NUMBER 142

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

When men go out to fight and die in all the hell and hurry of war, they do not always appreciate the fundamental issues upon which they are aligned. Their emotions and physical powers are marshalled under shibboleths, or war cries, inspired by these causes, but it is only after the struggle is over and sanity of mind and actions returns, that they settle down to consider what they were really fighting for and what they have accomplished by fighting.

In the following article in the Christian Advocate of January 16, Sec'y Cordell Hull arrays the true issues of the current war. As between democracy and totalitarianism, these issues present nothing new to a world that has constantly struggled toward freedom:

"There are at work in the world today powerful forces the significance of which no individual and no nation can ignore without falling into a position of the gravest danger and of the utmost jeopardy. These forces are not new in the experience of mankind. They rose on many occasions in the past, and for varying periods and with varying intensity, held sway over human affairs. They spring today from the same source from which they have always sprung in the past— from goddess and soulless lust for power which seeks to hold men in physical slavery and spiritual degradation and to displace a system of peaceful and orderly relations among nations by thearchy of wanton violence and brute force.

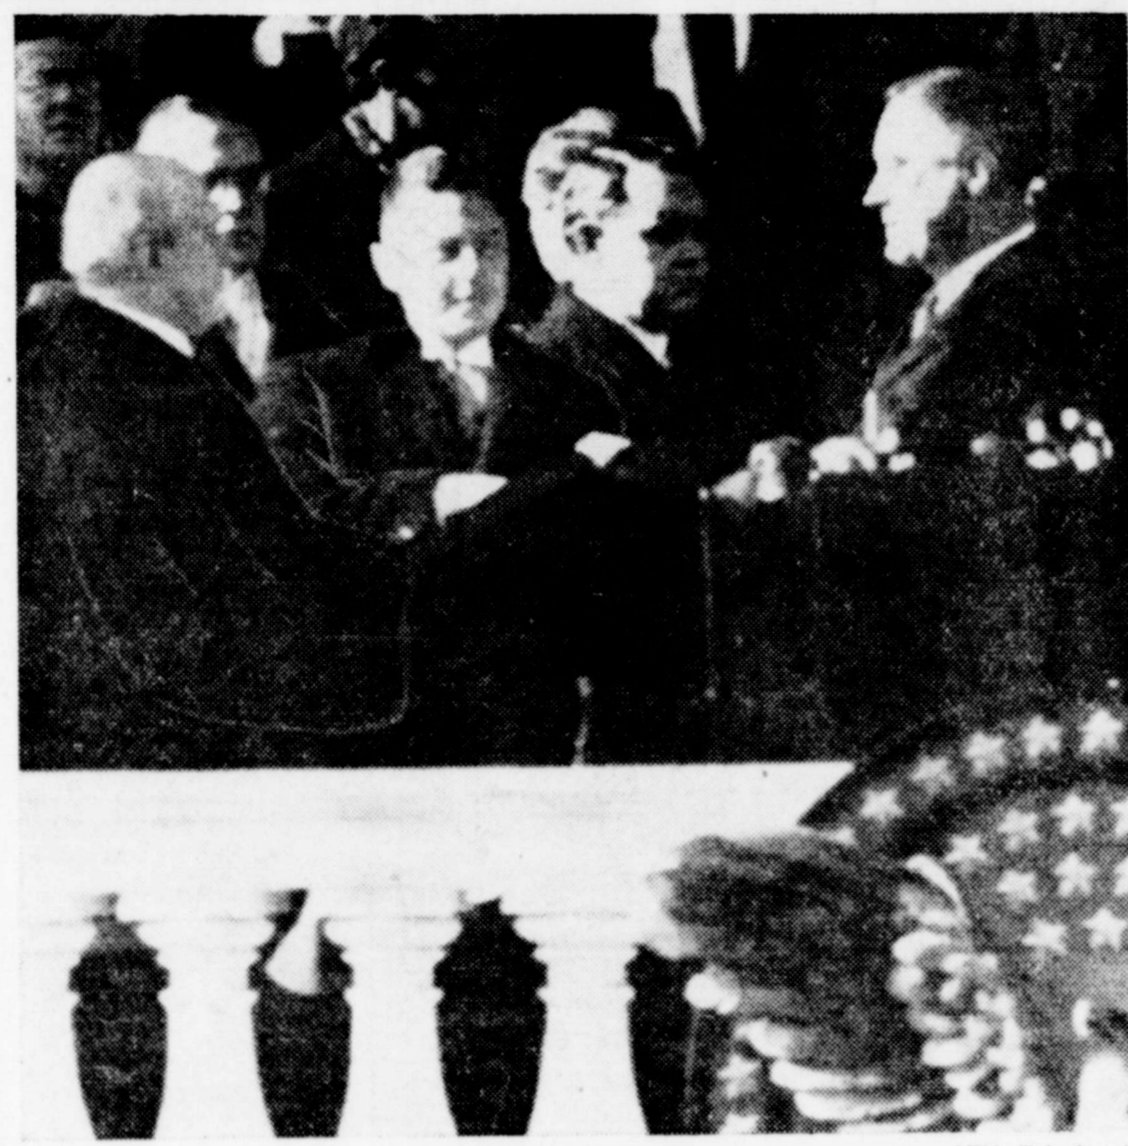

"These massed forces of lust for tyrannical power are directed against the very base of the way of life which has come to be the cherished ideal of a preponderant majority of mankind— against the moral, spiritual, social, political and economic foundations of modern civilization. Nation after nation has been crushed to surrender, overrun and enslaved by the exercise of brute force combined with fraud and guile. And as the dismal darkness descends upon more and more of the earth's surface, the menacing shadow falls blacker and blacker athwart our civilization. This very instinct of self-preservation bids us beware.

"We have the power to meet that menace successfully. For that we need material means of defense. These means we are creating them. But more than that is needed. "Men will defend to the utmost only that in which they have complete faith. No more vital test has ever confronted the American people than that which confronts it today. There are difficult and dangerous times ahead. Our national independence and our cherished institutions are not immune from the challenge of the lust for power that already stalks so much of the earth's surface. Unprecedented effort and heavy sacrifices will be required of us as the price of preserving, for ourselves and for our posterity, the kind of America that has been fostered and preserved for us by the vigilance, courage and sacrifice of those who preceded us. We shall succeed if we retain unimpaired the most precious heritage which they bequeathed us—an unshakable faith in the everlasting worth of freedom and honor, of truth and justice, of intellectual and spiritual integrity, a triumphant faith in God.

"Without that faith, no material means of defense will suffice. With it, we need fear no enemy outside or within our borders. "We need today a resurgence of spiritual purpose and moral stamina. We must rededicate ourselves to the service, the defense and the nurturing of freedom under schools, our churches, our homes, our schools, our churches, our leaders, in every walk of life must inculcate this faith and this spirit.

