Many Plan To Be At Jones Banquet

At least 18 Dallam and Hartley county leaders tomorrow night will attend the Marvin Jones tribute banquet in the Amarillo Hotel at Amarillo, Dalhart Chamber of Commerce officials announced at noon today.

R. E. Underwood of Amarillo will be toastmaster and will call on various Panhandle leaders for brief talks. There will be no set program. Panhandle steak will be served at $1.25 per plate, and the affair gets under way at 7:30.

Persons who want to go should all the Dalhart Chamber of Commerce not later than 6 p. m. today so that reservations can be made. Those known to be planning include: President W. H. Coon, of the C.; Chairman Coombes of the General XIT Committee, Jack Wade, Ralph Waite, A. P. Edwards, Jack Brown, Andy James, W. O. Hulbertson, Dick Coon, O. H. Finch, Ed Bishop, John B. Honts, Joe Smith, Malcolm Stewart, J. C. Parmer, H. D. Foust, Allyn Finch, Rex Mahoney.

Worley Is Given Four Important Committee Posts

Washington, Jan. 23 (Special)—Gene Worley, of Shamrock, congressman from the 18th district of Texas, has been appointed to four leading House committees: 1, Irrigation and Reclamation; 2, Labor; 3, Coinage, Weights and Measures; 4, Election of President, Vice-President and Representatives in congress.

This is the announcement of chairman Robert Doughton, South Carolina, of the Democratic Committee on Committees.

The Irrigation and Reclamation committee, Doughton said, deals constantly with legislation that will continually and vitally affect Worley's own district. Work of the other committees is more national in scope.

The Irrigation-Reclamation committee, it was said, is concerned with soil depletion, erosion and similar agricultural problems and membership on it is one of the most sought appointments in congress, particularly by congressmen representing districts where the needs of farmers are paramount.

Masons To Confer Amarillo Degrees

Twenty-five Dalhart Masons will be guests of Palo Duro Lodge No. 1239 in Amarillo Friday evening, when several degrees will be conferred, according to A. M. Reese, secretary.

The Dalhart degree team, which will officiate, includes Harry Schultz, worshipful master; C. J. Huntsberry, senior warden; Lee Nelson, junior warden; Reese, secretary; C. R. Mauldin, senior deacon; H. C. Cox, junior deacon.

The affair will open with refreshments at 6:30 o'clock. Fred Lyon, worshipful master of the Amarillo lodge, is a former Dalhartan and Rock Island Lodge No. 869 is his parent lodge.

TWIN CAGE BILL

Channing, Jan. 23.—Tomorrow night at 7:30 in the big Channing high school gym, the Channing and Hartley high school boys and girls will play basketball and give all the proceeds to the infantile paralysis cause; each school donating its full half of the funds.

A special feature of the evening—and one that is attracting wide attention—is the 30-minute old-time square dance that will be staged between the two games. It will be put on by genuine Plains veterans, to the music of old-fashioned fiddles, and with an old-time cowman doing the calling.

HARTLEY PLANS GAMES

Hartley, Jan. 23.—The Hartley high school boys and girls next Tuesday night, Jan. 28, will entertain the Dalhart Wolves and Wolverines, and have dedicated the game to the infantile paralysis program.

The Hartley clubs for more than two weeks have been pointing for this game and already have Dalhart fans agog. Many Dalhartans, accordingly, will want to go to Channing tomorrow night to see how the Hartley teams stack up against the Channing Eagles and Eaglets.

CONLEN FIGHTS POLIO

Conlen, Jan. 23.—Chairman Russell Ritchey of Conlen Community night will probably announce this week some of the entertainment that the regular Community night program will have on Jan. 30. The event will be dedicated entirely to the polio war, and will turn over all proceeds to it. Everyone is invited, and can contribute to the paralysis cause just what they wish as a freewill offering will be taken.

BOOK REVIEW TOMORROW

Dalhart's infantile paralysis benefit program tomorrow night at 8 at the high school auditorium will be a review of the 1940 book of the year—"For Whom the Bell Tolls" by Ernest Hemingway. Fr. J. L. Daly is the reviewer. Six women's clubs are sponsoring the program, which will include "God Bless America," sung by 7-year-old Charles Pipkin, a polio victim; and the singing of President Roosevelt's favorite song, "Home on the Range," by Miss Luzelle Hicks.

W. L. Cotton, immediate past commander of the American Legion post, will introduce Fr. Daly. "For Whom the Bell Tolls" continues to be perhaps the most widely discussed book in several years. "It is positively one of the very best books I have ever read," said Mrs. Raymond Jacques this morning. "It is splendid."

"I haven't read it," said Mrs. H. B. Thompson, "but I have read innumerable reviews of it, and they are unanimous in praising it as far and away the best book Hemingway ever wrote. They also are agreed that it was the finest book of 1940."

"Prof. Frederick, dean of the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern university, Chicago, speaking on the 'Men and Books' radio program, said 'I am sure it is a classic. The characterization is the finest in any book in a long, long time.'"

Clarence Lewis Is Kiwanis President

Clarence J. Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lewis of this city, was installed president of the Valdosta, Ga., Kiwanis club at a luncheon meeting last Friday. Maynard Smith, retiring district lieutenant-governor of the Georgia Kiwanis, presided at the ceremonies.

Mr. Lewis has been an active Kiwanian since going to Valdosta three and one-half years ago, serving as vice-president, committee member and on the board of directors of the club. He is also prominently identified with work of the Valdosta Chamber of Commerce, particularly in connection with membership campaigns.

