THE LAST CRUSADE

How many Americans really grasp the greatness and uniqueness of their country?

America is by nature and choice the friend of all the world—probably because we are OF all the world—ready always and everywhere to grasp a friendly hand.

Even now, when forced by its own benevolence to make war upon nations that have turned to crime, it does so only to restore peace, opportunity and civilization.

America seeks no special advantage, but is spending today $200,000,000,000 and the lives of tens of thousands of its sons, to make a better world for everybody.

All that it asks in return is what civilized men want for themselves and their children.

America is the Don Quixote of nations, a knight-errant going forth to redress wrongs in the spirit of the valiant knights of the Middle Ages, but with modern methods and equipment and not counting the cost of the labor. It will feel amply repaid if the purpose is achieved.

Is this wise or foolish? A cynic would say the latter. But the cynics grow silent as the quest proceeds and stricken nations begin to feel that the big job will be done.

This is the greatest crusade of all time.

If it wins, it will be the victory not of a nation or a group of nations, but of all Mankind.

TIE THE CAN TO THEM

Now pending in congress is a bill to create the Columbia Power Administration. Under the terms of this bill, the CPA would have absolute authority, backed by federal funds, to acquire and to control the private electric resources of the Pacific Northwest. Local rule and local regulation would be destroyed. And public money would be employed to carry on a grandiose experiment in national socialism in the area.

In advocating passage of the bill, a Washington senator made the astounding statement that, unless it is passed, the people of his state will "rise up" and condemn the private utilities. And that brings up this very pertinent question: If the people of the Northwest are so completely sold on socialism, why haven't they "risen up" and seized the utilities in the past as public power advocates have urged them to do?

Any town or city has long had the right to go into the power business if it so chooses. Any group of counties can, by vote of the people, create public power districts and either acquire existing electric plants or build new plants of their own. For decades, zealous advocates of socialism, with fanciful fire in their eyes, have been urging the people to do this. In the last few years, with hundreds of millions of dollars in federal funds to promote their program, they have carried on a crusade to socialize the whole power industry. They now openly admit this in their arguments for this new bill.

And what have the people done? In the Pacific Northwest, for example, they have voted down several power socialization schemes for each one they have approved. In large cities, such as Portland, Oregon, and Spokane, Washington, they have buried those schemes in an avalanche of "No!" votes. And yet, in the face of the expressed wishes of the people, the leaders of the socialization movement continue to insist that the people want to destroy one of their greatest taxpaying assets, and will "rise up" in arms if congress refuses to pass the proposed bill which would strike a deadly blow to state and local rights.

This is a time for plain talking. Destruction of an industry which has met every demand upon it, would imperil, not advance, the war effort. Maximum power output at minimum cost can only be achieved by full and honest cooperation between all power agencies, public and private alike. The people know this. The advocates of power socialization refuse to recognize it.

RUSSIAN PROGRESS

It seems clear, as war association with Russia becomes closer, that Americans have misunderstood the present-day Russians. They seem far from being the kind of people we supposed, and their institutions seem more rational. Doubtless governmental methods are still harsh by our standards, and the people are regimented to a degree that Americans and Britons would never tolerate; but the Russians have always been used to strict government control. They seem loyal and patriotic, and have proved their courage and fighting power.

The biggest surprise is the economic and industrial progress revealed, especially the latter. Not one American in a hundred dreamed that Russia was so highly industrialized. Equally surprising was the military preparedness which that industry made possible. Russia, when the test came, showed herself almost as well equipped for mechanized warfare as Germany, both in materials and in ability to use them. The education of an illiterate people was a big factor in making it possible. All this was a revelation because Russia had been deliberately bottled up from outside contact while the transformation was going on.

There seems to have been more liberalizing of Russian life than Americans suspected. Politically the Russians are still far behind free, democratic countries like Britain and America, but not so far as they seemed. All this makes it easier to deal with them as war allies than Americans had any reason to expect.

