NAZIS CLAIM 112-MI. ADVANCE ALONG DON

U. S., BRITONS MAY GO TO AID OF REDS SOON

WASHINGTON, July 31.—American and British troops may appear alongside the Russians, fighting in the Caucasus. There, even if not in Western Europe, may spring up a "second front."

The Russians frankly admit they are in "mortal danger." Premier Stalin has issued an order of the day to hold where they are or fight to the death. But the Nazis are only about 50 miles from Stalingrad and the vital Volga. Once there, they would have cut the Red armies in two.

If that happened, one group of Russians would be left to fight in the north and another in the south, with the invaders in between. Whereupon, the tacticians say, two things are likely to follow. The German troops long held in reserve for this purpose on the Kerch Peninsula would advance down the east coast of the Black Sea in an attempt to outflank the mountains there, while another force performed a similar maneuver down the Volga and the Caspian shore. The idea would be to avoid the mountains and meet south of them in the oil fields of Transcaucasia.

This would put the Nazis at the gateway to the Middle East. Ahead would lie Iran, the Mosul oil fields and the main routes to the Persian Gulf, India, Suez and the Nile—the very objectives which Marshal Rommel has been striving so desperately to reach by way of Egypt.

At some phase of this southward drive, therefore, the British and Americans will almost certainly intervene.

BOTH MOSCOW, BERLIN REPORT THE MOST INTENSE FIGHTING AT POINTS ALONG 300-MILE FRONT

The Red army turned back an Axis battering ram attack toward Stalingrad with heavy losses today but on the 130-mile front south of the River Don the Germans claimed a 112-mile advance toward the oil and rail centers of the Caucasus in "pursuit" of retreating Russian forces.

Both Moscow and Berlin again reported the most intense fighting at vital points along the curving battle front of more than 300 miles formed by the Don as it winds from the Sea of Azov almost to the Volga. The Russians, in response to Josef V. Stalin's order to stand and fight, had slowed or halted the main enemy push south of Kletskaya toward the Volga industrial center on the east, less than 70 miles away.

They acknowledged some withdrawals into the Caucasus on the south and the Germans claimed for the first time that they had routed the Soviet armies southeast of Bataisk in disorder and were now fighting for the railroad junction of Salsk, 100 miles south of the Don, and threatening the big junction of Tikhoretsk.

The Nazi high command also claimed that the Tikhoretsk-Stalingrad railroad had been seized at many points by the Axis advance beyond the elbow of the Don, suggesting that the enemy might be trying to make a short cut south of Stalingrad toward the lower Volga, Astrakhan and the Caspian sea.

The Germans already have cut the main Caucasus rail lines, but the Moscow communication reported that the Red army was battling to destroy the enemy forces that had crossed the river there. Berlin said Italian units were in action in this area.

It was northward on the upper edge of the Don river elbow that the Russians scored their most important successes in defense of Stalingrad. Dispatches from the front said that the Germans had introduced a new version of the 13th century battering ram attack, foming a spearhead of tanks and motored vehicles and placing their infantry inside the "V" shaped armored lines as they advanced.

In eight days of heavy fighting south of Kletskaya, the Germans crashed through to the banks of the Don but repeatedly were thrown back and finally repulsed to a point southwest of Kletskaya. The Russians said the fury of the fighting was illustrated by the German loss of 120 tanks and 200 men in one day.

The Russians reported they still were advancing on the Voronezh sector where the Nazis rushed up additional reserves in the last few days. Dispatches said that 1100 Germans were killed in one sector, but there still was no definite indication that the Soviets were able to launch a major counter-offensive on the north flank.

Nor was there any definite new development in connection with opening of a second Allied front in western Europe to aid the Red army.

COMYN PLANT WHIPPED INTO SHAPE QUICK

The Humble Pipe Line power plant at Comyn, which was badly damaged in an explosion Monday, is being rapidly replaced and will be up to 75 per cent capacity by Saturday night, according to J. E. Caffrey, district superintendent for the section. Temporary units are being installed.

The explosion seriously burned two men who were in the plant at the time. There was no sabotage connected with the explosion, Mr. Caffrey said.

Comyn is the site of an immense oil storage and booster plant. It was the power plant that was damaged. No oil tanks were burned. The station will be redesigned and rebuilt.

Twenty-eight men are regularly employed there, but approximately 125 men are now whipping things into shape.

BURKETT THANKS VOTERS

Hon. Omar Burkett, Eastland county representative in the 107th floratorial district, makes the following statement to the people of Cisco and Eastland county:

"I take this means of thanking the people of Cisco and Eastland county for their support in the recent Democratic primary.

"While the total vote received by me in my home county was very disappointing, nevertheless I sincerely thank you and promise faithfully to continue my efforts in behalf of all matters arising that will benefit the county. I urge you to bring to my attention special matters in which you are interested as they may develop from time to time.