Lewis is active in Methodist church activities, Boy Scout and Red Cross work, and in 1938 was given the Community Builders award by the National Chain Store council.

Probe Is Ordered

Austin, Jan. 23 (UP)—The Texas Senate today ordered a special probe into reported usurpation of power by state boards and commissions. State Auditor Tom King has been ordered to produce his records before the Senate which will sit as a committee for the investigation.

Snow Flurries Being Forecast

Light snow flurries may invade the Panhandle this afternoon or tonight, according to Amarillo weather men, and the temperature may drop considerably tonight.

Fog that lay over part of the Panhandle this morning was dispersed, it was said, by the cold front moving out of the north on a 10 to 15 mile an hour wind.

W. R. McCarty Is Critically Ill

W. R. McCarthy, formerly of Dalhart, and father of John McCarty, also a former Dalhartan and now of Amarillo, was stricken seriously ill yesterday at his home in Killeen, Tex.

The word was brought to Dalhart by Mrs. W. F. Baird, Canyon, mother of Mrs. John McCarty, who was here yesterday enroute to La Junta, Colo.

The Amarillo News, of which John McCarty is now editor, reported at noon that it had had no word from him since he and Mrs. McCarty left for Killeen about noon yesterday.

Couple, 70, Wed to Start Year—Cheyenne, Wyo. (UP)—In Wyoming, it seems, it's never too late for love. Cheyenne's first marriage license in 1941 went to a 70-year-old couple, Jennie A. Walker and Theodore Taylor.

Rumanian officials declared today that their nation's brief but bloody civil war, which has taken lives into the uncounted hundreds is nearing a close.

The radical Iron Guardist elements that tried to wrest control from Dictator-Premier Ion Antonescu and that clashed heavily with his troops were said to be under control in most sectors. Heavy fighting continued in some areas near the Russia border, reports said.

Italy, which yesterday lost Tobruk, its North African base to British, Australian and Free French forces, today continued suffering reverses in the Valona sector in Albania.

Fascists still are pouring reinforcements into that area, and today made three counter attacks in an effort to stem the Greek forces rolling slowly toward Valona. But the Greeks repulsed all thrusts and continued advancing.

Meanwhile, the Greek and British air forces blasted a Valona air field and its port facilities.

Heavy fog today overlays the English Channel and German raiders apparently are idle, but at noon the RAF presumably was busy again hammering Nazi objectives along the French coast. Residents of the Dover area saw a few British bombers heading toward the Continent, heard others in the clouds, and soon reported hearing heavy explosions from the French side.

The Japanese ambassador to the U. S., a former naval attache in this country, left Tokyo for Washington today.

He carried a three-point diplomatic proposal which observers believe has little chance of U. S. acceptance.

Broadly, the three points emphasize that Japanese diplomacy is centered on the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis; and that Japan must be recognized as a stabilizing factor in the Far East.

The U. S. cannot well accept Japan's Axis position while at the same time it plans all-out American aid to Britain; and acceptance of Japan as a Far Eastern stabilizer would imply recognition of Japanese dominance in the Orient.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, testifying today in Washington before the House Foreign Affairs committee which is conducting hearings on the Aid to Britain bill, expressed the belief that even a full-dress U. S. entry into the war could not defeat Germany unless a Nazi revolution breaks out. He said he saw no signs of internal German trouble.

He pointed out that Germany controls Continental Europe, and declared flatly that neither a British victory or preservation of the British navy is essential to American security. He said he did not know whether Germany can invade England, and indicated that a stalemate in the war might be best for the U. S.

Asked how aggression would be halted against the Western Hemisphere if England falls, he said aggression is stopped only when there is something strong enough to stop it and that he thought the U. S. could build the necessary strength.

What Does That Mean?

Pointing to a sign hanging in a prominent place in our show room a friend asked, "Just what does that sign mean?"

We appreciated the question because it gave us an opportunity to explain a phase of our business upon which much of its success has been built; it means much to every purchaser of farm equipment; every dealer and prospective buyer.

But before explaining further perhaps it would be wise to show you the sign that introduced this subject. Here it is:

First we explained that such signs are displayed only by International Harvester dealers; that it was the purchaser's guarantee of receiving genuine parts in the repair and replacement of McCormick-Deering Farm Equipment and our long experience has taught us that using genuine IHC parts is the most economical and satisfactory way of repairing McCormick-Deering equipment of all kinds.

We are particularly proud of the privilege that has been ours all these years of displaying this sign and knowing that each year the farm machinery owner is appreciating more and more the value of having his equipment repaired with GENUINE IHC PARTS.

right within Vinson's committee from the pro-labor members, led by Representative Mike Bradley of Pennsylvania, World war telegraph operator to the late Admiral Sims; from Lyndon Johnson of Texas; and from Warren Magnuson of Washington. Also Senator David I. Walsh, chairman of the Senate naval affairs committee, is co-author of the act and will vigorously resist any attempt to scuttle it.

However, the brasshats of both the Army and Navy are quietly gunning for the law and they swing a lot of undercover weight.

Only the other day Secretary Stimson formally petitioned the Labor department for exemptions for the canning industry, one of the most poorly paid in the country. Stimson claimed that canners are refusing to sell to the Army because of Walsh-Healey wage requirements, and consequently the Army has been compelled to buy canned goods through middlemen at a considerable increase in cost.

Both the AFL and CIO are fighting Stimson's move. The AFL charges that it is in direct violation of Roosevelt's pledge not to relax labor standards, and the CIO has asked Stimson why he doesn't resort to the "draft industry" law and force the canners to toe the mark. So far he hasn't answered either attack.