The depth of the structure available for display space will be 20 feet.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Jan. 21 (AP)—Many casualties among civilians, German soldiers and Rumanian iron guards as a result of bombings in the streets of Bucharest were reported early today in a diplomatic dispatch from the Rumanian capital. February Army Call for Eight in County

Eight Eastland county youths will be called for Tuesday, February 11, in the selective service military training plan, according to officials of the local draft board. Two Convicted of Tearing Down German Flag

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Jan. 21 (AP)—Two young navy men on leave from a psychopathic ward were convicted Monday of ripping a Nazi flag from its staff at the German consulate here. The incident occurred Saturday as some 2,000 persons alternately gasped and cheered at the reckless adventure nine floors above the street.

The two, Harold J. Sturtevant, 19, of Haverhill, Mass., and Ervin G. Luckey, 20, of Charlotte, N. C., will be sentenced Thursday by Municipal Judge Peter J. Mullins who found them guilty of a malicious mischief charge. They waived trial by jury and pleaded innocent. In court, however, each admitted his part in the escapade, an incident over which the United States government has given Germany a written expression of regret, and which Berlin has called scandalous.

The navy confirmed that both men have been under observation in the psychopathic ward of Mare Island Naval hospital. Each has about a month to serve of his navy enlistment. On liberty from the hospital, they wore civilian clothing when they engaged in Saturday's escapade. Judge Mullins told them sternly: "Enjoy us as Americans who enjoy so many liberties that other people do not have, and who have guarded these liberties so jealously, cannot hope to maintain the respect of other nations if we, ourselves, do not respect the rights of others."

1918 War Letter Just Translated

WACO, Jan. 21 (Sp)—The central powers had lost the war in 1918, and a member of the Austro-Hungarian army was writing to his sister and brother-in-law after the war's close. "The way the war came out was all to the good," he wrote, though it was his army that had been defeated. "Now," he rejoined, "the Slovak people will again have their own schools." That letter, written in an American camp where the Slovak was held prisoner, had been given to an American soldier to be mailed. That soldier, William R. Malone of Brady, was unable to get the letter translated, and feared that it contained military secrets, preserved it—along with a cigarette case, a photograph of the man and a citation ribbon. It was translated for the first time Tuesday, when Malone mailed it to Prof. Guy B. Harrison, curator of Baylor university's Texas history collection, who asked Dr. Sander B. Kovacs, a Slovak member of the Baylor faculty, to read it. The material will be preserved in the history collection.

HITLER, DUCE KEEP PLANS AT PARLEY DARK

New Explosion in Mediterranean Area Predicted

By the Associated Press
Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini kept the world apprehensive in the dark last night about plans evolved at their secret conference amid freely voiced predictions that a new axis explosion may be imminent in the Mediterranean area.

