Highway Meeting Held At Floydada, Saturday

Meeting of Representatives from Cities Traversed by Highway 70, At Floydada, Saturday

Starting a united movement to stimulate interstate traffic over United States Highway No. 70, representatives from nine cities located on the highway met in Floydada Saturday, to ascertain the problems to be confronted in promoting a year-round road that would yield a heavy traffic through the cities traversed by the road. Maury Hopkins, Secretary of the Plainview Chamber of Commerce, was elected chairman of the meeting and S. W. Ross, Secretary of the Floydada Chamber of Commerce, was appointed secretary. Hopkins stated that the road was now practically a year-round road through all of the states, starting with the District of Columbia to the Texas State line, from the Texas state line, through Wichita county, Wilbarger county, parts of Foard and Cottle counties with the bonds already voted for the completion of the roads the above mentioned counties, including Motley and Hale counties. The counties that have not yet voted bonds are: Floyd, Lamb, Bailey, and Parmer counties, the only counties on the route from Los Angeles to Washington, D. C., that does not have a hard surfaced road as New Mexico and Arizona have already provided all-weather roads on this route.

All present agreed that the best traffic stimulator for the route would be the completion of the all-weather roads through counties that do not have hard surfaced road.

A committee was appointed, one from each city on the Texas portion of the road to go before the State Highway Commission to ask the cooperation of the commission towards finishing the roads through the counties that have already voted their bonds. R. Q. Silverthorne, President of the Plainview Chamber of Commerce was appointed as a committee of one to arrange for a date with the State Highway Commission.

The cities represented at the meeting included: Wichita Falls, Vernon, Crowell, Thalia, Paducah, Floydada, Lockney, Plainview, and Olton. Speakers from the different towns were: John Boswell and J. H. Allison, of Wichita Falls; Grady Shipp and Judge Harry Mason, Vernon; Mack Boswell and County Judge George Self, of Crowell; B. F. Hobson, of Paducah; Lon Davis, Floydada; Fay Guthrie, Lockney; R. Q. Silverthorne, Plainview, and Fred Schrier, of Olton.

Hopkins and Ross were elected permanent chairmen of the Highway 70 Association.

DEATH PENALTY GIVEN McKEE IN SLAYING

Lamesa, June 24.—Ira McKee Tuesday was under sentence of death for the slaying of W. R. Billingsley, merchant of Sparenburg, last March.

A jury Monday night deliberated only 35 minutes before agreeing on a verdict of death.

Although McKee smiled when the verdict was reported, his two sisters in the courtroom fainted.

No announcement of appeal was made immediately.

Billingsley was killed during a hold-up and McKee was captured near Athens.

Testifying for the State Monday Sheriff Gib Abernathy of Palo Pinto county said he believed the defendant was of sound mind.

He said he had known McKee for 20 years and believed him rational throughout that time and at the present.

"He told me when I was bringing him back from the Oklahoma penitentiary in February that he believed he was losing his mind," the sheriff related on direct examination, "but I believe him sane."

WHEAT CROP AROUND RALLS IS SHORT

Ralls, June 22.—While the wheat production in the Ralls territory is short this year, the crop is now moving. Local elevators are reported to be paying around 72 to 75 cents per bushel this week. The grain is testing well, running from 58 to 62 and the yield is from nothing to 20 bushels to the acre.

Quite a number of the farmers plow ed up their wheat on account of the continued drought. It is estimated that not more than twenty cars of wheat will be shipped from Ralls this season.

Most every one having wheat this year were well paid for their seed and labor by the pastorage, even though they did not harvest.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jones of Canyon spent the week-end in Lockney.

LOCKNEY GIRL ON HONOR ROLL AT TECH

Lorene Workman of Lockney made the honor roll for the spring term at Texas Technological College with an average grade of B plus on 15-17 term hours of work, according to the report of the registrar's office.

TEXAS BASEBALL FANS TO HAVE GAMES AT NIGHT

Baseball at night will be seen in Texas this summer on more than one field, if present plans go thru. Houston expects to have its baseball park equipped with the necessary electric lighting by July 1, and nearly every other city in the Texas circuit is at least considering the change. The first league games at night were played this year in Des Moines and the success of the experiment has been so marked, the lighting being perfect and the attendance being much improved, that baseball clubs all over the country are considering installing the necessary equipment. The Houston plant will necessitate an expenditure of $25,000 and the system used at Des Moines will be used there.

SWISHER COUNTY IS GIVEN 7,344 PEOPLE IN 1930 CENSUS

Plainview, June 22.—Swisher county's population is 7,344, according to a preliminary count of the 1930 census announced by Owen M. Unger, of Plainview, district supervisor. This compares with 4,388 in 1920. The county gained 2,956 inhabitants, increasing in the 10-year period its population by 65 per cent.

There were 1,023 farms in Swisher county this year compared with 770 in 1925, and 105 unemployed persons at the time of the census.

75 CARS OF WHEAT SHIPPED FROM SILVERTON FIELDS

Silverton, June 21.—At the close of the third day of this season's wheat market a total of 75 cars were billed out, and all elevators full. A bumper crop is expected. A day and a night crew is provided some of the combines and also some of the elevators.

Machines and the market hit it with a snap like they fully expected to close the season out before the bad hits. The grade of wheat is well up to that of last year and the total yield will likely far surpass that of last year.

Three hundred cars were shipped from here last year and it is predicted that the market will reach 400 cars this year.

All business tingles with keenest interest of the needs of the harvest. Highways are lined with trucks, and the loads of the "goldne grain" are always given the right of way. Even the Fort Worth and Denver is making the harvest needs its first business.

GAS FURNACE HEATS IN WINTER, COOLS IN SUMMER

A recent innovation in the house furnace line is a gas apparatus that heats in winter and cools in summer. Using gas heated air in cold weather, when summer comes it can be used for circulating water-washed air to reduce the heated house atmosphere, operation being entirely automatic by means of a thermostat. The apparatus occupies only three square feet of floor space and can be placed anywhere in the house.

Rev. E. D. Morgan and family left this morning for California, for the benefit of Mrs. Morgan's health.

NEWS FROM THE ROTARY INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION

Chicago, June 26.—Legislation for the future guidance of Rotary was the principal business before the Silver Anniversary Convention of Rotary today. Two of the eleven resolutions which propose constitutional changes, offered by the Rotary Clubs of Philadelphia and Pittsburg, would provide for "past service" memberships for those who retire from active business.

Rotary rules heretofore have always restricted membership to active business men, only one in each club from each district line of business or profession. Another resolution proposed by the Rotary Club of Madison, Wis., would elect half the board of directors each year for terms of two years. International directors now serve one year terms.

