There is evidence now that the discriminatory condition against which these representatives have complained is recognized by the defense authorities and that they are preparing to do something about it. It is quite true that the government has been compelled by reasons of urgency to place defense orders with existing industries and to first attend to the needs of expansion of existing industries and the production of the required goods.

But it is also true that an unbalanced economy is a dangerous condition when the defense of the whole nation is considered. An even spread of defense spending and the judicious use of industrial expansion to accommodate the needs of every area is necessary, both to prevent undue congestion of population, utilize the skills and resources of every area and give sound and uniform support to the general economy.

Go to Church Easter

Civic leaders in Tennessee and the Cumberland valley, reported in a recent article in the Nashville Tennessean, are voicing a strong complaint at Washington against a trend which simulates affects our own section of the country. In brief, these leaders complain that the uneven spread of defense projects is bleeding their section of unskilled labor which is one of the most important economic assets of the district. The concentration of defense projects northern and eastern districts, defense officials were, has attracted the most pable laborers from the path, and particularly from their section of the south, to areas where defense money is being lavished. The result is, in the words of the spokesman:

"We are being robbed of our most valuable asset. These people are our main hope of improving our economic standing. They possess the highest earning capacity. But they are being attracted elsewhere and they are spending their earnings elsewhere."

These workers are trained in the south and when they leave their jobs they return to the south. On the one hand, therefore, the south endures the cost of training them, and on the other the burden of providing for them in idleness, although one of the earnings which they receive from employment in distant section, return to their home communities.

Another convention feature will be an address by Miss Katherine Schultze, returned missionary from China, where she spent five years. Miss Schultze is a native Texan. Her address is scheduled for 2:55 Tuesday afternoon.

Thursday afternoon at 5:30 the laymen's meeting will be held at the YMCA building in Breckenridge, with Harry Hines presiding. Buffet supper will be served.

The convention is open to the general public, the Rev. James R. Wright, Cisco pastor, announced. He urged that Cisco members of the Christian church take advantage of the opportunity to attend, since the convention is held so near Cisco. He also invited members of other denominations who are interested.

Today marks the close of the revival at the First Christian church. Interest has been high and attendance good throughout the whole period of the meeting, it was said. The pastor, the Rev. J. R. Wright, has been doing the preaching, and he gives the following Easter message to the public:

"Jesus came that we all might have the more abundant life, and the glory of Easter is the message of life to be found in following The Prince of Peace. The beauties of the lilies may adorn our homes, and sanctuaries, but unless the beauty and purity of the Lord shall adorn our life the lilies can have but scant message for us. In the chaos of the present world Christ still calls the heavy-laden until Him. The agony of the Cross found its glory in the empty tomb, but the real triumph of the empty tomb is to be found only in the life fully surrendered to a living Lord. Attend church somewhere this Easter Sunday, and worship the Lord who gave Himself for you!"

Christian Church Convention at Breckenridge

The 55th annual convention of the Christian churches of Texas will open in Breckenridge Monday evening to run through Thursday evening, April 17.

Lewis J. Ackers of Abilene, president of the convention, and H. G. Gantz of Lubbock, vice president, will preside over the sessions of the convention. Gantz is a former Randolph college student.

Highlighted in a program crowded with interest for members of the denomination and the public generally are addresses by the Rev. Jesse M. Bader of New York, secretary of evangelism for the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and Dr. L. D. Anderson, pastor of the First Christian church of Fort Worth. Bader speaks at 11:30 Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings, and at 4:20 and 8:45 Thursday afternoon and evening. Dr. Anderson is scheduled for a number of addresses.

From Sixth to 12th streets inclusive, under the direction of the Industrial Arts club, is greatly improved, it was announced. Several homes in this district are being remodeled and painted.

From 12th to 19th inclusive, under the supervision of the Garden club, were found many attractive lawns and many improvements.

Other inspection tours will be reported on later.

The section assigned to the Twentieth Century club, from First to Sixth streets, inclusive, was found to be in excellent condition, only a few unkept places and a few neglected vacant lots to be taken care of.

