MAGNESIUM SCOOP — Last week a federal grand jury indicted the Aluminum corporation, Dow Chemical, and others for working with the German dye trust to control production of magnesium, an essential war material. Exactly six months ago, on July 25, 1940, The Washington Merry Go-Round revealed the joint magnesium monopoly of the Aluminum Corporation and I. G. Farben Industrie; and on August 18, the column forecast that the grand jury probe would continue despite efforts of company officials to settle the matter.

WASHINGTON. — Republican House Leader Joe Martin warily avoid committing himself on the lend-lease armament bill at the GOP caucus. Here are the instructions he gave his colleagues:

"Read the testimony of those who testified on the bill at hearings.

"Listen carefully to discussion on the floor. Be present at every session during debate on the bill and amendments.

"Go home and think it over.

"Use your own judgment, but vote like Americans."

ARMY MORALS

Telegrams and letters have been pouring into the War department and to the Wisconsin senators from wives and mothers of the 32nd Division of the National Guard, about immoral conditions around Camp Beauregard, at Alexandria, La.

Wisconsin troops happen to be involved, and Louisiana happens to be the state complained of. But the situation has brought to a head a problem which exists in other states with other troops.

This controversy between Wisconsin citizens and the War department may become a national issue as the new selective service army of a million men moves into camps all over the country. A similar controversy already has developed regarding Jacksonville, Fla., and its neighboring Camp Blanding.

In the Louisiana situation, Wisconsin senators are demanding that the War department remove three houses of prostitution near Camp Beauregard. But the War department replies that it has no jurisdiction over the civil community outside camp limits. To this Senator Wiley has replied that the War department should extend its jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, officials of Alexandria contend that their town is perfectly moral. War department attitude is that the Army is not charged with moral reform of its recruits, and that their conduct around a camp is likely to follow the same pattern as their conduct at home.

At the same time, experts of the Morale Division hope to hold men on the reservation, even in their spare time, by a well-planned recreation program, and by serving three-point-two beer. Beer of that strength is declared by law to be non-intoxicating, and the experts reason that if a man can get beer in camp, he is less likely to go to town looking for liquor.

The War department also expects that Army life will prove rigorous for men out of civilian life, and there won't be much time or energy for idling.

Born 105 years ago, Mrs. Mary Field Garner of Roy, Utah, takes up the "goldarned gadget" of a telephone to listen in on congratulations as she observes her birthday. Born Feb. 1, 1836, in Herfordshire, England—when Martin Van Buren was being elected president, Abraham Lincoln unheard of and the Civil war still 25 years in the future—Mrs. Garner is Utah's foremost pioneer. She walked most of the way across the plains from Nauvoo, Ill., to Salt Lake City, when she first settled in Mormondom.

Judge Sets Smart Bond

Charles Smart, facing life imprisonment on charges of murder, was granted a habeas corpus hearing in Hereford Wednesday before District Judge James W. Witherspoon, and his bond set at $7500, reports Sheriff H. D. Foust. The hearing was requested by his attorney, B. N. Richards, and Smart was then returned to the county jail here pending securing of the bond, Sheriff Foust said.

Smart was given the life sentence in Dallam county district court in connection with the fatal stabbing of a young farm laborer here last May. The case was then presented before the Court of Criminal Appeals at Austin and reversed, and is now pending a new trial.

Add More Taxes To Carry On War

British forces today continued to deal severe blows to the Italians in Africa, while announcement of further taxation to carry on the entire war was made by English officials in London.

The main body of Italian troops in Libya are being steadily pushed back, press dispatches say, and are retreating at the rate of 30 miles a day. In Italian Eritrea, Italian Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland, British penetrations are deep, and hundreds of prisoners are being captured.

The present war is costing England $42,000,000 a day, officials said today, and further taxation will be necessary. Restraint in spending was urged upon the entire nation, with individuals asked to turn their resultant savings into government coffers.