The 3,300 voting delegates discussed the resolutions at a private session Monday and were prepared to vote on them today. John E. Carlson, of Kansas City, Kansas, served as chairman of the Resolution Committee. He has one of the longest "perfect attendance" records in Rotary, having been present at a Rotary meeting each week, at his own club or some other, for twelve straight years.

Following the action on the resolutions, Prince Iyosato Tokugawa, the head of the family which ruled Japan from 1603 to 1867 as shoguns, spoke on "national aspirations" and their effect upon international relations. Prince Tokugawa was appointed president of the Japanese House of Peers in 1903 and has presided over the upper branch of the Japanese parliament ever since. He was educated both at home and abroad. He was the senior member of the Japanese delegation at the Washington disarmament conference in 1921. Immediately after his address Prince Tokugawa prepared to leave for Ottawa to visit his son, the Japanese Minister to Canada, and also the Governor-General of Canada, Lord Willington.

In July he is to attend the inter-parliamentary conference at London and following that the International Red Cross Conference at Brussels. Prince of Tokugawa is head of the Japanese Red Cross, and many other important civic organizations of Japan.

In honor of his visit, the "Black

Horse" troop, a locally famous cavalry unit, was to be turned out for the first time as guard of honor.

The convention was to be divided this afternoon into sixteen assemblies for the discussion of problems of international affairs, on which Rotarians as business and professional men could exert their personal influence.

The Chicago Club, host to the twenty thousand visiting Rotarians and their wives, had prepared for tonight's entertainment a "Venetian Carnival" in Lake Michigan off Navy Pier. Scores of gaily decorated and illuminated yachts and power boats paraded around the pier in the inner harbor, competing for valuable prizes. From huge barges, anchored inside the break water, and from the top of the break-water itself, a display of fireworks more elaborate than anything ever presented in this country, was set off while searchlights, seaplanes and aerial bombs added their thrills.

Ballooning upon international officers for the year starting July 1, occupied the morning. Besides the two candidates for president, Raymond J. Knoepfel of New York City, and Almon E. Roth, of Palo Alto, California, there are ten candidates for the five places as directors open to Rotarians of the United States. Results of the election will be announced tomorrow.

Arthur Chadwick, London, England, advertising man, will be announced tomorrow as the choice of the Rotarians of Great Britain and Ireland for their representative on the International board of directors. Smith L. P. Free, of Masterton, New Zealand; Luis Chavez Velando, of Arequipa, Peru; and William de Cocy Buning, of The Hague, Holland, were chosen by the retiring board of directors as directors for next year. Their selection will be ratified by the convention tomorrow, along with the governors of the 75 Rotary districts all over the world, who were nominated by the Rotarians of their districts this spring.

After two days devoted to vocational discussions and community problems, today was largely concerned with international affairs, and tomorrow's program will emphasize the relation of countries even more strongly. The principal address of the day will be delivered by Admiral Mark Kerr of London, England, veteran of the British naval, military and air services. His topic, one of the most significant of the convention, will be "the interdependence of nations."

A symposium of the efforts to foster the advancement of understanding, good-will and universal peace, presented by speakers from Europe, Latin-America, Asia Minor and China, is the concluding series of addresses of the convention tomorrow. These speakers will bring before the delegates a picture of the individual efforts on every continent, to bind together the 153,000 Rotarians into a world fellowship of business and professional men, united in the ideal of service.

100 to 125 Cars of Wheat Shipped

Harvest in Full Swing in Floyd County—Much of the Grain Is Being Held By the Farmers

At the time of going to press there has been some where in the neighborhood of 100 to 125 cars of wheat shipped from the local elevators, only a part of this has been sold, most of the grain is being held by the farmers, hoping for better prices.

It has been the hope that wheat would advance, but to date it has gradually declined, and these seem to be little prospects for it to advance so far as those in authority have given out in the daily press. The farm board have so far declined to ask for government relief, as was done last season.

It is said the unsettled condition of the country, the recent slump in the stock market, and the attitude of the exporters concerning American wheat buying, is the cause of the low price of grain.

It would seem presumption upon the part of any one to give advice as just what to do in the matter of holding wheat. It does not look like it could go much lower, but of course it could, and may do it. The general hope is, that surely the market will soon reach the bottom, if in fact it is not already there, and take a rise, this is the hope of the bulk of the farmers who are holding their grain.

There will be by the end of the week more than half of the grain harvested, there is still lots of grain yet in the fields.

MASONIC LODGE ELECTED OFFICERS

At the meeting Saturday, June 14th, the Lockney lodge, A. F. & A. M., No. 867, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Clyde Cummings, W. M.; Marvin Cox, S. W.; Ernest Fowler, J. W.; John C. Broyles, Treasurer; Jesse Cox, Secretary; W. E. McClure, Tyler.

GOOD CROPS IN LOCKNEY TERRITORY

Cotton and grain sorghum crops in Floyd county are up to good stands and the growing conditions are ideal according to landholders. Insect damage has been small and prospects are bright for the crops to make a rapid growth within the next month. Ginners and others closely allied with the local conditions estimate the feed and cotton acreage to be about the same as 1929, which is 30 per cent below the normal acreage.

Farmers in the irrigated sections are busy cutting alfalfa that is producing a heavy yield. On account of the heavy rainfall during the late spring and early summer, very little irrigation was necessary.

Ons and haley are ripening fast with a low yield expected from every section of the county, however, a number of the dairy farmers have been well repaid from pasture received from these crops.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—On a pleasure trip on a liner in eastern waters, made possible by a lucky turn of fortune's wheel, the narrator, Philip Amory, impatient but well-born young Englishman, World War veteran, now a trader at Daru, on the island of Papua, New Guinea, plunges overboard to save the life of a young musical comedy actress known on board as "Gin-Sling." Hailed as a hero by his fellow passengers, Amory is chiefly conscious of the warm regard of a girl in the assemblage, whom, on the instant their eyes meet, he feels is the "only girl."

CHAPTER II—He learns she is Pia Laurier, member of a wealthy New South Wales family, and, after their introduction, tells her something of his life in Papua, including his knowledge of a wonderful gold field at Talsia, on the island, though he does not reveal the name of the place. He is told by "Gin-Sling" (Genevieve Treacher) that Pia is engaged to Sir Richard Fanshawe, prominent in the islands. Amory leaves the ship, his holiday ends, as Fanshawe comes aboard, eager to greet Pia. Amory, however, is confident the girl is not indifferent to him.

Where was the connection? I would have given much to know. But weeks passed, and I was no nearer recalling the vague, three-parts forgotten thing that linked Sir Richard Fanshawe to Daru and its sea-scented and windy doorways, and my little trading store.