But you are going to hear a great deal more about the Walsh-Healey act during the present emergency.

GLADHAND JOE

The inner offices of the State department are getting a chuckle out of a little article about former Ambassador Joe Kennedy in the December 8 issue of The London Spectator, which has just arrived here. The story, which sheds an interesting light on the ambassador from Boston, said:

"Mr. Kennedy was in some respects an unusual diplomat. On the day he left England finally, a telegram addressed to the editor of this journal by name reached the Spectator office. It ran as follows:

"Tried to get you unsuccessfully on phone cannot leave England without personally thanking you for your many kindnesses to me during my stay and it is with real regret that I leave England. Joe Kennedy."

"It was a warm-hearted message. The odd thing is that the recipient, it so happened, had never had the fortune to meet Mr. Kennedy, or even so much as see him during his stay in London."

Hays Says Movies Not Promoting War

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is sending to newspapers all over the country his letter to Senator Burton K. Wheeler which categorically denies Wheeler's charges that "the motion picture industry is carrying on a violent propaganda campaign intending to incite the American people to the point where they will become involved in war".

Hays declared that "the facts utterly deny the merit of such charges", and asserted that the newsreel companies do indeed seek to cover, with meticulous impartiality, the great issues before the country".

Hays said the relatively few protests he had received were about equally divided, some claiming that the movie industry was "glorifying" war, the others claiming that screen portrayal of war's horrors was giving aid to pacifist groups.

Hays has reiterated his statement, first made when American neutrality was declared in the fall of 1939, that "there will be no cycle of 'hate' pictures" and that "the primary purpose of the essential service of motion pictures is entertainment. . . . which, at its best, is inspirational".

QUARTERMASTER CAMPS

Here is good news for some lucky draftees!

Within a few weeks, the Army will announce the establishment of two placement camps to train likely selectees for the Quartermaster Corps. First of their kind since the last war, they will be located at Camp Lee, Virginia, and Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyoming.

Selectees with experience as auto mechanics, electricians, blacksmiths, truckers, machinists, painters, radiator repairmen, sheet metal workers, storage battery experts, tire repairers, tool makers, upholsterers, and welders will stand the best chance of getting assigned to these camps for a 3-month course in army buying, maintenance and transportation methods.

Both training centers will be large camps; the one at Camp Lee will have 9000 men, and the one at Ft. Warren 6000 men, of whom 1200 will be colored troops. Afterwards the men will be assigned to regular units with excellent chances for promotion as non-coms and commissioned officers.

NOTE.—Major Neil H. McKay, known to hundreds of government contractors all over the country, will be adjutant of the Wyoming center under Lieutenant Colonel George E. Hartman.

Ed Adams

There will be a decided improvement in this column for several days. At least it won't be Jerry Minter's fault if it don't get better. The little sawed-off guy from out Perico way delivered some fresh country spareribs to our house and wouldn't accept a thing for them. Happy days are here again, 'cause all my troubles are washed away!

This is from H. L. Adams: "You wanted to know who had taken The Texan the longest. There may be some here who have taken The Texan longer than I have, but I subscribed for it in May, 1908, and am still taking it, and if I have ever missed a copy of it I don't remember it. In 1908 Mr. LeClere was running the paper in one of the Felton rooms on the alley and the post office was in the next room to it. Mr. Clark was postmaster at that time. We have taken the Canon City, Colorado, Record since 1890."

That makes thirty-three years that Mr. Adams has taken The Texan, thirty-one years for Mr. J. F. Adams and thirty-four years for D. C. Atkinson. The other day Henry Tandy and J. F. Adams were trying to remember the name of the first publisher of The Texan, and in Mr. H. L. Adams' letter they have it. Henry is not exactly a newcomer here, either, and while I am sure he takes The Texan I don't think he reads this column. So some of you old-timers should tell him the name of the first Texan publisher.

And thanks for writing us.

Mrs. Bradley, who helps in the lunch project at the South Ward, came in and asked that the public be invited to contribute a few more dishes to the project. It seems that they are feeding an average of about eighty children per day and they do not have sufficient dishes for all of them to eat at the same time. As a result some of the children have to wait and others are rushed. She says they need about 15 more glasses, 15 plates, and with these dishes they can take care of all the children at the same time. You are invited to take these dishes to the school or bring them to The Texan office.

This little poem, swiped from Tex DeWeese's column in The Pampa News, is, I think, worthy of bringing to your attention:

"CRIPPLE TIM"
I ain't got nothin' t' worry about,
I got my eyes and ears
An' I got two the best o' legs
T' walk me through the years.
I ain't listed as a beauty,
But my heart is filled with joy
That I ain't got infantile,
Like the neighbor's little boy.
We should all pitch in an' help,
'Cause the way the neighbors talk,
If the fortunate would spend,
Cripple Tim could learn t' walk.
Can you watch the wheel chair pass
With a gladness in your heart,
When Cripple Tim could have been playin'
If you had only done your part?
I ain't never took in dances,
Guess I never had the time,
But Franklin's birthday ball will get
Your dollar and my dime.