Recruiting Officer to Be Here Monday

Sgt. O. G. Booth, U. S. army recruiting service, will be in Cisco on April 14 for the purpose of interviewing applicants for enlistment in the United States army. Sgt. Booth may be contacted at the post office on that date between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Vacancies exist at many desirable places for enlistment in the air corps and field artillery.

A committee from the Cisco Federation of Women's clubs, sponsors of the clean-up campaign, has inspected all of west Cisco, it was announced Saturday, and found that almost every family has cooperated in the federation's annual drive for attractive homes and lawns in Cisco.

The first kid event was won by troops 6 of Eastland, 31 of Breckenridge and 29 of Carbon, placing in order for first, second and third places.

Eagle Scout Jerry Bailey of Eastland won the essay of not more than 25 words on "Why I want to go to Camp Gibbons." Following is Scout Bailey's essay: At Camp Billy Gibbons I enjoy the benefit of personal contact at the council ring, supervised recreation, perfect camp sanitation, handcraft, hiking, swimming, good eats and clean fun.

Everyone present formed in a large circle around the camp fire and renewed their scout oath for the dismissal after which ice cream was served.

Funeral services were held at Rockwood Wednesday afternoon for Mrs. G. B. White, 42, of McCamey, who died here Tuesday morning at the home of her brother, J. E. Blackwell. Her mother, Mrs. N. E. Blackwell, was with her when death came. Mrs. White had been suffering from a heart ailment for six months.

C. E. Bradford of Junction, Pentecostal evangelist, held the services, and interment was in the Rockwood cemetery. Neil Lane Funeral home was in charge of arrangements.

'UNJUSTIFIED' STRIKES HIT BY NORRIS

Warns of Possible Drastic Action By Congress

By Associated Press
Prospective opening of the Ford Motor company River Rouge plant—largest industrial unit in the world—brightened the labor-defense picture Saturday, but Senator Norris of Nebraska still viewed the general problem seriously enough to warn that "drastic action" will come out of congress unless "unjustified" strikes and "labor racketeering" are stopped.

Norris, co-author, with Mayor LaGuardia of New York, of the Norris-LaGuardia act limiting the right of the federal courts to issue injunctions in labor disputes, said in an open letter to his constituents that some local unions had resorted to "intimidation" in getting fees out of job applicants.

While the veteran senator decried labor "racketeering," he nevertheless said labor was being unfairly accused in connection with defense industry strikes.

Settlement of the Ford strike—the great plant was expected to open again Monday—was described by Gov. Van Wagoner of Michigan as "an historic step in establishing industrial peace in our country." About 200,000 workers in the Ford and allied plants have been idle for 11 days and work on $155,000,000 in defense contracts has been bogged down. The union's original demands included recognition of the CIO-UAW union, a 10-cent hourly wage rise and abolition of what they termed a "company spy system."

The plan for agreement calls for the return of employees to their jobs without discrimination, the reestablishment of grievance procedure and co-operation on both sides in holding an NLRB election for collective bargaining representation. The labor board agreed to postpone a hearing set for Monday on a complaint filed against Ford by the CIO.

While peace was in sign for Ford, the United Automobile Workers International union asked locals for authority to take a strike vote of 175,000 members in 76 General Motors plants.

