THERE AND HERE.

Foot by foot, yard by yard, furlong by furlong, that thin, muddy line of heroes pushes out along the coast of Normandy and eats into the terrain, clinging to every bit of hard-earned soil, consolidating its gains and cementing them with good American and English and Canadian and French blood, along with the blood of half a dozen other dispossessed nations.

So far in this long-awaited invasion we are clinging to the edge of dispossessed Europe almost with our eyelids and finger-nails. It is probably the toughest and hardest job in all this bitter war to save and restore Europe and redeem civilization.

Our fighting men will get the job done. But at what a sacrifice! We begin to understand now, as the casualty lists grow and the official telegrams come home that we dread to open. We realize more and more clearly that it is yet a long way to Berlin and Tokyo.

And as we gradually begin to realize what the job is, what it means and what it requires of labor, devotion and steadfastness, a most welcome new mood is visible here at home. We, at last, are coming to understand that our petty troubles and discomforts are too trivial to talk about and that nothing is more necessary to the success of our armies than thorough, unceasing performance of home-front work that bolsters the fighters; that they are depending on us in exactly the same manner that we are depending on them; that only 100 percent teamwork by front-line and home-front forces will give us the victory and the peace so essential to the happiness and advancement of our boys and girls and the future safety of this nation.

COUPON - STEALING.

A rationing scandal has burst in Cleveland. Ration stamps for gasoline, shoes and pretty nearly everything else handed out to favorites, presumably for a consideration. It is a disgusting revelation of what some people are capable of, when put in a position of public trust.

Human nature is such that probably what will anger people more than anything else is the discovery that the actual coupons, tailored from the gas books of the people this board decided to cut, were, instead of being destroyed, kept and used by friends of the cheaters. This proves beyond all doubt that the gas which might have gone into the tanks of the coupon-owner was actually diverted for the cars of a few people on the inside.

Such incidents occur also in totalitarian states, and have lately been reported by neutral observers. There, however, if found out, the crimes would be swiftly punished. So should they be here.

POST - WAR JOBS.

Employment in war industries has been falling off a little lately. The cause seems to be in the state of mind of industrial workers. Many of them evidently believe that the war is near its end, and the demand for war labor may drop with a bang, and they want to get into normal peace-time work before that happens.

They may be wrong about that. Nobody knows how long the wars now in progress will last, but there is no good reason to believe that the fighting will stop with a bang one of these days. The European and Asiatic wars may be as slow in ending as they were in beginning. In any case there will be a great deal of mooning up to do, of one kind and another, after the shooting has stopped, and a great deal of reconstruction to make civilization once more an operating concern. The experts mostly seem to think there will be work enough to go around for years to come.

DOG'S LIFE—Pup mascot of a medical detachment at Camp Carson, Col., 10-week old Caduceus, named after insignia medics wear, can't figure out why his GI friends tied pill box around his neck.

Times Are Changing Fast--

... and so are governments, religions, economic principles and even human nature, whether we like it or not. Likewise, revolutionary changes have taken place in the field of land titles. In the old days most titles were simple and good, but today the records are voluminous and the changing times have clouded many titles. So don't buy real estate without knowing something about the title and always insist on a dependable abstract.

For Our Children: The Rich Heritage of All Our Flag Represents

June 14 Was Flag Day

We can honor that flag and teach its glorious significance to our children by backing up our nation in every way possible.

Our soldiers are fighting day and night on the invasion front and thousands will never come back home in as good condition as they left. Some will be minus a leg, an arm, an eye or disfigured in some other way. Perhaps they will be disabled for life.

Now what is that worth to you. How much would you give to have sight restored if you were blind? All the money in the world would not tempt you to suffer some of those things that may come to your son.

The more money and equipment Uncle Sam has to give them, the more likely they are to escape them. Think of that when you buy war bonds.
