HOGS AT $14.25

Steers and yearlings were about steady on the Fort Worth stockyards Wednesday. Cows were slow and weak, with the better grades mostly 25c below last week's closing levels and the canners and low cutters 25c to 40c lower. Slaughter calves opened active and fully steady, but later sales were slow. Stockers were dull and steady to weak. Bull prices were unchanged.

Good-sized congregations continue to hear Dr. James T. Carlyon each evening on the lawn of First Methodist church in the special series of sermons at that church this week, states the pastor, Rev. Leslie Seymour.

The sermons are all specific studies of selected books of the Bible. Books considered so far have been Matthew, Mark and Luke, these having been preceded with a sermon Sunday morning on the Bible as a library.

Tonight the sermon will present the Book of John, which is, according to Dr. Carlyon, a gospel especially for mature people.

He has classified the other gospels in this fashion: Matthew the gospel for young adults, Mark the gospel for young people, Luke the gospel for children.

CISCO CATTLE AUCTION SALES LIGHT THIS WEEK, BUT PRICES GOOD AVERAGE; TOTAL, $4,800

There were fewer offerings at the Cisco Cattle Exchange auction Tuesday afternoon, sales amounting to about $4,800. A few large bunches were sold, but most of the trading was in the one and two groups. Some hogs and goats changed hands.

Joe Coats sold 35 cattle and E. C. Warren sold a herd of 11 cattle. J. A. Trigg bought a herd of 27, while E. C. Warren took a group of nine mixed cattle.

Editors' predictions on the outcome of the race vary from the Westlake News' expectation that "O'Daniel will do the usual stunt and win in the first primary" to Carrollton Chronicle's view that Former Governors James V. Allred and Dan Moody are "running neck-and-neck for first place, with O'Daniel lagging a considerable distance behind."

HELPING ENEMIES

The seriousness of disloyal acts in these critical war times is shown clearly in the case of Max Stephan, German-born restaurateur in Detroit. A jury has convicted him of treason, the highest of crimes and the most reprehensible in war time. His sentence may be five years' imprisonment, or $10,000 fine, or both, or it may be death.

FREIGHT GLIDERS

Col. Edward S. Evans, an American pioneer in the modern art of air gliding, foresees a revolutionary form of aerial transportation. He thinks transport planes or "air locomotives" will tow through the air strings of transport gliders, very much as ground locomotives now pull freight trains on railroad tracks.

How You Can Help Win The War On Wear And Save Money And Needed Metal

A solution of hot water and soda makes the job of cleaning fertilizer hoppers easier. Commercial fertilizers contain chemicals that attack and corrode metal. Unless fertilizers are cleaned promptly, they become badly corroded.

Lime sowers, also used for spreading calcium chloride on roads to keep the dust down, soon corrode and rust unless cleaned promptly and thoroughly.

Turn fertilizer box upside down and out with hose. Leave in sun to dry. When laying up machine, coat with light oil. Don't use old crankcase oil. It may contain impurities and give no protection against rust.

Lubricate bearings at each end of Lime Sower twice daily with a good quality lubricant that will resist wash-out, squeeze-out, or jar-out. Frequent lubrication will keep fertilizer or calcium chloride from getting into the bearings and causing them to seize. Lubricate wheel bearings once daily.

Examine the oil in air cleaner on your tractor daily. If impurities are present, change oil. Dust entering a tractor working under very dusty conditions without an efficient air cleaner may cause damage to such an extent that in 10 to 15 days new parts will have to be supplied.

LIME sowers and other fertilizer dispensing machines can be a constant source of repair trouble and expense unless they are promptly and thoroughly cleaned and lubricated after they have been used.

The farmer can save himself this needless purchase of repair metal by the consistent and thorough use of quality oils and lubricants. By winning the war on wear, he saves for our armed forces metal for the material they need so badly.

Skirts are getting shorter, trousers are going cuffless, pajamas are getting skimpier, and now the cloth conservations movement seems about to invade the bathing suit industry, if possible.

The government and the manufacturers are striving to conserve cloth wherever possible and despite what may be said or pictured—and what you may think—I'm sure savings can be made in bathing suits.

There won't be any more silk ones, of course, and rubberized materials are out. Wool is almost unobtainable because it is needed for uniforms, so most of the suits will be made of cotton.

These will consist of a brief, well-fitted pair of shorts and a comfortable close-fitting bra. I honestly think this is the best thing that could possibly happen. Swim suits should be designed and made for the benefit and comfort of the swimmer. We have come a long way from the days when the "perfect" swimming outfit for women consisted of a blouse, pantaloons, stockings, shoes and sunbonnet. These were neither attractive nor utilitarian. Modern suits are, and should be, designed to be of the least possible hindrance and to enhance the beauty of the wearer.

While the latest swim suits may be more abbreviated than before, not every woman can wear one with eclat. Anyone with a figure like Paulette Goddard's need have no worry, but some women may find it necessary to be, at the least, conservative.

Miss Jacobs Honored With Personal Shower

Misses Reda Wray Clark and Catherine Mae McDaniel were hostesses at a personal shower Monday night in the Clark home, complimenting Miss Marjorie Jacobs, whose marriage to Raymond Reames is soon to take place.

A patriotic theme was carried out in the floral decorations and all appointments. After the guests were greeted by Misses Clark and McDaniel they registered their names in the bride's book. They were then shown to the dining room where they were served a refreshment plate and life preserver mints. Punch was ladled by Miss Mary Louise Poe. A pretty arrangement of red, white and blue flowers made the table-centerpiece, from which streamers with a small personal gift attached to each, extended to the corners of the table. Lighted red candles in candelabra gave radiance to the scene.

