Destructive Hail Storm Hits Floyd County

Crops Destroyed In Path Of Storm—Live Stock Killed Below Floydada

A severe hail and wind storm visited parts of the Lockney county and Floyd county Wednesday evening about 5:00 o'clock practically destroying all crops in its path and unroofed houses and blowing windmills down. A heavy rain accompanied the hail and wind.

The strip that was hailed out extended north of South Plains almost to Silverton and south to Floydada, passing through the Muncy community and on around southwest to almost due west of Lockney. It was all the way from four to ten miles in width. East and south of Floydada half stones were so large live stock was killed, houses unroofed, wind mills destroyed and crops wiped off the map.

This was the most destructive storm that has visited this county in many years. Loss of wheat in the path of the storm will range all the way from a complete loss down to 10 per cent. Cotton and feed crops were destroyed and will have to be planted over. E. J. Whitfill, gin man of Lockney stated this morning that it was not too late to plant cotton, and that with a favorable fall we can produce a bumper cotton crop. Ed should know pretty well what he is talking about as he has been in the cotton business in this community for many years and has watched it very close. Of course we have plenty of time to make seed.

Lockney received .61 inches of rain, east of town the fall was much heavier and many places amounted to as much as 3 inches.

SALE FINAL DATE TO SIGN FOR 1935 COTTON TAGS

"Saturday, June 22, has been set as the final date for making application for tax-exemption certificates for 1935," Glen A. Lindsey, county agent has announced.

Anyone who has not yet made his Bankhead application should get in touch with his local committeeman immediately, he said. "If applications are not made at this time cotton producers will run the risk of not getting any cotton tags," J. S. Porcher, assistant in cotton adjustment for Floyd County warned.

Seven To Eight Thousand Attend Plains-Panhandle Singing Convention Here

ISIS THEATRE GETS OFF TO A FLYING START THIS WEEK

Good Pictures Being Shown With Five Changes A Week—Bargain Day Proves Popular

John Jenkins, manager of the Isis Theatre is well pleased with the reception accorded his theatre in the opening days. Saturdays matinee and Saturday night and the Saturday night prelude were well attended. Tuesday was Bargain Day and great throngs attended. This is going to prove a very popular day with the show going public.

Mr. Jenkins announces that he is making improvements on the theatre that will make it more comfortable for those attending the shows. Equipment is expected next any day that will make the theatre more comfortable.

The picture that will be installed upon its arrival will be installed.

A splendid arrangement of pictures is being shown the balance of the week and next. Tonight and Friday night you will see Jack Coopy in "Dinky." Saturday matinee and night Tim McCoy coming up in another picture, "Prescott Kid." Saturday night prelude that picture of pictures "Sequoia" will be shown. The picture that is making America worship at the shrine of nature's beauty, Jean Parker takes the leading role in this one. It will also be shown Sunday matinee and Monday. Tuesday "Bargain Day" one of the very best on the screen today entitled "Big Hearted Herbert." Kids will be admitted to the matinee for a nickel and a dime and at night the admission is a nickel and 15c. For the balance of the program read the ad of the Isis in this issue.

AYRES BROS. MOVING STORE FROM P. V. TO LOCKNEY

Madison and Fredrick Ayres are moving their stock of dry goods from Panview to Lockney and will occupy the building formerly occupied by the Greer Drug Store, on the west side of Main Street. They have just returned from market where they purchased a new stock of dry goods and will have these new goods on display when the store is opened within the next few days.

They have been busy the past ten days installing fixtures and arranging the store.

Madison and Fredrick are not strangers to us, as they have practically been reared here. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Ayres. Mr. Ayres is a veteran dry goods merchant of Lockney. We welcome this new concern to our city, and bespeak for them a splendid business.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Davis, of Acuff in Lubbock county, were here Saturday and Sunday attending the Singing Convention and visiting with Mrs. Davis sister, Mrs. Alex Norris.

Plainview Men Elected President and Vice, Joe McCollum Secretary-Treasurer

Between seven and eight thousand people attended the 3rd. Annual Session of the Plains-Panhandle Singing Convention held here last Saturday and Sunday. Those attending came from over West Texas, New Mexico, and Oklahoma.

In the business session held Saturday at 3 o'clock, S. B. Summers of Plainview, was elected president for the coming year, Earl Raper, of Plainview, vice-president, Joe McCollum, Lockney Secretary-Treasurer, and S. O. Dean, Hale Center, Chaplin. The newly elected officers will determine where the Convention will be held next year. Lubbock, Plainview and Floydada have asked for the convention.

In the Amateur Quartet Contest, the Meadows Sisters of Pottawatomie, New Mexico, were given first place, Cone Melody Girls, 2nd and the Tulsa Mixed Quartet, 3rd.

It was said by officials and other in attendance that this was the best convention since the organization of the Plains-Panhandle Singing Convention. The entire citizenship of Lockney and Floyd county co-operated in a splendid way in making this convention a success. "When Lockney undertakes to do a thing it is as good as done," said many visitors.

The loud speaker arrangement hooked up by Marvin Cox was splendid. O. T. Prickett and his workmen had the tabernacle completed on schedule time, although they were handicapped by continued rains the first part of the week. The Higginbotham-Bartlett Lumber Co., were extremely nice in loaning the use of lumber and other materials for use in erecting the tabernacle. All lumber-yards at Floydada co-operated in a splendid way by the loan of materials. The West Texas Cotton Oil Co., of Lockney stepped forward and offered the use of cotton bagging for the covering of the tabernacle as well as the use of their trucks in hauling materials. Also Jack Taylor of the Taylor Grocery and Market furnished a truck as did Watt Griffith and Ott Roberson. All these concerns and individuals have the thanks of the committee on arrangements for their splendid co-operation.

BOYS BE CAREFUL WITH RIFLES

It has been called to our attention that small boys are shooting birds over town with 22 rifles. Ordinarily shooting a bird up in a tree is not dangerous, but where houses are so thick and children playing around in every yard, a bullet is so apt to glance when it hits a limb, that it makes it dangerous practice. So we are asking boys not to shoot birds in town, as we know you have not thought of the danger in a glancing bullet.

PARKER GRAHAM EXHIBITS 4 LEGGED CHICKEN

Parker Graham was in town the other day exhibiting a four legged chicken that he picked up on his chicken yard. It was a Rhode Island Red and was about two or three days old. The two extra legs were attached to the spine and extended out just below the tail feathers.

"Try our Want Ads they get results."

New Outboard King

NEW YORK... Fred Jacoby (above), of North Bergen, N. J., after seven years of being "an also ran" came home in front this year, winning America's longest outboard motorboat marathon, Albany to New York, a distance of 129 miles. There were 76 starters of which only 17 finished. His time was 3 hrs., 23 min. and 27 s'conds.

WHEAT HARVEST WILL BE 30 DAYS LATE THIS YEAR

Due to rains the first part of May and the continued rains since that time, wheat harvest in the Lockney country will be about 30 days later than usual. The wheat crop was all but lost before the rain, but since that time it has put on new growth and it now looks like we will make a pretty fair showing. However the hail storm of Wednesday evening will cut production shorter than was expected a few days ago. And of course you can never tell just how much wheat will be produced until it is harvested and into bins. Anything can happen to wheat and is happening. The price is not so bad, still it could be better. It is hanging around 74c now.

Mr. A. V. Gentry, of Harlingen, Texas, is visiting his mother this week.

Lockney Dropped Three Games Out of 5 This Week

Two Double-Headers And A Single Proves Too Much For Local Aggregation

We have been playing base ball and more base ball the past week. A double-header last Friday with Petersburg started the battle. Lockney boys copped one and lost one in this series. On Sunday Plainview came marching into town and another double-header was on the bill. Again the locals won one and lost one. Wednesday of the week the Lockney scouts invaded Petersburg and was gloriously defeated. It seemed that nothing would click just right in this game.

Next Wednesday you will have the opportunity of witnessing a game on the home lot when Hale Center will be here. Don't miss this game. It promises to be a good one with the score small.

ATTENDS BANKERS CONVENTION

Gip Hudson cashier of the local bank and Mrs. Hudson accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Pete Thornton attended the bankers convention at Amarillo Tuesday of this week. They remained for the Banquet Tuesday evening.

Highway Boys In Washington Seem To Be Out Of Luck On Funds

FINAL CHECK SHOWS 297 RELIEF CASES ON ROLLS

Seventy-Eight Less Than High Figure In May, Reduction In Number Voluntarily

When the process of making re applications for relief in Floyd County had been completed last week, a final check showed 297 relief cases left, a drop of seventy eight from the high figure in May when at one time there were 375 heads of families receiving help from the government through the medium of the Floyd County Relief Committee.

While a number of cases were dropped in the process of re-application, County Administrator Edwin Heald said this week the drop in the number of cases had come about also though voluntary retirement from the rolls of persons who had found jobs here or abroad or had found other means of support.

The total figure of 297 also includes a list of thirty-three farm residents, who are in reality not on relief rolls but on assistance rolls, technically called rehabilitation clients. These persons who have moved to farms are obtaining help to make crops from the relief committee, but are depending on their behalf, both for capital good and for sustenance. Rehabilitation clients sign mortgage and notes and will repay the amounts being spent for them out of crop income this fall, according to the plan being followed.

R. C. Hutsell and family of Silverton attended the Singing Convention Sunday and visited with their friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Huggins, and Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Huggins.