The reported slaying of a German general staff officer by an assassin of "Greek origin" in Bucharest deepened anxiety in the Rumanian capital and all the Balkans.

A Nazi expeditionary force of 200,000 troops in Rumanian was reported ready to move south, east or west at a moment's notice. As an ominous sidelight, the Nazi command in Bucharest was said to have requested the Rumanian telephone company to allot special lines immediately to Sofia and Athens, capitals of Bulgaria and Greece.

Aside from the stereotyped official Berlin comment that the Fuehrer and the Duce were "in complete accord," a single concrete fact emerged from the Hitler-Mussolini meeting—military questions were discussed.

Field Marshal General Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the Nazi high command, and a top-flight Italian officer were present to lend technical advice at the meeting, officially described as illustrating "the extremely close fighting alliance between the German and Italian people." Foreign Ministers Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany and Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy also attended.

Beyond that, it was said, the dictators preferred to let impending actions speak for themselves.

A new scene of Italian distress—in East Africa—was emphasized in British reports declaring British troops had knifed into Italian Eritrea at two points after routing two fascist divisions (about 24,000 men) and inflicting 2,000 casualties in violent fighting around Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

The fascist retreat was said to be general all along the 200-mile Sudanese border front, with British light tanks and armored cars leading the pursuit, followed by British infantry and bands of Ethiopian guerrilla fighters. Between 30,000 and 80,000 tribesmen were reported active in the revolt against Italy's 1935-36 conquest of their African rooftop kingdom.

Garner Completes 38 Years Of Legislative Work

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP)—John Nance Garner, leaving a bow-tied silk hat on the seat behind him, stepped to the rostrum of the inaugural platform Monday to swear in Henry Agard Wallace as vice president and thus wind up his own 38-year career in the nation's legislative halls.

The smiling, shy Wallace spoke our loudly "I do" as the retiring vice president completed reading the 71-word oath in a clear, strong voice. The crowd cheered.

Wallace smiled and bowed slightly. Garner, grinning broadly, stepped back to his seat and picked up the silk hat which he had borrowed from Bascom Timmons, Washington newspaper man, to complete his formal outfit for the day.

That silk hat, anathema to the 72-year-old Garner, symbolized the hardy-comfortable day he spent in turning over the second-highest office in the nation to Wallace, 20 years his junior.

First, Garner discovered that the two silk hats he owns were at his home in Uvalde, Texas. One of them he acquired on a trip around the world and is dubbed his "Oriental" topper. The other he bought.

Thomas E. Hardy, who has chaperoned vice presidents about Washington for 16 years, suggested diplomatically that he could rent a topper for $1.50. The outgoing vice president would not hear of it and Timmons, a long time friend, stepped into the breach.

Timmons had, he said, a silk topper which Jesse Jones, secretary of commerce and, like Garner, a Texan, had borrowed several years ago. If he could get it back, Timmons said, the vice president could wear it. Jones, informed of the situation, said he would be glad to part with the topper because someone else had given him one and he didn't need it any more.

Garner was not destined to be at ease in that particular silk hat, however. It was too small and fell off three times, once in church, where Garner complained audibly because the ushers kept the door open too long and let a cold draft blow on him.

The door had been opened to let in what Garner described succinctly as "the Roosevelt tribe."

Selectees Off to First Phase Of Military Work

The 29 young Eastland county men chosen in the first call of the selective service military program, left Eastland by a chartered bus this morning at 11 o'clock to be inducted into the first phase of one year's army training. After final check-up in Dallas, the group will be sent to Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, where they will remain six weeks, later being sent to one of the army's large training camps.

Wendell Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Russell, was named leader of the group by the local board. He will be in charge of the boys until they reach point of induction. He will be assisted by J. D. Pittman, also of Cisco.

A large number of Cisco citizens were present to see the young men off, and gaiety was added to the otherwise solemn occasion by the appearance of the Eastland high school band.

Those who left today were J. T. Yancey, Charlie Grady Buntin, Chester C. Hogan, Woodrow Cecil Wilson, Lee Alton Harbin, J. D. Pittman, Hubert Bryan Buchanan, Candido de Los Santos, Bernard Williams, Carl Wendle, Billy Ray Lyleria, Winfield Allen Craddock, Jesse Arnold Ainsworth, Orville Hughes, Coe Owen Garrett, Claude Odell Hogan, Avery Darnell Holt, Roy Alton Callarman, Elmer Bibby, Raleigh Edward Darnell, Joe Hugo Bustamantes, Truman Rufus Been, Miles Gardner Ervin, Adolph Milton Montgomery, Wendell Harold Russell, John Russell Gage, Clyde Clifton King, Elvy David Clark, Cornelius Parker Hines and Willie Fisher Hunt.

