at the real fight which America is making is a fight to preserve and preserve a way of life which we believe of the most in security and opportunity for the advancement of civilization. Unless individual American is prepared to sacrifice for the good of the individual and the ideals for which the individuals are organized in democracy, there is no reason for the vast and effort upon which this nation has embarked. In that find the real issue of the struggle. And in the minds of the Americans today, as never before, we shall find the answer to the question of whether or not 150 years of democratic patriotism has not been a failure.

material, the construction of armaments, the training of millions of men, the organization of industry into an enormous production can be as well if not better achieved under dictatorship. The task before America is to show to the world that democracy can give them superbly better the infusion of a national organization the underdog and unconquerable soul.

WILLKIE WILL TAKE MESSAGE TO CHURCHILL

Confers With President on European War Situation

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Wendell Willkie will take a personal message from President Roosevelt to Prime Minister Churchill of England.

The president interrupted work on his inaugural address Sunday to pen the message in his own hand and gave it to Willkie during a brief conference they held at the White House.

The two men who battled for the presidency in last fall's political campaign talked in Mr. Roosevelt's oval study for about thirty minutes. Secretary of State Cordell Hull was with them.

"We talked about the European situation," Willkie told reporters as he left, "and the president gave me a very pleasant personal note to Mr. Churchill. It is more than just a formal introduction."

The message was addressed, "Dear Churchill," Willkie declined to reveal the contents.

The envelope containing the note was addressed "to a certain naval person, kindness of W. Willkie," Churchill formerly was first lord of the admiralty and shares Mr. Roosevelt's interest in ships.

Willkie said he outlined to the president his plans for the forthcoming two-week tour of England, advising the chief executive that he wanted to talk with all the officials who could see him and that he particularly wished to confer with Ernest Bevin, minister of labor, and Anthony Eden, foreign minister. He will leave by clipper Wednesday.

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, gave this description of the meeting between the president and the 1940 republican presidential nominee:

"I won't be long—I know what it is to be interrupted while laboring on a speech," Willkie said at his entrance. Mr. Roosevelt extended his hand and said he was glad to see Mr. Willkie.

Before going to the White House, Hull and Willkie discussed both the European and the far eastern situations in a conference at the secretary's hotel suite which lasted nearly two hours.

DEMOCRACY NOT DYING, HE DECLARES

Inaugural Crowd Told Processes Are Still Vital

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 20.—"Democracy is not dying!"

With that ringing declaration as the theme of his unprecedented third inaugural address, President Roosevelt told a vast capital throng today that America has demonstrated its ability to survive crisis at home, and that the task before it today is to summon the spirit and resources of America to the task of protecting and preserving it against disruption from without.

Most vital to that task, the president declared, is the experience of this democracy in surviving domestic perils by the enterprise of the American people through the three-way framework of the American constitution. Freedom of elections, of individual initiative and speech and press have been maintained, he declared.

The task before Americans, the president continued, will be accomplished through the same constitutional processes. As in the past, it will be carried out by the expression of a free majority.

He pictured America as the historic construction of the democratic ideal that has been carried forward in the struggles of people for freedom throughout the ages, and summoned the spirit and faith of America to the preservation of that freedom in the ringing tones of a challenge to the growing concept that tyranny and dictatorships have become the only hope of civilization.

At the same time he declared that the hopes of this democracy "cannot tolerate either undeserved poverty or self-serving wealth."

Material help alone is not sufficient, he said. A rebirth of the spirit of America is essential. "If the spirit of America were killed, even though the body and the mind lived on, democracy in America would have perished."

Again: "The preservation of the spirit and the faith of America does and will furnish the highest justification for every sacrifice we may make in the cause of national defense."

"In the face of perils never before faced our steady purpose is to protect and perpetuate the integrity of democracy. For this we master the spirit of America and the faith of America. We do not retreat. We are not content to stand still. As Americans we go forward in the service of our country by the will of God."

BAND CLINIC TO BE HELD IN CISCO SOON

The Cisco Lobo band will be host to a band clinic to be held at the high school January 30 at 7 p. m. The clinic band will be composed of 90 members, with the Lobo band as a nucleus. The band will be composed of musicians from the Breckenridge high school band, Brownwood high school band, Eastland high school band, DeLeon high school band and the Cisco Lobo band.

The entire bands from each of these towns will be present, but only 90 members will play, the rest will observe. Besides these bands who have already indicated that they will be here, the following bands and directors will also be invited: Albany, Baird, Clyde, Anson, Dublin, Hico, Goldthwaite, and possibly others.

The music to be worked on will be from this year's contest list. The clinic directors will be: Director J. C. Burkett Breckenridge, Director Ed Thompson, Brownwood, Director Moreland Baldwin, Eastland, Director M. G. Smoot, DeLeon, and Director R. I. Collier, Cisco. Each director will work the band on one number.

The regional contest is to be in Abilene this year and the national contest will be at Waco. The state clinic will also be in Waco February 13, 14 and 15.

Sailors Held In Tearing of Nazi Swastika

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Jan. 20 (AP)—Two American sailors who cut a swastika flag from the mast of the German consulate here waited action by naval authorities Sunday, while the state department expressed regret to Germany over the incident.

The state department extended regrets after receiving a note from the German embassy. An official spokesman in Berlin had said that the episode had created a very bad impression in Berlin and that there should be an apology.