W. E. ELLIS HURT IN STORM AT RALLS WEDNESDAY EVE

MEXICO, D. F. ... Juan Ignacio Ponce (above), Spanish bicyclist who won the South Atlantic to win the hand of Rosetta Maria Elvira here, crashed in Brazil, and lost his plane just saved his life. Cupid minded folks should be warned.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED

License to wed has been issued by County Clerk A. B. Clark to the following couples: Aldridge Thomas and Miss Virginia McClung, Friday, June 14; Ernest L. Carter and Miss Mildred Strickland, Saturday, June 15; E. L. Holmes, Jr. and Miss Margaret Culpepper, Tuesday, June 18.

"Buck Passing" Seems To Be The Order, Harry Hopkins Setting Pat on Present Appropriation

WASHINGTON, June 19—The Texas Highway Commission and Texas members of Congress sought in vain today for a way to obtain a huge federal allocation for road work and concluded a long discussion by referring the matter to sub-committees.

Convinced that under present regulations Texas cannot obtain more than about $30,000,000 Harry Hines, commission chairman and a dozen other highway enthusiasts proposed that the $1,400 permanent requirement under the new works relief administration be increased so that a reasonable share of the cost of material could be borne by the federal government.

Would Change All Vice President Garner and other members of the Texas delegation replied in effect, that the figure had been set by Harry Hopkins, relief director, and if it were to be changed for Texas, it would have to be altered for all other states. All seemed agreed that the limitation meant little highway work other than grading and drainage would be attempted.

Hines remarked after the meeting that "we have too much of that type of work in Texas already" and added funds were needed to go ahead with actual purchase and use of material.

"We simply put it up to the delegation that we can't do much with this requirement of Hopkins," Hines remarked. "Why, we could use as much as $100,000,000 for all the highway work that is needed to be done down there. You can't construct many bridges if the per-man limit is $1,400."

Mrs. Henry Ford and son, Byron, left Monday for Gainesville to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cox. Henry, Jr. remained home with his father. They will be absent for about two weeks.

Entered April 14, 1902, as second class matter at the postoffice at Lockney, Texas, by act of Congress, March 3, 1879.

Any erroneous reflection upon the character, standing or reputation of any person, firm or corporation which may appear in the columns of The Beacon, will be corrected gladly upon its being brought to the attention of the publisher.

Nothing has been so damaging to the recovery policies of the New Deal as has been the petty bickerings and jealousies among those upon whom the President has had to rely. Relief is carried out largely by those on relief; financial problems have been entrusted largely to those who have failed in some financial institution; other phases of government have been delegated to those who had made failures in private life, and were seeking jobs merely as meal tickets. If the President could personally direct all phases of government, conditions would be greatly improved. But he cannot do this. This nation has literally murdered every president in recent years by the magnitude of the jobs imposed upon them by public obligations. President Roosevelt has had the supreme job of them all. He has to rely upon others, and many of them failed him.—Canyon News.

When a man is appointed to the Relief Department at Washington he picks up his gold headed walking cane and sticks a high silk hat on his head and struts about like he is worth a million and does nothing. Ties up all business of his department in order to have people camping on his door step begging him to ok this and ok that so they can get the wheels turning. He gets to be a very important man, in his own mind, and finally FDR has ask him to resign, and nothing has been accomplished, and so on down the line. It is hard to get anyone to do what you want done at Washington. Yes, Mr. Roosevelt has a tough job on his hands. What he needs to do is select a well seasoned pick handle and get it into the hands of some one for a row of Japanese blocks.

The Grand Old Party need not feel so elated over the death of the NRA since big business intends to continue under its codes. In fact both big and small business resents the action taken by the Supreme court and as five of the main members are republicans, their decision is obvious. A partial pole of news papers compiled by Newsdom also reveals party prejudices. For instance, of 44 papers of Texas reporting thirty-five were for the NRA with nine against.—Lorenzo Tribune.

Before the death of the NRA Big business was gathering around banquet tables trying to figure out some way to do away with the NRA. The Supreme Court perhaps thought they were sincere in their demands, so they ruled it unconstitutional. Now those same Big Business boys are gathering back around the banquet tables and are trying to figure out a way to continue NRA codes. Too much politics are mixed with business for the good of business and the success of politics. Divide the two and things will get along better.

That practical religion and good morals make for the betterment of a town or city is well brought out in a recent dispatch from the little city of southeastern Europe, where the Passion Play is put on each year. It seems each inhabitant has an ambition to appear in some role of that play some time, but they must live up to the morality of characters they wish to portray. As a consequence, there are no peace officers or jails in the little city.—Terry County Herald, Brownfield.

Isn't it a pity, Jack, that every city, town and village in the United States cannot stage a Passion Play each year. That would be Heaven on earth.

It seems from this distance that a little trouble is developing at Washington in putting men to work under the new $4,000,000,000 set up. Harry Hopkins is reaching out for more power in handing this cash, also Mr. Ickes wants to get his fingers on it for his PWA projects. Our allowance for relief work in Texas has been cut in half for June, and just at the time when we are supposed to receive an increase under the new set-up. This money has to pass through too many departments to get real quick results. We are of the opinion we will not see much pick-up in business through this new appropriation unless they get their differences settled in Washington.

In a recent speech U. S. Atty. Green, of Chicago, charged that crime is costing the people of this nation twelve billion dollars a year. And then he charged: "The people themselves are largely at fault for this terrible condition." He said that the citizens of this nation could easily call a halt on this drain if they would but willingly testify when on the witness stand; if they would quit shirking jury service; if they would return verdicts "according to the law and evidence;" if they would quit signing bail bonds for unknown criminals; if they would give the cold shoulder to those lawyers largely patronized by criminals, and if they would assist the machinery of the prosecutor's office at all times. There is probably much truth in Mr. Green's remarks. We feel free to criticize, but we are not so free with our help. Therefore, a considerable proportion of the blame must remain on our own shoulders.

Douglas Malloch, Chicago poet whose writings are familiar to many Lockney readers, is going about the country delivering a lecture called "What Depression?" It is causing more grins than a cage of monkeys, and is doing a lot of good, since it shows up the depression in a humorous way. "It's a tough time for the rich when the poor are not working," says Malloch. "One fellow told me his business is good because he has been losing less money than he was losing a year ago. Another said he was doing fine; only he had to close down two departments of his factory—the production and sales departments. But I'm not downhearted," Malloch continues. "We used the money of our fathers to get into the depression and now we're using that of our children to get out of it. Six years ago people discovered that Wall Street was not a one-way street. I've learned the only way to get rich quick is slow. The only fellow whose business is good because things are dull is the scissor-grinder."

Things have broke bad for Al Smith the past few days. The "Grass Root" Republicans have passed the word along that they were not taking Al seriously as a candidate, they just wanted to string along with him and encourage him to campaign actively against FDR. In other words they just wanted to see how big a Boob he was, and perhaps he would yank a few Hot Chestnuts out of the fire for them.

Now that Father Coughlin has withdrawn from the air, outwardly to care for his growing duties, radio listeners will expect static only from the swamps of Louisiana.—Scurry County Times.

"Alfalfa Bill" Threatens

Now we are in a pickle! "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, former governor of Oklahoma, is threatening to "quit the Democratic party—or the Roosevelt party—or whatever it is, and join the Republican party, or any other party in order to save the constitution!"

That's what we call both generous and courageous; generous because it shows that Bill is willing to do everything in his power to save us from ruin—and courageous, because only a brave man would dare to save a whole country by himself!

--and the Worst is Yet to Come

Of course, Bill hasn't quit the party yet. He has only threatened.

And there's a senatorial race in Soonerland next year when, political seers say, Mr. Murray will enter the list against Incumbent Tom Gore. So Bill has plenty of reasons to get back on the front pages—front pages which have been singularly silent concerning him since he finished his term as Oklahoma's governor and the soldiers all went back to their jobs.

The Morning Avalanche, having been warned by Mr. Murray of the impending loss the Democratic party is about to suffer by his withdrawal, is going to "keep tabs" on "Alfalfa Bill."

We are going to keep similar check upon many another disgruntled politician who is busily engaged in sending up trial balloons to find out, if possible, how Old John Citizen feels after the setto between the administration and the Supreme court.

A lot of them are howling now and threatening—or is it promising?—to quit the ranks of the Donkey for the howdah of the Elephant.

We are going to be interested in noting, in the election times to come, just how many have really quit, and how many are still shouting from high places that they're "thirty years a Democrat and ain't scratched yet."—The Lubbock Morning Avalanche.

IT STILL WORKS

Recently in Illinois and Ohio get-rich quick artists have been sentenced to prison for reviving the old "lost heir" scheme. They pretend to know all about old estates in both America and England to which hundreds of Americans are legal heirs, and they have for many years succeeded in collecting thousands of dollars from these alleged heirs on the plea that they would "prosecute" their claims. The money, of course, never got any farther than the promoter's pocket.

There are, in all probably many families around Lockney who have been led to believe they are legally entitled to share in a fabulous estate somewhere. Thousands have been fleeced with a claim that they are entitled to the land on which the city of Dallas, Texas, is located, or to property in the very heart of Philadelphia. It was always easy to find people who would believe these claims and who would put up their last dollar to prosecute them. The get-rich-quick schemes kept collecting "assessments," and their victims kept dreaming of riches some day to be poured into their laps.