Thomas E. Hardy, who has chaperoned vice presidents about Washington for 16 years, suggested diplomatically that he could rent a topper for $1.50. The outgoing vice president would not hear of it and Timmons, a long time friend, stepped into the breach.

Change Asked In Compensation Law

AUSTIN, Jan. 21.—With a request for speedy action, Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel Monday submitted to the legislature on an emergency basis a recommendation to amend the unemployment compensation law and save Texas employers an estimated $1,000,000 annually.

The amendment, required by the federal social security board, would perfect legislation of two years ago intended to reduce the jobless compensation levy from 3 per cent to a graduated scale beginning at one-half of one per cent.

Hundreds of Texans View Inauguration

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21 (AP)—Hundreds of Texans gathered Monday night at a dance held as a part of presidential inauguration activities. The colorful Hardin-Simmons university Cowboy band played several numbers to a throng of cheering southwesters. They dedicated one number in particular to Mrs. Clara Driscoll, Texas democratic national committeewoman, who was among scores of Texans here in the city for the inauguration ceremonies.

14 SELECTEES ARE HONORED AT DINNER

County Board Chairman Is Principal Speaker Monday

Fourteen of the 29 draftees who will report today for military training under the selective service act were honored at an impressive dinner-program sponsored by the Cisco Lions club at the Laguna hotel last night. John Turner, chairman of the Eastland county local board, was the principal speaker in a program dominated by the patriotic theme and featured by a beautiful flag ritual.

Toastmaster for the evening was H. R. (Pop) Garrett, commander of the Cisco VFW post and a member of the Lions club. He was presented by E. L. Jackson, president of the club after the singing of America following the dinner. Garland Nance, president of the Rotary club, spoke for that organization.

Music was by the Schaefer-Hilton orchestra, with Ray Judia at the piano. At the beginning of the program a spotlight centered upon a large silken American flag, waved by a concealed electric fan, as the gathering stood in the otherwise darkened room to sing "America." The same ceremony was carried out during the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner," which closed the program. A sound film of the national anthem was shown during the singing, the audience joining in.

Mr. Turner, chairman of the county board, spoke briefly, praising the character of the selectees who are being sent from the county, and urging them to make the kind of soldiers the county would be proud to own. Other speakers of the evening were E. M. Howard, Rising Star member of the county board; Bud Booth of Moran, district VFW commander; W. R. Huettis, local American Legion post commander, and Leon McPherson, secretary of the county board.

Five women presented the dinner, but only one of them, Mrs. O. J. Russell, was a mother of a selectee. Wendell Russell is her son.

The selectees present were introduced as follows: From Cisco—Wendell H. Russell, Willie Fisher Hunt, Bernard Wendle, Avery Holt; From Eastland—Roy Callarman, J. D. Pittman, Billy Ray Lyleria, Lee A. Harbin; From Gorman—Elmer Bibby, Charlie Buntin, Winfield Craddock, Elvey Clark; From Rising Star—Raleigh Darnell, Cornelius Hines.

All ex-service men who were present were also introduced, each giving the outfit with which he served during the first World war. Before the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" to conclude the program, County Supt. T. C. Williams showed a 20-minute motion picture of southwest scenes. This was followed by the sound film of the national anthem, the audience standing in the darkened room while spotlights picked out the American flag.

Mr. McPherson, board secretary, today expressed the appreciation of the board for the entertainment.

Local Civil Protection Part of Defense

THE dramatic side of the defense program is the race against time in the airplane factories, the shipyards, the training camps. But there is another side which we dare not neglect. It is not dramatic; it is not fashionable to mention it; it opens one to the charge of hysteria. Nevertheless—

An important part of the all-out defense on which we now depend to keep war away from the United States is civilian protection and local precautions against aerial bombardment, sabotage of water works, bridges, tunnels, power stations, airports, railroad yards, and other nerve centers of urban life.

THE American Society of Civil Engineers has had a committee working on these things since last October. It works with the war department's technological civil protection committee and with other societies and agencies to make plans for civilian defense. If there should be a sudden war, it is too late to improvise such plans, and the events in Europe are convincing proof that civilian defense is a most important factor.

This does not mean that we must immediately begin building dugouts and practicing blackouts. There is nothing about the study of these things that suggests hysteria or warmongering. We have been taught, bitterly, in the past two years, that war can happen to any country, and woe to him who is not ready.

These civilian defense plans are and must be local, for every community presents its own special problem. The war department and the various engineering organizations are urging that local, city, and state committees begin immediate study of questions like this:

Whether deep or shallow air-raid shelters best fit the local picture, and where they could be built in emergencies.

What could be done to supply emergency electric current if the regular source were interrupted.

What emergency source of water supply could be called on in emergency.

What bridges and public works would require protection, and how to protect them. (New York has already closed all openings and covered all anchorages of bridges, increased patrols, and supplied floodlights.)

