RED CROSS GETS 9,000 4X4 QUOTA

Cisco's Red Cross surgical dressings rooms, located in the Reynolds building and closed since July 17, will reopen Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock for work on a new quota of 9,000 4x4s. The rooms will also be open Thursday afternoon at the same hour and it is hoped that the usual number of patriotic women will respond on both days, national headquarters requesting that the quota be completed as quickly as possible.

In this connection figures showing the surgical dressings work performed by the Red Cross chapters of Cisco, Eastland and Ranger from July 31, 1943, to July 31, 1944, should be interesting to the general public. Here they are:

Cisco—108 volunteer women worked 5,917 1-4 hours and completed 101,530 dressings of various sizes.

Ranger—147 women worked 4,230 1-2 hours and completed 99,800 dressings.

Eastland—118 women worked 4,794 hours and completed 94,670 dressings.

Surgical dressings ladies will learn with pleasure that while the rooms were closed F. D. Pierce volunteered his services and repaired all chairs in the work rooms and also lowered many of the work tables, the most of these having been too high for the average worker.

FORTY-EIGHT REJECTED.

One hundred and fifty Cisco people gave a pint of blood each at the Red Cross receiving center in Eastland, Wednesday. Probably due to colds or other minor ailments, forty-eight Cisco people were rejected by the examining staff. This resulted in the Cisco quota falling below the expected 200 pints.

SCRAP PAPER DRIVE
SEPT. 28
LIONS CLUB

Public relations office of the Ninth air force headquarters, European theater of operations, furnishes the Daily Press with the following article concerning a Cisco young man, First Lt. James C. Paschall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Crigler Paschall, now of Beaumont, and grandson of Mrs. M. D. Paschall, Cisco.

"A Nazi JU 52 strafed and set afire on the ground in the latest feat of First Lt. James C. Paschall of Cisco, Texas. This accomplishment took place August 23, while on a fighter sweep with his P-38 Lightning squadron near Dijon, France.

"Lt. Paschall together with his squadron was out on a reconnaissance mission looking for air transports that were assisting in the evacuation of troops from southern France. They were circling about Dijon when they spotted the Nazi planes on the ground.

"Defying the flak fire that came up to greet them they swooped down to the deck and began strafing the planes. They then arose in the air, reformed and again went in to set them afire. Paschall was one of those who garnered a plane with his accurate firing and during nerve.

"Lt. Paschall is one of the daring Ninth Air Force P-38 Lightning pilots who have been in the forefront of the current campaign in France. He participated in the attacks against Cherbourg, both before and after D-Day. He helped rout the Germans from St. Lo and Vire. In the bombing of targets along the Seine and Loire rivers Paschall was in the forefront of his squadron. He has participated in over 35 missions and has been awarded the air medal. He is 23 years of age and single."

HUGE GERMAN ARMY STREAMING IN, BUT ALLIED SKILL AND WILL WON'T BE DENIED

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS AEF, Sept. 9.—American tanks and troops tore open the Ardennes Forest and Moselle River barriers almost within artillery range of Germany today while a fleet of 1500 U. S. warplanes struck a mighty softeningup blow at the Nazi west well bases in the Rhine and Ruhr valleys.

Thundering across the battle lines for the second straight day, a force of 1000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators and 500 Mustang fighters raked the German rear lines with bombs and gunfire, smashing at road and rail targets and the Rhineland cities of Dusseldorf, Mainz and Mannheim.

German supplies and reinforcements were reported streaming into the Siegfried Line, barely 18 to 20 miles beyond the advancing Allied armies in Belgium and France, and the U. S. 8th Air Force hurled its full striking power against them.

A front dispatch revealed that the new and deadly P-61, America's Black Widow night fighter, had gone into action to help choke off the flow of enemy reserves to the front.

Attacking behind the great aerial barrage, Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's American 3rd Army drove five solid bridgeheads across the Moselle river in the Metz and Nancy areas, while the U. S. 1st Army hammered out sensational gains running up to 12 miles through the hilly defiles of the Ardennes Forest.

German troops committed to the defense of the Ardennes, probably the strongest natural barrier west of the Nazi frontier, were in full flight for the dubious safety of their Siegfried Line, hounded every step of the way by American flying columns of tanks and motorized infantry.

On the 1st Army's southern flank, armored spearheads advanced 13 miles southeast of Sedan to the village of Blagny, only 28 miles from the Luxembourg-Germany-France border triangle above Metz which already was menaced by Patton's troops.

Other First Army units struck out east and northeast of Sedan for gains of 4 to 12 miles and captured St. Ceille, Haut-Fays and Maissin, the last barely 13 1/2 miles from the borders of Luxembourg.

The First Army pushed three miles southeast of the captured fortress city of Liege to within 18 miles of the Nazi frontier, crossing the Meuse and taking the town of Romee.

The Americans also forced a new bridgehead over the Meuse just west of Liege, and captured Neuville-En-Condroz.

Patton's 3rd Army Forces, meanwhile, pressed their slow, slugging battle against strong German covering units holding the heights east of the Moselle, deepening and strengthening five bridgeheads across the river above and below Metz and just west of Nancy.

Headquarters spokesmen revealed for the first time that Patton's mechanized army was being supplied by air with gasoline and oil, to get his huge array of armor started again on the road to the Rhineland.