That human nature never changes is evidenced by the fact that the old scheme is hobnobbing up again. Uncle Sam is blocking it wherever he can. But with all his resources he is not able to prevent all the "suckers" from biting. The old "lost heir" scheme is crooked from start to finish. It's a good thing to steer clear of.

forest with a "convoy" of a dozen cameramen stationed in a large circle on runway tracks, and in high trees to continue their record of amazing animal life.

In addition to the mountain lion and deer, many other specimens of wild life were followed to their natural haunts, including coyotes, bears, racoon eagles, rattlesnake, baby fawns and small lion cubs.

The Love Interest

Into the animal drama is woven a wholesome love story between Jean Parker, as a naturalist's daughter, and Russell Hardie, a National Park forest ranger. Their interests in each other and the denizens of the wild around them provides a human continuity to the picture.

Others in the cast are Samuel S. Hindes, Paul Hurst, Ben Hall, Willie Fung and Harry Lowe, Jr. Chester Franklin directed with John Considine as the producer.

"SEQUOIA" BREATH-TAKING RECORD OF LIFE IN THE AMERICAN WILDERNESS

Amazing Friendship Between Mountain Lion and Deer Provides Basis for Fascinating "Animal Drama."

Taking its place among the most unusual films ever attempted in the history of motion pictures is the natural story, "Sequoia" (pronounced "See-quo-yah"), recently completed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios and opening Saturday night prevue, June 22, Sunday matinee, June 23, and Monday, June 24 at the Isis Theatre.

Started nearly two years ago in the wildest section of the High Sierras included in the confines of Sequoia National Park, the picture presents almost insurmountable production difficulties.

Herds of Deer Stalked
Herds of deer were stalked by cameramen for hundreds of miles through under brush, over windbreaks across mountain streams to "back country" never entered by hunters. Pack trains of mules carried equipment to the world's highest lakes at an elevation of 11,000 feet where scenic beauties never seem except by forest ranger patrols were photographed for the first time.

A friendship between a mountain lion and a deer, never believed possible by most naturalists, provides a basis for the "animal drama" that required months of tireless effort and literally thousands of feet of film. Every natural move they made from two weeks of age until full grown had to be taken from ambush, with perhaps one minute of usable footage a day.

When the two reached full growth they were turned into the

1,000,000 POUNDS OF WOOL SHIPPED TO BOSTON FROM TEXAS

Recent shipments of wool from Texas to Boston have totaled more than 1,000,000 pounds. Fewer than 100,000 of this wool was sold outright. This sold from 22 to 25 1-2 cents a pound, 3 cents under the market high which was reached a short time ago. The unsold wool that was shipped moved at a cash advance of 8 to 20 cents a pound to the owner. Since the Supreme Court's ruling on the NRA consigning of wools at cash advances has replaced outright purchases in many sections of Texas. While a number of buyers are out of the market temporarily they are continuing to look at supplies in the ware houses, saying they wish to have a line on holdings when purchasing becomes active again. Mills in the east are reported to have enough wool for June and July operations.

Argentina produces a surplus of good beef. Some of the major packing companies in the United States have plants in Argentina. Because of the very cheap labor, beef can be produced at a cost that practically eliminates the producer of cattle in the United States.

House Must Pass On Amend- ments—States Required To Join With Government In Payments

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The administration's vast social security plan, calling for the biggest tax program in the nation's history, today was shoved through the Senate by a 76 to 6 majority thereby assured final enactment.

Despite scattered outcries from both the Democratic and Republican sides that parts of the bill were unconstitutional, opposition melted when it came to a record vote on the measure proposed by President Roosevelt last January to "recover certain hazards and vicissitudes of life" for Americans.

It was shuttled quickly back to the House for action on Senate amendments. In the main, however, it rode through the Senate in a form closely approximating that recommended by the President.

Although it excludes farm labor, domestics, casual, governmental and charity workers, the bill would create a huge national unemployment reserve. Proponents declared it would cover nearly 25,000,000 (million) people who would draw from $10 to $85 a month after they reach 65 years of age.

Beginning next month it would offer $15 of federal money a month if matched by state funds, for every individual over 65 years of age or needy blind persons of any age. States without pension plans would not have to match the federal fund for the first two years.

It also would appropriate about $50,000,000 for dependent and crippled children, mothers aid and other welfare work, all of which must be matched by the states.

Eventually the bill contemplates that about 25,000,000 workers will be covered by state unemployment insurance to take care of them during periods of temporary idleness.

Altogether the measure contemplates annual expenditures of between $4,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000 annually, more than the normal present cost of running the entire government.

The national old age pension fund would be financed by taxing employers and employees each three per cent on the payrolls of employees up to $3,000 a year. This is estimated to yield almost $2,000,000,000 annually by 1950. Companies with approved private pension plans would be exempt.

One Per Cent In 1936
To encourage states to set up unemployment reserve laws, the bill would levy a tax on employers of four or more workers beginning at one per cent next year and rising to three per cent by 1938 against their total payrolls. They would be able to get credit for 90 per cent of the tax if they paid it into state funds. Experts predicted this would raise almost $1,000,000,000 a year.

INSECT BITE BRINGS QUICK DEATH TO OKLAHOMA MAN

Sulphur, Okla.—The sting of an unidentified insect brought quick death today to W. R. Meadors of Davis, near here.

Rushing into his home, Meadors told his wife a bee stung him on an ear and asked her to apply medicine to it. Mrs. Meadors started to apply a home remedy, but Meadors' face and body turned black. She summoned Dr. J. C. Luster, who arrived just as Meadors died, 15 minutes after being stung.

Doctor Luster said he did not know what kind of insect stung Meadors.

Mrs. T. J. Dobson is visiting relatives in Oklahoma and Missouri. She reports an enjoyable time with her brother and sister, whom she is having the pleasure of visiting for the first time. She will return home in about a month accompanied by her brother and family.

WIFE OF SILVERTON EDITOR DIES SUDDENLY AT HOT SPRINGS, ARKANSAS

Funeral services for Mrs. R. B. Boyle, wife of the editor of the Briscoe County News, were held Wednesday afternoon at Melrose, New Mexico, the old family home.

Mrs. Boyle died early Saturday morning June 9, in Hot Springs, Arkansas. She was 43 years of age at the time of her death.

Mrs. Boyle had been in ill health for several years. Her condition had been critical since a serious operation in the Lubbock Sanitarium a year ago. This operation followed a series of lesser ones over a period of years.

Mrs. Grace Boyle was born June 22, 1892. She is survived by her husband R. B. Boyle. An only son died six years ago when Mr. Boyle was editor of the Crosbyton paper.

Mrs. Boyle left Silvertown last Thursday by train for Hot Springs. A telegram Saturday failed to reach her husband, who had left for Clovis, New Mexico, and the death message arrived Sunday before he could be located.

Tom Bomer, Silvertown funeral director, left Sunday afternoon in the ambulance with Mr. Boyle for Hot Springs to return with the body to Melrose for funeral services at the family home there Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyle moved to Silvertown three years ago from Vega where he had been editor of the Vega Sentinel. Mr. Boyle has been editor of the Briscoe County News since that time.—Quitaque Post.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Huff and family attended a reunion of the Huff family at McLean Sunday and Monday. "Unknown Woman," Columbia's new, thrilling drama glorifying Federal undercover agents and revealing new secrets of the Secret Service will open June 27, for a two day run at the Isis Theatre.

Awaited with great eagerness this exciting screen play, featuring the beautiful and blond Marian Marsh and handsome Richard Cromwell, is replete with fast action, dangerous episodes, great courage and a charming romance.

In "Unknown Woman" Cromwell portrays an ambitious young lawyer. Through an eloquent plea in court he attracts the attention of Douglas Dumbrell, a night club owner and leader of a band of bond thieves. Dumbrell contrives to have Cromwell secrete a million in "hot" bonds in the belief the packet is a legal document.

That same night Cromwell meets and befriends Marian Marsh who has been arrested in a gambling house raid. Miss Marsh immediately proves to be a woman of mystery who later schemes to accompany Cromwell to Dumbrell's office where she is observed rifling the desk and files.

From that point the story bursts into fast action which continues to the final fadeout. Unexpected developments during the unfolding of the plot provide many breathtaking surprises.

Texas Farmers Forge Ahead On Adjustment Program

LIBERTY VOTERS AGAINST SCHOOL CONSOLIDATION

In the election held Saturday, June 8, for the consolidation of the Liberty School District with either South Plains or Cedar County districts, the majority of Liberty opposed consolidation with both South Plains and Cedar. At Cedar the vote was 29 for and 3 against and at South Plains the vote was 18 for and 1 against consolidating with Liberty. The votes cast at Liberty for consolidation with South Plains was 14 for and 23 against; and for consolidation with Cedar, Liberty voted 6 for and 31 against.

Farmers of Texas are carrying on adjustment programs regardless of all wild rumors that the recent Supreme Court decision endangers AAA and more than 70,000 new contract signers have shown up this year in the various commodities, according to Geo. E. Adams, assistant state agent of the Texas Extension Service. Adams reported that he traveled through 26 counties last week including the lower Rio Grande Valley and in all of them the farmers are going ahead with their programs.