Sure, that Japanese flag represents a setting sun. The sun rising over the Pacific is ours.

A NATIONAL ASSET

"We must win this war if we are to recover the liberties that have been suspended and we must win an enduring peace if we are to retain them," said the president of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, recently. "A great responsibility rests on the shoulders of private enterprise. In addition to helping win this war it must justify its right to existence by constructive action and adaptation to such necessary changes of operation as may develop in the days that lie ahead. Management must not shirk its responsibility in furnishing leadership to uphold and retain the right of every free citizen to carry on his business and activities as a free agent, subject only to those restraints that are necessary or desirable for the common good. There can be no true liberty in this or any other country unless private enterprise enjoys the right of such freedom. The future of our country as we have known and loved it depends upon the continuation of a national policy which recognizes and upholds the soundness of their basic conception."

It is natural that words like these should come from a representative of the fire insurance industry. For fire insurance has been one of the great influences in making the fullest development of free enterprise possible. No man could risk building a factory, no man could risk starting a business, no man could risk sending a merchant ship to sea, without the basic protection which fire insurance provides. Fire insurance has been called the cornerstone of credit—and that phrase fits it perfectly.

Today fire insurance serves in many ways. It renders its vital protection service to businesses and individuals. It is carrying on an intensive campaign to promote better fire defense in the interest of national defense. It stands solidly for the American principle of free enterprise which built this country. It is one of our great national assets.

The greatest tragedy of the Germans under Hitler is that, in seeking the conquest of other nations, they have enslaved themselves.

MY DAUGHTER

Of you, my daughter, let these words be said:
Dearer to me you are than any song
Of mine the world might praise
When I am dead,
I, who have lived for poetry
many a long
And arduous year—who strove
the while to sing
In a world of toil, serenely and
sincerely—
I place my art below no living thing
Save you—for only you I love more dearly.

What though my words should perish with my breath?
Little it matters, if your flesh and
mind
Shall be my lovely mansion after death:
You are the words my thoughts
could never find,
The sum of all the beauty, all the art
That strove to find a language in my heart.
—ANDERSON M. SCRUGGS.

"While our business has not shown such phenomenal growth as last year, we are still showing a net gain each month in the number of telephone subscribers," declared P. Pettit, manager of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company here. "A slump was to be expected with the decrease in the price of oil, and this gain, although small, shows Cisco to be in excellent shape."

President K. H. Pittard states the Lions club will observe the week of September 11 to 17 as "constitution week." September 17 will mark the 140th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution of the United States. A committee, composed of Lions Stephen Miller and White has been appointed to work out an appropriate program. The churches will be urged to cooperate with the club in setting aside the week as constitution week, and the pastors will be requested to speak on the obligation of a citizen to his government and his constitution.

John F. Patterson, secretary of Cisco Lodge No. 556 of the Masonic lodge, has received letters from Waco announcing that Dr. Joseph Fort Newton of Philadelphia, noted minister of the Episcopal church and the outstanding Masonic student and writer of the world today, will speak at Waco the night of September 14. Dr. Newton enjoys the distinction of having written more religious and Masonic books than any other writer. As a chaplain during the world war he buried more than 700 American soldiers who lost their lives in one day.

W. M. Isenhower, of Putnam, who is 78 years of age, fell Saturday and broke his hip. Mr. Isenhower has been unconscious since the accident and very little hope of recovery is held out to his family and large circle of friends. Mrs. L. F. Threet and Mrs. H. B. Paulette, of Cisco, sister and niece of the injured man, spent Sunday at his bedside.