And now I have to relate when, and in what manner, enlightenment came. I had gone up to the Residency, on an afternoon when there was something doing more than usual; the R. M. (resident magistrate) was back from a wild patrol beyond the utmost rim of civilization or knowledge; an A. R. M. (assistant resident magistrate) and a patrol officer happened to be "in" at the same time, and this was an occurrence so unusual as to warrant, fairly, a dinner party. David Bassett, the R. M., a very good friend of mine, had sent a prisoner to my store with a note—

"Dear Amory:
"Come round to dinner if you can. Northanger and Purchase are back. No particular food, but a good deal of jarning. Have you an egg? If so, send or bring it, under careful escort."
"Yours,
"D. Bassett."

I sent him all the eggs I could muster. In Papua, you must know, eggs are the test of popularity, the medium by which friendship, servility, hope, esteem, all find expression. You borrow eggs from prudent people; beg them from anyone who you think may be fool enough to give; buy where you can (but that is seldom), present to your sweetheart, your chum, your friend in hospital; bring, with a servile grin, to the man in high position, the man who has lost you money, or can get you promotion. Eggs, in Papua, are the true social barometer. . . . I had eggs, and always gave Bassett some when he asked for them. Bassett was R. M., and could be useful to me; besides which, I liked him; furthermore, on this occasion, I was going to be asked to eat the eggs, or help to do so.

Following my eggs, I went up to the Residency. Several men, like large joints of meat enclosed in a rather small most safe, were sitting within the transparent hessian walls. I had expected three, but I saw four. Who else, besides Northanger and Purchase, I wondered, was "in"?

"Hello, here's Black Sheep," somebody said; and my host began introducing.

"Northanger, Purchase, you know the Black Sheep. Mr. Spicer, Mr. Amory."
The newcomer—he was a fattish man with extremely flat feet and a sleeked head of fair hair; young, good looking in a disgusting sort of way, and dowered with an excess of the manner sometimes mis-called "Oxford,"—fixed me with a cool stare, and demanded of the R. M.—"Why do you call him Black Sheep?"

"Mostly because his eyes are black, and his hair, and partly because he's a decent sort of chap," replied Bassett, staring back, at the fattish man. Mr. Spicer immediately dropped me out of notice, took a watch from his pocket, and yawned.

Bassett rang the bell for dinner. "Who is he?" I asked, in a whisper, of Northanger, as we went into the dining room, a clean, polished, rather prisonlike apartment that shouted in every foot of its barren expanse, its owner's bachelor condition.

"Fellow who's come across to make arrangements for some mineral prospecting crowd," answered Northanger, a little wearily.

We fled in. "Why did you ask him?" I found time to demand of Bassett. And Bassett, looking at me with large sad eyes, answered simply—"I never did; he wished himself onto the party," and took his seat.

Through the turtle soup—we are usually sick of turtle soup in Daru—through the fish (we are almost always tired of fish, because we get it plentifully, and free) through the roast of dugong, and the inevitable custard pudding and tinned pears. Mr. Spicer talked, with just so many pauses as would allow of his eating an excellent dinner. It seemed that he had acquaintances among most of the titled families of England; that they all valued him highly, and that he had been chosen to come ahead and "organize" the expedition, by a mass meeting of marquises, dukes and earls.

"This," he did not forget to tell us, "is Emplah stuff. Nothing colonial about it. Development of the British Emplah, on which the sun never sets."

"Our chief, Sir Richard Fanshawe—"
At this point, my slack attention tightened. "Your what?" I rapped. "Who did you say?" For I thought—being bored half asleep—that my ears were playing me false. So often had that name hummed in my head, between sleeping and waking, that I could not believe I was hearing it actually spoken by some one else.

"Sir Richard Fanshawe, K. C. V. O. Celebrated airman in the War. Extremely successful manager of companies devoted to the extension of Emplah interests. Chief in this matter, if any one is chief but myself. I expect him to follow very shortly, via Port Moresby."

I don't know what it was—maybe the new interest, the fresh channel of feeling opened up, by Spicer and his talk; maybe the mention, from an unexpected quarter, of Fanshawe's name—but something, at that moment, set off a fuse beneath the long dormant part of my memory, and exploded it into action. I knew, with certainty, where and how I had seen Sir Richard Fanshawe before—my G—, I knew!

In the glass that hung opposite the table, I saw my face turn to something like a piece of white blotting paper, with black blots for eyes and brows. I didn't know that I saw it; I remembered that after. At the moment, I was only concerned with getting out of the house. Spicer, the R. M., Northanger and Purchase, might all have been taken out and drowned together in a bag, for what I cared. There was nothing that I cared about, nothing that I knew, save that mad instinct to bolt off the course and get away.

We had done dinner, and were just moving back into the mis-called mosquito room. I touched my host on the shoulder.

"Sorry," I lied, "but I've got a touch of fever; I'll have to go home."
"You do look most awfully sick, Black Sheep. Better get to bed; you might be going down with black-water."

"Night!" I said, and slipped away. As I descended the veranda steps, the loud, high voice of Spicer was still holding forth. "Where you have failed," he was telling Northanger and Purchase, who had mapped out enough new country to deserve a dozen R. G. S. medals—"Where you have all of you given way"—(there was not a man in the room but had performed feats of surprise, attack, capture among the wild cannibals of the interior, enough to furnish plots to a dozen "movies")—"I shall succeed; I and my chief. We shall plant the flag of the British Emplah where never flag has waved before. We are organized; prepared, for anything that may happen. What we expect to find . . ."

I remember wondering, as I went through the garden, and into the croton walk, at dog trot, if Spicer and his gang, perchance, had picked up some rumor of the secret that was my capital and my hope. I remember telling myself that it did not matter if they had. Nothing mattered except what I had, with shock and horror unappealable, recalled.

. . . Nineteen—nineteen the year; myself, newly demobilized, spending my gratuity money in a hurried trip through the South Sea Islands that I, in common with thousands of others, had always wished to know. Somebody who said—"You should have seen The Islands years before, before the War—ten years before. They're not what they were. Too many dashed tourists now. If you can handle boats, get a cutter with a bit of a cabin, and go 'way back. Where from? Anywhere almost. Out of reach of steamers and Cook tickets, that's all. . . ."

The cutter hired; a native or two engaged as crew. Weeks, then, of the happiness I had come far to seek. "Through the Looking Glass," I had gone like the child in the immortal tale—and everything now was magically changed. With delight, I learned what life can be when that tyrant, Time, is toppled off his throne; how in the year that is a day, and the day that is a year, a man perhaps may lose his hair, drop the claws that lead through the tangled maze called life, and wander, timeless, aimless, till the dark. . . .

It must have been about the sixth month of my journeying, when, with money running low, and mind almost sated with tropic beauties and wonders—so that I began to think I might soon, without regret, return to civilization—I came upon a group of islands that I shall call Omega.

There is a town in the Omega group, a town that, for reasons I cannot give here, offers more commercial interests and possibilities than most island places. This is important, and should be remembered; it has to do with what I am going to tell.