Continuing them in the confidence, Secretary Wallace issued the following statement a few days ago. "In cooperation with the leaders of Congress, amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act are being perfected which are intended to bring the Act's provisions as to marketing and licenses into line with the Schechter case decision and also to safeguard the farmers' voluntary adjustment program on basic commodities. The voluntary adjustment programs were not in the path of the Schechter case decision, and in no event could there be any question of the Government's ability to fulfill its contract with the farmers. Nevertheless, we have taken advantage of the decision to seek perfection in the law which will make certain the Government's authority to continue processing tax rates in accordance with the amended provisions of the Act."

Paroles and Ransom
Vincent Astor's Hotel
Mussolini Is So Blunt
The Brain Bath

Waley, the Weyerhaeuser kidnaper, caught after he sent his wife, like a true gangster coward, to change ransom bills for him, has this record:

Arthur Brisbane

He had been arrested six times, beginning at eighteen, and sentenced to terms in prison that would have kept him in prison for 75 years if parole boards had allowed it.

He was repeatedly released until at last, thoroughly trained in crime and convinced, probably, as he might well be, that American justice is a mere joke, he went to Tacoma and planned there the "snatch," as criminals call it, of the Weyerhaeuser child.

Highway patrolmen in the western states did admirable work co-operating with the "G-men." The western highway patrolmen are real policemen.

Mr. Vincent Astor of New York has bought in and will operate the St. Regis hotel on Fifth Avenue, built originally with Astor money, now repurchased for $5,000,000.

An Astor running a hotel is nothing new. You need not be very, very old to remember the gray granite "Astor House," a block long, opposite the City Hall on lower Broadway, where they had roast beef such as you find nowhere now.

Before prosperous Americans learned to be really "aristocratic" with yachts, race horses and divorces, they thought owning a hotel and putting your name on it was almost aristocratic. The Astor House and the Brevoort House in New York, the Palmer House in Chicago, the Coates House in Kansas City, a thousand others prove it.

Mussolini annoys England; he talks so plainly—no diplomatic beating about the bush. Bluntly he says to old Britannia: "When you were building up your empire, killing off the Boers to grab South Africa, taking India from the pot-bellied rajahs, gathering in everything that was not tied down, you thought about you. Now it is my turn to gather in territory, maybe Ethiopia, and I care less than half of tuppence what you think about it. So mind your own business, please."

Important to the human race is news of the "brain bath," which, according to physicians gathered at a convention of the American and Canadian medical associations, literally "washes the brain," freeing it from the poison of diseases such as infantile paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sleeping sickness and some kinds of spinal meningitis. A solution of salt and water is injected into the vein at the ankle. After it has gone through the circulation and washed out the brain, it is withdrawn with its collected poisons through a needle inserted in the lower end of the spine.

Newsdom, written for newspaper men, says it has questioned all editors and publishers that amount to anything, and finds them "overwhelmingly certain that radical movements are of no serious trend."

The discovery will comfort many, but it is well to be cautious. There is always a possibility of underestimating what looks like "radicalism" of no importance.

China, because she cannot do otherwise, yields in full to Japan's demands. That is the news from Tientsin, and it happens because the 400,000,000 Chinese are not prepared for war, whereas the 60,000,000 Japanese are prepared.

"Yielding" probably will not save China from another heavy loss of territory. It is predicted that the young Chinese emperor, Japan's figurehead in Manchukuo, will be moved over and back to the old imperial palace, there to sit again as the Japanese imperial dummy.

All this is not our business, for it is happening in Asia. We have plenty to do here.

"What's in a name?" Some young Republicans want the old Republican party to change its name from "Republican party" to "Constitutional party." Long ago, when the New York Herald, since dead, reduced its price, the late Joseph Pulitzer wrote in a short editorial: "The trouble is not with your price, it is with your newspaper. Change that."

The trouble with the Republican party is not with its name. A dangerous strike is called off in Toledo, workmen wisely deciding to deliberate before going ahead with a strike that might have thrown tens of thousands out of work.

The steel industry, also setting a good example, decided to continue the NRA wage scale, not reducing pay or increasing hours. The Supreme court's Constitution decision has done no harm there.

Senate Extends Skeletonized NRA Despite Long's Extraordinary Filibuster—Grass Roots Meet Offers a Creed for the Republicans.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Senator Long

SENATOR HUEY LONG, the Louisiana Kingfish, made a tremendous effort to keep the senate from adopting the resolution extending the skeletonized NRA until next April, but failed. Advancing an amendment offered by Senator Gore, which would have required senate confirmation of all executive officials drawing more than $4,000 a year, thus disrupting the patronage machine Huey started on a filibuster. For nearly 16 hours, with occasional help from Senators Schall and McCarran, he kept the upper house in session, pouring forth a continuous stream of discourse that ranged from the necessity of preserving the Constitution down to recipes for fried oysters and pot-likker. He attacked the President and the administration generally, called the NRA "the national racketeers' association," told stories about his uncle, read from the Bible and Victor Hugo, stalked about the chamber waving his arms and croaking as his voice weakened, and now and then took a bite of cheese and a sup of cold coffee. All in all, Huey put on a show that kept not only the senators but a big crowd of visitors up all night. He was continually heckled by his angry fellow senators but always had a smashing retort.

At last the senate broke down the filibuster, rejected the Gore amendment and passed the extension resolution by a vote of 41 to 13. One change, to tighten up the anti-trust laws, suggested by Borah, was made, so the resolution was sent back to the house for concurrence. In its final form it continues the recovery administration without codes but with authority for voluntary agreements among business men dealing only with collective bargaining, minimum wages, maximum hours, abolition of child labor and prohibition of trade practices already outlawed by statute.

The house had previously adopted the resolution by a vote of 201 to 121, only a few Democrats standing with the Republicans against it. Immediately after the house had acted, it was announced at the White House that Donald Richberg would retire as chairman of the practically dead NRA on June 16, and that President Roosevelt had accepted his resignation "with great reluctance," and with assurances of his "affectionate regard."

PLANS for spending the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund are coming to the fore rapidly and numerously. Representative Mitchell, Democrat, of Tennessee, has introduced a bill requiring the President to use $1,000,000,000 to help the durable goods industries. By its terms factories supplying machinery and materials would be reimbursed for losses directly attributable to hiring new men. Mr. Mitchell thinks his plan would aid in the production of $80,000,000,000 worth of durable goods needed by private industry.

The War department filed a request for $17,071,588 to finance the construction of 36 army bases in Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California and Kansas. The Labor department asked for $400,000 for research designed to aid the United States employment service in selecting and placing workers on relief jobs and in private industry.

THOUSANDS of Republicans from ten states of the Middle West gathered in Springfield, Ill., for the "grass roots" conference and, in the shadow of the tomb of Abraham Lincoln, who saved the Union, solemnly determined to save the "indestructible states" from what they consider an assault on their constitutional rights. The gathering was considered so important that it attracted political observers from all over the country. Most of the delegates were young men eager for the battle, but with them were many white-haired leaders of former trysts whose enthusiasm and patriotism have survived the years.

After a pilgrimage to the New Salem State park where the scenes of Lincoln's youth have been reconstructed, the delegates assembled in the grounds Coliseum and were welcomed by George W. Bunn of Springfield, general chairman of the local committee. Harrison E. Spangler of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was installed as temporary chairman and made a speech in which President Roosevelt was pilloried in all manner of political and governmental sins, from killing six millions and breaking campaign pledges, to violating the Constitution and attempting to set up a dictatorship. Mr. Spangler then introduced the orator of the day, Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and former aspirant for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Frank O. Lowden

Mr. Lowden, breaking a political silence of seven years, vigorously denounced President Roosevelt's attempt to change the NRA, especially the New Deal maintenance of the old NRA. He said that the NRA was "impairing the national credit."

the delegates assembled in the grounds Coliseum and were welcomed by George W. Bunn of Springfield, general chairman of the local committee. Harrison E. Spangler of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was installed as temporary chairman and made a speech in which President Roosevelt was pilloried in all manner of political and governmental sins, from killing six millions and breaking campaign pledges, to violating the Constitution and attempting to set up a dictatorship. Mr. Spangler then introduced the orator of the day, Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and former aspirant for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Mr. Lowden, breaking a political silence of seven years, vigorously denounced President Roosevelt's attempt to change the NRA, especially the New Deal maintenance of the old NRA. He said that the NRA was "impairing the national credit."

IN THE "platform" by the grass roots conference these governmental policies were advocated:

- 1. The immediate adoption of a policy of economy which will not prohibit relief expenditures, but will restrict the present expenditures to the necessities of life and to the maintenance of the national credit.
- 2. The prompt establishment of a balanced budget, not by the method of double bookkeeping, but by the honest method of bringing the expenses of the government within the limits of its income.
- 3. A sound currency based on gold and silver, and definitely stabilized by contract that individual enterprise may have confidence in the future value of the dollar, in terms of which every man plans for his present or future necessities.
- 4. The immediate withdrawal of government from competition with private industry.
- 5. The maintenance of the free growth of American industry through the preservation of a competitive system protected against monopoly by the vigorous enforcement of anti-trust laws, so that the necessities may be preserved and the equal opportunity kept open.
- 6. The rigid enforcement of laws, civil and criminal, to punish and prevent dishonest or unfair practices in business, industry, and agriculture.
- 7. National recognition of the mental industry of the United States. The farmer is, of right, entitled to a fair and proportionate part of the national income and to receive the price for the products of his domestic markets.
- 8. Work for the workers. Work is out of work, as now, the capital structure of the nation is not only impaired but undermined.
- 9. The breaking down of artificial restrictions that throttle world commerce, such as quotas and exchange restrictions.
- 10. Continued protection to land and home ownership, and continued provision, in co-operation with state and local governments, for those who are in need until private enterprise absorbs the present army of the unemployed.