President Roosevelt today nominated John Gilbert Winant, studious New Englander and director of the International Labor office since 1929, as ambassador to England, succeeding Joseph Kennedy.

Henry Ford today announces he is conducting experiments with a new riveting machine expected to cut the time of the process by 50 per cent. Such a machine, if successful, would revolutionize the production of metal airplanes and eliminate one bottleneck of the plane industry. The machine has been shown to Army experts, who are reported to be astounded at its possibilities.

All-Out Aid---Lend-Lease

"All-out aid for Great Britain."

"The lend-lease Bill."

"All aid short of war."

These are familiar words today. Through the press and radio they have become common expressions. Us common folks hear them daily and even freely express our personal opinions relative to the best policies for this country to pursue.

To be perfectly truthful and honest about it, we don't know just what this word "all-out" means. Maybe its proponents want us to aid England until we are "all-out" of aid, perhaps it means that we are not to draw the line at any assistance we can give them.

Now that "lend-lease" business sounds more familiar to us. We've been on both ends of the "lend" business and have had some experience in "leasing," but our experience has been confined to small personal matters and we can't say that we've ever been called on to pass judgment on lending and leasing to foreign governments.

So we've decided to let the President, Congress and the various military strategists, foreign commissioners and agents decide to just what extent we shall give all-out aid to other nations and whether the lend-lease Bill shall become a law.

In the meantime, however, we do understand the kind of "all-out" aid needed by the farmers and ranchers of this particular territory. We've had several years experience on that subject and our experience has taught us that the best aid they can have is good farm equipment. We would even go further and say that the best farm equipment is that manufactured by the famous McCormick-Deering Co.

As for the "lend-lease" Bill we suggest that you let us explain the "income-purchase" plan that makes the purchase of a new, or Blue Ribbon used, Farmall tractor a convenient and economical investment.

Important! Recent Changes Affect Millions!
The Work Sheet Guide Will Coach You Step by Step

If you are single and your gross income averages over $66.66 per month, or if you are married and your gross income averages over $166.66 per month, regardless of the amount of your net income, you are required to file an income tax return for 1940 under the new tax laws. Heretofore you were not required to file a return where your gross income was under $5,000 or, if single, your net income was under $1,000 and, if married, your net income was under $2,500.

In addition to lowered exemptions, the tax rates are higher. These changes in the law will affect millions of persons in all walks of life!

The Individual Income Tax Work Sheet Guide provides spaces for and guides you in computing each item of income and deductions. Each item of income and deduction and each schedule appearing on the return is explained. Non-taxable income and deductions which may be overlooked are covered. Salaried persons, business men and everyone required to file an individual income tax return will find the Guide invaluable.

Edited by Experienced Accountant

The Work Sheet Guide was edited by an accountant with twenty years' experience in public accounting. ## WANTED: A WOODEN LEG

A Chicago executive of the high-power, instant-decision type, forceful yet kindly, told his office boy, a lounging overgrown youth of 18, to mail a handful of letters, buy a dollar's worth of stamps and make a reservation for New York on the Twentieth Century.

"Huh?" ejaculated the youth shuffling his feet.

The message was repeated carefully.

"What century did you say?" he asked. "Naw, I guess I didn't hear you. I was out to a dance last night and I'm sleepy".

Honoring the youth's frankness, but transferring him to the shipping department, the executive was presently asking the personnel manager for another boy.

"What kind?" asked the personnel manager.

"One with a wooden leg, that can't go to dances," said the executive.

The literal-minded plant personnel manager, more used to hiring, found he had no wooden-legged boys, but he sent up a little hunchback with a sharp wit and big appealing eyes, who actually did turn into a very fine personal secretary. Any honest and alert youngster could have done the same, with or without a strong physique. But the incident illustrates the genuine usefulness of those who seem handicapped.

There are many jobs which a man with a crippled leg, or with one arm can fill quite as well as anyone else. It requires a little planning on the part of the employer, but pays big dividends in the course of years. It ought to be worthwhile merely from the satisfaction of helping another.