Since the country has decided almost unanimously on defense as the best insurance against possible war, it is no longer sensible to ignore this phase of defense, which events in Europe have shown to be scarcely less important than purely military activity.

Life is what you make it instead of what you make.

Army Jobs Will Fit Draftees' Abilities

DALLAS, Jan. 21 (Sp.)—Uncle Sam's policy of keeping round pegs and square holes separated is working out well for the Dallas men who have been sent to Fort Sam Houston and Camp Bowie, Donald R. Brake, volunteer who was inducted November 25, told his board chairman, Shelby Cox, in a letter received Monday.

"I am delighted with my own assignment," he wrote, "and so far as I know, all the Dallas boys who came down with me are quite satisfied with theirs. I can say positively, from a knowledge of many individual cases, that the personnel division does its best to place men in work that they are fitted for, whether it be cooking, truck driving or technical laboratory work."

Brake's own work comes under this latter classification. He is a chemical engineer, a graduate of Texas University, and his assignment is to the Second Medical Laboratory.

"The army," he said, "is a pretty good place to be and not a collection of toughs and hoodlums, as so many people seem to consider it."

Brake is one of the eight men from Fort Sam Houston who may be heard each Saturday night on radio station WFAA in a program designed to appeal to prospective draftees with the message that the army is doing a good job in their behalf.

Longview Gets Huge Iron Ore Process Plant

LONGVIEW, Jan. 21—Longview was selected Monday by Opha H. Grissom, president of the Madaras Steel Corporation, as the location of the first iron ore reduction plant using natural gas as fuel. The decision was made by unanimous vote of the board of directors in conference here all day.

Selection of Longview was based on recommendation of Julius D. Madaras of Detroit, Mich., inventor of the gas reduction process, who has spent several weeks surveying all sites considered. Fourteen east Texas towns sought the plant.

The plant will be located on a 220-acre tract, two miles southwest of Longview. Purchase price of the land has been underwritten by a group of Longview businessmen representing the Longview chamber of commerce and the Madaras corporation.

Madaras and the chief engineer of the new plant, Russell Hardy of Detroit, will start work immediately planning construction. Work now is under way in Toledo, Ohio, on equipment.

The first unit will employ about 90 men, many of whom will be skilled metallurgists and mechanical engineers, Grissom said.

The plant will turn out 30 tons

The first steel plant in east Texas is regarded as opening up almost unlimited prospects for extensive industrial development in this section.

The early study of the utilization of east Texas iron ore through reduction by natural gas was first conducted by the East Texas chamber of commerce.

RAILWAY LABOR ACT POINTS TOWARD SOLUTION OF STRIKE PROBLEM IN THE DEFENSE PROGRAM

BY BRUCE CATTON
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—Some day soon it is going to occur to Congress or the administration that the railway labor act offers a fine blueprint for keeping strikes from interrupting the defense program.

Under this act, as amended in 1938, the National Mediation Board has been quietly but effectively helping railroad management and railroad labor compose all of their differences around the conference table. Since 1934 there have been but two railroad strikes—neither on a major trunk line—and two minor work stoppages involving comparatively few people.

In this one field, at least, there has been evolved a system for keeping the industrial peace which is fair to both sides, does not rest upon coercion or restriction and enables the industry to keep on working while its labor problems are being ironed out.

The whole set-up is fairly simple. The railroad labor act directs the board to dispose of labor disputes by acting on these four principles:

Avoiding any interruption to commerce; forbidding any limitation on the workers' right to join or form a labor union; providing for complete independence of both workers and carriers in the matter of self-organization to carry out the purposes of the act; and providing for prompt settlement of all disputes.

DISPUTE MAY GO TO PRESIDENT

THE board may intervene where there is disagreement over the union which is to represent the employees. Usual course is to hold an election and let the majority decide.

When a union and a railroad are negotiating a contract and can't agree, the board may intervene and offer its services as a mediator. In most cases, this eventually brings about an agreement. If mediation fails, the board may then offer its services as arbitrator.

Neither side is compelled to accept arbitration, and if arbitration is turned down the board steps out of the case and the workers are free to strike—after a delay of 30 days. If a strike is voted, and the board feels it would substantially interrupt interstate commerce, the board may then notify the President to that effect. The President can then appoint an emergency board to study the whole affair and make a report.

Catton

AN IDEA FOR DEFENSE PROGRAM?

HERE again, there is no coercion—except for the proviso that there can be no strike or lockout for another 30-day period. The emergency board can't force anything on anyone. Its sole power is to make a report on the facts. But the theory is that such a report, setting forth the facts and indicating which side was more to blame for the trouble, given full publicity by the White House, would sway public opinion so effectively that there would be a peaceful settlement. So far, it has worked that way.