TAXES totaling $475,000,000 would go out of existence before July 1 if not extended, so a resolution continuing them two years was being tried through the house in accord with the wish of the President. Among them are the 3-cent postage and the 1-cent gallon federal gasoline charge. A second resolution was being prepared to adjust present rates found to be unconscionable or unproductive.

THE American Federation of Labor is more than any other group of the old brain trust remains the enemy of NRA, and its attorneys are drafting a bill designed to take its place in a measure. This measure will pose to put under federal license concerns engaged in interstate commerce or handling goods destined for such commerce. Those companies would be exempted from the operations of the anti-trust laws but would be required to agree to hours of labor and working conditions determined by a federal commission.

Lure of Washington

Junior Yachtsmen at Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

RECENTLY a jury in Washington, D. C., had to be quartered in a room in a hotel because of the influx of visitors to the nation's capital. The spring lure of the city brings thousands of travelers who swell the ranks of the normal transient population. Washington always has been a popular convention city. Indeed, conventions here never cease. This or that national group seems always in session. The year around, you see crowds of men and women wearing badges, carrying banners, following bands, touring the city in big buses which faunt their drivers while the pilgrims are and where they came from.

Washington time school children by the hundreds, of thousands flock here from all over the Union, reminding of that children's crusade of ancient days. The crowd of the city's more than 70,000 people, some of whom come from all over the world, are attracted by automobiles and motor boats, as the Tourist Camp grounds. More than 500 national associations have offices here, representing every branch of the United States and the American people, from the American Federation of Labor to the Camera Club and the Canners, Dyers and Glassers.

Private cars crowd the curb and fighting for nose room is a thing from every direction paved across the city. Washington is a chaos of traffic flow in from dawn to dusk.

Big motor travel is nothing new to Washington. The crowds that come to the city are not only big but all counted, at least five million visitors a year see the capital. More than 10,000,000 travelers use the Union Station annually, more than three times as many as the whites in the United States when the city was laid out.

National Museum Is Immense. Nobody has seen everything in the national museum. Nobody could. There is too much. To see its 13,000,000 different specimens—at the rate of one thing a minute, working eight hours a day—would take more than 74 years! This museum preserves all collections of objects in science, history, industry, and art belonging to our government. It is the storehouse for specimens that range in size from the tiniest of shells and insects to airplanes, automobiles, and huge skeletons of fossil animals. The whole has been valued at more than $120,000,000. Because of its host of old objects that are the only ones of their kind in existence, the collection could not be duplicated at any price.

Because nobody could see all, only some of the most interesting things are set out for public exhibition. These include fine examples of different kinds of animals, well-known historical objects, pictures, weapons, inventions, vehicles, and series of specimens of various kinds that have interest and attraction.

Natural History Exhibits. In the Natural History hall, the groups of large animals collected by the Roosevelt African expedition are the most popular exhibit. Lions, water buffalo, zebras, and others, arranged in lifelike manner, with the vegetation of their native haunts as background, show the types of mammals met on that historic hunt. Thousands of other specimens, large and small, from this same expedition repose in moth-proof storage cabinets in the museum laboratories, where they are the basis of scientific research.

In the fossil halls is the skeleton of a huge dinosaur, an extinct reptile of the Cretaceous period, a specimen 82 feet long, and so arranged that visitors may walk beneath it, and so gain a clearer idea of its vast size. Such skeletons are found embedded in stone, so that the bones need to be chiseled out carefully by hand. With this great beast appear many other fossils of bizarre and unusual type. Footprints fossilized in stone and many millions of years old give indication of life and movement by creatures otherwise known only from bones.

One hall shows only minerals. Here is the original nugget that started the

Says WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS.—Well all I know is just what I read in the papers, or what I kinder eve drop around and hear.

We are back at the Studio working on the picture after being away on location up around Sacramento, Cal.

We had a lot of fun on steamboats up there. We had two or three rented and lived right on the boats. Had a big steamboat race. Irvin Cobb was the captain of one and me of the other. Cobb really knew something about a boat, but I am not part of a boat man, either ocean or river, although I would take the river first. I am the champion sea sick guy of this or any range I am getting a little better though than I used to in my early days of ocean traveling. Its all nerve you know and I am as yellow as a small fox flag. I give up and off to the hay I go.

But to get back to rivers, this Sacramento River that we were working on is a pretty big river. Well nothing like the Mississippi (but what is?) or even the Ohio. In fact Irvin said its about half the size of the Tennessee. I dont know nothing but the Verdigris, (that last four letters gris, is pronounced gree) Verdigris. Its a pretty big river. It has to be to furnish Claremore with its water supply, and have any left over. I was born right on her, about a quarter of a mile away. She is steep banks, and muddy and boggy, and you cant cross it only at fords. This Sacramento and another river that run into it right where we was working, the American River, that was the river where they first found the gold in Cal.

around up the gold, there is a mining town. There has been a pretty good strike up here in the desert at Murray. The high price of gold is what has caused us to get out and dig again. I found a railroad division point. I like to go to those little mining towns.

One time out here in the old silent day pictures, it was in 1919, we made about three pictures up at a place near Mohave, Calidarandburg. It was a big old mine, and Irvin Rich was with us. She was just a breaker in as a leading lady. She is a big radio star now.

Modern audiences think that old folks are just to be the fathers and mothers of the young ones. And too is one of those same pictures was Margaret Livingston, who is now Paul Whitman's wife. She is the one that made him quit eating so much. The way she did it she would let him order whatever he wanted and then she had a string tied to it and she would pull it away from him, and he got this grabbing at it. I was one time to rescue her out of the water.

Well we had to go another two hundred miles to find a stream. You know this water thing out here isnt just swim in, its gold. Well I was supposed to swim in on a horse and rescue her, and as I dragged her ashore pull her up on my horse and run to the doctors with er. Well say you get on dry land and try to stay up on your horse and pull a fair size old gal up on there with you, when she is supposed to be plum dead, and then wet to boot! Say, she had to redress before I could get her up there. There is nothing heavier than a person that is wet, even a little person. You dip one of Singers Midgets in the water and let him soak awhile, and I bet you Dempsey wouldnt lift him up in front of him.

We had lots of fun in those days in the old silent pictures. They wasnt so careful and tedious with everything. I love Westerns. They wont let me make one. They say they can only get just so much money with it, as they have a kind of set price for Westerns, but I would like to get to make a good one. (Now dont start sending me my, you cant hint anything in this business without somebody, dozens of em, taking you up on it.) Fox picks my stories, not me. They notify me the night before we start what its to be, if they know by then themselves.

Pretty near everything in pictures nowadays is made inside a stage. Street scenes, churches, homes and all are put up inside a big stage. Then they can light it as they want too. We got a whole big steamboat built inside on a stage, water around the edges and all, but we miss a lot by not going on all those old location trips. Course this one to Stockton and Sacramento on this picture was great and unusual too.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

He smiled at Dawn and then at Ben and for the life of him Elliott could think of nothing adequate to say for an instant. When he did speak, he said levelly:

"In a lady's house the only thing to do is to reply in kind. Isn't that true?"

The other bowed slightly, but his eyes did not meet Elliott's.

"I'm glad you are so generous," he said and probably only Ben caught the mockery in the tone. "Am I too late for tea, Dawn?"

Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, watched this with grimly set lips. Dawn replied that Brandon was only just in time and Ben, picking up his cap and coat, prepared to go.

"You were talking of dances," he said to Dawn. "There's one on the cards for Saturday night. I'm told. Would you mind going with a mere employee?"

Her face lighted. "Mind! I'd love it!" she said and the honest enthusiasm in her voice caused Nicholas Brandon to look at her sharply.

"Saturday night, then. Good-day, Mr. Brandon." — with that challenging smile. He turned to the woman in the doorway. "Good-by. I guess I'll have to call you Aunt Em. That's the only name I know you by!"

As Ben passed out beneath the hemlocks and turned into the street, amazed at Brandon's manner, he brushed against a man who, he thought afterwards, must have been standing there. In the twilight he could not be certain but he believed that he had never seen that heavily bearded face before. He looked over his shoulder later to see the man, who had started on in the opposite direction, return and pass slowly before Dawn McManus' home again.

CHAPTER VIII

Nicholas Brandon was a man of forty-five. He was rich, he was powerful, he had achieved much of what he held to be desirable.

But his experience had been empty of things that most men crave above all things. In three years until she came back to Tincup that November, he had known her always. He had watched her grow from infant to child; from child to a wistful, shy girl, living under the cloud of her father's tragic disappearance; but the transition from girlhood to womanhood had been made during her longest absence from the town that had been her only home. And so when he saw her, after her arrival, instead of the young girl he remembered, toward whom he had always been gentle and kind while he sought to pierce her heritage, he encountered a lovely, compelling young woman. She charmed him, stirred in his heart long neglected and now twisted and distorted wants which, given liberty in his youth, might have been fine and open and clean. He wanted Dawn McManus as he never had wanted anything before.

Slowly a clear understanding of that desire struggled through to his consciousness. In the beginning it was only an unidentified, disturbing urge when the realization finally took shape he proceeded deliberately and methodically toward the formulation of a plan, as was his way in attaining his goal.