The town appealed to me but little. It was the outer part of the archipelago that drew me; thin atoll islands, barren and very bright; islets with here and there a coconut palm, and here and there a lost melancholy looking pandanus tree; shoal waters that were mauve and sapphire, pearl and celadon-green. I had bought the cutter by this time, with a small windfall of a legacy that came my way, and I had just enough money left to run her for a few more weeks. I hadn't cash for anything of a crew, however, save one old silly fellow who was willing to come without wages. He professed to know the group from end to end, and though I was a little doubtful of his knowledge, I could not afford to quarrel with it, or him. After all, I thought, we shall get somewhere, and come away somehow, and that's all one really wants. . . .

If I had known!

It was on a windy, wicked afternoon, with high clouds flying, that we got blown away from our course, such as it was; obliged to abandon all attempt to get to the group of atolls for which I had been aiming. I gave the tiller into the hand of Taviti, the "crew," slung my two sleeping boards across the seats, and lay down with a rice sack under my head. Taviti was to call me at moonrise, which I judged to be about ten o'clock.

I didn't sleep for a while. The cutter pitched violently in the cross sea raised by tide and wind, hammering with her bows on the water till you might have thought she would stove herself in. It looked like ugly weather, I thought—and then, of a sudden, I slept.

I was awakened by the smothering dash of salt water over my head, and a blow from the cutter's gunwale, that got me in the ribs as I was being swept overboard. Everything about me was white foam and swilling water; I felt sand beneath my toes, but could not grip it, because the short, breaking waves had me at their will, and were knocking me about as a child batters a toy. I fought, and got foothold at last. The cutter was lying on her side, smashing her mast and rigging as she swayed about with the seas. Taviti was just crawling out onto a stone, like a rat escaped from the growing mill.

"Where are we?" I shouted to him, as I crawled out beside him. There was no use scolding him for his careless handling of the boat, now. Low tide would strand the cutter; till then, one could do little or nothing.

"I d'know, Arik! (chief)," mournfully answered the old man. Then, with a burst of animation—"I think we somewhere."

"Well, wherever we are," I said, "the first thing to do is to get the cable of the boat fast to something." And that, with considerable difficulty, we did, securing what was left of her to one of the big black stones, so that she might not be carried away by outgoing tide. Taviti, after this, found a little hole—you could hardly call it a cave—among the rocks, and dragged himself into it, covering his lean, wet body, so far as he could, with a mass of seaweed.

I left him there, while I started to explore the place, and find out, if I could, where Taviti's mad seamanship, backed by my own carelessness, had landed me. It was not much past full moon time; and nowhere on earth's surface does the moon shine with more effect, than on a coral island. I could see everything about me almost as plainly as in the day. And I did not like what I saw.

There are such things as warnings; and if ever I felt a warning, it was then. I felt (how shall I put it) that this place was not good to be in. There was a personality about it—every one has felt such things, though few care to say so—and it was distinctly hostile.

Of course, that did not stop me from exploring; I had to find out where we were. Further, I was wet through, without a change; it was a tropic night, but tropic nights, with high wind blowing, can be unpleasantly cool, and I shivered a bit, as I tramped the rough, blown grasses; I should have been glad of a house wherein I might take shelter, and find somebody's clothes to borrow. I rather thought the island was inhabited. In the moonlight, I had seen traces of footsteps, or what looked like footsteps, in the grass! I had seen a pile of coconuts heaped up at the foot of a palm. . . .

It would have been about twenty minutes after landing, when I was getting well warmed up with exercise, that I ran across the houses. They were two or three only, mere hovels thrown together of brushwood and palm.

They seemed to me to be semi-alive, crouching, as if afraid of my approach. It may have been this fancy that urged me to take care, walk delicately, as I neared them. Most were unlighted; from one, however, came a faint red gleam through plaited walls. Somebody, within, was waking, while the rest of the island slept.

The wind had risen, was still rising. It made an intolerable clamor. Masked by the noise, I walked right up to the house wall and peered through a chink.

I do not know what I expected to see; something astonishing, certainly—but whatever it may have been, it was less amazing than the reality.

I saw a white man like myself; a well-bred looking man, with a beard, brown eyes, and wavy brown hair. He was dressed in a most extraordinary rig—loincloth and jumper, such as the natives use, but of a pattern never worn by any native of the Pacific world, yellow, with spots of black as big as dinner plates. Ugly, conspicuous in the last degree—and so coarse in texture that its folds were stiff as canvas.

"Ought to last a lifetime, that rig," I thought. "Bad sort of thing to go shooting or fishing in; anything alive would spot you a hundred yards off. Why in Tophet does he wear it?"

SOME PHASES OF THE PRESENT ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

There are many interpretations of the causes for the present economic conditions in the country. No one of which can be wholly responsible. There are many reasons entering into the situation.

There are as many theories of reform as there are sources of cause.

Perhaps none of them apply so much to the average man, or are of so very much concern to us. It is one of the most common things now to hear no every corner of the streets, men who can tell you just what the matter with the country, and just exactly who is to blame, and what is necessary to bring about a reform that will stabilize prices, make the whole country prosperous. And to hear some of them talk, you would think they were all well versed in political economy, and were themselves the first statesman of the country, and that after years of diligent research, and with first hand knowledge, having had access to all the fields of the world's bureaus of statistics, they have reached the most profound deductions, and have sifted out, and culled, and strained through every vestige of information available, and have finally come to the analysis and have the very last word to be said on the subject, and all the world should set up and take notice.

When the real truth is they do not know the first letter as to what is the matter with the country, or whether there is any thing the matter with it or not, and if they did know, they would not have the faintest idea as to the remedy. It would do lots of us a great good, if we could learn, that the greatest reason most of us have financial troubles and are not doing any good financially, is our own fault, and can not be laid to the door of the political situation at all. But you know we must have some one to lay our troubles on besides ourselves. Its an old, but true saying, baring exceptions of sickness and other misfortunes over which we have no control, that we are builders of our own fortunes. Those who succeed as a rule, do so irrespective of other's success or failure, and those who do not succeed, would not succeed, no matter what circumstances surround them. It is not how much a man makes or the prices he gets for it, it's what he saves that makes him prosperous.

Too many men, no matter how much they make, they will not stay out of debt, the more they have, the more they buy, and the rule is in this country, when we have prosperous homes, we ruin ourselves going in debt to our very limit, and when the tide turns, we who should have played safe, remembering that the pendulum of prosperity never swings so far one way, but that it must swing just as far the other way, are caught unprepared, and must suffer, and then blame the president of the United States, or some big moneyed power for our condition. If our people would ever learn that the old saying, "a fool and his money soon part," and quit acting the fool, live always within our means, pay as you go, or don't go, quit trying to keep up with a fool possession, that have every thing they have on their backs, and some times owe for that, that will buy anything they can get on a credit, involve themselves to the limit, never have a cent that does not belong to somebody else, and be honest, and careful, and strictly conscientious, and not try to run and live at a million dollar rate, where we should live at a modest rate where we belong, it's my own conviction, we would be safe and independent, happy and contented. The get rich quick idea has gripped the American people, and we refuse to be contented to let well enough alone, and will not be content to accumulate in a safe and sure way, but we must have more each year, so we can spend more, and many spend it whether they get it or not, and of course the reckoning comes, and our folly overtakes us, and we blame somebody else, and on we go. When, oh when, will we ever learn any sense. What fools we mortals be.