In diplomatic usage, an expression of regret is just that and not an apology. Ordinarily, a government does not formally apologize for an incident if it regards it as the act of an individual.

The sailors, Harold James Sturtevant, 2, of Harverhill, Mass., and E. G. Lackey, 23, of Charlotte, N. C., were visited in the city jail by navy officers but there was no official navy comment concerning their adventure nine stories above a downtown street Saturday.

Lieut. Marshall Smith, aide to the Twelfth Naval district commandant here, said that the navy would have nothing to say until the facts are sifted.

Sturtevant and Lackey, held on a charge of malicious mischief, were docketed to appear before the Police Judge Alfred J. Fritz. Lieut. Smith said the judge probably would turn them over to the navy for disciplinary action.

BRITISH DRIVE RELENTLESSLY INTO ETHIOPIA

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 20 (AP)—British motorized units pursuing fleeing Italian soldiers along the 200-mile Sudanese front were believed Sunday night to have crossed the border into Italian East Africa after forcing the fascists from Kassala, the last Anglo-Egyptian Sudan city held by Premier Mussolini's men.

Their position precarious after weeks of constant patrol action by the British, the Italians withdrew three days ago from Kassala, only fifteen miles from Italian Eritrea. It was only Sunday, however, that the British announced recapture of the town the Italians had captured last July.

The Italians were said to have left Kassala, capital of a valuable cotton-growing section, almost without firing a shot.

Ethiopian irregulars operating in the fascist rear were believed partly responsible for this withdrawal. With the British constantly reinforcing positions around the town, and the enemy lurking along their communications in the rear, the Italians were said to have found it difficult to hold the post.

Abandonment of Kassala was believed to mean the Italians had dropped any idea of attacking the Sudan from this region.

Apparently satisfied with the Libyan offensive in north Africa, the British were said to be striking heavily at Italian East Africa, with light tanks and armored cars leading the eastward movement.

The Italians cut British railway communications and began building strong defenses when they occupied Kassala. They were believed to have maintained about a brigade of troops in the area since its capture.

The British in July had only a small force in the Sudan and the fascists were reported preparing for a 260-mile drive across the desert to Khartoum.

But the fascist offensive never materialized, and as the British strength grew their position became worse.

WTCC Message Congratulates Gov. O'Daniel

ABILENE, Jan. 20 (Spc)—The West Texas chamber of commerce sent hearty commendation and congratulations to Governor W. Lee O'Daniel on the good government section of his message to the Texas legislature.

The chief executive asked the two houses for legislation encompassing budgetary and other fiscal reforms in the state government—"all squarely in line with our organization's recommendations," said J. S. Bridwell, WTCC president. Bridwell said:

"We are gratified to hear the governor stress the need for these badly needed administrative changes, such as a more effective budget control system with a complete executive budget and creation of new post of budget director; such as independent post-auditing of state expenditures and making the state auditor an appointee and agent of the legislature; a merit system for employment of state personnel; and broadened responsibilities and leadership for both the executive and the legislature."

"All of these essential points," Bridwell continued, "are contained in the good government program put forward by the West Texas chamber of commerce following our Big Spring convention and

Petaim and Laval Reconciled in Meeting Sunday

VICHY, France, Jan. 20 (AP)—Pierre Laval began a comeback in the Vichy government Sunday as Chief of State Marshal Philippe Petaim announced he had talked with his former foreign minister and vice premier and that their misunderstandings have been dispelled.

The announcement opened the way for Laval's return to the government and indicated that French-German negotiations, which stalled as soon as he broke with Petaim last December 13, would be resumed.

For that reason particularly, observers here regarded the meeting as of prime importance. It is believed now that the principal German objection to continuing collaboration discussions—Laval's black Friday resignation—soon will be removed.

The reconciliation took place aboard Petaim's private train in the village of La Ferte, the last French settlement before the line separating occupied and unoccupied France.

Laval, who had come from Paris—wearing, as usual, his famous white necktie—was waiting when the Marshal's train arrived and boarded it immediately for an interview, which lasted an hour and twenty-five minutes. Petaim was in civilian clothes.

After the meeting Laval returned to Paris and Petaim continued by train to Sainte Germaine Des Fosses, where he took an automobile back to Vichy.

Great secrecy has cloaked the movements of French officials in the last few days, but observers noted that Admiral Jean Darlan,

Greeks Beat Off Italian Attempt

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 20 (AP)—An Italian attempt to recapture important heights held by the Greeks north of the Albanian city of Kilsura was beaten off with Italian losses of men and material, it was reported here Sunday.

Greek sources said their soldiers waited in snowbound positions until the Italian counterattacks approached very near. Then the Greeks opened up with heavy fire, driving the fascists back.

The weather along the whole front continued severe, with a snowstorm blowing over most of the fighting ground. The Greeks said these bad conditions restricted activities to local operations and artillery duties.

The March of America

WHY work?

Because there is something in man that makes him not content to live like the beasts of the field. Man wants more than that and seeing the broad world and all its opportunities for producing the things he wants, he works, and produces them. Over thousands of years, this work becomes systematized to produce more and better things. That organization of work we call an economic system.

The work system, the economic system, that we have developed here in America during the past 300 years has come in for heavy criticism, for it has developed grave defects.

But it also has shown remarkable achievements, some of which were recently summarized by the New York Sun:

In 1900, for instance, there were 8000 automobiles in use; in 1941 there are 25,000,000.