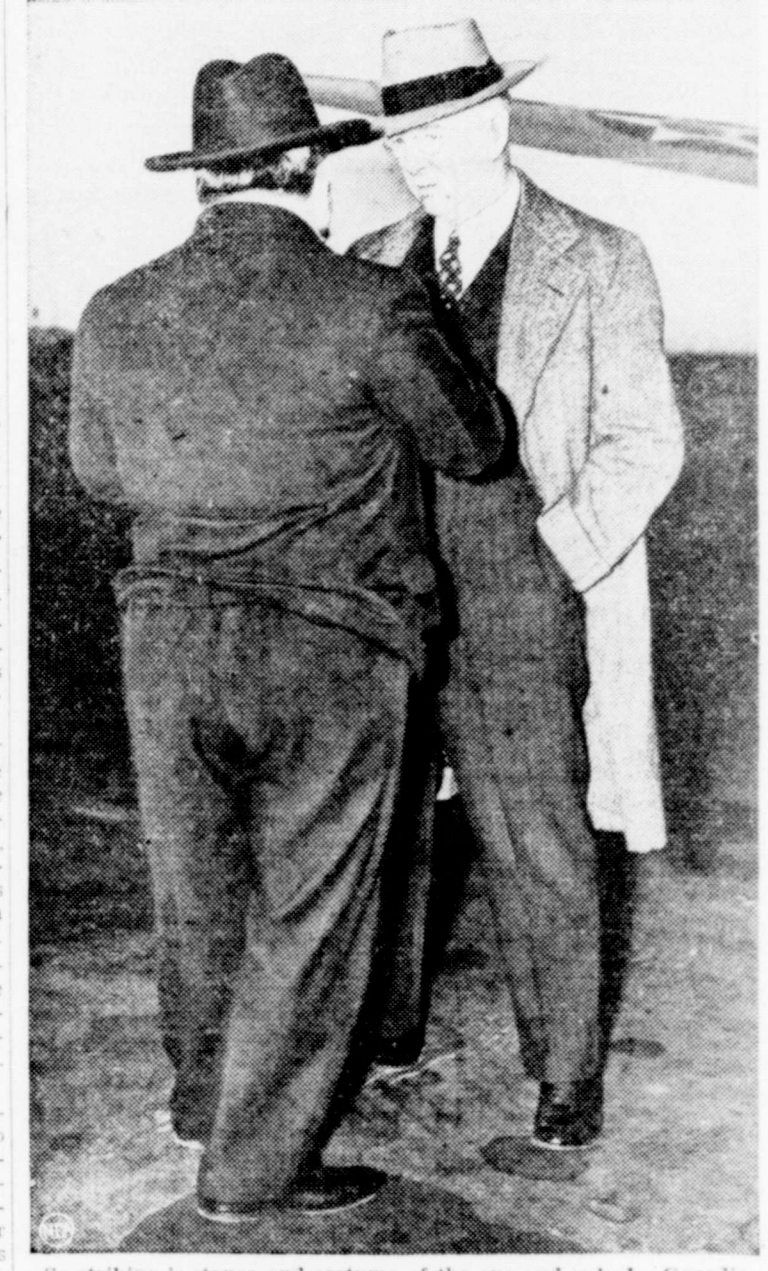

The hunt will be preceded by a brief concert by the high school band, under the direction of R. I. Collier.

About 3,200 eggs will be hidden by members of the recreation department, and out of that number 34 will be prize eggs. In the three age groups—up to seven years, from seven to 10, and from 10 to 12 years—three gold and silver eggs will bring cash awards. Hundreds of children of Cisco and the surrounding community are expected to participate in the hunt.

The winners, first named, were as follows: Paul Huntington vs. W. R. Miller, Jr., 4-3; William Gibson vs. Lawrence Johnston, 3-2; and Finkie Tollerson vs. W. T. Ingram, 1 up 18.

The Pioneer team will come to Cisco for a return engagement Wednesday afternoon.

Who Else Could It Be?

So striking is stance and costume of the one and only La Guardia that Americans don't even have to see his face to recognize him. Mayor here is straight-talking Frank Knox, secretary of navy, just arrived by navy plane in New York.

Sheppard Death Marks End of Era

By HARRY BENGE CROZIER
AUSTIN, April 12.—On the calendar the summer days of 1942 had been marked for an epochal struggle in Texas politics. Governor W. Lee O'Daniel, Lieutenant Governor Coke Stevenson and Attorney General Gerald C. Mill all were to be completing their traditional second terms and none of them was or is expected to quit the field. A soft spoken little man in Washington was expected to take the road again for a sixth term election as United States senator.

That was according to calendar—and a good many thousand Texans—now rueful of their bad judgment—had saved $1.75 to apply on a poll tax for next year. Then Morris Sheppard, the quiet and well beloved little man from Texas, went on the long journey and as the bluebonnets bloom, Texas politics goes into full volume.