TEXAS THOUGHT

(Editor's Note: Opinions expressed in this column do not necessarily constitute the editor's opinion. This column is reproduced as an impartial analysis of the political situation as seen from Austin.)

PUBLICITY is the thing candidates now are looking for as the last four weeks of the campaign period draws near. The war period of 1917 and 1918 emphatically demonstrated that the public could be made to believe almost anything if the story were told often enough. Office seekers learned that lesson then and now are attempting to profit by it.

R. S. Sterling of Houston, doubtless will be a name seen often in the headlines from now until election time. He was a late entrant into the gubernatorial list, but has the solid backing of the Houston Chronicle and the Houston Post-Dispatch. Both are devoting column upon column of their space to the advocacy of his candidacy, and other candidates scarcely can get their names in those papers.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram is giving the leading contende a more even break. Last week Byron Utecht, capitol correspondent for the Fort Worth paper, followed Clint Small over a portion of Texas. This week Utecht will accompany Mayfield through East Texas. Next week, perhaps, he will watch the candidacy of still another leading contender.

As was the case with war-time publicity, voters should take campaign propaganda with the proverbial grain of salt. Practically every large paper has a favored candidate and will give that candidate the lead positions in its columns. The advice of this writer is—read all you can about the political possibilities, but don't blindly place your faith in any one publication.

TEXAS IS a big state and you may get an idea of just how big it is from the fact that the West Texas Press Association is the largest regional association of its kind in the world. The West Texas group of publishers will gather in annual meeting in Abilene on July 11 and 12 and on the program will appear such well known celebrities in the press world as "Mefo" Foster of the Houston Press of Houston, Amon G. Carter of Fort Worth, Erasmus Taek of Amarillo, Joe Taylor of Dallas, and Dorrance Roderick of El Paso. And the whole "works" is to be broadcast over WBAP with Hough, "the Hired Hand" at the microphone. The meeting will be held at the new million dollar Hotel Wooten in Abilene.

George "Jimmy" Smith, wideawake secretary-treasurer of the press association, called attention to this item and asked the correspondent to "get off politics" long enough to mention this gala press event. Well, the duty is done, and now back to "politics."

ROADS AND road building were the themes of the opening speech of Ross Sterling at Huntsville last Friday. He recalled that for the past two years he had advocated the issuance of state bonds for the purpose of completing the highway system of the state and intimated that he was still of the opinion that such was the more practical procedure. Earle Mayfield steadfastly has been opposed to the idea of issuance of state bonds and has frowned upon the huge powers exercised by the highway department. Other gubernatorial candidates likewise have done so, and some have gone to the extent of personal attacks upon Sterling. Jim Young, particularly, has been violent in his opposition to Sterling.

WHO ARE the leading candidates in the field? Well, listen to a few of their own remarks: Earle B. Mayfield, speaking in Sulphur Springs Wednesday, "Unbiased reports from over the state show conclusively that my candidacy for governor is by far the most favored by the people. This is because I am the only candidate who has a well defined, clear-cut, constructive platform and because I discuss issues and not personalities."

Tom Love: "I believe in freedom of conscience and there are 300,000 democrats in Texas who have the same belief. Surely that makes me a leader."

Lee Satterwhite, Small campaign manager, speaking for his candidate: "The Small candidacy is gaining by leaps and bounds. Clint is sure to make the run-off."

Barry Miller, upon his return from the Valley territory: "Every indication is that I shall be the leading candidate in the first race."

INTEREST is being created in the attorney general's race at the present time. For a long while the present incumbent, Robert Lee Bobbitt, apparently was under the impression that he had nothing to worry over. But Jimmie Allred has been a busy campaigner and at last Bobbitt has awakened to the fact that he has strong opposition. He now is engaged in a last-minute, whirlwind campaign over the state. George H. Sheppard, present incumbent of the comptroller's department, also is bestirring himself, as also is Pat M. Neff who seeks to be returned to the railroad commission.

SO THERE you are! At least six are claiming for a certainty that they will be the leaders after July 26. What does the public say about the matter? That's a big question, but this correspondent has interviewed a hundred or more persons from all sections of the state in an attempt to get some kind of an answer, and here's what he gathers:

The three leaders are Mayfield, Ferguson and Love, with Small and Sterling making a strong bid to oust one of the favored ones.

"Konjola Worked Wonders In My Stubborn Case"
Fort Worth Man Relieved of Severe Attack of Rheumatism, Eagerly Praises New Medicine

MR. JOE CONNELLY

"For over a year I suffered with muscular rheumatism," said Mr. Joe B. Connelly, 504 Belknap street, Fort Worth. "My entire body was a mass of aches and pains. Finally I was forced to give up my work and was confined to bed. The pains were so severe that I had to be moved very carefully and was helpless and bed-ridden for three months. My nerves were completely gone and I felt at times that I could not bear my suffering another day.

"I sent away for my first treatment of Konjola and was amazed at the results. Within three weeks I was able to get up and around without assistance. Gradually the pain and soreness left me and I began to feel my old self again. My nerves settled, constipation was completely banished, and I do not remember when I have felt as well as I do now. Konjola certainly worked wonders in my case."

Though Konjola works quickly, and many sufferers are greatly benefited in a week, a complete treatment of from six to eight bottles is recommended for thorough results.

Konjola is sold Lockney, Texas, at the Stewart Drug Co., and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

An unexpected result from night baseball in the Des Moines (Western League) ball park was the hearty approval given it by nearby poultrymen. As a result of the brilliant night illumination hens on adjacent dairy farms were fooled by the lights and inspired to work overtime. Poultrymen agree that extending daylight hours by electric lights will increase egg production.

INTERESTING FACTS
Seagoing taxicabs are a new wrinkle, plying Long Island Sound out of New London, Conn.

Bell Telephone Co. is spending $2,350,000 a day on operating expenses and $1,950,000 a day on new construction.

Twelve million miles of telephone wire are used for toll and long distance service alone in the United States.

One of the largest hydro-electric generators in the world is to be installed this year at Spier Falls on the Hudson River. It will be capable of producing 57,000 horsepower of energy.

The new building of the National City Bank of New York, which with its subsidiaries, will occupy on completion, will be provided with 7,900 telephone connections and almost an entire floor will be required to house the exchange and its equipment.