That, in brief, is the way labor peace is kept in the transportation industry. The employees keep their right to strike; the employers keep the corresponding right, which is the right to stand a strike rather than accept a settlement they don't want. But things are handled so that a railroad labor strike is an extremely rare thing. And through it all the trains keep running.

Somewhere in there there may be an idea or two for the defense program.

H-SU Cowboys Meet Top Teams of Cage Loop

ABILENE, January 21 (Sp.)—Uncle Joe Smith, former Hardin-Simmons cage great, now tutoring the cowboys on the hardwood for his first season, at mid-season today found his Ranchers judged by the top quality of the teams that have dubbed them.

The Cowboys split a pair of early series with New Mexico Aggies, perennial champs of the Border conference, and with New Mexico Mines.

The Ranchers, too, have lost to the lowering West Texas State Buffaloes, and with Texas Wesleyan and Howard Payne, Texas conference powerhouses.

"These teams rank at the top in the southwest this year. We are coming along when we make a good showing against them," Coach Smith, member of a succession of Texas conference championship quintettes, back in the late '20's, said today.

After "dead week" and semester exams, the Cowboys meet Texas Tech, in a pair of two-game home and home series, and entertain West Texas state for two, in February.

Participation in the annual southwestern tourney, at El Paso, in early March, will climax the season.

The Texas Tech games at Lubbock come first, February 14 and 15, after a home clash here with the touring House of Davids, on February 11. Games this week with Daniel Baker and Howard Payne ended the fall semester's competition.

Newspapers First With Conoco Again

PONCA CITY, Okla., Jan. 21 (Sp.)—Continental Oil company in 1941 is again allocating to newspapers a major portion of its yearly advertising budget, it was announced at the company's general offices here today.

Although Continental uses almost every kind of advertising medium, the company has for several years spent the greater part of its advertising dollar with newspapers. More than 1,300 newspapers throughout the United States will share in this year's expenditures, it was stated, and the advertising is expected to reach more than 35,000 readers. Small town newspapers will again share in the company's plan as extensively as metropolitan newspapers.

For the past several years the company's advertising campaign has been conducted primarily to assist the local distributor of Conoco products. The 1941 advertisements will continue to feature the quality products and outstanding service of the company's local "milage merchant."

SERIAL STORY

CONSCRIPT'S WIFE

BY BETTY WALLACE

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Martha goes to the country club party with Paul, spends a gay, whirlwind evening with Paul's friends. After the dance, they go to a night club and it is dawn when Martha reaches home. The telephone awakens her. It is Bill, calling from camp. He has been trying to reach her all night.

MARTHA TELLS A LIE

CHAPTER XIV

AS her husband's voice went on in her ear, Martha Marshall sat down groggily on the chair by the phone table. "Where were you last night?" he was asking again.

She looked at the little electric clock which had come from the store where Bill used to work. It was 9:30! Nine-thirty on Sunday morning, and Bill was asking her what kept her out last night.

"Where were you?" he shouted again. "Martha are you there?" "I'm here." Never afterward could she explain the impulse which made her take a deep breath and say, quickly, "Why, Bill, I—I was out with the girls last night. You know, I—I joined their bowling club."

"Bowling?" he repeated. "Bowling until after midnight? You must be a glutton for punishment!"

She hated herself. "I'm sorry I missed your call," she said meekly. "Was it—was it something important? Did you get leave?"

"Important? Sure it was important! I wanted to talk to you. Most of the guys go into town on Saturday nights and have themselves a time. And me, I'm stuck out here, thinking of you."

SHE had been dancing at the country club—going from one man's arms to another's—laughing, enjoying herself—while Bill moped in an army camp.

"Oh, I'm so sorry I wasn't here." "Well, you can't stay home every night," he said. "As far as leave is concerned, I've got a fat chance! With only a year to train us, the brass hats aren't handing out any leaves to speak of."

She had hoped that he might come home for a few days. But they weren't to have even that. "I wish you'd come up here again," Bill said. "How about next week? Do you think you could?"

She hesitated. Much as she wanted to go, it had been a gruelling drive. And she'd been late the following morning. "I—I hate to ask Paul for his car again," she said at last. "Besides, he said he wouldn't lend it to me."

"Said he wouldn't lend it to you?" Bill was incredulous. "What got into him? Did you smash a fender going home?"

"No. He thought it was too long a drive for me. I was late next morning."

"Why don't you ask him to drive you down, then? It's not too far for him, I hope! I'd like to see the old prune, anyway."

"All right," she said slowly. "I'll ask him." "That's swell. I'll be seeing you next Sunday."

"Yes." "In case I forgot to mention it—" he began, softly. Martha knew what was coming. She finished it for him. "I love you, darling."

ished it for him. "I love you, darling."

SHE sat there, after she had hung up, wishing bitterly that she hadn't lied to Bill. He wouldn't have minded her going to a dance with Paul. There'd been no need to lie.