In 1900 there were 1,000,000 telephones; in 1941 there are 20,400,000.

In 1900 there were 1,000,000 televisions; in 1941 there are more than 16,000,000 such owners.

In 1910 there were 16,372,000 savings accounts; in 1941 there are 46,000,000.

In 1920 some 10,581,700 Americans owned their own homes; in 1941 there are 14,000,000 home-owners.

In 1920 there were 10,000 electric refrigerators; in 1941 there are more than 14,000,000.

If the purpose of an economy is to produce goods and get them into the hands of people who can use them, then this is a record without parallel. True, we have had a virgin continent to exploit, and many natural advantages. But when one thinks that material achievements of this magnitude have been attained by free men living under a system of free government and economy, he is less likely to be impressed by what dictator-ridden governments promise. The Germans are still waiting for the Volksauto.

An economy which has produced these fabulous floods of goods and distributed them so widely has something more substantial than the promise of dictators.

We have not come far enough. But having come so far, we can't be on the wrong road entirely. The future course of that road may not be straight ahead on the line of the past. It may have curves and dips. But it has carried us too far through too green a country to encourage indiscriminate starving into bypaths.

The New Order in Europe looks to us like the New Disorder.

Don't tell us the British can't play baseball. They're certainly catching a lot of high flies these days.

All roads lead to Rome, the ancients said. Greeks and British have found out it's still true, even in Albania and Lybya.

You never hear straight talk in a crooked deal.

That practice in jumping over bayonets that the Italian big-shots used to get must come in handy in Albania.

The British did a neat job of adding "ia" to bombard.

Coffeyville, Kan., dairyman feeds his herd 224 loaves of bread daily. The cows furnish the butter.

So many people really need sympathy you shouldn't waste any on yourself.

Illinois man missing with $10,000 was caught in Florida. That's carrying things too far.

Inaugural Stand

South Is Land of Opportunity For America

The south is America's great new industrial frontier! This is the message of the leading article in the latest issue of "The Advertiser," national magazine of the advertising business, and the statement comes from an authoritative source. The author is Allen T. Preyer, executive vice-president of the Vick Chemical company, former chairman of the board of the Association of National Advertisers, and a business man of national prominence.

"The south has advanced industrially while other sections of the nation have stood still or declined," declares Mr. Preyer. "Government statistics on manufacturing, from 1900 to 1937, reveal a steady and sustained progress for the south. The impetus of this progress, backed by new and increasing industrial opportunities, was sufficient to carry the region through the recent depression to 1937, with a loss of only three per cent of the value of its products from 1929. The loss by the rest of the nation, on the other hand, amounted to 14 per cent."

Why southern business weathered the depression better than the nation as a whole, Mr. Preyer can state from experience. His own firm, the Vick chemical company, of Greensboro, North Carolina, chose the hard economic times of 1931 to bring out two entirely new products, Vicks Vapo-rub for nose and throat, and Vics medicated cough drops, supplementing the well-known Vicks Vapo-rub salve. With Vicks, as with many another aggressive southern business, sales and pay-rolls rose steadily throughout the depression.

"The ten-year period just closed (1930-1940) has represented a decade of progress for the south, for it has brought numerous beneficial readjustments," says Mr. Preyer. Especially important is the widespread diversification of industry, which has proved a stabilizing influence. "Among the industries that have brought diversification and expansion in the south are kraft pulp and paper, rayon, petroleum refining, other heavy industries and textiles."

In proving that industry is now Dixie-bound, Mr. Preyer points out that more than $186,000,000 was spent in process industries for new plants and modernization in the south—a sum which was $60,000,000 greater than that spent in all the rest of the country combined.

"The industrial strides made by the south have been reflected in the whole economic life of the region," says the writer. "The aggregate resources of southern banks in 1938, for example, increased by more than six hundred million dollars over 1931. The total federal internal revenue payments increased from $522,166,000 in 1931 to $1,357,516,442 in 1938. Life insurance in force rose during this period by nearly four hundred million dollars, and total wages paid in industry increased by some one-half billion dollars."

"What lies ahead for the south? There are definite signs that even now point the way to new and..."

Army's Need for More Nurses Is Pressing Now

An urgent need for additional nurses to be commissioned in the army's nurses' corps has been created by the establishment of several new hospitals, together with the expansion of the existing ones, at army camps and stations. This need is especially acute, according to Colonel W. L. Hart, corps area surgeon, in the Eighth corps area, which includes the states of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Oklahoma and Colorado, so many military activities having been concentrated there with troops from northern states undergoing winter training.

The principal source of nurses for the army nurses' corps reserve is among those who have registered for such service with the Red Cross. This source, however, is not adequate in the present emergency, and in order to meet it the secretary of war has authorized the commissioning as second lieutenants of any nurses who meet army standards.

Active service as a reserve nurse must be on a voluntary basis for at least one year. To be eligible nurses must be single, between 21 and 40 years of age, and able to meet the required standards of physical fitness. They must be graduates of approved schools of nursing and registered as provided for in state laws. Only American citizens are acceptable. The duties of army nurses are very similar to the duties of civilian hospital nurses. The initial rate of pay is $70 per month, plus full maintenance and travel expenses.

