Cisco Public Schools and Junior College Enrollment Exceed Expectation

Enrollment in Cisco public schools and Cisco Junior College have been quite satisfactory to date, all divisions exceeding expectations.

While the enrollments in all schools has not exceeded that of last year, yet it has been greater than expectations, and additional teachers have been required in some of the schools to care for the additional numbers.

Supt. R. N. Cluck said that because older boys in the upper brackets were not expected to attend school locally, and because numbers of people had gone away to find employment, he did not think as many teachers would be required this year as was needed last term. However, after the opening of school, he found that several additional teachers other than those provided were needed to man the various classes and subdivisions. Nevertheless, all have been cared for and classes are moving along smoothly. The teacher load is now well balanced.

The total number enrolled in the public schools is between 1,100 and 1,200, and this is an increase over last year of this time.

The enrollment at Cisco Junior college is above 60 today, was announced, and the total is expected to reach around eighty-five. This will probably be a decrease of around 20 per cent, Mr. Cluck stated.

"When we consider that a decrease of about 34 percent obtains all over the state, in both junior and senior colleges, this stable enrollment for us is greatly to our credit," he continued. "Of course this enrollment includes part-time students," he added.

In discussing the school work of the students in all the schools, Mr. Cluck said he could not emphasize too much the importance of home study, and he wished that parents might organize their home environment for the children that it would be easy for them to do the home work required of them. Children who find favorable conditions for home study always show it in the good grades they bring home on their reports. Few are able to properly complete the work assigned for them by merely utilizing the study periods at school. There are so many necessary school activity divisions that home study is necessary. If a child is to grow up with proper training for social and community life, these school activities are necessary to educate him in group behavior, Mr. Cluck said.

But the Cisco schools are off to a good start and a high standard of work is expected, he concluded.

LIKES ARMY LIFE.

Mrs. Mamie Dell Jenkins, WAC private and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Jenkins, writes from the WAC training center at Ft. McPherson, Ga., that she is well pleased with army life and has elected posture model of her company. She works in the officers' mess and is classed as a private. Private Jenkins, 32, attended Cisco schools and entered service July 5, 1943.

FALL OF ITALY'S THIRD CITY AND LARGEST PORT EXPECTED SOON; GERMAN EFFORTS WEAK

NORTH AFRICA, Sept. 29.—The Fifth Army cracked the German mountain defense line in southern Italy, surged onto Naples plain and began the march on Italy's third city and largest port today. The fall of Naples was believed imminent.

Americans and British reached the Gulf of Naples with the capture of the naval base town of Castellammare Di Stabia, 15 miles south of Naples itself, and swept on in pursuit of retreating German troops.

Information reached London that the Allies had entered Pompeii, on the lower slope of Vesuvius three miles above Castellammare Di Stabia.

German resistance in the mountains above Naples plain broke yesterday after six days and nights of an Allied offensive rivalling in intensity any since the start of the war in the Mediterranean.

Battered by massed artillery that fired until the barrels were hot, plus the big guns of Allied warships, the Germans finally turned and fled down through the defiles onto the Naples plain.

Front reports indicated the Germans were in full retreat toward Naples, whose outskirts already were within range of American Long-Tom artillery.

The Allied advance swept up the entire Sorrento peninsula on the south side of the Gulf of Naples, the railway and highway junction of Nocera, five miles northeast of Salerno and nine miles northeast of Castellammare Di Stabia, and at least 30 other towns and villages.

Thus the fate of Naples was sealed and the port, sacked, burned and possibly already abandoned by the Germans, was expected to fall into Allied hands in a matter of days.

Farther inland, other Allied forces were advancing due east of Naples and threatening to outflank the city.

Among the townships or hamlets captured by the Fifth Army were Montemarano, three miles north of Cassano; Torella, five miles northwest of Lioni; and Montecello, five miles north of Capozzano.

Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark called on his Fifth Army for its supreme effort, and at dawn yesterday after an all-out barrage by American Long Toms and other cannon the infantry lashed out.

Overrunning the last German machine gun and mortar nest in the formidable mountain fastnesses, the troops swept through to the plain and the Bay of Naples.

The seizure of Nocera, which had been in no man's land for several days, meant an advance of two miles. Farther on the left flank the troops came down the mountain roads and swept into Castellammare.

The fight on the Fifth Army front has been exceedingly grim. German prisoners frankly admitted that they had had enough of it.

"We have been doing nothing but retreat," one said. "We are tired of fighting a rear guard action. We have only 17 men left out of our company."

