PRRAISE.

Secretary of State Hull did well in his recent address to the nation in paying a warm and dignified tribute to Russia for her magnificent war achievements. "To the Soviet Union," he said, "whose brave armies and civilian population have suffered unexampled losses through their magnificent feat of courage and sacrifice we have been glad to render all possible aid. It is our desire and our settled policy that collaboration and cooperation between our two countries shall increase steadily during and following the war."

He could do no less than this in fairness and also in common sense. For while Russia obviously was acting in her own interest rather than making a philanthropic sacrifice to western Europe, the net result was that Marshal Stalin and his steel-hearted millions of patriots struck the decisive blow against the greatest threat to civilization that has arisen in modern times. Without that blow the war might have gone against the western powers, or at least might have left a stalemate leaving the world for generations to come divided into two hostile camps. Now it seems clear that the issue can be settled and that civilization has a good chance of emerging from this period into a more settled and decent world.

GRAY LADIES.

At the New York Red Cross Chapter House the other day 235 Gray Ladies received certificates saying that they had been trained as recreation workers for civilian and government hospitals.

What is a Gray Lady? She's a woman in a gray uniform who gives a certain number of hours every week to a hospital in or near her home town. One crippled veteran described her as a "combination" sister-letter-writer and listener-to-troubles whom we wouldn't know how to do without.

But she does more than write letters for patients and listen to their troubles, though both of those labors are well worth while. She helps the wounded or sick to get through their enforced idleness without becoming depressed. She shows them how to do things—knitting, writing, and other handicrafts. She brings them drinks of water, raises or lowers the shade and does the dozen other little things which mean so much to the number of a convalescent, but which the nurses are now too busy to take care of. Gray Ladies give what time they can.

One woman, herself over 70, who bakes bread, cookies and other goodies to other women in her neighborhood says she figures it out like this:

"I'm too old to give bread. My mother, over 90, is with me and I cannot leave home for more than a half-hour or so at a time. Mrs. Jones told me if I do her baking, she would have time to be a Gray Lady, and that relieves a Nurse's Aide who in turn relieves a trained nurse, and so it all helps. We are all links in a useful chain of service. I buy bonds with the money I earn from baking."

NEW RIVERS.

One thing the country needs is more large rivers. At least, rivers large enough and so situated as to carry off the surplus waters that every now and then make the Mississippi a national menace instead of an asset.

Dr. T. Kennard Thomson, a New York consulting engineer, says that levees will never chain the Mississippi permanently. He would build three great canals or rivers, running parallel to the Father of Waters. One would start at Kansas City and run to the Gulf of Mexico, about 500 miles west of the Mississippi. Another would start at the Ohio and run south to the Gulf. The third would connect the Gulf with the Nicaragua river in northern Nicaragua.

Apart from the ever-threatening possibility of flood, the Mississippi now carries off annually a billion cubic yards of topsoil. Much of this could be saved, were there subsidiary streams to carry away and control the Mississippi's surplus waters.

It sounds like a large contract, but if this was as long nothing else is so astonishing as people are carrying out plans on a big scale.

EXTRA FLEET.

There is a good deal of talk applicable in war time as well as in normal times, which says, "Always expect the unexpected." It never happens, you're no worse off, and if it happens as per expectation you're so much in the good. That Italian fleet might be regarded as a bright example. Many cheerful onlookers were expecting something in the wake of Pompey's fleet once named Casca's, long ago.

And now that the Allies have found a fine big powerful fleet it is what are they going to do with it? Major General Fiddling Elliot suggests that it be used against the Japs. Could there be any better purpose? It hardly seems to be needed by the Allies in Europe. Such a gift from heaven would be a wonderful addition to the Pacific fleet, and might make a prominent part of the spearhead soon to be thrust against Japan. The Italian sailors could probably polish some of them.

STRETCHER—Hunter-green and black accented with gold make this stunning street costume worn by Ann Miller, Columbia screen player. Dress is actually a blouse and skirt— a wardrobe stretcher. Ensemble can be turned into six different costumes.

Bridgehead to Berlin and Tokio

THIRICE winner of the Army-Navy E award, shipworkers at American Car and Foundry Company shipyard in Wilmington, Del. have new cause for great pride in their workmanship. A telegram just received from Rear Admiral E. L. Cochrane, USN, informs them that "tandem barges of your construction were part of the spearhead of the successful invasion of Sicily."

The telegram further states that "the fact that the landing operations on a scale unparalleled in history were effective with a minimum of casualties and a maximum of aerial fires was in no small measure due to the excellence of the specialized assault craft."

Admiral Cochrane emphasized that "we shall need many more specialized landing craft for the big job still ahead—the establishment of bridgeheads direct to Berlin and Tokio. We are confident you will do your utmost to help provide them in time."

Another of the craft plants has been producing the light combat tank for almost four years. The above photograph shows one of these 15-ton light tanks being lowered over the side of a transport to a landing barge—also of craft construction.

NOTICE TO MOTORISTS

We Have PLENTY MECHANICS. We have been fortunate in securing the services of three new mechanics to add to our staff, which enables us to offer a more prompt and efficient mechanical service to our patrons.

The recent additions are Mr. Pete Clements, formerly with the Cisco War Training School; Mr. Walter Wright, formerly employed by Shobal Houston, and Mr. H. C. Ables, of Carbon. Old shop employes are Fred Hays, E. S. Townsend, Reed McKeen and Milton Cook. Mr. Alvin Wende, formerly with the U. S. Armed Forces, is parts room supervisor.

The fact that we still have the most needed parts, also aids in this service to you.

If your car is going to require some mechanical repair, or tuning for the winter, it would be well for you to have it done now while workmen and parts may be had. Every day you use the car that needs attention, serves to make the need for repair greater and the expense more.