End of An Era
What portents for Texas death brought when it beckoned to Senator Sheppard no man essays to prophesy. Certainly it means more of change than the mere substitution of another in that high seat. Whatever may be the course of O'Daniel—whoever may sit in the seat that was Morris Sheppard's, his death brought a change that may alter the whole course of Texas history.

In a sense the death of Senator Sheppard must mark the end of an era. He went to the United States senate on a tide of eloquence and prohibition sentiment in a memorable contest against late Brigadier General Jacob F. Wolters. In the senate for nearly five full terms, he forsook eloquence, except on rare occasion, and devoted himself to diligence and hard work.

It mattered not to later day Texans—no matter how bitterly they were opposed to prohibition—that Morris Sheppard was its foremost advocate. His devotion to his job and his uniform courtesy to every Texan won him many votes and votes to spare in any contest. It was not believed that even the radio magic of W. Lee O'Daniel carried much of a threat to the Sheppard armor had the contest that now cannot happen, resulted.

Sheppard Sincerely Mourned
There is sincere mourning in Cisco for the return engagement Wednesday afternoon.

BRITISH AND NAZIS LOCKED IN STRUGGLE

Conflicting Reports Received on Progress of Battle

ATHENS, April 12.—British and German troops were reported locked in a fierce struggle in the Phlorina sector on the northern Greek front Saturday. A flood of conflicting reports were received on the progress of the battle with the Greek high command claiming that the allied Greek and British lines are holding firmly against the shock of Nazi panzer units in the climactic battle of Greece.

Berlin asserted that resistance in Yugoslavia had virtually collapsed and confidently predicted that the war, so far as Yugoslavia is concerned, would be over in a few days.

The Germans also reported that British transports in the harbor of Piraeus, the seaport of Athens, were getting up steam to evacuate British troops from the peninsula.

The Greek high command announced that German forces, smashing through from Bitoli, Yugoslavia, had reached the Greek lines in the Phlorina sector on the west flank, while on the east flank, an Athens government spokesman said, Nazi troops "have penetrated farther" but without reaching the main defenses.

With the land forces poised for the big battle, the RAF announced its bombers had kept up a steady pounding of the Germans in southern Yugoslavia and northern Greece.

Particularly heavy attacks were reported against the South Yugoslav towns of Veles and Prilep and the village of Kilkis, in Northern Greece.

RAF Attacks Nazis
Despite bad weather, the RAF airmen made repeated low-level attacks on the Germans Thursday and Friday between Bitoli and Prilep, the communique said, resulting in the destruction of seven tanks and a number of lorries set afire.

German advances in darkness toward Kilkis and in the Galikos area were both bombed and machine-gunned and were thrown into "great confusion," it added. At Polykastron an important road bridge was reported blown up.

Delayed reports from the front said advance units of the German army had encountered the British patrols between Giamitsa (Yanitsa)—48 miles north of Mount Olympus, eastern anchor of the defense line—and the Aegean coast, in the first contact between the reichswehr and the British expeditionary force in Greece.

Details on the engagement were meager but the British earlier had acknowledged that Giamitsa was in German hands.

Theologos Nicholoudis, Greek press minister, informed the residents of German-occupied Macedonia and Thrace Friday night that:

"Within a few hours there will start—if it has not started already—one of the most stubborn and best battles in history, between the Greeks and English on one side and the Germans on the other."

Hope and Faith in the Living Christ, May Drive Violence From Our World

Text: Luke 24:13-17, 25-35

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

THE story of the two disciples going to Emmaus, a village about seven miles northwest of Jerusalem, and being joined by a stranger who turned out to be their risen Lord, whose death had filled them with great sadness, is one of the strangest in all literature. As a miracle it has all the elements that make it hard to believe, for the Presence was not some phantom or image, but a living companion who walked and talked with them, who later sat at meat with them, and who, as He was made known to them in the breaking of bread, vanished from their sight. Could any story be more amazing? Yet it is told in a matter-of-fact way, with the directness, simplicity, emphasis on its spiritual content, and freedom from any suggestion of magic, that make it one of the most impressive stories in the New Testament. Of course, it cannot be "explained." One takes the record as it stands. Perhaps the highlight of the whole story is what the disciples said to one another as Jesus vanished out of their sight: "Did not our hearts burn within us while He talked with us by the way, and while He opened to us the Scriptures?"