Military observers said the Fifth had been in harder fighting for the last six days than anything since the big battles of the North African desert. Nothing for a long time has equalled the difficulty of the infantry's task as it ran through curtains of fire to bayonet the Germans from their defenses in the sides of defiles from which they commanded every track.

The British Eighth Army, sweeping on beyond captured Foggia, straightened its line on the extreme flank by moving up the Adriatic coast road to Zapaneta, an advance of 11 miles from Margherita Di Savoia.

The Allied break-through to Castellammare Di Stabia at the southeastern end of the bay of Naples sealed off the Sorrento peninsula and occupation of the entire peninsula opposite Naples following quickly.

Castellammare Di Stabia, 15 miles south of Naples, is the site of an Italian naval repair yard that was shelled by Allied warships during the Sicilian campaign.

Prisoners of the German 16th Panzer Division said it had suffered 50 per cent casualties.

A front dispatch from Reynolds Packard, United Press correspondent with the Fifth Army, said the Germans appeared to be preparing a new defensive line anchored at Mt. Vesuvius, breaching of which would outflank Naples and force a German withdrawal toward Rome.

On the Italian east coast, the British Eighth Army continued its advance northward from Foggia against only weak resistance.

Unfavorable weather hampered Allied air operations over Italy for the third straight day. Of the few enemy aircraft encountered, one was shot down.

The Allied mop-up of the north-eastern corner of Corsica continued uninterrupted with French and American troops closing in rapidly on the enemy evacuation port of Bastia.

HUMAN BOMB — Sailor Allen Gordon of Rock Island, Ill., was struck in the abdomen by a live 20 mm anti-aircraft shell which stuck there. Doctors worked behind steel plate to remove it. He'll recover.

ALLY OF THE DEVIL.

Hitler's horrors have spread lately, and seem worse with every passing day. When the Germans took Naples, which they did without much opposition because the Italians were demoralized and helpless, they might have held it as a base of operations. That would have been expected, although of course the invaders had no right to be there. A civilized army would have protected civilians and paid for its accommodations. Other nations, except Japan, still cling to the principle that civilians have some human rights. But not where Hitler and his destroyers are involved.

News reports have told how the invading Germans marched through that great city of a million people, burning and shooting and deliberately setting it on fire. It was almost as if the volcano of Vesuvius, near by, had broken loose. The whole city was soon aflame. And in that "city of horror," as the news reports described it, Hitler's modern barbarians marched about on a wanton rampage of destruction and cruelty, looting, burning and destroying, ruthlessly killing thousands of civilians and interfering with efforts to put out the fires.

Epidemics break out, and there are no medical supplies—the invaders have taken them.

Thus Naples dies, as so many other cities have died in this war of wanton destruction. And the mad rampage will continue until the German terror is itself wiped out.

This is not war. It is Attila the Hun, Ally of the Devil, again, after 1500 years, leagued now with a scientific savagery that would destroy civilization.

OUT ON LIMB.

The worried Finns, as the long winter begins to settle down around them, are doing more thinking than usual. They begin to lose count of the number of their friends, the Nazis. They are reported as worrying about their own position, tired of fighting for the Hitler gang, and wanting peace.

They are even ready to talk peace terms. Premier Lankinen says the country regrets being at war with England and wants peace with Russia, if she can be secured of her independence and territory.

It is people who play with fire who generally get burned. The Finns, when American troops advanced to their borders, have lost the friendship and trust of the Axis Nations. Americans are not likely to be so easily deceived and deceived as they are now. And there is a possibility now to send them the word, and they suggest they would, what if 1939 Nazi troops are quartered in Finland. That country is not entirely the Finns' land, but it is generally felt that they have been too compliant in dealing with the enemies of the free nations.

SILENCE.

An odd type of politician has appeared in Ohio. He is a Republican congressman named Cliff Cleveland—no name to remember, it had to be said with an air of some curiosity and interest. He hasn't been making any speeches. And when some one wants to know what's the matter, he replies: "Why should I bother the people with my opinions? They have enough to worry about already."

Perhaps it is just a new "line" or technique. But Cliff really seems to "have something." Congressmen are usually obsessed with the idea that they must go around making speeches, and that they're lost when the sound of their voice dies out. But there have been notable exceptions.

While making his way back to the hospital—he was a walking hospital case—Master Gunner Sergeant James G. Blalock spotted a group of Japs in the underbrush. Drawing his pistol, he entered the thicket and came out with nine Jap prisoners. Marine Sergeant Blalock now wears the Silver Star, awarded him for conspicuous gallantry in that Solomon Islands action. He can be proud of such a record. Can you be equally proud of your Bond buying record during the Third War Loan?