The slow turn-over of capital in the electric industry is one of its problems. That it is getting slower as increased capital investments are required is shown by the fact that where in 1922 the rate was once every four and three-fourths years, in 1926 it had gone to five and a half years and in 1930 is expected to fall to less than once in six years, figures for 1928 having been five years and eight months.

The wide variety of Texas' climatic conditions is indicated by a range in 1929 of 127 degrees. Sixteen degrees below in Hartley county and 111 above in Clay county were the minimum and maximum recorded by the Weather Bureau.

With total wealth of $10,898,000,000 Texas ranks eleventh among the States. Among Southern and Southwestern States it ranks first.

HELPING TO BUILD TEXAS
With 36 carloads of machinery already on hand and more en route, the new gauze mill at Marble Falls is expected soon to be in operation. . . 8 U. S. Army engineers are making a survey of the proposed Pease river dam near Crowell, which is bath an irrigation and conservation project.

Over 200 men are at work in the Dalhart territory constructing substations and transmission lines for the West Texas Utilities Co., which will spend $1,600,000 in development work in that area this year with a large power plant to be located at some town on the North Plains as part of the future program. . . Rio Grande Telephone Co. is making extensive improvements in Brownsville following renewal of its franchise with an increase in rates, a new $50,000 exchange building being a major item in the budget. It is planning a new building at Pharr also an automatic telephone will be installed when the building is completed.

The new Wooten at Abilene and the new Hilton at Marlin were among the auspiciously opened new hostleries in Texas during May. . . Seven floors of the new 12-story Hotel Brownwood have been completed and the new 325-room Hilton at El Paso is to be opened in the fall.

Dallas realtors estimate total building projects for 1930 will total $30,000,000. The skyline of the North Texas metropolis will be materially altered before the end of the year. One recent permit was to the Dallas Gas Co. for a 10-story $800,000 office building, one of the handsomest utility structures in the Southwest. . . Corpus Christi has $2,000,000 worth of new construction just completed, under construction or to start soon with a million-dollar amusement park in prospect. . . Potter county (Amarillo) is having plans drawn for a new $400,000 courthouse. . . The $2,500,000 Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. office building at San Antonio is well under way, with work on a million dollar apartment hotel soon to be started.

WEST TEXAS GROWTH

"Census reports have got far enough along to make it clear that some of the older counties of the state are going to show losses in population, while West Texas counties are going to show percentages of gain which seem fabulous until the figures are produced to support them. West Texas has had really astounding growth. But it has scarcely begun to enter its heritage.

Texas will have to accustom itself to the idea that there is a swing in the balance of financial and political power under way. West Texas is yearly gaining more population, more wealth and more consciousness of its power. The type of people who constitute West Texas is unusually sturdy open-hearted, and resourceful. If every American frontier had had this kind of material to breed its present generation America would be a remarkable country even beyond what it is.

"Home-owning, self-helping, self-confident, self-starting Americans these West Texans are. And yet thousands of them came from the older villages of Texas and other parts of the South, where life is of even tenor from dawn to dawn and year's end to year's end. Transplanted to a new soil, they develop new energy and ambition, and become citizens resourceful in the development of the agriculture and commerce of a land where any man is as high as his reach."—The Hub.

GOVERNOR RACE GIVES PROMISES OF FURIOUS FINISH; STARTS TAME

Austin, June 23.—The fury of its finish promises to make up for the false starts, the lagging leadoff and the wobbly first half of the governor's race.

The last week has seen the principal starters reaching their stride. It saw the last of the four draft horses dropping out.

Principal developments were the retirement of Lynch Davidson and Pink Parrish from the race; the opening by R. S. Sterling of a vigorous campaign in his speech at Huntsville; and the trend of the withdrawing candidates who have votes with them, to get behind and support candidates that are in for the finish race.

Lynch Davidson, who received 126,000 votes four year ago when all his supporters knew he could not enter the run-off, told a group of friends before he got out that if he did not he would support Clint Small. He followed this up with a promise to put his strength into the race, and his friends think it is that which may turn the tide in a closely-drawn contest for one of the two coveted places in the runoff.

Sterling-Small Week
Senator Parrish, who said he hadn't been a candidate at all, declared his support for Senator Small.

Taken altogether, the week appeared to have been a Sterling-Small week, with both these candidates making definite strides forward.

Thomas B. Love predicted for himself that he would lead his nearest opponent 50,000 votes. He may have whistled as he talked to try to make himself believe it. Love, with his fight won to put him on the ballot, apparently was just in that position—his fight on an issue won, and interest sharply waning in his fortunes thereafter. Senator Love has been doing most of the talking about Love since his name was ordered on the ballot; and definite evidence of campaign weakness, even in the counties where he would logically expect most strength, has developed.

Senator Love has never fully learned that the "Hoovercrat" vote of 1928 was not cast at his behest, or because he happened to go that way, or as to that, "for" him. It would probably be more accurate to call him the agitator rather than the leader of the Hoover vote movement.

No Ferguson Stir
Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson's capriciousness has caused much less interest and agitation than have Ferguson races in the past. It hasn't "clicked", and the intemperate expressions in her prepared copies of speeches, with respect to the courts, and her statement that "elect me and you will get two governors for the cost of one" have caused uneasiness among even the Ferguson faithful, and have failed to gloss over James E. Ferguson's political concern in the race.

Earle H. Mayfield seemingly has held his own following, as previously organized, during the changing and re-organized, and the fortunate period of the race. He is plugging away hard, and has built up a working campaign organization in the second trenches. It probably can be said accurately that Mr. Mayfield did not benefit by the decision of Governor Moody, or Lynch Davidson, and of Pink Parrish not to be in the race.

James Young and Barry Miller may be assumed to be practically at their stride, whatever it is.

These views are the format of opinions, conclusions, arguments, campaign documents, general comment, sifted down by an attempt to analyze the trends of sentiment. They may be right.

CHEVROLET TRAINING SCHOOL JUST COMPLETED

June 26—What has been termed the greatest sales training school in the history of the automobile industry—a series of five meetings conducted over a period of 10 days in each of the 12,000 Chevrolet retail stores in the United States, and attended by 24,000 salesmen—has just been completed by the Chevrolet Motor Company.

So successful were the meetings that central office officials are considering making the "school" an annual affair. In practically every instance Chevrolet dealers reported their complete sales personnel in attendance at each meeting, and in addition the office and service staffs requested and were given permission to attend the sessions. In all, it is estimated that an average of 40,000 sales, offices and service employees in Chevrolet retail stores attended each of the five meetings. Increased selling efficiency, by their present staffs and the addition of many salesmen to their organizations are expected by many dealers as a result of the "school."