To meet this problem, Miss Jane Murray and Miss Rosa Schladow, nursing consultants for the American Red Cross, are now visiting all nursing schools, hospital centers and Red Cross chapters in this corps area, for the purpose of obtaining additional applications for duty as nurses. A special section on nursing has been established in the office of the surgeon, Eighth corps area, Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where applications for service and information are receiving daily attention.

AID-BRITISH BILL FIGHT SHAPING UP ALONG PARTY LINES, POSSIBLY AT PRESIDENT'S WISH

WASHINGTON.—The fight over President Roosevelt's aid-democracy bill is shaping up as a straight party fight—and Republicans are beginning to suspect the administration planned it that way from the start.

Here is the way one Republican prominent in his party's leadership in the House analyzes what he believes to be administration strategy:

"First of all, we had Mrs. Roosevelt's piece complaining that none of the Republicans applauded the President's message."

"Next the President invited congressional leaders in to confer about this bill. He had all the Democratic leaders from both houses, and apparently took great pains to shape the bill by their advice—but he didn't have in one Republican."

"Next the bill was introduced—not, as you would expect, by the chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, or with any measure of bi-partisan sponsorship, but by the Democratic floor leaders."

"In other words, it has been made strictly a Democratic party bill from the beginning. And we Republicans are rising to the bait."

Catton

KEEPING DEMOCRATS TOEING THE MARK

MAKING a break along party lines might have two advantages, from a purely political standpoint.

In the first place, the Democrats have plenty of votes in each house to pass the bill without Republican help—provided all of the Democrats can be kept in line. On a bi-partisan issue, any Democrat who felt doubtful about the bill could vote against it without getting a black mark on his party record, simply because all party lines would be down anyhow. On a straight party measure, introduced by the floor leader and backed by energetic party leadership, a Democrat would join the opposition at his own peril.

Beyond that, a party break would definitely put the Republican party—as far as Congress is concerned—in the position of being the party of the isolationists. The New Deal is operating on the theory that a large majority of Americans support the aid-democracy idea, and during the last campaign repeatedly charged that the Republicans are on the other side of that particular fence.

Lastly, getting the Republicans thus on record might kill the political futur- of Mr. Wendell Willkie. Republican support for the bill could hardly have been so without swinging a beam or two from the spotlight on Mr. Willkie. Putting the party on the opposite side would pretty well end his claims to party leadership.

VORYS CALLS IT A SHOWDOWN

THE fight in Congress will be bitter, and there will be strong efforts to amend the bill. But Congressman Vorys of Ohio, who successfully led the fight to amend the bill which revised the neutrality act, doesn't think amending the present bill would help much.

"This is the showdown," he says. "This is the one time Congress gets to pass on the whole policy of aid for Great Britain—with all of its implications. There's little point to amendments. It's the basic policy party on the things they are likely to come from following it that matters. Here's where we decide on the whole business—and no congressman will be able to say, afterward, that he didn't know it was loaded."

expanding fields of development. Again it appears that pulp manufacture—newsprint from southern pine, and sulphate pulp from the region's $200,000,000 rayon industry—will be the explosive spark to set off the new advance.

Development of these new fields not only for the south, but for the economic life of the whole nation. In fact, asserts Mr. Preyer, "the picture of the south today is a welcome reassurance that opportunity its still very much alive in this country of ours."

SERIAL STORY

CONSCRIPT'S WIFE

BY BETTY WALLACE

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: After her visit to camp, Martha settles down to a quieter life, takes up bowling and knitting. Paul doesn't call often, apparently accepts the situation. But one night he drops in. "You're going to the country club dance with me," he announces. Martha is glad he insists. The party will be fun.

MUSIC FOR MARTHA CHAPTER XIII

THE country club was blazing with lights as Paul nosed the car into the long, curving driveway. The white building with its tall columns stood out against the dark sky, on the slight rise of hill, like a southern manor house in a moving picture.

Martha Marshall, her red hair piled high in curls, Paul's orchid on her shoulder, caught her breath with a sudden, guilty start. "I'm here, all dressed up and going to have a good time, while Bill's in that camp!"

But a moment later, as Paul was helping her out and they mounted the stairs together, the guilt died down. She had been so starved for fun, all these weeks! Paul smiled down at her. "You'll be the loveliest thing here."

Martha knew she looked well. The white dress, with its softly draped V and its tiny stars winking among the wispy folds of the full skirt, had always been very becoming. Her silver sandals were new. She felt light as a feather, poised, happy.

A girl in glittering sequin jacket looked at her curiously for a moment. Martha saw the fleeting homage in her eyes—the homage that one woman pays to another who looks even more beautiful. She was ridiculously pleased, and a little smile tugged at the corners of her lips.

Paul was saying, "I've reserved a table. That is, we're with a party, Ted Willis and Madge, and the Graces."

"Oh," he hadn't told her before, because she had known them all only during the time when she had been engaged to Paul. They were his friends, not hers. Bill had never met them.

BUT Madge Willis was cordial, and her husband, Ted, claimed Martha at once for a dance. "I don't get a chance like this often. Say, you're looking marvelous!" Mary Grace only smiled at her, lazily. Mary had always been like that—off-hand, casual, accepting things at their face. Probably nothing interested her very much except clothes. She and Jack were immensely wealthy.

It was good to be dancing again. Good to be part of this gay, care-free crowd, good to hear music and smile up at a partner who hummed under his breath and had nothing more important on his mind than enjoying himself.

"Long time no see," Ted said, after a while. "What happened to the husband?"

