Let Em Alone. (Wm. Allen White in Emporia, Kan. Gazette).

Senator Bennett Champ Clark introduced by Arthur Capper.

A lot of other fellow patriots who believe that the way to keep America out of the war is to help Britain and China also are taking wild and unnecessary pokes at Senators Wheeler, Nye and Bob Taft.

These men are patriots. The whole difference between them and the other patriots is that these isolationist gentlemen have a different idea from that of the President, Mr. Wilkie.

No one wants war. It would be a 90 per cent, probably 99 per cent, vote against war.

But never in any of the poll takings has there been a vote of less than 82 per cent of the American people who believe in going right ahead on the President's plan to keep us out of war by aiding the Allies.

The isolationist plan to keep us out of war is logical enough if you accept their major premise that war can be kept away from these shores by negative political action.

This is a war of ideas, based on economic maladjustments. It is a world revolution.

Like an earthquake or an avalanche, it can't be stopped by posturing a notice.

And another reason why it is foolish to beat up the isolationist leaders is that they are not getting anywhere.

The President has moved from step to step to keep us out of war for two years. He has been backed by Congress whenever his policy has come up for a vote.

They are just beating this air. In the eyes of probably a majority of the people of the United States the isolationists are making a rather foolish spectacle of themselves in their fulfury and fury.

So why bother to state them? Let em alone. Give them all the rope they want.

What harm are they doing? And, anyway, according to their lights, they are as good patriots as any of us.

Their views are goofy but sincere. Since when have Americans begun burning their fellow citizens at the stake for their opinions?

EDSON'S WASHINGTON COLUMN

FDR's Blacklist Frees Hemispheric Trade And Simplifies Trade With Good Neighbors

WASHINGTON.—One of the most important angles of President Roosevelt's announcement of the Latin American trade blacklist, generally overlooked in the hullabaloo over its sweeping, restrictive and negative provisions, is freeing hemispheric trade by relaxing the controls previously existing on U. S. commerce with Central and South American republics.

It is an intricate and a long story, and many details of its administration have not yet been clarified in Washington. In general, however, by listing specifically the 1800 blocked nationals with whom U. S. firms can no longer do business, the way is cleared for U. S. exporters and importers to trade with all other firms, numbering many times more than the firms now on the blacklist.