Cisco's dairy caravan arrived home shortly after noon Thursday after having made a 1750-mile automobile trip through the dairying sections of Central and South Texas, a trip that carried them to Waco, Austin, San Antonio, the Rio Grande Valley, Houston, Galveston, College Station and back home. Dairying centers in this entire region were visited by the Cisconians who were in search of information for use here in developing a great dairying program. The committee will hold a meeting here Monday night at the chamber of commerce to agree on recommendations to the chamber of commerce and their home communities as to what lines should be followed in stimulating dairying production and marketing around Cisco. Those who made the trip were O. P. Weiser of Word; E. F. Altom, Pleasant Hill; John Blackburn, Gunsight; Pete Brummett, Scranton, and Will Allen, Dathan, all farmers; and E. H. Varnell, vocational agricultural expert; R. L. Poe, director of the Cisco chamber of Commerce; and J. C. Patterson, county agent.

Cisco firemen will hold their annual barbecue here on September 28, it was decided at a meeting of the Cisco Volunteer Fire department Friday night. Members of the 27th district will also be guests of the local firemen that night. A committee comprised of J. J. Collins, Bedford Mashburn and H. C. Wippen was named to make arrangements for the event.

Three new building permits have been authorized by City Clerk W. B. Statham, his records revealed Friday. The largest is for a new brick residence for Dr. F. E. Clark on West Twelfth street, costing $9,500. J. B. Karnes of Abilene is the contractor. M. R. Surles took out the other two permits, one for $500 annex to his house on West Fourteenth and the other for a $3,000 residence on West Fourteenth. He will build the house himself.

A. A. Hutton, president of the Hutton Oil Corporation, announced Friday that his company had just brought in a nice shallow producer on its recently acquired Littlefield lease near Sedwick. The well was brought in from a depth of 555 and was being put on the pump today with an estimated production of 8 to 12 barrels a day.

Cisco Steam Laundry management entertained its employees with a chicken barbecue at Lake Strickland last night. J. L. Stokes, the new superintendent, introduced H. A. Hull, who, in behalf of the employees, thanked the Brown Bros. for the picnic. The long table was spread with barbecued chicken, beans, potato chips, pickles and sliced watermelon, with soda water to drink. Besides the employees, the guests included Mr. and Mrs. Blawn and family and Mrs. Will Dorsey of Eastland.

The jury lists for the second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth weeks of the September term of the Eastland county court at law is an "all-newspaperman's choice." The jury commission for this term, named by Judge T. J. Cunningham, himself a former newspaper editor, was comprised of Walter Murray of Ranger Daily Times; J. W. Cockrill of the Gorman Progress; and A. B. O'Flaherty of the Cisco Daily News.

John L. McMurray has reserved ringside tickets for the Dempsey-Tunney fight in Chicago, September 22. He will have as his guests on the trip Robert Gilman of Cisco and A. H. Rhodes of Eastland. Mr. McMurray has made sleeper reservations out of Cisco for September 20.

AUSTIN, Sept. 5.—Governor Dan Moody in the role of an electrician, headed the labor day celebration here today. The chief executive, who started his career as an electrician, holds life membership in the Taylor local union. The annual labor day parade, witnessed by thousands, was the most pretentious held here in many years.

Rev. J. H. Kendrick and family have returned to their home in Nashville, Tenn., after a visit with Miss Cora Harris and her father. Miss Emma Muller has returned from a vacation spent in Louisiana.

EDITOR IS CALLED.

NEW YORK, June 23.—Ralph M. Ingersoll, editor of the newspaper PM, has been called for induction into the army next Wednesday despite an appeal for deferment by Marshall Field, owner of the paper. Explaining his appeal, Field said he told the draft board "in effect that he (Ingersoll) was indispensable, although

I don't think I used exactly that word... I considered him as near indispensable as any man could be in a newspaper." Ingersoll, who is 41 and has no dependents, indicated earlier that he would not appeal the board decision.

ANCIENT ART OF GLASS BLOWING STILL THE BEST

An aura of mystery once surrounded the ancient art of glass-making. Secrets of the trade were known

MODERN AMERICAN CRYSTAL, handblown today by almost the same methods glassblowers used hundreds of years ago, appears above in three versions of the same basic design for a vase. Only to glassblowers and were jealously guarded. Glass workers of Venice in the 13th century were segregated on an island to prevent them from disclosing how their work was done. There they made by hand the delicate goblets and exquisite vases so highly prized by collectors today. Secrets of the craft, however, did escape to other countries, and were brought to America almost with the first settlers.