Pop Corn Balls Winter Delicacy

Pop corn balls are always a winter delicacy and here's a recipe that will make twelve medium sized balls:

- 1 cup sugar
- 1-3 cup white corn syrup
- 1-3 cup water
- 1-4 cup butter
- 3-4 tsp. salt
- 3-4 tsp. vanilla
- 3 quarts unseasoned popped corn

1. Put sugar, corn syrup, water, butter and salt in a saucepan and cook, stirring until the sugar dissolved.

2. Continue cooking, without stirring, until syrup forms a ball the ball in cold water (270 degree Fahrenheit).

3. Add vanilla and stir enough to mix it through the syrup.

4. Place the popped corn in bowl large enough for mixing.

5. Pour the cooked syrup slowly over the popped corn and mix well.

6. Wet the hands slightly and shape corn into balls, using enough pressure to make the balls stick together. (This recipe will make twelve medium sized balls) means we are going to have to about twenty Dalhart women help. Of course you can turn down, you no doubt have many good reasons for so doing, but one day or two days or a week your time too much to be given to crippled children? We know you are busy, that you have children of your own, that you helping out on the P-TA, that belong to so many bridge clubs and sewing circles and there's shopping to be done and meals prepare and that you bought basket for the poor children at Christmas and Mrs. So-and-ought to do it. But you have answer to someone higher than Mr. Roosevelt or the thousands doctors who are giving a lifeline to this work for the part you play in helping humanity. It's all right to turn Bob and Ed down, but you're not doing that. You're turning down the kiddies who lie helpless in their beds and wheel chairs. Think that over before you decide you are too busy.

Berkeley, Calif. (UP)—Intelligence is fundamental, and can be credited to innate or hereditary factors, rather than to the influences of environment or economic status, according to Dr. Nancy Bayley of the Child Welfare Institute of the University of California. The conclusion was reached after nine years of observation of 61 children ranging in age from a month to 9 years.

By HENRY McLEMORE

Los Angeles, Jan. 23.—(UP)—Notes on golf and golfers by a golfer who couldn't break 90 with an illegal club and a broad-minded caddy: A dozen or more of the better pros say that the longest hitter in the game is not famed Jimmy Thompson, but an unknown White Sulphur Springs whacker by the name of Frank Stiedle. . . . Thompson says they may be right, but that he is willing to bet $1000 they are wrong, and that he will swing against Stiedle anytime, anywhere.

Clayton Heafner, the North Carolina sensation, has played in three tournaments, since he was married last January, but Mrs. Heafner has yet to see him swing a club. . . . "Women are unlucky on a golf course," Clayton says as he shoos the missus into the clubhouse when he goes to the first tee.

There is no such thing as an amateur threat in open golf tournaments anymore. . . . My authority is Freddie Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, who knows all there is to know about the game. . . . There was a time when the Oumets, the Travers, the Jones, the Von Elms, and the Goodmans could look the pros in the eye and not ask for strokes. . . . But no more. . . . The Chapmans, the Wards, the Wehries and the other outstanding amateurs haven't a prayer against the play for dough boys.

Want a tip on how much faster the golfing field is these days than it was 10 or 12 years ago? Okay. . . . 1929 Johnny Goodman beat Bob Jones in the first round of the amateur and created a national sports sensation. . . . A week ago one Leland Gibson knocked off Lawson Little, national open champion, the first round at San Francisco, and no one was even surprised. . . . You can shake almost any bush these days and scare out half a dozen fellows capable of breaking 70.

The winning of tournaments is more luck than skill if you believe Benny Hogan and Byron Nelson. . . . Demaret says he never won a tournament when he was playing his best game, and Nelson says the same thing. . . . Hogan swears that one of the worst rounds of golf he ever played from the tee to green was on the day a few weeks ago when he shot a 52 in the Oakland tournament. . . . He missed 11 greens that day.

Speaking of 11 greens that was just the number Johnny Revolta out-putted to lick Harry Cooper in the finals of the San Francisco match play open. . . . This must go down as one of golf's great feats, because the greens were pools of water and Revolta used a niblick or a No. 2 iron to putt on most of the lake-like carpets.

Bing Crosby gives his caddy a new suit of clothes whenever he breaks 70 and playing at Lakeside Monday with Demaret, Nelson, Pete Watts and the writer, Bing did just that. . . . His caddy yelled, "Make it a gray one with a chalk stripe," as Bing canned a tricky putt for a par on the home green. . . . I have promised by caddy that the first time I break 90 he'll get an elephant, Howdah equipped, and a round trip ticket to Yellowstone.

Ed (Porky) Oliver Tuesday completed the longest drive in golf—6000 miles. . . . He drove from Oakland, Calif., to Wilmington, Del., only to find he had been excused from the draft. . . . Now he is back here to get back in the winter tour. . . . The gamest golfer of the new year is Jimmy Hines. . . . He shot a 68 in the second round at San Francisco to tie for the qualifying medal. . . . A half hour later he collapsed in a doctor's office and is now in the hospital.

Since Jan. 1, 1940, P. G. A. sponsored golf matches have contributed $50,000 to the Red Cross. . . . This sum is in for a big boost in March when Jones, Hagen, Sarazen and Crosby fly to Nassau to play a benefit with the Duke of "My feet and limbs were so swollen and sore and stiff that I could hardly walk," says Mrs. A. M. Belsher, of 1518 Ave. F, Lubbock, Texas, a long-time resident. The pains were so severe that I couldn't even do my own housework. I had given up hope of finding relief.

"Then I tried Hoyt's Compound. From the first few doses I could see a marvelous change. I can get a good night's rest, the stiffness and swelling have gone. And at last I can really enjoy doing my housework! I hope other sufferers will take my advice and try this splendid medicine!"

Hoyt's Compound is recommended and sold by the Wolf Drug Store and by leading druggists everywhere.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

A wave of jubilation swept Sergeant Feathers. This was his first big chance and things were shaping well for him. If it should turn out that Simon Osborne were guilty, there would certainly be promotion in store for the clever officer who unmasked him.

