"Not one step back," Red Star quoted Stalin. "The execution of this task means the preservation of our country, the destruction of the hated enemy and a guarantee of victory."

WOUNDED MEN FIRST

This war has been amazingly rich in heroes, and scores of them have been feted and acclaimed—to their embarrassment. But some of the greatest have passed from this life "unknown, un honored and un sung" in giving their lives for others.

Two survivors of the bombed navy tanker, Neosho, recently told of the heroic behavior of men on that ship. Whaleboats had been launched and were filling with wounded sailors. A little pharmacist's mate tied up a shirt, filled it with tannic acid, and swam about from one boat to another, treating the victims' burns. Finally, on his way to another boat, he quietly sank and was not seen again.

The boats now had more men than they could carry, most of them badly hurt. One of the uninjured men, Lieut. Harry K. Bradford, a naval reserve lieutenant, calmly stood up and said: "I guess those of us not wounded will have to get off." He dove into the water, and other un hurt men followed his example until there were about 15 of them. Later the lieutenant and two enlisted men were picked up, but the rest had disappeared, giving their lives for the wounded as simply as they would have offered a cigarette.

The Nazis and Japs would never understand that sort of thing. With them, only strong and ruthless brutes have a right to live.

FOREST FIRES

Forest fires are a danger in war time as well as peace, though not so much gets said about them this year when the fires of war take most of the front page. But they destroy the resources of the nation, and must be guarded against by all travelers and campers.

Strange how many people are just a trifle careless about the campfires. They have built the fire for the evening meal, perhaps kept it going for warmth all through the night. Breakfast is over and the tent is down. An easy-going glance at the fire seems to indicate that it is out. So off go the campers. The bit of fire glowing underneath the surface smolders, perhaps for hours. Then a passing breeze fans it into a small blaze. The blaze reaches out for dry grass and twigs. It follows a trail of them to the nearest conifer. It catches a bit of the turpentine-rich foliage, and—there goes the big forest fire, sweeping onward, wiping out miles of valuable timber, small animals, and perhaps farm buildings in its way.

There is the cigaret-end, also, guilty of tremendous damage, and the match. Don't think it's silly to be fussy about fire. Trump it out. Pour water over it. Look at it again, and still again. Be sure. Your country needs that caution.

FILIPINOS FIGHT ON

It is reassuring to hear, from the Japanese invaders of the Philippines, the complaint that the stubborn inhabitants of those islands are still resisting. Or, as the Japs express it, "obstructing reconstruction."

Americans know something about that, remembering their own experience with the natives in the Spanish-American war. But the Filipinos who fought the American invaders then are now fighting the Japs not only for their own freedom but as loyal allies of the United States.

The friendly American conquest of those gallant Filipinos, when their resistance had been overcome, is one of the brightest spots in this country's brief dream of colonial empire. Now, as the half-civilized Japs try in vain to conquer them by force for their robbery and enslavement, Americans applaud their courage and give new pledges for their liberation.

BOOK FOR SMALL TOWNS

It's always difficult to know where to draw the line between a small town and a big one. There are rural cross-roads villages which think they are practically metropolitan because their population increased from 493 to 512 last year, and there are cities of 70,000 which think of themselves as hardly more than villages because they are suburbs of large cities and thus acquire inferiority complexes.

But the U. S. Department of Commerce must have some idea on the subject, because it has just issued a "Small Town Manual for Community Action" which tells small towns and cities how they can help to win the war. It gives advice on how to promote agriculture, retail trade, new and old industries, how to lure the tourist to leave his dollar, how to improve service establishments and real estate.

Public-spirited citizens and communities anxious to identify war efforts may get the booklet free by applying to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. One general and one specific point are of special interest. The first is the emphasis on the idea that it is up to the individual community to take stock of its needs, to analyze conditions needing betterment. The other is the advice offered to farmers as to how to get town folk to help them harvest their crops.

IN REMEMBRANCE

There is one about whom I never made facile rhymes,
Who was dear to me as only a lover is dear;

He was hawk-lean; his eyes were the color of limes;

He died in our youth—has been dust for many a year.

I have nothing to tell that had not been better said

Before all currents were slowed—the tongue frosted—

But this I would cry in remembrance of one long dead:

He loved me truly; for him my words are written.

—ELEANOR GLENN WALLIS.

An important meeting of local farmers was held in the chamber of commerce rooms Saturday to pool together and buy fertilizer at reduced rates, and another meeting will be held next Saturday to pool a carload of Minnesota state certified seed potatoes, which can be obtained at a price lower than ordinary uncertified potatoes can be bought on the market.