The thought behind the school was the belief that most automobile salesmen possess only the theory of selling and usually are forced to undergo long experience and overcome many difficulties before they are able to furnish prospective buyers with a fully satisfactory exposition of the car's features. The school would immediately put the salesmen in possession of the experiences and methods of the most successful men in the industry.

All phases of the meetings were worked out and the materials prepared by the central office of the Chevrolet Motor Company. Holding the school was optional with each dealer, but practically the entire Chevrolet dealer organization responded.

One of the features of the meetings was the use of motion pictures of the "still" type in presenting the subject of each session. In all, five films were used. The most novel of these was the one entitled "Mr. Lilliputian Sells A Chevrolet." It depicted a salesman explaining the features of the car to a prospect. Both figures were so reduced in size and the car's part so enlarged that the men crawled into the cylinders to inspect the pistons; into the transmission and differential to discuss the gears; jumped, in diving suits, into the oil-filled crankcase to examine the crankshaft, oil pump and bearings, and perched on the instrument panel controls, spark plugs, steering wheel, shifting lever and other parts while there were being explained to the purchaser. Many dealers have asked permission to retain the film for future use in training salesmen and illustrating the car's advantages to prospective buyers.

QUALIFICATIONS OF AN OFFICE SEEKER

Who should, and who should not seek office by the suffrage of the people, is a subject not often discussed in the public press.

It often happens, that those who are best suited to fill places of public trust, are unwilling to offer themselves, or permit themselves to be run for office, and it sometimes happens on the other hand that some who are most unfit to fill such places of public trust are the very ones to seek them. This does not mean that all those who offer themselves for public office are unworthy or are unfit to fill them, many capable of filling offices worthily seek office, and reflect credit to themselves and their constituents.

Good citizenship on the part of an office seeker, should be one of the first qualifications of an office seeker. Good citizenship is a term variously defined, and many loose notions are held as to what constitutes a good citizen.

To be a taxpayer in the county and a freeholder in the state, is not enough to constitute one a good citizen. If of lawful age, and not otherwise legally disqualified, he has the legal right to run for office, but still this does not qualify one for office, or make him a suitable person to be entrusted with the responsibilities of public trust.

A good citizen must first above all else be honest, he must be clean in his private as well as his public life.

He should not only be clean in his own life, but he should stand for clean principals in the community in which he lives, he cannot be a spineless jelly fish, having no convictions, and no courage to defend any principals of justice or honor.

And this type of good citizenship necessary to properly qualify one to fill offices of public trust, must also imply one who is in spirit as well as in practice a law abiding citizen.

To place one in a judiciary, or an enforcement office, who is not in sympathy with the law he is expected to enforce, or one who does not themselves keep the law, is but to defeat the purpose of law. Disrespect for one law, breeds contempt for all law.

Of course natural adaptation, and mental equipment is necessary. To seek and office with only mercenary ambitions is an unworthy aim.

We are all servants and must have an altruistic spirit in all our endeavors. The high aim of all worthy endeavor, should be unselfish. It is not unworthy in one to desire proper remuneration for good service rendered. But to seek an office for just the salary, and little or no regard for all remuneration, is wholly unworthy.

What should be the attitude of the voter, and what are the essentials requests governing the man at the poles?

First, the man at the poles should not vote for a candidate for selfish or mercenary reasons, neither should he vote against him for such reasons.

Second, he should not vote for a candidate simply because he is a personal friend. The officer is a public servant and is to serve the public, and not simply one individual. If my dearest friend should be running for office and I was convinced that another would fill the office better for all concerned, then as a good citizen, I must the interest of the community first. If it is a matter just between my friend and myself, that a different condition, but this matter of public office is not a personal, but a public concern, and must be treated as such.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

This writer appreciates the expressions of appreciations received from many of our citizens on his stand for moral reform in our community. One friend though enough of it to write a personal letter commending his stand. Others we hear are not pleased. No one dislikes incurring the displeasure of people more than I do, and there has been no intention at any time, nor will there be in the future, to deal in personalities. The writer intends only the best interests of the community, and in dealing with facts, you must of necessity cross some body, but if its done in a courteous, gentlemanly manner, sensible people cannot justly take exceptions.

One of the purposes of this article is to bring to the notice of all lovers of good clean morals, and civic righteousness, that no one individual can put the fight over by themselves. Currents of thought and influence will not get far, if only one or two are willing to throw themselves in the breach. The trouble with too many people is, they won't take a stand, they won't fight or take any risk. They will not subject themselves to criticism or censure, they are afraid of persecution, which most certainly will come from certain quarters, if you life your hand against certain forms of evil, by those who are bent on practising them either for pleasure or profit. They say, you are right, and I am for you, but they stop right there, and say you do it. Yes, let John do it. The excuses people make would be humorous, if it were not so tragic. For instance, one man says, I am in business for the public, and I can't do or say anything, it will injure my trade, but you go ahead, you are right, I am for you. Yes, let John do it. Another says, "some of my very best friends are engaged in some of these questionable things, and I can't afford to offend them and lose their friendship." You are right, stay right in there." Yes there it is, let John do it, and thus it goes.

A number of people have said to me, you are right, but you will have a lot of people against you, and if you don't mind, you will be ousted and have to move. You can't stay here and take such a stand, it will cost you your job.

Well, this preacher does not enjoy persecution, neither does he like to incur the displeasure of people. I like friends, and try to be friendly to everybody, but if I must buy my friends at the sacrifice of my convicts duty as a minister, whose duties, or the neglect of what I feel my is ever to guard the welfare of the people among whom he lives and labors courageously without fear or favor, then I will have to loose the friendship of those who make such demands. If I had to answer to men, then I would do my best to please them, but I must answer at the bar of my own conscience and self respect, and the bar of God. The minister is a watchman, and is charged to sound the warning if he sees danger approaching and his trumpet should give no uncertain sound, and to fail to give the warning, brands him as a traitor, and unworthy of his position, and the respect of every one. He is not a real friend, who does not guard the interest of his friend. Shakespeare once said, "He is my friend who tells me of my faults, and helps me to mend them."

To fail to do or speak for fear of persecution, is to disqualify as a christian, for Jesus said "In the world you will have persecution, but be of good courage, for I have overcome the world." Paul said, "They that live Godly in Christ Jesus, must suffer persecution." So if you are persecuted for righteousness sake, we are in good company, and are to be the heirs of the kingdom of heaven. The servant is not alone his good.

The fight for a clean sabbath, to make it properly observed, is not popular. Too many that do make a claim to observe it, fail because they aid and abet those who do openly and above board desecrate it. You are guilty of sabbath desecration just the same, one man runs the business, the other one patronizes him, both a like are guilty.