He saw Dawn frequently, dropping in to visit briefly in passing, taking her in a cutter on a drive to a camp once, finally asking her to do this or that for him. But he could not interest her despite his persistent efforts, and another element was injected into the situation. When he encountered Elliott that afternoon in friendly conversation with Dawn it required all his resourcefulness to retain a show of self-control. Inwardly he seethed and hatred which now had the element of jealousy for an embittering force. He hated Ben Elliott with all his heart and mingled with his passion for Dawn McManus was a species of hate which he hated her for her cleanliness, her sweetness, for her power over young men to her.

The motive impelled him, therefore, to plot and scheme and strive to get the Hoot Owl. Without that and the tidy fortune it might represent Dawn would be his resources. And a girl without resources, would be easy to believe, would be easy to control.

Now he was telling her of the new bookkeeper he had hired the day before.

"Queer fellow, in a way. Seems to be capable of a much better job than keeping books for the Hoot Owl. I've guessed at booze, disastrous family experience and any number of things, but none seems to fit him. At first I was a little leary of letting him into the office and had him in the mill a couple of days but, gee, you can't let a man who's certainly a high grade office hand do work like that!"

"I brought him in and told him I needed a bookkeeper but had just had one experience with a man that made me a little jumpy. I had a boy out there who was a little light fingered. He didn't get away with anything, luckily."

"But I told Martin—John Martin his name is—that I was going to put him on the books if he'd take the job with the understanding that I was going to suspect him of a lot of things for a long time. He gave me one of the funniest looks I've ever seen and said he wasn't afraid to be suspected."

"So there he is. We're in the new office, now. He and I each have a little cubicle."

sively. The man finished, calm and assured in his dictatorship and from his manner he might have been issuing an order to a subordinate which had to do with a commonplace detail of his business affairs. But after he had stopped the woman leaned just a bit further forward.

"It's a rotten deal!" she said in a quick, nervous manner. "Why, she's only a girl, Brandon; and the boy, he's as clean as a hound's tooth. It's rotten!"

Brandon shrugged and looked away. "I don't care to be mixed up in this," she went on. "I don't fancy playing any such game."

Defiance was there, and it struck the man's temper. His dark eyes swung back to focus on her face and about his lips was the beginning of a malicious smile.

"You refuse?"

"If I do, what?"

He leaned quickly against the desk edge.

"One word to the immigration people and you go back to Canada. Do you think they forget . . . the Canadians?"

Lydia blinked rapidly and bit her lip.

"You wouldn't turn me up?" she said sharply.

Brandon leaned back, laughing comfortably.

"Wouldn't I, though! Wouldn't I! If you refuse . . . Try it, my friend, and then try Canada's memory. You've been safe from their law for three years. In twelve hours I could and would toss you in them and have the satisfaction of a duty done."

For a moment they sat in silence. Then Lydia spoke with a bitter shake of her head.

"I know when I'm licked," she said crisply. "It's rotten; a fool how . . . but I'll have to go through with it. It seems!" She rose, and her breath was somewhat quick.

"But some day, Nick Brandon, you'll slip! For years, as I get it, you've had others carry your dirt for you. Remember, the time will come when this power you feel so sure about will crumble! The time will come when you'll have no one to turn to, no one to threaten into fighting your fights for you."

"That," he said easily, "is distinctly my own affair."

CHAPTER IX

It was Saturday night and Tincup was dancing. In the Odd Fellows hall a violin, a cornet and a piano made music for the scores who had paid their fee and danced in the glaring, barren room. And among them, a cynosure for all eyes, went Ben Elliott and Dawn McManus.

It was the first time many of the townspeople had had a real good look at Dawn since her return; it was Ben Elliott's initial encounter with a social function in Tincup; it was their first appearance in public together. Curiosity prompted much of the neck craning because Dawn, the daughter of Denny McManus, always had been a conspicuous figure, but now her loveliness was heightened by a flush and both men and women forgot that she was known chiefly as the daughter of a murderer.

Ben, dressed in a decently fitting business suit instead of the woods clothing in which they had always seen him, looked even more youthful than usual.

The two were apparently having the time of their lives. Ben talked. How he talked! He talked of this, that, the other thing constantly. He felt he must talk and keep talking of impersonal matters or he would find himself blurted words of love into Dawn's ear, there in a public dance hall. He felt that unless he kept talking of trivial things he would find himself shouting:

"You are the most lovely thing that ever breathed and I love you, love you, love you!"

So he seized upon every subject that came into his head eagerly, almost desperately.

Now he was telling her of the new bookkeeper he had hired the day before.

"Queer fellow, in a way. Seems to be capable of a much better job than keeping books for the Hoot Owl. I've guessed at booze, disastrous family experience and any number of things, but none seems to fit him. At first I was a little leary of letting him into the office and had him in the mill a couple of days but, gee, you can't let a man who's certainly a high grade office hand do work like that!"

"I brought him in and told him I needed a bookkeeper but had just had one experience with a man that made me a little jumpy. I had a boy out there who was a little light fingered. He didn't get away with anything, luckily."

"But I told Martin—John Martin his name is—that I was going to put him on the books if he'd take the job with the understanding that I was going to suspect him of a lot of things for a long time. He gave me one of the funniest looks I've ever seen and said he wasn't afraid to be suspected."

"So there he is. We're in the new office, now. He and I each have a little cubicle."

man, I . . . That is, I don't understand you," he stammered.

His eyes were taking her in, now, and her costly fur coat to the emerald earrings, and the hardness of her face; and, as in a daze, he classified her but her in the shameful niche which was hers. A great flush of indignation swept into his face.

"Don't understand!" Lydia laughed sharply. "I'll say you understand! May you think you can abuse a girl like that and get away with it in this town, not while she's in my house, you!"

A wave of humiliation overwhelmed him. What could a man do in a situation like this? What could he say? He was flustered, outmatched. Nothing in his experience stood him in stead in such an emergency as this one.

"Why, this is an outrage," he said weakly. But his fighting spirit surged upward, steeled him.

"I've never seen you in my life! I don't know what you're talking about. This is either a mistake or—"

"No!" the woman cried shrilly. "I try to get away with that! I don't do it! It does surprise you to have me here! But you've kept me in sight, dodged me and—"

"Stop it, I beg you!" he thundered. "Stop it, I beg you!"

An instant his conviction checked. Movement was going on about him, people shifting to see and hear one man mounting a chair. The door by the doorway had turned back after watching Dawn McManus go down the stairs. But Elliott was aware of all this.

"He's no stopping me now, Elliott," he came to show you up—"

"Come to make trouble on a night of this!" he said and turned to her.

She drew and pale, now, she glared dangerously, "outrageous plot," he said so low that only those close by could hear. "This is done to give me a black eye before these people here! You're a party to this filthy scheme, whoever you are!"

"Fine words, Elliott! Fine words! But this girl's tears and misery are on your head and if you won't help her from tomorrow!"

With that she turned and, self-composed, almost proud in her bearing, crossed the floor. Ben watched her go until she had disappeared down the stairway. Then he faced about, wondering what he could say to Dawn McManus but she was not there.

His face went blank in amazement, then, with a short, imperative gesture she shouldered her way through the sound carried through the room.

She stopped just within the room. Gone! Fled because she believed old and shook the light snow of this woman? His heart went cold but to cause words to die in the throats of those who saw Lydia here! Lydia from Thirty-Seven, leading this place where decent people, where good men, women and little children, were assembled!

The woman did not hesitate. Heading straight toward Ben Elliott who, eyes fast on Dawn to give no change in her mobile face, still talked with animation, unaware of the rush about them.

He did not stop talking until the woman's shadow fell upon him. Then he looked up, saw her and rose.

He rose because a woman was stepping toward him, evidently waiting to speak to him. He did not know her; had never seen her before. He had no time to observe and judge. He would have risen, anyhow, because he was naturally courteous to women. He did more than rise. He even bowed just a trifle when he saw that her eyes were fast on him. He did not notice that Dawn started, that one hand lifted quickly to her cheek.

Lydia's voice sounded sharp and hard and rasping in the silence.

"I should think you'd be ashamed of yourself!" she said.

Ben had started to smile, but this changed to a frown of perplexity.

"Ashamed, ma'am!" he asked. "Why?"

"Yes; ashamed! There's that poor girl in my house, sick and crying her days! You brought her here, didn't you? You're the one who got her to come to Tincup. And now, when she needs you, you won't come near her!"

Ben looked at Dawn, who was shrinking back in her chair; at other people whose faces reflected incredulity or vicarious guilt or fright.

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, whom he has befriended. He defeats Bull Duval, "king of the river," and town bully, in a log-biting contest. Nicholas Brandon, the town's leading citizen, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave the town and Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Elliott is arrested and finds a friend in Judge Able Armitage. The judge hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to David McManus, whose father has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben works him in a fat fight and throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott to be used when the going becomes too tough. Ben refuses to open this letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, leading the victorious fight against the flames, discovers the fire started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer of spot cash for logs, that will provide money to ride him over. But a definite time limit is set. Ben meets David McManus and discovers she is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman. The railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass and at once, to meet the time limit imposed in the contract, is blown up. Ben's efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the superlative efforts Ben builds a new bridge overnight and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare.

Youth's Right to Choose Own Pathway in Life

"If there is any more bitter disappointment in the world than that of parents who do their best to start off their children in life and find those children refusing to take benefits offered them, I want to know it."