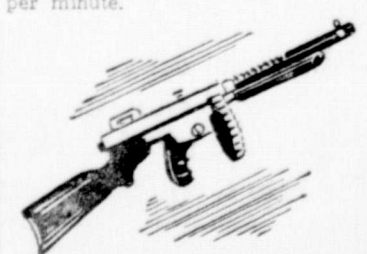

Orders amounting to over 20,000 pounds of commercial fertilizers were listed by the following farmers at this meeting: E. J. Carter of Eastland, J. M. Allen and B. H. Westerman of Nimrod, and Will Poe, Frank Harrell, Henry Stroebel, O. P. Weiser, Dan Winge, E. K. Winge, B. F. Trott, R. L. Poe and W. B. Starr of Cisco. Any further orders may be listed with A. An entirely new deep pay has been tapped in the northeast Putnam field in survey 2278 T. E. L. Railroad survey, by Kuhlernier and Kleiner Bros., known as the K. K. K.'s well, at 692 feet. The hole is standing 500 feet in oil. This proves the theory that oil can be found below post hole depths in this section, according to a local operator. Other pay sands have been found in this section at 300 and 400 to 500 feet, but this is the deepest test in the field and its outcome will prove of great importance to this section.

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

The Thompson sub-machine gun is one of the most effective war weapons. The "Tommy" gun was made famous during the Capone racketeer era although it was used somewhat extensively in World War I. It is the same caliber as the machine gun, firing about 600 shots per minute.

The "Tommy" gun is much lighter than the machine gun and is fired from the hip or shoulder and costs $130 each. Mos. people, buying War Bonds every day, could pay for one of these sub-machine guns for the Army or Marine Corps. Help your community top the War Bond Quota. U. S. Treasury Department

WAR PRODUCTION BOARD

July 24, 1942
Publisher Cisco Daily Press,
Cisco, Texas.

My Dear Sir:
I am very grateful for the two copies of the July 21 issue of the Cisco Daily Press that you mailed to me.

Your action in publishing this emergency advertisement to the people of the United States on the front page, and printing the heading in red, is a most generous contribution to the war effort. We are now confronted with the proposition that our war production factories can be kept going full time only if each and every one of us, as individuals, recognize the fact that our individual scrap, however insignificant it may be to us, is of extreme and urgent importance to the war effort.

Your handling of this emergency statement should go a long way towards getting this message across to the good people of Cisco. Of the more than 5,000 papers in the United States carrying these advertisements, The Press is probably the only one that has presented the statement in this unusual manner.

I am sending one copy of this paper to H. L. Gutterson, chief of the general salvage section at Washington, so that he can see what a fine job you have done.

With very best wishes, I am,
Yours sincerely,
LEWIS C. HUFF,
Assistant Executive Secretary,
Texas Salvage Committee.

company, states as his belief that Cisco has the best highway outlets of any town in West Texas. F. E. Harrell, who with Mr. Campbell and Commissioner Stubblefield, reported to the municipal chamber of commerce Tuesday night that they had made a trip over the road from Cisco to Pueblo, and conferred with those people regarding an outlet to Cisco from that community. As a result of this visit Mr. Harrell stated that right-of-way into Pueblo had been donated, and Commissioner Stubblefield had agreed to grade the road.

Henry Benham, the tank man, whose residence is in Cisco, says that over 40 rigs have been put in the Stephens county fields within the last 30 days. This field is booming following the recent raises in the price of oil. There is a very large amount of proven territory in Stephens county that has never been drilled and which will be rapidly developed now, according to local operators.

It is being circulated in this commissioner's precinct that the county lost thousands of dollars in shortage in rock that is being hauled and placed on the Rising Star and Cisco public road. The facts are as follows: The checker's family was sick and he failed to check 12 new trucks that began hauling on a certain morning and these 12 trucks hauled for two days before it was discovered that they were short about one-half yard. This shortage was discovered on the third day after these trucks commenced operations. When the shortage was discovered, the contractor refunded the county every cent of the shortage. Eastland county did not lose a cent. The above statement is given to keep the record straight. — H. S. Stubblefield, County Commissioner.

At a meeting of the city commission Monday night the following directors for the chamber of commerce were elected: W. H. Morse, A. B. O'Flaherty, B. S. Huey, Guy Dabney, E. R. McDaniel and A. Spears, all to serve a term of three years except Mr. Dabney, who is to serve out Elbert Blease's unexpired term. The