It was not that he cared, especially. In this country club crowd it was extremely usual to attach no importance to the fact that a married woman appeared at a dance with an old friend.

"The husband's in the army," she laughed. "Didn't you know?"

"No, I hadn't heard." He shook his head, in exaggerated concern. "Country's going to the dogs. They'd better not get after me!"

Paul claimed her for the next dance. They had always danced beautifully together. She gave herself up to enjoyment.

Someone tapped Paul. "You can't keep loveliness like that under a bushel basket, Elliott," said a tall man with tawny hair. "Come to me, beautiful!"

She smiled at Paul, helplessly. The man led her off in triumph, but half way across the room, Jack Grace cut in.

"I thought people weren't supposed to cut any more," Martha said. "It was too collegiate, or something."

"Rules are made to be broken. Ah, this is what I call dancing!" "Look out," she warned him. "Paul's coming back!"

"That," said Jack, "is much too blatant an infraction of the law. Out the door, baby." Expertly, he danced her through the open French door to the veranda.

"We'll admire the moon." "No, you don't," Paul said, behind them. "Give her back, sir!"

It was silly, maybe. But it was fun. When Paul left her for a moment to get her something to eat, a red-haired young person sidied up and suggested, "Run away with me? This is my evening for running away."

"I'd love to," she laughed. "But I'm chained. Besides, we'd look so odd. Two brick tops."

"We'd look beautiful together!" he said. "If you won't run away, at least dance with me. That'll give my girl something to think about."

"What did she do, run away with someone else?" "You're a mind reader." Paul rescued her, two minutes later.

Madge and Mary went to look a fright. I haven't repaired my complexion all evening.

Martha realized, with amazement, that it was nearly 1 o'clock. "Where did the time go? We just came!"

She held out her hand. "My hankie, please!" In lieu of an evening bag, she had wrapped her compact and comb and the gift tube of lipstick in a wisp of chiffon, which Paul had obligingly stowed away in a pocket. "I must

Calling All Defense Workers

TO ALL DEFENSE WORKERS . . .

The President of the United States said:

"I APPEAL . . .

"to the owners of plants
to the managers to the workers
to our own Government employees to put every ounce of effort into producing these munitions swiftly and without stint. And with this appeal I give you the pledge that all of us who are officers of your Government will devote ourselves to the same whole-hearted extent to the great task which lies ahead.
We must be the great arsenal of democracy. For us this is an emergency as serious as war itself. We must apply ourselves to our task with the same resolution, the same sense of urgency, the same spirit of patriotism and sacrifice as we would show were we at war."

Let's get squarely behind our President's appeal.

Let's work together building that "GREAT ARSENAL OF DEMOCRACY" in record time.

Increase PRODUCTION! - That's our No. 1 job!

Let's go!

Addressed "To All Defense Workers," this poster calling for "all-out" effort in munition production was issued by William S. Knudsen, production chief, for display in all plants with defense contracts. It quotes from President Roosevelt's Dec. 29th speech in which he urged the U. S. be made a "great arsenal for democracy."

carried to our people in a series of regional meetings. Our program and plan, containing all of the points stressed in the executive's message, are brought to a head by a bill by Rep. Joe Humphrey of Abilene. The bill has been drawn and is ready for submission when the organization of the lower house has been completed.

"A high official of the WTCC is Judge Jas. D. Hamlin of Farwell. The WTCC's campaign for reorganized budgetary and financing practices in the state government was launched under leadership of Hamlin's commission on public expenditure. Hamlin said:

"The Humphrey bill, if enacted now, will fully meet the governor's desires as expressed in his message Thursday. We believe the bill will meet the desires of the taxpayers of Texas, in whose interest—the elimination of duplications, inefficiencies and wasteful spending—the West Texas chamber of commerce plan was devised and from which the bill was drawn.

"Our measure has attracted an immense public showing. We have endorsements by boards of directors of more than one hundred organizations, many of statewide scope, and of taxpayers' groups. We believe sentiment for enactment of the Humphrey bill will sweep the state when the committees of the two houses get down to work upon it and it is shown how completely we have thought out the problem and offered a sound, workable, constitutional remedy."

STORIES IN STAMPS

First New World Colony Located in Greenland

GREENLAND, icy island inside the Arctic Circle, assumes new importance in America's hemisphere defense program, for Greenland is a Danish possession and Denmark is under German rule. The Danish king, Christian X, is pictured on the stamp above.

Greenland's first individual stamp issues were released in 1938. The set of seven values appeared in two designs, the portrait of the king, and a picture of a polar bear on an ice floe.

Although the island boasts only 17,000 residents today, it is the site of the first attempts at European colonization in the New World. Settlements there antedate Spanish and English colonization by 500 years.

Eric the Red, Viking adventurer, explored the country in 982, named it Greenland to attract colonists. He returned in 985, founded colonies. Soon there were 3000 settlers on the island.

For 400 years the colonies remained in existence. But when the island was "re-discovered" in 1498 all traces of the settlements had disappeared. Modern colonization began in 1721.

Greenland's great ice pack has been called the world's best potential landing field.

Paths Veered, Now They Head To Common Goal

By TOM WOLF
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

The two gentlemen who are ordering your fighting planes, outfitting your new warships, providing your boys at camp—the large woolly, gruff-mannered gen' eman and the slight, darkish, curly-haired gentleman—are on their jobs promptly at 9 o'clock every morning.