A game, with all taking part, entertained the guests for a time. The assembly was divided into groups and books and magazines given them from which to cut pictures. The pictures were to represent various events in the lives of the young couple from childhood until marriage. The pictures were pasted in a book which was presented the honoree.

The array of pretty and useful gifts was brought in on a life preserver, the U. S. S. Reames, and presented to Miss Jacobs, who opened the packages and passed them for inspection.

Those present were Miss Marian Jacobs, Mrs. Wyatt Jacobs, Mrs. Flynn Reames, Miss Enlala Reames, Misses Mary Louise Poe, Jane Moore, Betty Lou Muller, Louise Statham, Myra Jean Tompkins, Anna Jo Tablieman, Marie Hunterman, Dorothy Childers, Polly Ann McDaniel, Anne Buckley, Mary Louise Sherman, Jane

Ellis of Brownwood, while Lieutenant Roberds is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Roberds of Rising Star, but until his induction into the armed forces Roberds was a resident of Cisco, city attorney and associated with Judge D. K. Scott in the practice of law. He was also assistant district attorney, representing District Attorney Earl Conner, Jr., in Cisco.

Woman to Woman

By HELEN HENDERSON

No one needs to tell the homemaker how important proper food (and plenty of it) is to personal family and national morale.

One of the government's first concerns in the conduct of the war is seeing that the nation's food products are grown, consumed and some of them preserved for future use with a minimum of waste. In wartime, more food than ever is required—and more glass containers than ever are needed to bring baby foods and beans, peanut butter and pickles, coffee and ketchup, milk, fruits and hundreds of other products to the consumer and to the armed forces.

Government Cooperation
So the U. S. department of commerce and the glass industry worked out a plan to produce this year even more glass containers than the seven billion made last year. The result of this plan you will see on your grocer's shelves very soon—new, rounded, simplified economy jars for all the familiar glass products, and for many products previously packed in other containers.

These fashions in glass jars are affected by total war just as fashions in wearing apparel. When next fall's fashions are introduced, fancy frills and furbelows and all the unnecessary trimming will be gone from dresses, coats and suits. The result will be a savings of millions of yards of material for other vital purposes. In much the same way, the new economy glass jars eliminate fancy shapes and odd sizes. The results here will be great savings in time, glass, rubber, metal and cork.

Amazing Machines
It isn't difficult to see how far-reaching the savings will be when you stop to think that glass containers are made by amazing machines that are almost human. Indeed, they perform the same tasks that men once did before Michael Owens invented the bottle-blowing machine that made mass production of bottles and jars possible.

different size glass jar must have its own iron mold in the machine. When various fancy shaped bottles and jars are made for different products, much time is lost because machines must be stopped frequently to change the molds. Now that jar sizes and shapes are standardized, fewer iron molds will be needed—and right there is a tremendous saving of metal. Then, too, standardization means that the molds which are used need not be changed so often. Here again is another great saving in time: The new jars have smaller closures—plenty large enough for convenience but small enough to conserve 20 to 40 per cent of the metal formerly used for the lids!

That's the story of what the glass container industry is doing to cooperate with the government's program of economy in essential war materials. It's good news, too, that millions of the new economy jars will be made by the famed duraglas technique, perfected a few years ago. Thus housewives will continue to get foods in the lighter, stronger bottles and jars made possible by this new method of making glass.

The new duraglas technique is more than just a new process in glassmaking. It is a combination of techniques, perfected after years of research, which permits glassmakers to produce containers that are lightweight but strong. From the raw materials that go into glass containers to the finished jar or bottle on the store shelf, each step is a scientific achievement in the duraglas technique.

When you see new economy jars on the grocer's shelf, you may not be conscious of any great change, for all your favorite brands will continue to be identified by the old familiar labels. It's good to know, however, that even the jars that bring our everyday foods to the table have been enlisted in the great effort to conserve time, materials and man power.

"A successful man is one who can make more than his wife can spend, and a successful woman is one that can land such a man."

Simple methods for community improvement which can be employed by inexperienced groups are contained in a small town manual just issued by the department of commerce.

U. S. Treasury Dept.

State Treasurer Jesse James found that a new high record for cigarette tax stamps was set in June when the receipts of his office from this source mounted to $930,383.28. Statisticians can break this down into the number of cigarettes easily by dividing the total by the three cents state tax on each package of 20 cigarettes. Roughly it figures 31,000,000 packs—or more than a million packs a day. A million packs a day means 20,000,000 cigarettes a day, or more than 800,000 for each hour of the 24. Allowing for the heavier smoking in daytime and early night, it is reasonable to conclude that a million cigarettes an hour are being puffed during most of the time.

If you had $40,000,000, couldn't spend a cent of it, but had to invest it and use the income, what would you do with it? That has been the problem of the regents of the University of Texas. The board includes prominent oil men, lawyers, a doctor, and one woman. This is how they have invested the university's $40,000,000: More than $20,000,000 is in United States bonds, more than $8,000,000 in Texas city and county bonds; $625,600 in State of Texas bonds; $93,444 in public utility bonds; $49,988 in railroad bonds; $30,770 in real estate mortgage bonds and $2,200 in foreign bonds. Beside the bonds, the regents hold $150,400 in insured shares of building and loan associations, $362,403 in mineral rights and royalties; $42,308 in stocks; $87,121 in real estate mortgage notes; $34,000 in accrued interest on notes receivable and lesser amounts in savings deposits and small notes.