"We have a son and a daughter. My husband is a dentist, successful after years of hard work. He has built up a fine practice, always with the thought of handing it on to our son. From the day of his graduation the boy would find himself in a position of security with his father, and assured independence. An enviable position, in this day."

"When he used to say he did not want to be a dentist, we laughed. It seemed the natural contrariness of a boy and not to be taken seriously."

"In his last year at preparatory school he wrote home, 'my English teacher says I have a talent for writing. Maybe now I won't have to be a dentist, after all!' And, now, in his second year at college, it is serious. He has made up his mind to be a newspaper man. A struggle, starting at nothing, ending, nobody knows where, instead of assured success and security for life! What do you say to it?"

This query, address to a deep-thinking, gifted woman of the world, drew the following reply:

"I say to you, my dear reader, that you are fortunate the boy knows so definitely what he wants to do. If he is not interested in dentistry, his father's practice would hardly assure him of success or security. If, in that case, he had no interest in its stead, you might be justified to be concerned. But there is something the boy wants to do! And that is half of success, and as much security as anyone anywhere can be certain of."

"Did you know that the fame of Napoleon was preceded by dismal failure in another career? It seems the young Corsican's original idea of an occupation was one that might bring him success and distinction in the shortest possible time. Some one suggested this to be writing, so apply himself to authorship he did. He dashed off a 'History of Corsica,' after its rejection spent two and a half years revising it, and wrote short stories, essays, and entered a contest for a prize offered by the Academy of Lyons. His work ranked next to last, and he dropped the idea of winning wealth and fame through writing. Commentators have said that if his critics had been less discouraging, if his work had had only a little merit, 'the world might have had in Napoleon a second-rate writer instead of just a Caesar!'"

"Your boy, dear reader, is a big step ahead of Napoleon at this time of life. That is the step of making his bid for success in something he was not 'cut out' to do. Also, he knows now, as Napoleon did not at the time of his failure in authorship, just what it is that he wants to do—and will, therefore, do best. The mother of that son should feel herself lucky."

CHRISTIAN MISSIONS

LESSON TEXT—Acts 1:6-8; 13:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.—Mark 16:15.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Sharing the Good News of Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Goes Preaching.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Can I Do for Missions?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Missionary Purpose of the Church.

God is, in his essential being, merciful and compassionate. All his promises to and actions toward man have been with redemptive ends.

1. Israel a Missionary Nation.

Following the apostasy of the whole race, God called Abraham to become the head of a race through whom all the nations of the earth were to be blessed (Gen. 12:1-3). The first gospel promise, that of Genesis 3:15, was to become an actuality through the missionary activities of the Jewish people.

1. The nations of the earth invited to look to God (Isa. 55:22). Israel was called to be the peculiar witness to the nations of Jehovah, the one God (Deut. 6:4).

2. Christ given as a light to the nations (Isa. 49:6). Christ is the way, the truth, and the life (John 14:6). Christ is the light of the world (John 8:12).

3. Jonah, a Jew, goes as a missionary to a Gentile city (Jonah 3:1-10). Jonah is prophetic of the nation and God's purpose for the Jews. While the chosen nation has been disobedient to God as Jonah was, yet after severe chastisement they shall fulfill the divine purpose.

II. The Church a Missionary Organization.

The very genius of the Church is propagation through devout missionary effort.

1. The apostolic commission (Matt. 28:18, 20).

a. The authority of Jesus (v. 18). God gave him all authority in heaven and earth. b. The commission of the apostles (v. 19, 20).

(1) It was to teach, that is, make disciples of all nations (v. 19). They were to make known to the world that Christ died to save sinners.

(2) To be in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, indicating that the believer has been brought into definite relationship to each member of the Holy Trinity.

(3) To teach the disciples obedience (v. 20). Profession is not enough. Obedience must issue.

c. The all-sufficient promise (v. 20). There would constantly be the blessing and fellowship of the all-powerful Savior and Lord.

2. The missionary program (Acts 1:6-8). The Church is under solemn obligation to witness to all the world of the gracious salvation which has been provided in Christ.

3. The first foreign missionaries (Acts 13:12). The occasion for this enterprise was a meeting of certain prophets and teachers at Antioch. While these ministers were engaged in praying, the Lord laid heavily upon their hearts the evangelization of the world. This marks the beginning of foreign missions as the deliberately planned enterprise of the Christian Church.

4. Preaching the gospel in Europe (Acts 16:9-10). Paul's inclination was to tarry in Asia Minor preaching the Word, but he was carried along by the Spirit. The Holy Spirit is just as active in closing doors as in opening them. The time had come for the gospel to begin its conquest of another continent. Paul, being humbled in on all sides, was given the vision of a man of Macedonia pleading for help.

5. Preaching Christ before Agrippa (Acts 26:12-20). Paul, having been brought before the king, took advantage of the opportunity to witness to him of the Savior. Observe, a. His manner of life (v. 12). He showed that he had been in strictest accord with the most rigid sect of the Jews. b. His supernatural conversion (v. 13-15). Christ had appeared to him on the way to Damascus and revealed himself to him. c. Jesus Christ commissioned him for a work (v. 16-18). He was sent to the Gentiles to open their blind eyes, to turn them from darkness to light and from the power of Satan to God. d. His consecration (v. 19, 20). He rendered immediate obedience to his commission. He showed that the opposition which he now experienced was due to his vigorous prosecution of his work.

The Foot of the Rainbow

The foot of the rainbow is never where you think it is. Perhaps there is a pot of gold there, but there are many more pots of gold that you will pass on your way to realize your dreams. Some men have the vision to see them.

The True End of Life

Happiness is the true end and aim of life. It is the task of intelligence to ascertain the conditions of happiness, and when found the truly wise will live in accordance with them.

Cottons of New Style Importance

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SUMMER cottons were never so lovely as they are this year, when their new fashion importance has caused them to be styled as carefully and as beautifully, and often as formally as the most expensive silks. They have blossomed forth in the stores in such alluring array that even if you have forgotten how to thread the bobbin of your sewing machine, you will find yourself buying dress-lengths for your own sports and daytime summer clothes and for pretty frocks for your little girl.

With cottons being declared so really high-fashion this season, at the same time so practical and inexpensive, it is no wonder they are creating such a furor in the style realm, they are simply irresistible. Then, too, they include such a wide variety of weaves to choose from, there is not the slightest difficulty in finding a proper kind for any pattern you may have selected.

Seersuckers are of course big news—and there are several types that merit attention for street and sports wear. The shirshakker plaids, in very fine-creaked seersucker, are equally attractive in two tones of one color or in vari-colored designs in bold or small patterns. The sports dress, to the left in the group illustrated, is made of this sort of plaid seersucker. It buttons all the way down the back and proves its practicability in that it may be worn separately or over a play suit of halter bodice and shorts. The ensemble is smart for beach, bicycling or tennis. Anyone who can sew even a little bit can easily make this simple though effectively styled dress.

Lighter in weight are the crepecord seersucker variations with corded lines emphasizing the color stripes in either pastel or high shades. You will have a difficult time choosing between these colorful stripe and the gay seersucker plaids. A dress of easy, breezy solution to this problem is the striped flaxon batistes, which you probably wore in rosebud-spigged prints when you wore braids and hair ribbons, are just as cool and sheer and dainty as ever. This year they are especially chic in new lively plaid and floral designs. The best of it is you can depend on them being in reliable fast colors.

That smart tailored budget frock which we are picturing to the right is one of the fashionable flaxon batistes in very sheer yet firm stripes. You will enjoy a dress like this for a summer daytime and spectator-sports wear. One of the fascinations of stripes is they make up so effectively. The gown illustrated is no exception to the rule. This striped batiste comes in red or blue with white or yellow, also brown with orange. The tie and belt of organdy trimming touch. Pleated short sleeves and buttons all the way down the front are nice details.

The little girl is wearing a frock which is made of lightweight crossbar cotton seersucker in red and white. The collar and pocket are piped with bright red.

FLOWER JEWELRY

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The new gold flower-jewelry is so attractive you will fall in love with it at first sight. The centers of the flowers are of turquoise, coral and pearls. The clips fastening this charming black lace-and-net cape with matching halo hat which has a large clip at the back, the bracelets and the ornaments on the lace bag show how decorative and flattering a touch these pretty jewel-centered gold flowers impart to millady's costume. With the now-so-fashionable white chiffon evening gowns you couldn't think of anything more pleasing to wear than a gold flower jewelry ensemble as here pictured. This stunning lace cape-and-hat ensemble was shown in the style revue in connection with the Lace ball recently given in New York.

FASHIONS HAVE NEW ACCENTS OF COLOR

White is still the top, but there are some new notes creeping into the song. They will never be able to steal the place that pure white accents have held for so long, but they are a great boon to those whose skin doesn't take kindly to white. With navy, with black or with brown a deep shade of pink, called desert rose is used. In pique or silk it makes gilets and collars and bunches of flowers for the neckline of a frock.

Chamois is the other color that is stealing into the accessory picture—the real thing or rough silk that is dyed the same tone. When the leather is used it makes belts and ascot scarfs, to be worn with navy or gray when matched to chamois gloves and bag.

Just as there are new colors in accessories, so are there new colors in bosomy. There is a coppery shade that blends beautifully with brown or tan ensembles, to be worn with brown shoes.