"You're sure of that? He couldn't have returned without you knowing it?"

"Not a chance, young feller. He might have been in New York and not come home."

"Not him. Where would he get the money to sleep anywhere else for two nights? He's always broke. Take it from me, Monday morning was when he came home. I stepped out for a drink at eleven and ran into him."

"Your name, please?" said Feathers, producing a notebook.

"Cissy Glott."

"You'll hear more of this later, Miss Glott."

"Mrs. Glott," she corrected him sharply, and added: "You keep after him, young feller, he's the man you want."

"You sound as though you'd be glad if he were hung."

"I wouldn't shed no tears, you can bet your life on that. The fuss he makes if I take a drop of whisky for my rheumatism! Simon Osborne is one mean one, you can be sure! You can hang him and welcome!"

"Have you any idea when he'll be home?"

"He'll be home when the bars close, if he can walk. Goo' night!"

Sergeant Feathers walked away, determined to return later and interview Simon Osborne even if it meant missing his last train home, but when he rounded the corner into the next street he heard someone shouting: "Mr. Osborne! Hi! I want a word with you!"

Stopping short, Feathers turned and saw a hatless man run out of a cigar store and hurry after a middle-aged individual who was heading straight for a bar on the nearest corner. The middle-aged individual was apparently oblivious to the shouts, for he went on with a nonchalant air. When the man from the cigar store caught up with him and grabbed his arm, he looked round with a start and a broad smile creased his face.

"My dear fellow! This is a pleasant surprise. I've been meaning for days to drop in on you. How are you? And your wife? Don't tell me she's still got that old bronchial trouble?"

"Look here, Mr. Osborne!" said the exasperated storekeeper. "I want my money. It's over a year—"

"My dear fellow," replied Simon soothingly. "I'm terribly sorry. In strict confidence, as one of my old and valued friends, I'll tell you the candid truth—"

"You've been telling me the candid truth for twelve months and I still haven't got my money. I don't want any more of your stalling. Do I get my money or don't I?"

"You embarrass me," said Simon, shutting his eyes as though in pain.

"Never mind that. Do I—"

"I'll be frank with you," said Simon. "It's like this—"

The rest escaped Feathers, for Simon lowered his voice to a confidential whisper. The storekeeper reluctantly retraced his steps—having obtained no satisfaction—and his shameless debtor, with a bland and princely air, continued in the direction of the bar. Sergeant Feathers touched his shoulder as he reached out to open the door.

"Mr. Simon Osborne?"

Before replying, Simon eyed him from head to foot. Not to be outdone, Feathers returned the appraising glance.

Simon frowned. "You don't look like a process server," he said.

"I'm not. I'm a police sergeant."

"Some of my best friends are cops," said Simon cordially, shaking his hand warmly. "Charmed to meet you. I am about to drop into Rooney's for just a snifter. Won't you join me?"

Sergeant Feathers hesitated. He was an abstemious young man, almost a teetotaler, and he knew that it was not ethical for an officer to drink with a man he might later arrest. On the other hand, was it not likely that in the disarmingly cosy atmosphere of Rooney's Tavern, and under the influence of drink, Simon Osborne might let slip some vital information which at a more business-like interview he would not dream of divulging?

"Thanks," he said, "don't mind if I do."

They passed through the door of Rooney's together.

"Scotch for me," ordered Simon jovially. "What'll you have?"

A good start, thought Sergeant Feathers. He knew what Scotch could do. Under the influence of only two Scotches at a New Year's party some years before, he had kissed all the girls, insulted all the men, and insisted on telling his life story to everyone, whether they wanted to hear it or not. The more Scotches Simon Osborne drank, the better for a certain bright young officer's promotion!

"What'll you have?" repeated Simon. "Whisky? No? Then why not try a stinger?"

"A 'stinger'?" said Feathers doubtfully. "What's that? Never heard of it."

"Oh, it's a sort of cocktail. Very pleasant, they tell me. Never touch it myself. Too mild for me."

A sort of cocktail. . . . It sounded harmless enough. Women drank cocktails. Yes, Feathers decided, a 'stinger' would suit him admirably. He would spin it out, make it last a long time. He would need a clear head to steer Simon Osborne's unguarded tongue in the right direction when it had been lubricated by several Scotches.

While the bartender was pouring the drinks, Feathers took stock of his surroundings. They were in a small tavern that radiated solid, old-fashioned comfort. The bartender had a rosy, round face and a way with bottles that was enchanting to watch.

"I've had a few words with your housekeeper," Feathers remarked casually, watching Simon's face out of the corner of his eye.

"Have you, indeed?" said Simon equably. "Drunken old sloven," he added, draining his drink at a gulp. "Two more, Mike," he said to the bartender. "You don't want to pay any attention to what she says, young man. I never do. It's been my experience that you never get the truth out of habitual drunkards. It's a wonder the woman can speak at all. She drinks like nobody's business. Spends her whole life in a semi-coma."

"I went down to Lakelawn, leaving behind an almost full case of Scotch. Silly of me, knowing what she is, but I have to order it by the case, my boy; they won't supply single bottles on credit. Would you believe it?—when I returned there wasn't a drop left! She downed it all! Must have been blotto half the time."

"Drink up, my boy," he added, "you're fallin' behind."

Feathers looked down and saw three 'stingers' lined up in front of him. Knowing Simon, the bartender had filled the elderly man's glass as soon as it was emptied and each time he had shaken a 'stinger' for Sergeant Feathers. With the benevolent eyes of Simon upon him, Feathers gulped down one drink and took a cautious sip at another.