Their silly little joke, hers and Bill's, was like a reproach to her. "In case I forgot to mention it—" was a phrase that always brought back the time Bill had carried her over the threshold into their new home. He had glimpsed the red leather chair which he had insisted on buying in defiance of all the laws of good interior decoration, and he had dropped her unceremoniously. "The chair? See, it does fit in, see?"

Martha had managed to keep herself from falling by grabbing his shoulders. "You dumb oaf! Is this the way you carry in your bride?"

Bill had grinned, sheepishly. "In case I forgot to mention it, I love you, darling. But you've got to admit, that's a wonderful chair. It adds distinction and class to the whole room!"

She went back to bed. But not to sleep. Why had she lied to Bill? Why?

PAUL was delighted when she asked him to drive her to the camp. She had known he would be. "Now you won't have to leave on Saturday to make it," he said. "Sunday morning at about 7 will put us there plenty early."

They reached camp soon after 10, and again Bill was waiting. He shook hands with Paul and said pitifully, "You look pale, fellow."

"It's the night life," Paul retorted. Martha prayed he wouldn't refer to last Saturday night. "He means night work," she put in hastily. "The plant's about 3000 orders behind."

Bill asked, "Want to take a look around the camp, Paul?" "Not especially," was the honest reply. "Give me a bird's eye view of what they've been doing to you, and let's get out of here. I suppose you'd appreciate a decent meal? I'll even pay for it."

"What do you mean, decent meal? Listen, boy, this army feeds good!"

It did not take long for Bill to secure his pass. While they waited, Paul and Martha stood outside the building, and every time a soldier passed Paul shook his head mournfully. "I'm certainly lucky the country needs me more behind the slide rule than behind a gun!"

"Do they look so bedraggled to you? Or miserable? What is it?" "Maybe it's the uniform. It sheds a pea green glow..."

THE drive into town from camp, with Paul behind the wheel and Bill squeezed into the space next to the door, was different from the other time she'd spent with Bill. Now Paul was asking questions about the training.

Bill explained, "The brass hats figure they can't give the conscripts any fancy training. You can't make anti-aircraft gunners, anti-tank gunners, tank corpsmen, even horse wranglers for the cavalry, in a year. So we're the infantry, boy. The good old infantry, the right arm of the army. We're the kindergarten class in soldiering.

"They're teaching us a lot of tough exercises to harden us up. Then we march, learn how to carry for the rifles, and the right way to his a mud puddle. Then there's drills, the manual of arms—lots of higher learning. We're getting battalion training pretty soon. That's harder. Camouflage, scouting, patrol—Am I boring you, Mr. Elliott?"

"No, indeed, Mr. Marshall," grinned Paul. "But I think Martha's yawning."

It was a gay Sunday. After a huge dinner in a good restaurant, they explored the town. It was full of soldiers. About 5 o'clock they found a cheerful little joint where Bill and Paul drank cold beer, and where a juke box ground out dance music. Martha danced with Bill, and then with Paul, and then with a couple of soldiers who had somehow crashed the party. "We're lonesome," they explained. "We're very lonesome."

Bill vetoed a movie. "That's all we do nights, see movies. I bet I've seen every one they're running in town."

Yes, a gay and jolly visit. And yet, saying goodby to Bill, Martha couldn't help the little feeling that something had been missing from their hours together. Some tenderness, some intimate oneness; a joy in being together that had been theirs that other Sunday.

Bill whispered, against her hair, as he held her close in a last farewell. "I enjoyed seeing Paul, honey. But next time, try to make it by yourself. After all, darling, two's company—especially when it's a darned long time between Sundays!"

Italy's Greatest Patriot Was Also First Dictator

MORE than half a century before Mussolini's rise to power, Italy had a dictator. He was Giuseppe Garibaldi, the patriot, who led the fight to free Italy from foreign domination, unite Italian states.

Garibaldi is pictured with King Victor Emmanuel II on the stamp above, one of an Italian series commemorating the 10th anniversary of the proclaiming of the empire.

Garibaldi was a platter and a fighter. Under sentence of death for a plot that missed fire, he came to South America, helped Uruguay win independence. Later he returned to Italy to take part in another revolution, battled armies of France, Austria, Spain and Naples. For a time, he lived in exile in New York.

Returning again to Italy, he attempted to settle down. But he left his bride immediately after the wedding to begin a new campaign. It was during this war that he was named dictator.

But Garibaldi did not want to rule. After Sicily and Naples were conquered, he saw Victor Emmanuel proclaimed king. Modern Italy traces its beginning to the achievements of this patriot who refused to admit defeat.

Makes Appeal

MISS HELEN HAYES

Paralysis War Serious Thing, Says Miss Hayes

An appeal for mothers to join in the "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign which opens January 13 and continues through January 30, President Roosevelt's 59th birthday, is made by Helen Hayes, America's noted actress so well beloved by millions of people. Miss Hayes writes the following article, not as an actress, but as one of the mothers of the nation.