"I especially desire to remind that we must be on the alert at all times to make sure of legislation that will perpetuate our junior college set-up, as the appropriations made for support of these colleges will expire September 1, 1943. This means that the present appropriations must be passed again at the next regular session if the colleges at Cisco and Ranger are to continue.

"The vote in the two counties was as follows: Eastland county—Burkett, 3,648; Callaway, 2,409. Burkett majority, 1,239.

"Callaban county—Callaway, 1,889; Burkett, 876. Callaway majority in his home county, 913.

Yours for service,
OMAR BURKETT.

PARK CLEAN-UP UNDER WAY AT LAKE CISCO

The public park near the Amusement Center at Lake Cisco is being thoroughly cleaned by the city of Cisco and will soon be in its usual tip-top condition, with everything handy and very convenient for the hundreds of persons who come to this Central West Texas recreation center for outings almost nightly.

Gordon T. Davis, manager of the amusement company, reiterates the invitation to all picnickers, extending a hearty welcome to use park facilities—lights, water, barbecue pits, tables, benches and wood—that are free to all comers.

It is no unusual sight to see several groups of outing parties each night—and some of them from places many miles away—enjoying these facilities for recreation.

CISCO METHODIST YOUTH ENJOY CAMP

Cisco Methodist youth are enjoying camp activities this summer under the auspices of the church.

Rev. Leslie Seymour, local pastor, says that two boys, Jimmy Dan Allen and Joe Christie, are attending this week a camp at Glen Rose for juniors. They will return tomorrow.

Next week some seven or eight boys and girls in the ages 12 to 15 will attend a camp for intermediates also at Glen Rose, where the Methodist church owns 54 acres on the Paluxy river, with recreation hall, swimming pool and several running wells of mineral water.

Those who have already sent in reservations for this intermediate camp are Charlotte Hutton, Shirley Hutton, Mary Jean Flaherty, Betty Flaherty, Lillian Ross Seymour and Patsy Osborn.

The following week, August 10 to 15, Rev. Leslie Seymour will have charge of another camp for young people above 15 years of age. This camp is jointly sponsored by the Waco and Cisco districts.

A special bus has been secured to provide transportation for the young people of the Cisco district who are to attend the camp next week for intermediates and also for the one the following week, the cost of this transportation having been supplied out of a district fund.

Capt. James F. Holliday said it was by far the nicest place he had pool or water to compare with seen in Texas, with no swimming that of the Lake Cisco Amusement company's plant here.

In Tuesday's Daily Press the statement was made by First Sgt. Walter Hayden that 10 light army tanks would accompany the soldiers here Thursday. Explaining the absence of the trucks to Gordon Davis, manager of the Lake Cisco Amusement company, Captain Holliday said they were left off by orders from higher up—that this practice had been abandoned for military reasons.

The official staff was composed of the following:

Capt. James F. Holliday.
Capt. G. E. Englehard.
Lieut. E. C. Burnett, Jr.
Lieut. H. A. Cathey.

GROWING OLD A DISEASE

Is growing old a disease? Few people realize that nine-tenths of all persons above the age of ten who die pass on from old age.

"Growing old does not begin somewhere in the sixties or seventies nor does it wait until the hair begins to whiten," writes Gretta Palmer in the August issue of Cosmopolitan magazine.

Dr. Henry S. Simms of the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City is a leader in this field of research. He is no visionary, but a scientist who has received grants from the Josiah Macy Foundation and other sources to conduct his investigation. And these are some of the things which Dr. Simms told his colleagues in a medical congress on aging:

If we retained, throughout our lives, the ability to fight off disease, which we possess when we are ten, our life expectancy would be 550 years, instead of the present sixty-three!

Last year 1,770,000 persons over ten years old died in this country; if they had been able to resist disease as successfully as the average ten-year-old, 1,646,000 of them would still be alive.

Age kills most young and middle-aged persons, as well as the really old—nine-tenths of all deaths of persons above the age of ten are caused by aging!

This is the foremost medical problem of the day. Many of our leading medical men think so; they have founded the new science of "gerontology" or the study of why we age. Practicing physicians, for the first time, are stressing the allied specialty of "geriatrics" or care of the aged. Geriatrics aims to give men and women added years of healthy life, in their prime, and to remove many of the disabilities which we now associate with old age.

Dr. Oliver H. P. Pepper of the Pennsylvania Medical School promises that physicians will soon be able to prevent ill health, loss of teeth, baldness and whitening of the hair in their aged patients!

Can you imagine a world in which the average man or woman works with full vigor at eighty-five? In which death comes, after a brief old age, at around 115? Such a world seems very close, after the conversations I have had with eminent gerontologists.