The door opened and several people came in at once. They all knew Simon and greeted him familiarly. "Hello, Gran'paw. How's ever little thing?"

"Well, you old soak, you; st dodging the heebie-jeebies?"

"How's the bookie's friend? Lucky I didn't put my shirt on the rag in the fifth like you told me. I'd be walking 'round in a bare tonight!"

They crowded the far end of the bar and Simon turned toward them, exchanging backchat amiably.

Feathers felt out of it. He took another sip—a long one—from the second glass and tugged Simon's sleeve. Simon turned his head. "Yes, my boy?"

"Er. . . what'll you have?"

Feathers thundered.

The flow of banter ceased and all the faces at the end of the bar turned in the stranger's direction. Feathers felt disconcerted by the joint scrutiny, but the faces relaxed in smiles, and one or two of them thanked him warmly. He did not understand for what they were thanking him until the bartender arrayed half-a-dozen foaming glasses and a double Scotch in a line and looking pleasantly at Feathers said that would be a dollar and ten cents. A little dazed by the general acceptance of his loud invitation to Simon, he paid and relapsed into silence.

"Moochers!" said a doleful voice in his ear. "Born moochers, all 'em."

Feathers looked round and saw a lugubrious little man in a dusty derby hat standing at his elbow. He had come in a split second too late to avail himself of the Sergeant's unintentional hospitality.

"Free drinks, that's all they think of," said the newcomer sadly. "You can hardly take a deep breath without half of 'em saying: 'Thanks, I don't mind if I do.' Cadgers, that's what they are. I'm not like that, thank heaven," he said, his gloomy eyes fixed steadily on Feathers' face. "I believe in waiting till I'm asked."

They looked into each other's eyes. There was a long silence, then—

"What's yours?" asked Feathers weakly.

"Well, now, that's very kind of you. I'll have a shot of rye, since you're so kind as to invite me."

Homogenized Milk And How It Is Made

Homogenized milk is a new product in the Texas Panhandle, and countless towns and cities in this general High Plains area still do not have access to it.

Thousands of folks have never tasted it; and know nothing of how it is produced, and what benefits and advantages, if any, it has.

Homogenized milk, however, is not new. A recent survey showed milk dealers handling it in 46 states, and it comprises 20 per cent of their total sales.

Probably the foremost advantage is that every drop is like every other drop. In other words the cream, or butterfat, is so broken up and distributed among the rest of the milk that no cream rises to the top. The person who gets the top of the bottle has no more than a five per cent advantage over the person who gets the bottom, and perhaps not that much.

Tests have proved it is better for infant feeding. Also, it looks richer, tastes richer to anyone, and has a better flavor than unhomogenized milk, according to majority opinion.

Also, homogenized milk is always pasteurized, or heated to pasteurization temperatures before being homogenized. Raw, or unheated milk, when homogenized, becomes rancid very rapidly and is unpalatable in a very few minutes.

Briefly, milk is homogenized as follows: Placed in an homogenizer, a special piece of highly sanitary dairy equipment, the milk is drawn into a chamber. There, by means of a piston, the milk is put under 2000 pounds per square inch pressure.

At that pressure, a small valve is forced open, permitting the milk to spray in a thin layer through a very small opening, striking against nearby sidewalls in the valve unit with a terrific impact.

Thus, three things are accomplished: The fat, or cream globules, are sheared as they pass through the very tiny opening. They burst when they are suddenly released from the 2000 pounds pressure, and shatter when they hit the sidewalls.

This process breaks up each normal-sized cream globule into 50 or 100 smaller globules. These, completely dispersed through the rest of the milk, cannot rise to the top and form the well-known cream line.

Also, homogenization affects the casein so that when curdled it forms a soft curd, much less firm than the curd in unhomogenized milk. Thus, according to authorities, homogenized milk is much easier digested than the untreated type.

from profits on Texas riches which they get under the protection of Texas laws.

The oil industry, Mrs. Collier points out, was mighty sick in 1932 and 1933. Texas people nursed it back to health and power on their proration law. Now Texas housewives expect the oil industry to protect their homes from being turned over to tax collectors.

She says the same thing is largely true of the sulphur industry which grew rich and strong through grants of patent monopolies; and the gas industry which grew powerful through the protection of reserves and franchises.

Against Sales Tax

Austin, Jan. 23.—A group of Texas rural and urban housewives known as the Women's Committee on Economic Policy for Texas, and headed by Mrs. Jud Collier, an energetic rural wife of near Mumford, continued their demands that Texas homes be protected from "a tax on the hearthside." A sales tax would be just that, they assert.

Mrs. Collier and her co-militants say the logical thing is substantial increases in taxes on oil, gas and sulphur, because "these businesses, which are prospering in Texas, are able to pay the increased taxes

Banks Must Perform, Or Else, Says Babson

By ROGER BABSON

Washington, Jan. 24.—The request of Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve system, that the President's power to further devalue the dollar be scrapped was an administration trial balloon. Causing considerable comment when first proposed, the real facts behind the controversy have not yet come out.

Congress vs. Roosevelt

To anticipate that the President would voluntarily give up any of his personal powers must have made many die-hard Republicans believe once more in the "dawn of a new day." To think that Chairman Eccles, a noted "leftist," would of his own initiative bite the hand that gave him his job is likewise too much to believe. Not for nothing is this sudden about face and passive acquiescence on the part of the President to a plan which would shear him of immense and hard-won power.