By HELEN HAYES

There is not much noise in the war against infantile paralysis. The fighting is conducted in hospitals, in the quiet of the homes and in the research laboratories.

But it is an important war—tremendously important to every American mother. That is why I, not as an actress, but as a mother, urge every woman in America to do her full part in the annual "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign which now is being conducted by the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday.

For most of us, infantile paralysis is something rather remote—something we think of vaguely, when we think of it at all—something far removed from our daily lives and the lives of those we love most dearly.

But it isn't remote at all. It is always just underneath the surface—close at hand. The fact it happens to be active a thousand miles away is no assurance it will not be across the street tomorrow.

That's not a very pretty thought. But infantile paralysis is not a pretty thing. That is why we must force ourselves to think about it at least once each year, so that we may know it for what it is and deal with it accordingly.

It is no respecter of persons. It strikes down rich as well as poor, the strong as well as the weak. It claims the old and young, too, but most often it strikes among the children of the nation. And I know mothers need little urging to participate in a campaign which seeks to protect the health of their children, and to aid in the care of those children if and when infantile paralysis enters the neighborhood or the home, and to hunt for the cures or preventative which ultimately will rid us of the threat of this terrible enemy of our children.

That is the design of the campaign which is conducted annually at this time. All can participate in the campaign's "March of Dimes." Many, working with their friends and neighbors, can plan benefit parties, celebrations and entertainments, distribute the

Texas First Lady Awaits Signal For New Linoleum

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 21 (AP)—Thoughts of new linoleum for the kitchen floor and completion of the rose garden at the mansion occupied first place in Mrs. W. Lee O'Daniel's cogitations as she twirled about making ready for her husband's second inauguration today.

These are rushing days in the stately old house in the shade of the capitol's dome, but Mrs. O'Daniel remains serene and calm as she continues her daily routine of meal planning, budget balancing and family advising.

Like most housewives, Mrs. O'Daniel runs the mansion on a budget. By strict economy she has managed to squeeze Venetian blinds for the informal dining room and refinishing the dining room suite out of that budget. But she is still looking forward with great anticipation to the day when the legislature will give her the go-ahead signal on the kitchen linoleum.

She has made many innovations in the kitchen in the last two years. The hard orange paint on the high kitchen walls has been subdued with pea green. Pantries galore have been added and stocked by Mrs. O'Daniel and the cook with jars and jars of preserves and canned vegetables.

Between 6 and 6:30 o'clock in the morning does Mrs. O'Daniel's day start. Breakfast with the governor and whatever of the three children available is at 7:15. And like all mansion meals, even breakfast is frequently eaten with guests.

Does Own Ordering

After breakfast comes meal planning and grocery ordering which the first lady does herself. Once a week she does her own marketing. Correspondence is next on the program with complimentary letters acknowledged and all hobby requests possible complied with. Buttons, shirts, pitchers, are just a few of the items asked for by collectors. Mrs. O'Daniel dictates all letters herself to her secretary, Miss Bobbie Wilson, and has already written her thank-you notes for some 400 Christmas gifts the family received.

Luncheon with mansion guests is an everyday occurrence; Mrs. O'Daniel never knows just how many guests there will be. After lunch the mansion is open to visitors until 5 p. m. and she tries to be on hand to greet the callers who wish to see the magnificent old house in which the O'Daniels have made themselves very much at home.

Mrs. O'Daniel always dresses for dinner, because she says it rests her to put on a fresh dress. Again there will be guests, and callers will drop in from after dinner until bedtime.

All of which is a very busy schedule on normal days but add a few fittings for that white imported lace inaugural gown, overseeing the plotting of that rose garden, attending opening messages to the legislature and you have the whirlwind days of Mrs. O'Daniel the last week.

"I've never been happier in my life," she said. "With the people so strong behind the governor and his program, I'm satisfied."

Mrs. O'Daniel's pet hobby at present is that aforementioned rose garden. She has had some unsightly tool sheds torn down at the rear of the mansion and in their place she is plotting and supervising the construction of a beautiful bed of Texas Centennial red rose bushes sent by Tyler admirers. The bushes radiate and are interspersed with what are to be grassy walks.

Balkan Entente Is Reported

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Jan. 21 (AP)—Col. William J. Donovan, United States war observer, had completed only his first round of unofficial calls Monday when usually reliable sources stated that an effort was being made to bring Greece, Turkey and Bulgaria into a Balkan entente.

There was no indication that Colonel Donovan had a part in the reported negotiations.

It was not possible immediately to determine the character of the potential agreement, but one informant declared that Bulgaria had found Greek leaders receptive during preliminary diplomatic soundings in Athens.