While we wait for the research men to isolate the age virus and thus double or triple our life span, we can study what medical knowledge today tells us about warding off the symptoms and maladies that usually afflict the old:

Would change in our environment ward off deterioration through age? The world has been made a good deal safer for all of us by such changes in the environment as the control of water supply, which eliminated typhoid fever as a common threat. But the world is still safer in some sections than in others, for reasons not clearly understood. Why has New Zealand a life expectancy five years longer than ours? Why do Americans in the prairie states tend to live longer than those on the Eastern Seaboard? For that matter, why do the married live longer than the single or divorced?

Does heredity decide the age at which we die? You know of families in which all the members have lived into the eighties. You know of others where death at sixty seems to be the rule.

Dr. A. J. Carlson of the University of Chicago offers one ingenious explanation of this: he says that heredity is important in giving some of us "the capacity to overcome, resist or adjust to unfavorable external factors." He believes that there are many unhealthy elements in our present way of living and that the long-lived among us are those who can best endure these strains. Remove the strains, he says, and the rest of us will live as long as they, and longer.

Dr. Carlson believes that four of the prominent enemies of long life today are faults of diet, working habits, infections and poisons. He suggests that we should study how the deterioration that accompanies age is speeded by gases from factories and automobile exhausts; by the effects of preservatives used in some foods; by our habits of smoking and drinking; by the after-effects of diseases from which we have "completely recovered." The only one of these factors which has been seriously studied so far is diet—and the results in that one field come close to magic!

CROSS PLAINS

Callahan County

A committee soliciting funds to clean Cross Plains cemetery secured $58.50 Tuesday. All contributions made by people who reside outside the city of Cross Plains are to be matched by the city government. Many people who wish to help in the movement have not yet been contacted; however, to save the committee much time in seeking each of them out, they are requested to turn their donations in to Drew I. Hill, V. C. Walker of the Citizens State Bank. The cemetery is again in a very untidy condition and much work will be required to not only clean it of weeds and ugly vegetation but repairs are needed in many places. Graves need to be filled, fences mended, stones straightened in some cases, domestic plants cultivated and possibly terracing of a portion of the grounds. It is pointed out that the monies collected will be used to this end as far as they will go.

Coming as a complete surprise to their many friends was the marriage of Miss Patsy Ruth Riggs of this city and Pvt. Vernon E. Harris of Burkett, Wednesday evening, July 22, in the home of Rev. and Mrs. Harvey E. Miller in Burkett, with Rev. Miller performing the ceremony. The couple was attended by Mrs. Oscar Gray of Burkett, sister of the groom. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Riggs, who live west of Cross Plains, in the Burnt Branch community. She attended Cross Plains high school. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Harris of Burkett, and is a graduate of Burkett high school. He has been in the army several weeks and is stationed at Camp Bowie.

ALBANY

Shackelford County.

Approximately 16,000 acres of grass was burned last week-end on the Morris Cottle, Albert Morris, Lloyd Morris and R. A. Elliott & Sons pastures east of Moran. The fire spread rapidly in the breeze, the fine grass, ripened during the past several weeks of dry, hot weather, burning like powder. Fire fighters from Moran and community went to the aid of the ranchers in whipping the fire out. Albany's grass fire truck, with its tank of water and pump, went to the scene of the fire, and the Moran men said the fire-fighting truck was a life-saver. Baker Matthews, driver of the truck, put the equipment wherever needed, going over all kinds of ground.

Shackelford county contributed more men to the armed services this week when five were called up by the draft board to take examinations. These men went to the induction center at Abilene, and after passing their physicals, all but one returned to take advantage of the 14-day furlough. The men who left Monday were: Glenn Taylor, Jr., Robert Morris Stincheomb, Marvin Edwin Newcomb and Victor Franklin Adamson. Robert Quincy Stapleton, colored, was examined Wednesday and returned for his 14-day furlough.

The revival in progress at the Moran Methodist church closed Sunday night. Dr. C. A. Bickley, district superintendent, preached at the morning and evening services Sunday. Rev. D. D. Denison led the singing. There were eleven conversions and reclamations during the meeting, which was termed a very successful one by the members. Rev. and Mrs. Denison left Monday afternoon for Delwin, near Paducah, where he will assist Rev. Marvin Fisher in a ten-day revival.

Jess Barker was elected post commander of Guy Taylor Post No. 61, American Legion, at the annual meeting held Thursday night in the Legion hall. Other officers elected to serve with him are: Wayne Wylie, first vice-commander; J. Arthur Law, second vice-commander; Roy Matthews, adjutant; John Tarleton, chaplain; Arthur Hamm, sergeant-at-arms, and Carroll Reese, service officer.

Rev. Joe Babb, evangelist from Temple, will preach the opening sermon Monday evening, August 3, at 8:30, for a two weeks' revival meeting at the First Christian church in Albany. He will be assisted by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Shropshire, of Fort Worth.

Judge and Mrs. Thomas L. Blanton, Judge Wm. W. Blanton, Miss Ann Blanton and Joe Blanton, the latter of Dallas, were called to Austin Monday to attend the funeral of Judge Thomas L.