A great flow of guns and supplies also was moving up to the Moselle by road and it was indicated that the "big push" was about to resume, if it had not already done so.

Canadian armored patrols drove into Ostend and Brugge and found both ports deserted. Dixmude, 15 miles southwest of Ostend, also was captured by the Canadians after a 35-mile advance from St. Omer.

The Canadians also closed in on Dunkerque, and battled deeper into the outskirts of Calais and burning Boulogne.

LONDON.—The Berlin Radio reported today that the Red Army had opened a powerful offensive aimed westward through Poland toward Krakow, last big defense bastion guarding the approaches to German Silesia less than 50 miles to the west.

The entire Russian front appeared stirring with new life after a relative lull of more than a month, marked mainly by the Soviet sweep through the Balkans which broke the Nazi grip on southeastern Europe.

A United Press dispatch from Moscow reported a "lull before the storm" along the East Prussian border, where the Red Army was drawn up for a smash into Germany proper. It said the thunder of thousands of Red Army guns was audible for dozens of miles in a blazing battle northeast Warsaw. Radio France said the Germans were evacuating Praga, the Warsaw suburb on the east bank of the Vistula.

(The British radio broadcast what is described as a report from Moscow that the first Soviet patrols had crossed the East Prussian frontier and returned with prisoners.)

The DNB News Agency reported the new Soviet offensive in the area of Przemysl, old Polish citadel captured by the Russians in their summer sweep through Poland, and Krosno, 46 miles west of Przemysl.

Far to the south, other Soviet forces were racing through Bulgaria toward the Turkish and Greek borders after an unopposed push across the frontier.

LABOR'S POWER.

American labor today finds itself in the strongest position it has ever held. Its rights and principles are recognized almost universally in important industries. It enjoys high wages and comparatively short hours.

These unprecedented gains happen to be, to a large extent, a by-product of the war era, which requires united cooperation industrially as well as on the war front. But having become so well entrenched, for whatever reason, it is natural to expect that labor will continue to be strong in numbers and influence after the war. And there are some observers who even talk of future "labor governments" in this country comparable to those which have sometimes prevailed in England.

Time and experience will tell. But even with the very strong position which labor now holds, its future strength and prosperity will still depend largely on its own moderation and statesmanship. For it still represents a minority of American voters, and so is subject to political control like any other group of citizens.

Naturally there is a more ideal situation when organized labor itself has the statesmanship to use its power temperately. And that will be expected of it if un-American leaders like Sidney Hillman are weeded out, on the familiar principle that of those to whom much is given, much will be required.

THREE THOUSAND AIRPORTS.

The aeronautical chamber of congress, suggesting that peace-time airplane manufacturing is now just about where the automobile industry was a generation ago, would like to have the government build 3,000 new airports, of which all but 100 would be small fields for the use of private planes. The estimated cost would be about $1,000,000,000.

In a war-time, new deal era when billions are tossed about so lightly that money has almost lost its meaning, such a project may be welcomed hilariously, with the casual query of "What's another billion dollars more or less?" Many citizens, however, will ask seriously whether this is the way to go about such a problem. Many will wonder why the expansion of aviation may not be safely left to private enterprise as was automobile expansion. Some will ask, too, what is going to happen to the vast system of public highways we have built, at great expense, if traffic in general takes to the air.

GI LAUNDRY.

Assuming that American laundries will return to pre-war standards of service after the peace treaties are signed, returning GIs are going to miss the challenge to their gambling instincts that their own laundries hurl at them.

When a new man reports to a station, he will swear like a good trooper the first couple of times his laundry bundle comes back with size 36 pants instead of the size 32 he sent out. His futile complaints will be registered with the PX or ship's service officer the first time he gets back a torn and oil-stained shirt for the new one he bought and wore just twice. Before long, the system appeals to his sporting sense. He will start sending his worn-out gear to the laundry instead of throwing it away. Maybe he will get back somebody's nice new gear for it, and often he does.

It's like a poker game. Anyone who sits in will win and lose while the play is on. What counts is how a player stacks up at the end of the game. In the case of a GI laundry, it's how many of a man's own good pairs of pants have come back to him, or how many perfectly good shirts he has garnered in for his ragged ones at the time he is transferred to a new station.

It's going to be pretty dull after the war, knowing that whatever is sent to the laundry will come back. There is no chance under that system for a man to better himself.

POST-WAR MAGIC

Storybook automobiles—light metals—plastics—100-octane gasoline—television—electronics... Postwar America is in for an incredible and marvelous homelife.

With the coming of electronics, all-electric kitchens, washers that do everything but laundry-mark, let's not lose sight of why we so avidly yearn for these coming tools to make our leisure hours longer. Time was when the thought of purchasing additional electrical appliances had to be carefully considered, lest we exceed our budget—our cost for electric service was about as much as we felt we could afford. Now, after many years of increased use of electric current, we find the cost of service very little greater!

More and more West Texans are telling their neighbors that here is one household item that has stayed down in price... that they are using twice as much electricity as they did fifteen years ago at the same monthly cost!

WHY? You don't have to get a crystal ball to figure this out—steady reduction in cost of electric service has been attained by strict business management... and because company employees consider it their personal responsibility to see to it that all additional costs are eliminated in rendering such service.