They pass each other, as like as not, in a hall of the great white building that houses the national defense advisory commission in Washington, and they bow to each other and smile and say, "Good morning, Bill" and "Good morning, Sidney."

They titty proceed to their offices, which are as neat and orderly as your maiden aunt's boudoir, sit down to desks as clean and clear of left-overs as a Newfoundland dog's platter, and start their day's work—which is probably the most important work being done in America today.

They give orders with somewhat the same politeness and simplicity. They dispose of the mail before them with the magic given only to big-time executives. They hold face-to-face meetings with their co-workers in preference to phone conversations. They talk directly and briefly.

There end the similarities—temperamental, physical and philosophical—between these two important gentlemen.

For William S. Knudsen, director general of the office of production management, and his associate director general, Sidney Hillman, have traveled life roads so far apart that they weren't even within hailing distance until President Roosevelt summoned them to Washington, and—

But let Knudsen tell it: "The president informs me that my job is to equip twelve hundred thousand men with what they need to wear, carry, sleep in, eat and ride in, and I have to get heavy equipment of all kinds for eight hundred thousand more. THAT'S all my job is!"

And let Hillman tell it: "I have been asked by the president of the United States to serve as a defense commissioner. I shall consider it my first responsibility that the country is prepared to defend itself."

PATHS VEERED— THEN MET AGAIN

It's remarkable—if you'll look back to the arrival at Ellis Island early in the century of a frankly ambitious Danish bicycle mechanic and car-hating Lithuanian pants-cutter—that these two men who direct our national defense program ever met at all. For, once they had trudged through the portals of America, they set out upon extremely divergent paths.

The one path veered sharply to the left, and that was the path the socially conscious young Sidney Hillman took. This path led through an unhappy labyrinth of steam-filled cuttings rooms, of dingy, overcrowded loft buildings, of hectic garment workers' strike meetings, of feverish demonstrations in Union square, and finally to the creation of the populous and potent Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union.

The other path veered just as sharply to the right, and that was the path young Signius Wilhelm Poul Knudsen of Copenhagen chose. This path led to hard work, to the mastery of a trade through personal initiative, and to the consequent rewards: wealth and power in the best tradition of American success stories.

PULL TOGETHER LIKE DRAFT HORSES

Yet there these characteristically opposed met in Washington today—co-holders of the biggest, toughest, most complex, most urgent and most heartening job in the country—pulling together ("like a team of well-trained draft horses," says a colleague) to make impregnable this America which can be so many things to so many men.

If social compromises called for by exigencies of the national emergency ever cause Knudsen, long-time General Motors executive and one-time foe of unionism, and Hillman, successful builder and leader of unionism, to swallow hard and painfully, they don't do their swallowing in public.

For each now has dedicated himself to... production, production, production, production... and they are said to differ with surprising infrequency on the ways and means of obtaining that production.

Both are arch realists. Both hate futility. Both are "today men," Hillman, for example while certainly having strong socialist leanings, has never joined the party because he has conceived of his job as being that of securing better conditions for his people today—rather than holding out a rosy goal to be attained some future day.

Both also believe in the responsibility of labor. Either might have said: "With union membership constantly increasing through the mandate granted by law, a force as large as that has got to be either on the constructive or the destructive side. It has to understand the employer's position." Knudsen said this, but it is a fair description of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' dealings with business.

AMERICAN BY CHOICE

How does it happen that America has not hesitated to entrust her defense program into the hands of two immigrants? Sidney Hillman put his finger on the answer at a recent congressional hearing. A congressman was baiting him for his Russian birth. "Yes," replied Hillman bluntly, "I was a Russian by accident of birth. But I am an American by choice."

"Thanks. I think it was a conspiracy. Be kind to working girls tonight."

"With those eyes," said Mary Grace, calmly, "you need never worry."

"Eyes my foot! It's the girl's lutesome grace." Madge tittered. "I've gained two pounds and it's keeping me up nights."

"There's an exercise for that. You turn your head slowly from side to side when the bring up the whipped cream, darling."

THE Club Tortilla, at 2 in the morning, with Ricardo and Regina whirling in a rumba, was hard to leave. That's how it happened that dawn was definitely streaking the sky when Paul left Martha at her door.

"It's been wonderful, Paul!"

"You'd better sleep all day tomorrow."

But she had scarcely tumbled into bed—hardly closed her eyes—when the long, imperious ring of the phone woke her.

"At first she resisted it. She was so satisfyingly exhausted! But it kept on and on, and very she got up at last."

"Hello? Hello?" Her very voice was sleep.

"Hello, Martha!" She came awake with a start. It was Bill!

"Martha, where were you last night? I tried to get you until after midnight. I kept calling and the phone didn't answer!"

BEWARE NOW OF EPIDEMIC COLDS!

Here's Some Good Time-Tested Advice

With folks all around suffering with contagious colds, be just as careful as you can—and you may avoid a lot of sickness, trouble and worry. Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Beware of wet feet and drafts. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep. Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SIGN OF A SNIFGLE, SNEEZE OR NASAL IRRITATION... put a few drops of Vicks VapoRub up each nostril right away. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because VapoRub is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of VapoRub helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) depend on Vicks VapoRub to relieve misery. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warm cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a warming poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both VapoRub and VapoRoll have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks VapoRoll and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today.