The boys in the back room who said "It's just a game of politics" were absolutely right. The proposal is too practically obvious; it shows the hand of the master politician too clearly to warrant any other interpretation. It is essential that the President demonstrate as early as possible to the people of this country that he still has the upper hand with Congress. The last thing in the world he wants to do anyway is to devalue the dollar. But will Congress now take back what was once taken from them? Perhaps Congress, too, will want to play a little politics.

A Sound Proposal

Congress should repeal unsound legislation and regulations. Any act of Congress which will delay the inflation hazard is justified. Mr. Eccles' proposal is basically sound. Originating from the source it did, however, it is bound to be viewed with suspicion. This is particularly true in view of the terrific battle the President put up two years ago to retain his personal power to further devalue the dollar. Regardless of the ultimate fearsome results that the President's existing powers might bring about, Congress may feel it would lose face to now reverse itself.

The President, through Mr. Eccles, has passed the inflation bill to Congress. Our lawmakers have got to carry it for awhile. My guess is that right now they are praying for a fumble. Certainly, there should be removed from our statute books many of the crazy ideas that original New Dealers had for the regimentation of our monetary system. The fact is that the schemes were never needed anyway. Some one in the Administration has waked up to the fact that the country is getting into a financial hotbox. Perhaps all that gold at Fort Knox is beginning to worry Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Morgenthau, and others.

Scared Investors the Real Answer

The man we have in the White House is nobody's fool. He is in there fighting every minute for what he thinks is necessary for the country's welfare. In the first two years of Roosevelt's administration, he set out upon a program designed to benefit the most people. He is still at it, but the scenes upon the stage have changed considerably in the past six months. Mr. Roosevelt has always reminded me somewhat of Mr. Edison in that both, in their endeavor to find the answer, embarked upon a process of elimination. In the early days of the New Deal, Mr. Roosevelt felt justified in experimenting. After all, the country is a big one and we could afford it. But now he realizes that he is responsible for a bigger play than that of which he ever dreamed. The whole democratic world is looking to Mr. Roosevelt and our country for leadership.

I believe the first item upon Mr. Roosevelt's agenda for the New Year was the question of financing our preparedness program. Furthermore, England is very apt to come to the end of her financial resources before 1941 is over. Also there is the possibility of "free" France looking for aid in the future. There is only one country left to set the world on its feet again. Such a colossal job requires a colossal amount of money.

Compulsory Investing Ahead

If our investors and bankers had any common horse sense, they would recognize this. They would take their funds out of vaults and put them to useful work. Otherwise, we shall see sales campaigns to force individual savings into new forms of government securities. We shall see, too, our so-called "Triple T" bonds down to a reasonable price level, and the second-grades, where real support is needed, will perhaps sell at much higher prices.

Roosevelt has given the bankers every chance and as yet they have not come through. He is going to win the war for England as well as for ourselves. If he cannot get the financial assistance which he needs from investors voluntarily you will see every bank, both national and state, under Federal control. A word to the wise should be sufficient!

Joke's On G-Man

Salinas, Calif. (UP)—The Federal Bureau of investigation is not so feared that people will not play jokes on it. FBI Agent Joe Ross of San Francisco conducted a crime scene at the police school here in which officers were assigned to find stray bits of evidence such as telephone numbers, addresses, etc. At the end of the session, it was discovered that all of the collected evidence had disappeared.

Under the Dome

* * * * *

Austin, Tex., Jan. 23 (UP)—Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel defeated 41 persons to be elected Governor for his second term which began this week.

Beside the Republican and Communist nominees for Governor, votes were cast on Nov. 5 for 39 persons.

Republican candidate George C. Hopkins received 59,885 votes and Ben H. Lauderdale as Communist party nominee had 202 supporters.

Both Col. Ernest O. Thompson and Harry Hines, who had been candidates against O'Daniel for the Democratic party nomination, had followers who refused to give up the fight. Forty-seven voted for Thompson and seven for Hines. Former Governors Jim Ferguson and Dan Moody received two votes each and Former Gov. Pat M. Neff had one. There were nine votes for "M. Ferguson"; possibly intended for former Governor Miriam A. Ferguson.

Mrs. Margaret Hahhis Gordon, former representative from Waco, received two votes for Governor and District Judge Sara Hughes of Dallas received one.

One Texan was not satisfied to see Vice President John Nance Garner retired from public life and cast a vote for him for Governor. Mayor Maury Maverick of San Antonio, former Congressman, also received a vote and so did Lynn Landrum, Dallas columnist who criticized O'Daniel during the campaign. Another editor, Peter Molyneux of Dallas had one vote.

Scattered votes went to Atty. Gen. Gerald C. Mann, Former Atty. Gen. William McCraw, former Lieut.-Gov. Edgar Witt, and to Lowery Martin, Bill Corry, Tom Hunter, George Atkinson, Bert Bollinger, T. T. Bouldin, Floyd Chafin, Walter Griffin, Tom Helm, H. O. Kane, John C. Sunderman, Simon Taylor, Leo Weiler, Bud Thompson, Ed Williams, Eugene Ward, Major Yates and Leo Hammott. The returns to the State Legislature did not give addresses of the write-in choices.

Lieut. Gov. Coke Stevenson received a greater vote than Governor O'Daniel. The vote for O'Daniel was 1,019,338. That for Stevenson was 1,020,977. Republican candidates for Lieutenant Governor S. D. Bennett received 47,622 votes and Cecil B. Robinett, candidate for the Communist party, was given 268 votes.

Speaker Homer Leonard of McAllen, who used to be editor of the McAllen Monitor, paid tribute to the power of the press in his first address to the 47th Texas Legislature.