A number of contests were held during the social hour when followed. Refreshment plates were served to the group and Mrs. Gary L. Smith poured coffee from a silver service at an end of the face-covered table. The pretty dining room was gay with decorations of fall cut flowers. Members were then asked into an adjacent room where the kitchen shower had been assembled. A clever original poem was read by Mrs. Leith Morris, who represented the society president as a "bride" and E. P. Crawford and Mrs. Gary L. Smith displayed the gift packages for inspection. Approximately 40 auxiliary members were present.

THEY DO IT IN SOUTH AMERICA, TOO—New York, N. Y. — "Estamos economicamente gorduras," say the world-famous dance team Rosario and Antonio. However, in good old plain English it means "We are saving the fat," and that's an important thing to do right now no matter where our hacienda. For from kitchen fat we obtain the glycerine that is urgently needed for the manufacture of munitions and medicinal. A pound of fat will supply enough glycerine to manufacture 1.5 pounds of gun powder—and a tablespoon of fat will yield the glycerine necessary for 73 small-pox inoculations.

Canada's Women Keep 'Em Flying

UNIFORMED women of Canada's Army, Navy, Air Force, are Julia of all trades. They are the backbone for those who are in uniform. The women of Canada are not only in uniform, they are also in business, in industry, and in service.

The number of women engaged directly or indirectly in war industries has increased from 1,000,000 in February, 1942, to 2,000,000 in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1943. This is a record for any country.

The women of Canada are not only in uniform, they are also in business, in industry, and in service. They are the backbone for those who are in uniform.

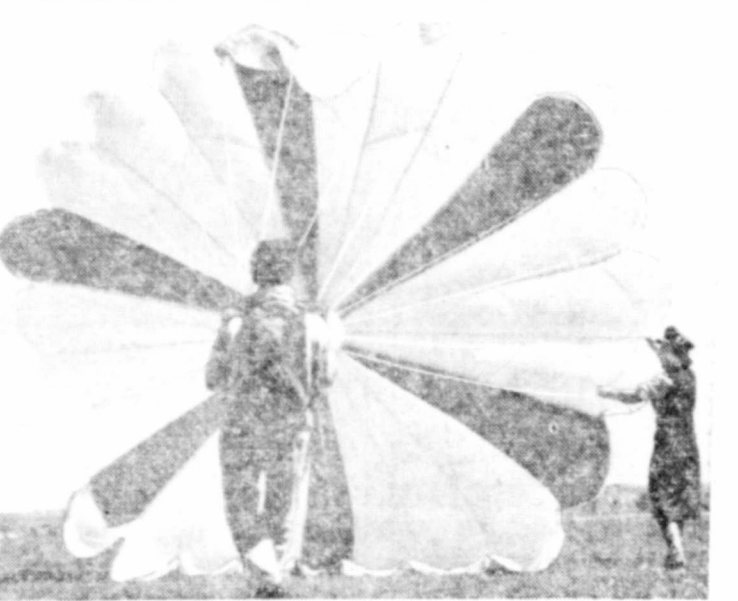

Office employees of the W.R.C.N.S. now will have the same rank titles as men in the R.F.C. and will be referred to as "sergeants," "lieutenants" and "captains" instead of the previous "corporal," "chief officer," "first officer," "second officer" and "third officer." The Canadian Women's Army Corps was the first woman's service to have the same titles as men.

Formed in November, 1941, the Canadian Women's Army Corps has enlisted more than 11,000 women.

The first woman to fly with the Royal Canadian Air Force was a Canadian Air Force pilot. She had piloted more than 1,000 hours by the end of 1942.

Women in the Navy are also making a big contribution to the war effort. They are the backbone for those who are in uniform.

There are 27,000 women in the armed forces of Canada. They are the backbone for those who are in uniform.

Huge aircraft engines hold no secrets from Canada's air women. Here they check the motor of a twin-engine bomber.

"Long Tom" Moves Up In Sicily

SICILY—A deadly efficient 155 mm. rifle, affectionately dubbed "Long Tom" by Yank artillerymen, moves along a recently shelled mountain road on its way to the Northeastern coast of Sicily, near Messina, to haul high-explosive shells into military objectives on the Italian mainland. Rugged tires on the big gun and on the heavy artillery truck which tows it, built by Seiberling Rubber Co. in Akron, Ohio, are specially constructed to stand up under grueling battle conditions.