ROOSEVELT CALLS FOR REBIRTH OF FAITH

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

The president's inaugural summons to the American people to justify the nation's sacrifices in the cause of the national defense with a firm faith in the democratic process and a rebirth of the democratic spirit was a summons to the real defense of this nation. Only by maintaining the integrity of our democratic way of life, the processes by which it operates and the individual freedom it means, is that defense worthy. If America must resort to the ways of the dictators, if tyranny and rule by unrestricted fiat are essential to the preservation of the geographical form and the national unity, then the battle into which we have entered is useless. We had best, under such circumstances, simply to accept the rule of the masters of an enslaved Europe. It would be far more economical, far more practical.

But the real fight which America is making is a fight to prove and preserve a way of life which we believe offers the most in security and opportunity for the advancement of civilization. Unless the individual American is prepared to sacrifice for the cause of the individual and the ideals for which the individuals are organized under democracy, there is no just reason for the vast and costly effort upon which this nation has embarked. In that we find the real issue of the hearts and minds of the Americans today, as never before, we shall find the answer to the question of whether or not 150 years of democratic patriotism has been right.

Material, the construction of vast armaments, the training of millions of men, the organization of industry into sources of enormous production can be as well if not better achieved under dictatorship. The task before America is to show to the world that democracy can achieve these results and make them superbly better by the infusion of a national faith and will which gives such organization the underlying and unconquerable soul.

It is ours to show to a chaotic world that although dictatorships and tyranny give men to arms, democracy gives arms to men.

BRITISH DRIVE RELENTLESSLY INTO ETHIOPIA

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 20 (AP).—British motorized units pursuing fleeing Italian soldiers along the 200-mile Sudanese front were believed Sunday night to have crossed the border into Italian East Africa after forcing the fascists from Kassala, the last Anglo-Egyptian Sudan city held by Premier Mussolini's men.

Their position precarious after weeks of constant patrol action by the British, the Italians withdrew from Kassala, only fifteen miles from Italian Eritrea. It was only Sunday, however, that the British announced recapture of the town the Italians had captured last July.

The Italians cut British railway communications and began building strong defenses when they occupied Kassala. They were believed to have maintained about a brigade of troops in the area since its capture.

DEMOCRACY NOT DYING, HE DECLARES

Inaugural Crowd Is Told Processes Are Still Vital

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 20.—"Democracy is not dying!"

With that ringing declaration as the theme of his unprecedented third inaugural address, President Roosevelt told a vast capital throng today that America has demonstrated its ability to survive crisis at home, and that the task before it today is to summon the spirit and resources of America to the task of protecting and preserving it against disruption from without.

Most vital to that task, the president declared, is the experience of this democracy in surviving domestic perils by the enterprise of the American people through the three-way framework of the American constitution. Freedom of elections, of individual initiative and speech and press have been maintained, he declared.

The task before Americans, the president continued, will be accomplished through the same constitutional processes. As in the past, it will be carried out by the expression of a free majority.

"Thanks. I think it was a conspiracy. Be kind to working girls, please."

"With those eyes," said Mary Grace, calmly, "you need never worry."

"Eyes my foot! It's the girlish lithesome grace," Madge uttered. "I've gained two pounds and it's keeping me up nights."

"There's an exercise for that. You turn your head slowly from side to side when the bring up the whipped cream, darling."

THE Club Tortilla, at 2 in the morning, with Ricardo and Regina whirling in a rumba, was hard to leave. That's how it happened that dawn was definitely stroking the sky when Paul left Martha at her door.

"It's been wonderful, Paul!"

"You'd better sleep all day tomorrow."

But she had scarcely tumbled into bed—hardly closed her eyes—when the long, imperious ring of the phone woke her.

At first, she resisted it. She was so satisfyingly exhausted! But it kept on and on, and she got up at last.

"Hello! Hello!" Her very voice was sleepy.

"Hello, Martha!" She came awake with a start. It was Bill!

"Martha, where were you last night? I tried to get you until after midnight. I kept calling and the phone didn't answer!"

Be Quick To Treat Bronchitis

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

carried to our people in a series of regional meetings. Our program and plan, containing all of the points stressed in the executive's message, are brought to a head by a bill by Rep. Joe Humphrey of Abilene. The bill has been drawn and is ready for submission when the organization of the lower house has been completed."

Another high official of the WTCC is Judge Jas. D. Hamlin of Farwell. The WTCC's campaign for reorganized budgetary and financing practices in the state government was launched under leadership of Hamlin's commission on public expenditure. Hamlin said:

"The Humphrey bill, if enacted now, will fully meet the governor's desires as expressed in his message Thursday. We believe the bill will meet the desires of the taxpayers of Texas, in whose interest—for the elimination of duplications, inefficiencies and a wasteful spending—the West Texas chamber of commerce plan was devised and from which the bill was drawn.

"Our measure has attracted an immense public showing. We have endorsements by boards of directors of more than one hundred organizations, many of statewide scope, and of taxpayers' groups. We believe sentiment for enactment of the Humphrey bill will sweep the state when the committees of the two houses get down to work upon it and it is shown how completely we have thought out the problem and offered a sound, workable, constitutional remedy."