WHAT a wonderful experience that had been! Here were two disciples in the depth of sadness. As the Companion drew near and asked them why they walked with such sadness, they expressed amazement that a stranger did not know of the dire events which had been happening in Jerusalem. They began to tell of their great hope that Jesus of Nazareth whom they had followed should have redeemed Israel, and of how their trust had been disappointed as He had been arrested and led away to crucifixion. It was then that this new Companion began to open to them the Scriptures, and to tell them how the prophets had foretold these events. Would not the heart of every disciple burn if he had had such a privilege of having the Christ Himself expound the glories of the Old Testament, from Moses all through the prophets, interpreting the meaning of the Scriptures and the hope of Israel, and presenting these things in relation to events in Jerusalem so that the tragedy became somehow overcast with glory and triumph and the hope of a new life for man and for the world? OUR lesson is but one chapter in the resurrection story, but the whole story is full of the note of triumph of life over death, right over wrong, truth over error, love over violence; and it is the story that the world in its very dark night of violence and hate needs above all things today. Perhaps in imagination we too can take that walk from Jerusalem to Emmaus and gain faith to meet a world from which in our moments of deepest depression hope seems to have died. The past tense will change to the present. We trust it is He who will redeem Israel.

SERIAL STORY DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS

BY EDITH ELLINGTON

YESTERDAY: But Anthony doesn't want to face Sheldrake. He tries to argue Bee out of the idea, finally admits that he knows the man, that it might cause trouble. Bee cannot understand. But Fletcher calls Sheldrake. The man bustles in faces Anthony. "So, it's you! Weening has been spying on me," "Weening?" Bee asks. "What has he to do with Mr. Bradley?"

"CHAT MAN" AGAIN
BRUCE SHELDRAKE paid no attention to Beatrice. "So, Mr. Curtis Weening first, it necessary to plant steel pipes in my store, does he?" he shouted. "He didn't try to provoke me, but I'm not satisfied with heeding, with criticizing everything I have ever done. He is not content with stringing up bonnets on the bank, I've got to have them at the store, too!"

"He's sabotaged every piece of real progress I've ever attempted. How many other spies has he spied throughout this store? How many steel-pipe reports have been going out to him every week?"

"I have not been a steel pipe spy," Sheldrake retorted. "I supposed to need a job, and I applied at this store and got the job. Mr. Weening had nothing whatever to do with it. In fact, he didn't want me to work here. But I was fool enough to think I could turned her back on him. "Anthony Bradley, look at me. I want you to tell me exactly how it happened that you knew Beatrice Davenport had given her fiancé a string of polo ponies. Her voice was very even, almost gentle."

"I asked you once before, remember? You evaded the question. Please don't evade now. How did you know?"

Anthony stared at her as if she had suddenly taken leave of her senses. "For God's sake, Bee, this is no time—"

"Answer me!"

Sheldrake was spluttering. Fletcher was sinking weakly into his chair. Anthony kept right on staring at the small girl with the blazing eyes. "I heard her say she'd bought him polo ponies," he exploded. "That's how I knew. I happened to be in my guardian's office while she came in, and I got out of there. But I couldn't help hearing it. Look here, Bee, none of that matters. I didn't want you to—"

"You didn't want me to know you and Beatrice Davenport shared the same guardian, that's what you didn't want me to know?"

"I didn't want anyone in the store to know!"

"So you were spying on me, you worthless—!" Mr. Sheldrake was in it now.

Beatrice turned on him. "Be quiet!"

She went back to Anthony. "You didn't want anyone in the store to know, I see." She tried to keep down the sickening rage which filled her.

"I see everything very plainly about? I never said—I never in my life said you should be changed. His voice died. A horrible, gurgling death it was, too.