Made By Hand
Modern American glass, although handblown in almost the same way as it was hundreds of years ago, is invested with no such air of secrecy. Yet even today there are few outside the trade who are aware of the tremendous skill required to create by hand the beautiful modern crystal we admire and treasure.

Watching craftsmen in a modern "glass house" shape the white hot molten glass into pieces of beauty and utility, we get some appreciation of the great amount of time and hand work put into a single piece of today's fine glass.

Great Skill Required.
After the blowing and shaping of an object is completed, much work still remains to be done. The glass must be cooled slowly, a process which sometimes takes as long as two days. After cooling, the object is ground and polished and "crack-off" marks, where the glass was attached to the blowpipe, are smoothed out.

Although excellent glassware is today made by machinery, no machine has been invented to take the place of handwork in producing our finest glassware. Scientific research, of course, has perfected the glass "batch" from which modern crystal objects are handblown. But once the glass batch is prepared, the methods

From where I sit . . .

by Joe Marsh

MAYBE I shouldn't admit it, but there are a few things about this writing job I really like.

For instance, I like the part where . . . after all the writin' and the routine is done . . . I just set back and think about things in general. (Oh, yes, that's part of the job, too.)

Doesn't matter much what I think about. Sometimes I concentrate on one thing. Sometimes I think of lots of things, one right after the other.

Usually, when I get to thinkin', I send down for some beer. Seems a glass of beer not only touches the spot but it also sort of helps the thinkin' mood along.

It's such a peaceful, friendly beverage. Sort of honest and human. And it tastes good.

I like to hold my glass of beer up to the light and look through it. That beautiful, golden-amber color kind of fascinates me. Reminds me of the sunny barley fields where beer gets its start.

After all . . . when you stop to think about it . . . beer is a simple, natural thing. I read somewhere that all it's made of is good, wholesome farm grains and water and a little yeast . . . with hops for flavor. Nature's process of fermentation and the age-old art of the brewer does the rest.

I guess that's why beer is so wholesome. It really is the beverage of moderation. You just can't imagine anybody getting into trouble drinking a few glasses of beer.

Well, here I am . . . going on and on thinking and talking about beer. Probably could go on for hours. That's the way I am when I set back and get to thinking about things.

And by the way, taking it easy and sometin' . . . quiet and comfortable like.

Here Are Some Timely Hints On How to Get The Most Out of Your Electric Appliances

Take A Tip From Me!

Keep it Working

Don't overload. Drain after using. Wipe dry. Leave cover off tub until all dampness evaporates. Wipe cord dry, hang on hooks. Protect rubber rollers against nicks or scars.

Even the vacuum cleaner is working for national defense by keeping dirt out of rugs, draperies and upholstery and thus making them last longer. Clean dust bag after each use—it'll last longer, too!

Use only a damp cloth to wipe electric toasters, percolators, waffle irons, etc. Water may cause them to burn out. Have cords replaced and repairs made as soon as needed.

Remember that factories which once made electric appliances now are converted to war production. Keep plugs of irons, roasters, percolators, etc., tightly connected. Loose plugs cause points to corrode.

Home ironers are being given more work to do. Turn it off promptly when not in use. Make it last. Protect rollers against damage. It'll prove its worth to you.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

It's not a pleasant picture to contemplate, but War calls for "sweat and tears." And the Medical Corps, with its nurses and its volunteer Red Cross "Angels of Mercy," needs thousands of surgical beds for field and hospital on every front.

These beds cost approximately $300 each. They are the latest in modern hospital beds, with electric springs. In some instances special cots are used in temporary hospitals and there is a folding cot which may be used in ambulances. Your purchase of War Bonds and Stamps can buy many of these beds for the Army. You'll better if you know our boys every hospital comfort. Buy Bonds every pay day. Invest percent of your income.