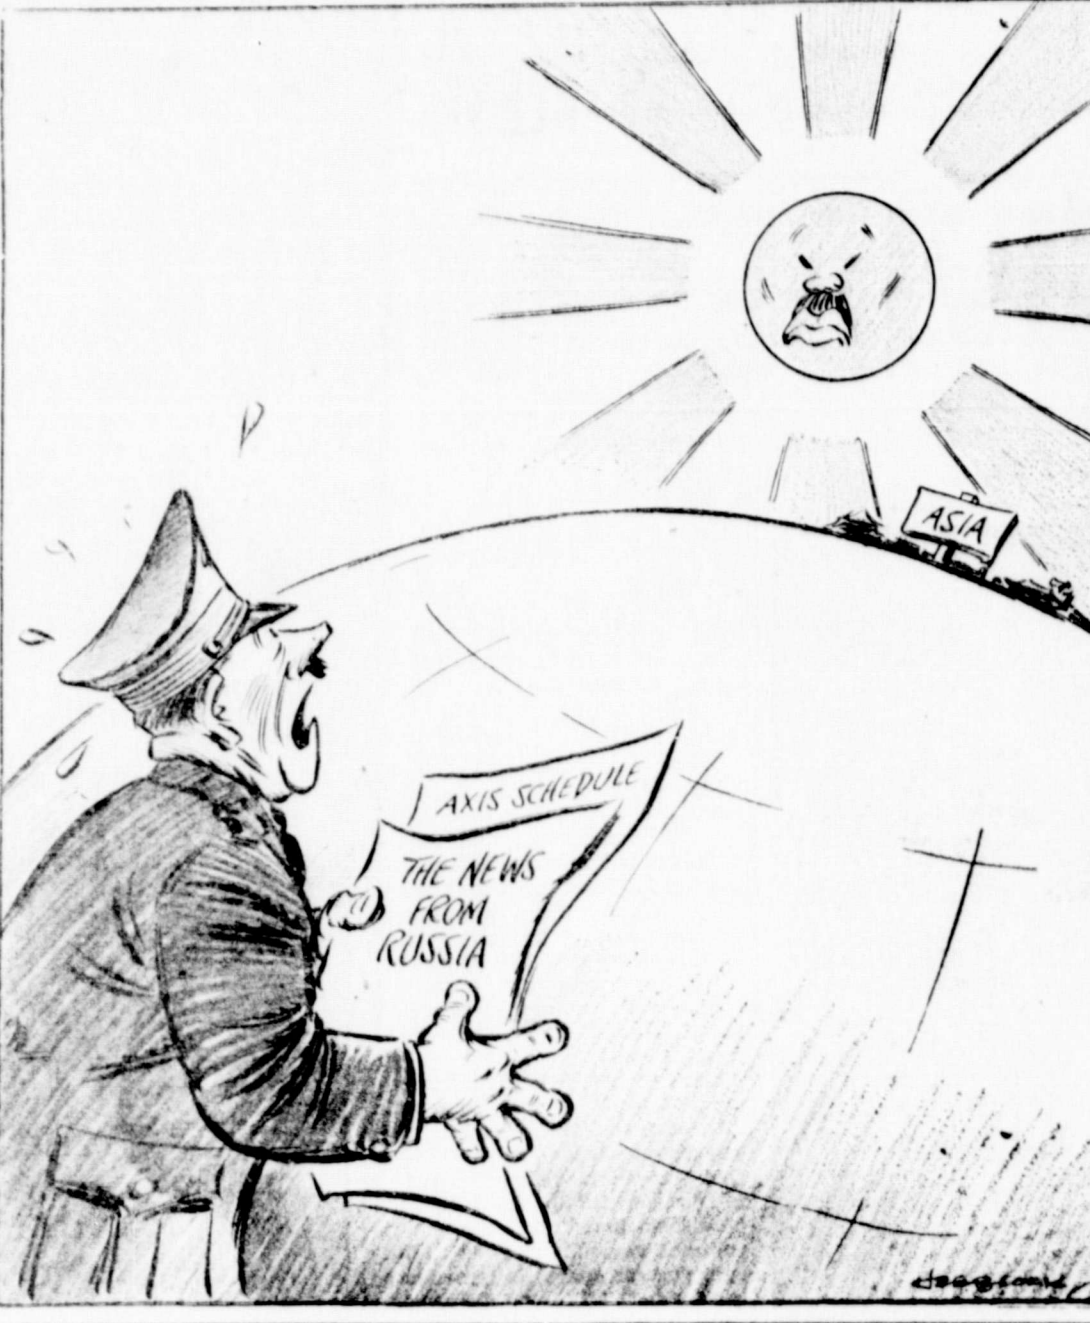

Heretofore, there has been considerable confusion about what Latin American firms U. S. nationals could trade with. There was, for instance, the general treasury order freezing trade with all countries of continental Europe and their nationals all over the world. That order was aimed primarily at Germans and Italians, but it applied also to Spaniards and Portuguese nationals, even though they were doing business in the Argentine or Brazil.

The new blacklist simplifies that rignarole tremendously and it lifts a lot of bothersome restrictions which had been interfering with the much-desired wartime expansion of inter-American trade. Trade with Latin America is now entirely unrestricted except for the 1800 firms on the blacklist and for those few essential defense items on which there is U. S. export control.

To legalize this trade, Treasury has issued a general license permitting all such transactions without the previously required specific license. This license applies to everything except purely financial transactions, such as transfers of funds. The purpose of this remaining restriction is to keep a check on foreign exchange transactions and prevent a leak of foreign nationals' assets back to Europe.

MARY HAD A LITTLE LAMB, COOKED BY FLAMELESS HEAT; IT'S TENDER AND IT'S JUICY AND ITS FLAVOR CAN'T BE BEAT!

EVERY homemaker who uses an automatic electric range can face summertime cooking with a gay disregard for an old bugaboo—HEAT. The kitchen stays as cool as any other room in the house, whether you cook with oven or surface units. No one need be denied luscious fried chicken, corn-on-the-cob, and deep, juicy peach cobbler!

NO HEATED AIR ESCAPES FROM THE OVEN. There is no combustion to consume or rob oxygen from the kitchen air. Surface cooking is cool because every particle of heat from the calorid units is directed into the pans—not into the kitchen. Little or no water is necessary—there is no escaping steam to heat the kitchen or make a stench.

George P. Fee, who operates a cattle ranch near Cisco, reports excellent results from the use of U. S. screw worm formula No. 62. Mr. Lovelady, his foreman, says the smear is the best screw worm remedy he has ever used in his 35 years of ranching experience. M. S. Holt of Olden also reported good results from use of the smear. The screw worm smear is made by mixing three and one-half parts of diphenylamine, three and one-half parts of benzol, one part of turkey red oil and two parts of lamp black. In fairly large quantities the smear can be made for about one dollar and a half per gallon.