All at once, his hands were very strong and urgent on her shaking shoulders. "Look up here! How do you know what I said in Mr. Weening's office? I remember now. I did say she ought to be chloroformed. But I said BEATRICE DAVENPORT—"

"Yes," admitted Beatrice Davenport. Yes, that's what you said. Oh, I hate you. I hate you! Take your hands off me. I'd rather die than have you touch me. You worthless, complacent, righteous nasty brute. You didn't even wait until I got out recently before you dared—you d—d—d—"

She pounded frantically against his chest, a fierce and primitive

22 High School Boys Organize Building Club

A group of high school boys, under the sponsorship of W. J. Leach, have organized a club which meet once a week to construct model airplanes, cars, ships, etc. The meetings are held in the afternoon in two rooms over Crawford Insurance agency.

Members are required to furnish their own work-table, tools and materials. The membership will be limited to 25 boys.

Although every kind of model will be made, the boys will specialize in building gas models and airplanes. When the airplanes are completed they will be entered in competition among themselves and with clubs in other towns.

The charter membership includes Raymond Thomas, Harry Watkins, Roy Lee George, Bill Blackstock, Walton Harn, A. D. and Dick Anderson, Bobby Abbott, Fred Swartz, McGee Duff, Jimmy Gorman, Bill Phillips, Hugh Lovell, Bill Sherman, Paul and Alvin Ely, Bartlett, Huestis, Bob McGowan, Allen Wood, Charles Yates, Bill Morrison and Norma Gene Swartz. In 66th Year of Railroad Service

JOHN TIERNEY

30-Year-Old Katy Engineer Still Active and Spry

PARSONS, Kans., April 12 (Sp.)—On April 10, Engineer John Tierney climbed into the engine cab of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas motor train at Parsons, released the brakes, pressed the starting lever and started his regular run to Junction City, Kans., and return, thus launching his 66th consecutive year as a Katy employe at Parsons. Dean of all Katy veterans, Mr. Tierney has been a Katy man since he was 15, and has more years of service than any other railroad man in the United States. Tierney is the first railroad man in the United States to be employed for 60 years as an engineer. At 80 he is still as spry as many a man his junior by years, and the 314-mile trip, starting at 5:45 a. m. and ending at 6:10 p. m., he says, is all in a day's work. After completing his long run, he's just as likely as not to go out that evening to a movie or to a neighbor's for a hand of bridge.

"Everyone connected with the Katy takes an interest in his long and unusual record with our lines," declared Matthew S. Sloan, board chairman and president, last month, in commenting upon Mr. Tierney's service. "He is a typical example of that great army of splendid men who have devoted their lives to making the railroad safe, dependable and efficient transportation machine." Back in the 70's rules and regulations were lax compared with those of today, and requirements for responsible positions were not as rigid as at present, which, Mr. Tierney says, accounts for the fact that he actually became an engineer at the age of 17—but not for long. After two years as a boiler-maker's helper in the shops, as a machinist in the railroad's blacksmith shop at Parsons, he felt competent to handle a locomotive. He had learned something about them, but that was not the reason he got a trial as an engineer on a switch engine. The reason was that he talked so persistently about his ability that he had convinced officials. But he did not become a regular engineer for several years because: "I remember it as if it had been yesterday," says Mr. Tierney, "I was switching cars in the Parsons yards when the engine flues began to leak. I couldn't get up enough steam to move the engine and I figured it was up to me to repair the fire box. Noticing several tar barrels on the right-of-way, I decided to use them for kindling, and I felt proud when I had overcome the difficulty without the help of a superior officer." But W. T. Small, who was superintendent at that time, wasn't with young Tierney, made it clear that regulations would be strict. "My pride was in thinking that my son-in-law was a roader was about one," Tierney said, "when Mr. Tierney came into the office later and assigned me between Parsons and Kogee."

who departed this
Easter, April 10.
His life on earth
short
But his soul is not
And in God's Kingdom
there
Has been forever
God plucked a hue
A rose so bright
To adorn His Holy
Life is so short,
Bloom forever
Life is so short,
sure, we cannot
But having the insurance of God
We'll meet you in ful land.
Sadly missed by