Peasant Influence Noted in Various Dress Items

The peasant influence is felt in all sorts of angles of female attire this season. Blouses go in for great big sleeves that are banded tight at the wrist, embroidery of peasant motive is used on dresses and good-looking sports oxfords have thick soles stitched in hem.

One of the smartest results of the "back-to-the-soil movement" is a two-piece Paquin daytime dress in a soft shade of blue. The straight skirt is given fullness by small kick pleats in front. The rounded high neck is formed by a sunburst of wide tucks and is edged by a band of blue pearls and metal which continues on the left shoulder to form an epaulette.

Chiffon Blouses

Gay blouses of chiffon in such shades as turquoise, chamois, mauve, beetroot and coral are going to look awfully smart with white crepe suits this summer.

SPANISH SWAINS WILL HAVE TO PLAY THE BEAR

The remoteness of Spanish American from European standards led to a laxity in regard to old customs which exists to the present day. In certain parts of Mexico a young man will still steal his bride; but, as a rule, they hold to the old Spanish manner of courtship, which, although it has nearly died out in the mother country, still exists in Mexico for all classes. When a young man notices a girl whose looks charm him, either on the street with her duenna or at mass, he follows her home, and then finds out from his friends about her people. Probably she has noticed his attention; and, if she likes it, she finds some opportunity to snuggle up to him, or drop a flower; whence begins the part of courtship known as lancear el oso (to play the bear). He comes under her window every evening, and she leans over the balcony and talks with him. In that way, she has the opportunity to become acquainted more freely than in her severely chaperoned parlor. He may persuade a servant to take notes for her and bring back her answers, but of which is considered quite comme il faut, and is not necessarily binding. This goes on sometimes for months; and if the poor youth happens to strike the rainy season, it makes no difference; he must "play the bear," rain or shine, even if he has to stand up to his knees in water.

If his daytime occupation takes him past her house at regular hours, there is further opportunity for a greeting, of which she is sure to take advantage. Finally, the suitor makes the acquaintance of the whole family; but, in accordance with the tradition of the Latin races, even after a formal engagement, the strict chaperonage by either a duenna or a balcony rail goes on until marriage. In serenade No. 56, which seems to have originated in the Spanish province of Asturias, the reference is obviously to this custom; for the girl comes to her balcony at the young man's signal, and gives an answering whistle.—Washington Post.

CRIMINALS MADE OVER PHYSICALLY WHILE IN PRISON

If your nose is crooked and you yearn to be an Adonis, or you have a twisted leg, and you would walk like other men, then rob a gas station or forge a check, and when—or if—you get out of state's prison you may have a Greek profile and two perfectly good legs.

That is, if you remember to commit the crime in Connecticut. For they're doing remarkable things in the state prison at Wethersfield. As one convict puts it, with awe, "They're improving on the acts of God!"

John Dillinger, public enemy No. 1, had his face lifted, and there were streaming headlines across the nation's newspapers. But much more fundamental plastic surgery is being done, unnoted, behind the turfed walls down on Wethersfield Cove. Men leave the prison so changed that their best friends don't know them.

Of course, there's one fundamental difference—that Dillinger had his physiognomy made over by quacks, to avoid the law, whereas the man in Wethersfield is reconstructed by the law itself, in an attempt to obliterate those stigmas that label him convict.

Penologists may insist that the "babyface" is equally as likely to be a killer as is the man with the bandaged nose and the prognathous jaw. But popular psychology still accepts ugliness as synonymous with turpitude, and distorted features as an indication of depravity. The man who is born with or acquires by accident the type of countenance that the law-abiding citizen associates with crime is likely before he starts. He looks like a criminal—Marian Murray in the American Mercury.

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen limbs, feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by careful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

ANDREW T. MORSE (right), wealthy Pennsylvanian, is so sure prosperity is coming back that he has bought the entire village of Tannertown, N. Y., which for eight years has been "dead" because the tannery, second largest in the world, closed down and most of its buildings were razed. Mr. Morse proposes to start a business employing about 50 men, and he will reside in the mansion formerly occupied by a factor superintendent. The village, a view of which is given above, consists of 22 houses, numerous barns, 100 acres of land and an eight-acre island in Tonawanda creek. Thirty-one families remained in the place when Mr. Morse acquired it.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

WHAT DANNY MOUSE WAS DOING

ALL the time Nanny Meadow Mouse was at home on the Green Meadows was worrying herself almost sick because Danny Meadow Mouse didn't come home. Danny himself was too busy with his own troubles to even think of Nanny. He had been trapped in a hollow log by Billy Mink and then Billy had been frightened away by Mrs. Hooley the Owl, who had then flown away to hunt for a meal in another part of the Green Forest. This had been Danny's chance to get out of that hollow log and he had made the most of it.

He had run his fastest until he just had to stop for breath and to rest a little. You know Danny's legs are short, and though he can run fast for a short distance, he cannot run far without resting. He crept under a pile of leaves to recover his breath and think what to do next. It is hard work to think when you are out of breath. Danny found it so. When at last he had stopped panting he began to consider what to do next. Never had he been in that part of the Green Forest. He didn't know a single hiding place.

"I will have to trust to luck," thought Danny. "Yes, sir, I will have to trust to luck. There isn't anything else I can do."

Just then he heard heavy, shuffling footsteps. Now, who was coming? Danny's heart began to go pit-a-pat, as he peeped out from under the leaves. What he saw made his bright little eyes almost pop out of his head and his head and his heart almost stopped beating. Shuffling along straight toward him was a huge black form. Never in his life had Danny felt quite so

Buster Stopped and Raked Over Some Leaves With His Great Paws.

Little and helpless. He knew who it was. There was no mistaking that great black fellow. It was Buster Bear. What to do Danny didn't know, so he did nothing. He simply crouched right where he was under that little pile of leaves and wished that he could shrink into nothing at all. Yes, sir, that is what Danny wished. Buster stopped and raked over some of his great paws, at the same time sniffing among them with his nose. Every sniff sent a shiver over Buster. He picked up something small. It was a leaf. But he did know that if Buster found a certain little Meadow Mouse under the leaves he would treat it in the same way.

Danny wanted to run. Never in his life had Danny wanted to run so much. He did right that minute. But there was nowhere to run to. He knew of a single hiding place. But Buster hadn't found him yet. He didn't know that he was so close. If he should run, he would be likely to see or hear Buster. He sat still. Buster raked over that pile of leaves. So Danny

by ELWYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:
Last night about midnight my husband returned home so terribly intoxicated I had to put him to bed. This morning he said he was to party and admitted he had been drinking but claims he had only one glass. Do you believe that?

Yours truly,
MRS. AULTHEUN.

Answer: Certainly I believe he only had one glass, but ask him how many times it was filled.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I have been studying economic and of course the prices of the different commodities occupy most of my attention. In a discussion last Sunday I took the stand that every known commodity has gone up in price during the past ten years. Am I right?

Sincerely,
LILY BOQUET.

Answer: You are not right. Everything has gone up but writing paper; that will always remain stationary.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I read in a newspaper some time ago about four Scotchmen who each put 25 cents in a pot as a wager. The bet was to see which of the four could stay under water the longest and the one who did was to win the money. I have been unable to find out which Scotchman won the money. Can you tell me the result of that? Can you tell me the name of the winner?

Yours truly,
SANDY COMPLEXION.

Answer: They all drowned.

Dear Mr. Wynn:
I go with some boys, and we are all around twelve years old. The day we found a full pack of cigarettes and we all smoked. While we were smoking, a minister came over and asked us if we knew any other boys who smoked cigarettes. We all said no. He said he was a minister, so could not tell us, but if we wrote to you that you would know. Will you please tell us

THE NUTRITIOUS BANANA

GOVERNMENT experts tell us that the banana is one of the most nutritious of our fruits, and is one of the most easily digested. Pounded for pound it is more nutritious than the potato and it constitutes the chief carbohydrate food of millions of people in the tropics, where it takes the place of cereals and tubers, such as potatoes.

The banana has still another quality which highly recommends it. The thick skin which covers the fruit protects it against all contamination and makes it a most sanitary fruit.

The ripe banana is easily digested. It is important that all fruit should be well ripened before eating. The skin of the fruit should be a deep yellow with flecks of brown covering it. A firm fruit in a dark brown skin is thoroughly ripe and at its best.

Banana Pie.
Bake a rich, tender pastry shell and fill it with thinly sliced bananas sprinkled with salt, lemon and sugar to taste. Pour over a cupful of whipped cream flavored with almond and sweetened to taste.

Banana With Beefsteak.
Slice into halves under-ripe bananas and lay in a granite dish with butter, lemon juice and sugar with a sprinkling of salt. Bake until the bananas are soft, then serve as a garnish to the steak platter, serving a juicy porterhouse.

Banana Fluff.
Take a cupful of sliced ripe banana, add a little lemon juice and half cupful of sugar, add an unbeaten egg white and whip until firm. Serve in sherbet glasses with a little lemon syrup poured over it and top with whipped cream.

Banana Fritters.
As an entree a banana fritter is especially appetizing. It may be served with various meats or as a dessert. Cut the bananas into thirds or smaller, if desired, dip them into the fritter batter and fry in deep fat. Serve hot or cold with a lemon sauce, using the juice and rind of lemon with a bit of cornstarch for thickening and sugar to cook a rather light syrup.

Charming in its simplicity, the yoke becomes a slashed excuse for a sleeve and a note of femininity is reflected in the simple bodice by means of front and back tucks.