It's a mighty poor excuse to hide behind, to say, well they might as well do this as something else, they are going to do wrong any way. For same, to slander the youth in any such a manner, and to think people will slander their own children in such a manner, and to think people will slander their own children in such a way. If such parents will stand up for their children's rights, and help to remove these evils, and remove the glaring temptations from among us, they will find their children will live cleaner lives, and enjoying innocent pleasures. But the saddest thing that we confront to day is, that too many parents actually stand for, and defend the very things that fosters disregard for the highest and best for their children. Oh, we say, all the other towns are doing these things, and its hard to prevent it. I answer, it has and never will be hard to change conditions for better in any community, when the better element of the people demand it. The trouble with us is, we either want the conditions to stay as they are, or else we are too spineless to vigorously oppose them. We are a compromising people, and the devil has put it over on us so long, that we are a puny sickly bunch of weeklings. The devil runs us, our children boss us, the world kicks us around, and we have not enough moral stamina to raise our voice or lift our hand in protest. And sad to say, some people who won't do anything themselves for the highest interest of the youth of the community, will oppose those who do try to do something to better conditions.

The first, and best weapon with which to fight evil, is to refrain from it yourself. Then we are in position to teach our children, and they can and will have respect for us. The greatest reason most parents can do nothing with their children, is they live such low standards themselves, that their children have no respect for their profession.

No, it's the sincere desire of this writer that every honest and honorable man and honorable business shall prosper, but I want it to prosper righteously, and any man or business is prostituted when he or it is lowered to the plane of greed that knows no law but its own selfish interest, or panders to the wishes of those that seek not the interest of others, and care not for the highest and best interest of all concerned.

I have been asked, why I did not say something about some of the recognized questionable practices in society, such as the common card parties?

My attitude is well known among my own people. I have never thought that common playing cards, the tools of the common gambler, having such a dark history associated with them, that they are not a suitable decoration to ornament the table of a cultured christian home. The attitude of the law of our country against them, is enough to shut them out of our homes. I think any mother who would not wish her son to become deft and an expert at shuffling cards, for fear of what might be the ultimate outcome, is herself very inconsistent when she shuffles the same cards in her own or anybody else's home. And I think when a company of splendid women spend a whole afternoon or evening shuffling common playing cards, it matters not by what name they call the game, are subjecting themselves to criticize and censure. I think it's a waste of time, it's a bad example, it hurts their influence, it grows on them, they are very likely to enjoy it more than they do many worth while things. It creates decisions in the social life of the community that are unwarranted. It's questionable, and everybody knows it, and to shun the very appearance of evil is the standard law of God governing christian conduct.

One lady said to me, "I don't play, I think its not just right, but some of my best friends do, and I don't want to loose them, what shall I do?" My only answer could be, do not sell your conscience for friendships, it will not pay. We should guard most diligently our hearts and conscience. Another said to me, "I am a Sunday school teacher, should I play cards?" I answered, "Is your own conscience free to do so? Do you feel it will aid you in your work as a teacher? Do you think your influence will be greater with the individual members of your class? Would you in any sense be embarrassed, if your class should confront you in a reprehensible way? To the first three questions she answered no, to the last, she answered yes, I think I would be embarrassed, then I said you have answered your own question. As to the custom some have of playing for prizes, that cannot be defended by any body. It's gambling, and everybody knows it. It's not the value of the pot, or the prize, that constitutes gambling, it's not who puts up the prize, it will come your time, but that does not change the situation. The wife was having hysterics over a beautiful vase she won in high score at the card party, her husband presented her with a beautiful diamond ring he won at his card party, the little wife had another spell of hysterics, but this time it was her righteous indignation that was so outraged, that she reprimanded her husband most outrageously, and positively refused to accept the ring as property unrighteously obtained. Oh, consistency, that are a jewel.

In all I have said, I plead that one and all will believe that I am deeply concerned for the welfare of all our people, and I would not take away one single worthwhile thing of profit or pleasure from any one. But I am as serious as it is in me to be, in my stand against sinful pleasures, and sabbath desecration, and I stand, and will forever, God helping me for those things that are clean and elevating, and I will forever stand, God helping me, against those things that are not right, and not uplifting, and that the tenderest purest child of mine or my neighbors cannot indulge in without running the risk of being soiled.

In conclusion, I plead for help, for co-operation in this fight against wrong, and for the highest and purest and best for all our people, and particularly for our young. Save your own children, and help save those children who are so unfortunate as to have no one with the courage to fight for them. Poor orphan children, with a living daddy and mammy. Selah. Yours in the bonds of civic and moral reform.—J. E. Stephens.

We, the undersigned, do hereby express our hearty approval of the convictions expressed by Rev. J. E. Stephens in the Beacon of June 12, concerning the Sunday evils that are now being allowed in our town. We would like to see the dance hall, mixed bathing, Sunday baseball, Sunday picture shows, and Sunday bathing stopped.

We feel that Bro. Stephens has started a good fight, and we hope to see him go through to victory. We are for him and with him to the finish, as we all have children for whom we feel responsible.—Mrs. R. G. Still, Mrs. E. D. Teuton, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Williams.

BANFF, PEARL OF THE ROCKIES

By Marion Watson
This is the loveliest spot in the world! That's a broad statement, but a glorious, outdoor day at Banff, the Pearl of the Rockies, has justified it. As I sit here, thousands of feet above Bow Valley, gazing out over the magnificent panorama, I feel that never, anywhere, have I witnessed such breath-taking beauty! Nor ever, anywhere, have I known so perfect a realization of my vacation dream!

Up at dawn for a game of golf.

Then off at sunrise for a ride along skyline trails that rippled across a sea of peaks into tinted infinity. Back before breakfast to join a swimming party... diving off the top of the world into a warm, sulphur pool under the rays of the morning sun. A brief rest, and then an exhilarating motor trip through glacial-cooled air to the Town of Banff for a glimpse of colorful mountain life. An exciting hour among visitors from all parts of the world, Indians on galloping ponies, gay cowboys beneath ten-gallon hats, scarlet troopers of the Northwest Mounted Police, and mountain sheep wandering unmolested down the main street.

In the afternoon, a brief Alpine-climb with an experienced Swiss guide... a staccato hike along old Indian trails... then a restful hour paddling down tranquil Echo River under arching trees. And now, high above the world, I lounge on a terrace and lazily watch the orchid and rose clouds tint the ranges on the horizon as a perfect day draws to a close. Up the rustic stairs from below float the strains of a symphonic orchestra, inviting me to the ball-room, where a smart, cosmopolitan assembly have gathered under rainbow-tinted lights for the evening dance. But I am waiting for darkness... and the stars... to take me down to the ooze depth of the primeval forest, filled with the fragrance of sun-splashed spruce. There, wandering over carpets of pine needles, I shall know the peace... the melodious silence... of a perfect Alpine night. And, in the whispering of the trees, I shall forbid farewell to Banff, the Beautiful. For tomorrow, at dawn, we are off for Lake Louise!