STORIES IN STAMPS

First New World Colony Located in Greenland

GREENLAND, icy island in the Arctic Circle, assumes new importance in America's hemisphere defense program, for Greenland is a Danish possession and Denmark is under German rule. The Danish king, Christian X, is pictured on the stamp above. Greenland's first individual stamp issues were released in 1938. The set of seven values appeared in two designs, the portrait of the king, and a picture of a polar bear on an ice floe.

Although the island boasts only 17,000 residents today, it is the site of the first attempts at European colonization in the New World. Settlements there antedate Spanish and English colonization by 500 years.

Eric the Red, Viking adventurer, explored the country in 982, named it Greenland to attract colonists. He returned in 986, founded colonies. Soon there were 3000 settlers on the island.

For 400 years the colonies remained in existence. But when the island was "re-discovered" in 1585 all traces of the settlements had disappeared. Modern colonization began in 1721.

Greenland's great ice pack has been called the world's best potential landing field.

Paths Veered. Now They Head To Common Goal

By TOM WOLF
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent

The two gentlemen who are ordering your fighting planes, building your new warships, producing your new guns and outfitting your boy at camp—the large woolly, gruff-mannered gentleman and the slight, darkish, curly-haired gentleman—are on their jobs promptly at 9 o'clock every morning.

They pass each other, as like as not, in a hall of the great white building that house the national defense advisory commission in Washington, and they bow to each other and smile and say, "Good morning, Bill!" and "Good morning, Sidney."

They proceed to their offices, which are as neat and trim as your maiden aunt's boudoir, sit down to desks as clean and clear of left-overs as a Newfoundland dog's platter, and start their day's work—which is probably the most important work being done in America today.

They give orders with somewhat the same positiveness and simplicity. They dispose of the mail before them with the magic given only to big-time executives. They hold face-to-face meetings with their co-workers in preference to phone conversations. They talk directly and briefly.

There end the similarities—temperamental, physical and philosophical—between these two important gentlemen.

For William S. Knudsen, director general of the office of production management, and his associate director general, Sidney Hillman, have traveled life roads so far apart that they weren't even within hailing distance until President Roosevelt summoned them to Washington, and—

But let Knudsen tell it: "The president informs me that my job is to equip twelve hundred thousand men with what they need to wear, carry, sleep in, eat and ride in, and I have to get heavy equipment of all kinds for eight hundred thousand more. THAT'S all my job is!"

And let Hillman tell it: "I have been asked by the president of the United States to serve as a defense commissioner. I shall consider it my first responsibility that the country is prepared to defend itself."

PATHS VEERED— THEN MET AGAIN

It's remarkable—if you'll look back to the arrival at Ellis island early in the century of a frankly ambitious Danish bicycle mechanic and czar-hating Lithuanian pants-cutter—that these two men who direct our national defense program ever met at all. For, once they had trudged through the portals of America, they set out upon extremely divergent paths.

The one path veered sharply to the left, and that was the path the socially conscious young Sidney Hillman took. This path led through an unhappy labyrinth of steam-filled cuttings rooms, dingy, overcrowded loft buildings, of hectic garment workers' strike meetings, of feverish demonstrations in Union square, and finally to the creation of the populous and potent Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union.

The other path veered just as sharply to the right, and that was the path young Signus Wilhelm Knudsen of Copenhagen chose. This path led to hard work, to the mastery of a trade through personal initiative, and to the consequent rewards: wealth and power in the best tradition of American success stories.

PULL TOGETHER LIKE DRAFT HORSES

Yet there these characteristically opposed met in Washington today—co-holders of the biggest, toughest, most complex, most urgent and most heartening job in the country—pulling together ("like a team of well-trained draft horses," says a colleague) to make impregnable this America which can be so many things to so many men.

If social compromises called for by exigencies of the national emergency ever cause Knudsen, long-time General Motors executive and one-time foe of unionism, and Hillman, successful builder and leader of unionism, to swallow hard and painfully, they don't do their swallowing in public.

AMERICAN BY CHOICE

How does it happen that America has not hesitated to entrust her defense program into the hands of two immigrants? Sidney Hillman put his finger on the answer at a recent congressional hearing. A congressman was baiting him for his Russian birth. "Yes," replied Hillman heartily, "I was a Russian by accident of birth. But I am an American by choice."

For each now has dedicated himself to . . . production, production, production, production . . . and they are said to differ with surprising infrequency on the ways and means of obtaining that production.

Both are realists. Both hate futility. Both are "today men," Hillman, for example while certainly having strong socialist leanings, has never joined the party because he has conceived of his job as being that of securing better conditions for his people today—rather than holding out a rosy goal to be attained some future day.

Both also believe in the responsibility of labor. Either might have said: "With union membership constantly increasing through the mandate granted by law, a force as large as that has got to be either on the constructive side for the destructive side. It has to understand the employer's situation," Knudsen said this, it is a fair description of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' dealings with business.

BEWARE NOW OF EPIDEMIC COLDS!

Here's Some Good Time-Tested Advice

With folks all around suffering with contagious colds, be just as careful as you can—and you may avoid a lot of sickness, trouble and worry. Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Beware of wet feet and drafts. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SIGN OF A SNIFLE, SNEEZE OR NASAL IRRITATION . . . put a few drops of Vicks VapoRub up each nostril right away. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because VapoRub is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stiffness, you'll find that a few drops of VapoRub helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) depend on Vicks VapoRub to relieve misery. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warm cloth. VapoRub acts to relieve 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a warming poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both VapoRub and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks VapoRub and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today.