A Capitol Columnist, Leonard said, had described him as "debonair Homer Leonard". Which, the speaker laughed, was an exaggeration.

"But somebody read that article", said the legislator, "and a few days later I got a letter from one of my colored friends addressed: Debonair Homer Leonard Austin, Texas".

Leonard is a tall fine-looking man who looks younger than his 42 years. He dresses well, usually in brown, smokes cigars, and has a constant twinkle in his eye when talking on anything except the most serious subjects.

The McAllen man is the 46th speaker. Coke R. Stevenson of Junction the pipe-smoking rancher-lawyer who now is Lieutenant Governor and presides over the Senate, served two terms as speaker, but no other man holds that distinction.

Leonard described Stevenson: "As fine a man as ever presided over this or any other legislative body."

A large delegation of McAllen citizens came to Austin to see Leonard take office. He named three young girls from that city to be "honorary pages to the speaker" an included as a fourth member of that select group husky Merritt H. Gibson, former Representative who is now Gregg County Judge and President of the Texas County Judges and Commissioners association.

Leonard said that he also appointed Gibson to "be my protector".

The speaker announced that after the session he intends to keep the chair which he will use and to buy another for the next speaker. Leonard received four gavels, two from the board of control (his "work gavels"), a small ebony gavel from the McAllen Rotary club, and an inscribed gavel from a brother-in-law in San Antonio.

R. Emmet Morse, Leonard's predecessor, still is state representative from Houston.

The member with the longest record of continuous service is C. E. Nicholson of Port Neches, oil refinery employee who is serving his ninth term.

House tax bills of the 46th legislature died in the Senate "without benefit of clergy" and "without extreme unction," Senator Joe Hill of Henderson told the 47th legislature in an appeal for rules for the new session that will prevent a committee killing bills in an untimely fashion.

Senator Rudolph Weinert of Seguin, chairman of the committee in which the tax bills met their death, rose slowly from his seat to interrupt Hill.

"I just want to tell the senator that I said a prayer over them," Weinert remarked.

"Flimsy as this senate ceiling is (it fell once), I do not believe that prayer ever got to heaven," Hill replied.

Hours of argument have been heard in the Senate over the rules. It sums up into a contention of Hill and others that the old rules give committees power to kill bills without fair opportunity for a minority to present its side to the full Senate. Opponents of more liberal rules say legislation of importance would be crowded out if every bill were given a chance to go to vote of the whole Senate.

It is a poor bill or a bill with a lazy author who cannot get three members of a committee to get it out of an unfavorable committee on a minority report, they argue.

Dr. T. S. Barcus, Rev. John E. Eldridge and Rev. R. H. Campbell are in Lubbock today.

POLIO WAR—

ity—running the gamut from tragedy to hope—is packed into the minute and a half film, "It Happened Here," than one imagines would be possible.

It is a graphic, vivid story of the relentless assault of infantile paralysis on American childhood, and how American scientists, doctors and hospitals, backed by the Mercy Dollars of the American public are meeting it.

It shows the wide variety of events—basketball games, horse races, wrestling matches, foot races and many others—that are being held throughout the nation with all proceeds going into the polio war chests.

J. C. Parker of the Mission and La Rita theaters bought the film outright as one of his contributions to the polio war, and it is showing every night at the Mission theater. Lowell Thomas is the narrator.

SPECIAL POLIO WINDOW

Buford Moss, employee of the Edwards Chevrolet company, and Joe Scaling, Mission and La Rita theater employee, have collaborated to make a beautiful and striking display in The Texan window. It emphasizes the great humanitarian objectives of the polio war.

The window background is made of red, white, and blue crepe paper, arranged as streamers in a unique pattern. Moss' wizardry with crepe paper is amazing.

Centered against this background is a huge black and white bust drawing of President Roosevelt, done free hand by Scaling, who used a photograph as a model.

Flanking the drawing are the polio window cards announcing the benefit balls in Dalhart Jan. 30.

POLIO TABLOID

Outstanding, dramatic and effective will be the elaborate tableau that W. L. Crouch will present at the Polio ball at the Trianon hall Jan. 30.

So far as known, Crouch was the first person in the nation to recognize the possibilities in such a brief, striking dramatic interlude.

His idea, with major modifications so as not to conflict with the presentation here, was offered at the Hartley Polio ball, and struck a responsive chord in the hearts of all those who believe in America and therefore are interested in its future—American childhood.

TICKET SALE OPEN

Bob Martin and Ed Bishop, co-chairmen of the Dalhart Polio Ticket Sales committee, this morning opened advance sale of tickets.

Workers are being rapidly recruited and the program will be in full swing in another 24 hours.

This year, for the first time, lapel emblems are being sold, like Red Cross buttons are sold. Everyone thus contributes to the polio war chests on the same basis. If a person, who buys an emblem, also wants a dance ticket, he is given one.

Openings In Air Corps Announced

Thousands of young men have in the past few months wanted to get in the U. S. Army air corps and have been turned down because there were no vacancies.

However, today Major Walter Jessee of the Lubbock recruiting office announced vacancies as follows: 53 in the 49th school squadron at San Angelo; 37 at Mather field, California; 31 at Las Vegas, Nevada; and 12 at Kelly field, Texas.

Air corps recruits must have a high school education or its equivalent, or a journeyman rating in a mechanical trade.

Major Jessee also reported 43 vacancies in the 18th field artillery at Fort Sill, Okla.

Lola Mae Roquemore, injured in a highway accident during the holidays, has been released from Loretto, where she received treatment for twenty-seven days.