In the modern world, as machinery unfolds its possibilities, it is not legs, or arms, or hearing, or even eyes that are essential. There is such a thing as willingness, for only by giving a little more than he receives does a man progress in any organization. But aside from that matter of character, no one is ever entirely crippled who can still think.

THANKS TO SCHOOL AND HEALTH AUTHORITIES

Chances of a successful arrest of tuberculosis is directly dependent upon early diagnosis and early treatment. That this has been realized by school and health authorities is indicated by the tests now being given children in the Dalhart schools. The work is of tremendous value to the health of this community and those responsible for it are due the appreciation of the citizenry.

Although the mortality rate from tuberculosis in the United States has been reduced from 200 deaths per 100,000 population in 1900 to a present low of 46.6 per 100,000, the disease still presents one of our major problems in medicine.

Advanced tuberculosis means a prolonged period of treatment and invalidism, which is quite expensive to the individual. The outstanding need in the realm of tuberculosis today is early diagnosis—for early diagnosis means early treatment, and hence early recovery.

Medical scientists have found that the disease usually attacks the individual for the first time in his early years. If this primary infection occurs before the third year the mortality is very high; however, if the child is spared the infection until after the third year he shows a large amount of innate resistance to the invading germ.

Further protection of the public in general is the testing of milch cows. One authority for the statement that the disease can be contacted by drinking cow's milk is "The Chaser," official publication of the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium. In answering the question, "The Chaser" states, "If milk is from a tuberculous cow and is unpasteurized the consumer is likely to contract the disease."

Protection against the disease is found in ample rest and plenty of sunshine. Mothers who insist that their children retire early each evening and spend their recreation hours in the sunshine are contributing much to the future health of those children.

Thanks to Mrs. J. D. Howard much of the information we have been seeking about the first newspapers in Dalhart has been secured. And it is undeniable, because right now on my desk is one of the original copies of the first Dalhart newspaper, "The Denrock Sun", published at Denrock, Dallam County, Texas on May 1, 1901 and mailed at Hartley, Texas because there was no postoffice here.

The first subscriber of The Denrock Sun was Mr. F. E. Rickey, town site agent. The second was J. A. Eidson; the third, Jno. F. Schrader; fourth, Alex. Burleson; and fifth was W. L. Foxworth.

The first tree planted in Dalhart was planted by Robert Troup who was the owner of a meat market, a lodging house and an "elegant barber shop". The Sun indicated that perhaps Mr. Troup might also build a "wagon yard and camp house."

Editor of the Sun was Robert B. Edgell. Subscription price was $1.00 year and Mr. Edgell predicted that "Denrock will be to the upper Panhandle what Wichita Falls is to the lower Panhandle, a commercial and railroad center".

Another paper Mrs. Howard brought in is "The Dalhart Sun", evidently the successor to "The Denrock Sun" after the name of the town was changed. The date of the copy is May 25, 1901. It would be nice if the exact date the name of the town was authorized was known so that Dalhart could officially celebrate its birthday. Anyway, we do know that Dalhart will be forty years of age sometime this year.

serve Dalhart. Mrs. Howard owns a copy of "The Progress Dalhart Evening News", first of which appeared on July 7. Its editor was C. F. Drake and publishers and proprietors L. W. Phillips and B. L. St. Subscription price was $5.00 year but it seems that the did not last a year.

Among the advertisers in "Dalhart Evening Sun" were Swearingen Co., The First National Bank (with surplus of $75,000), Latham and Sons, real estate dealers, C. and Sons, R. P. Hutton and Billie Jarrett, "the beer man," T. L. Jacques and De Soto Hotel, with "bar and number shop in connection", and McGee Drug Co.

I hope you folks have seen these little articles about days in the newspaper field in Dalhart. We are deeply grateful to all those who furnished information. We kinda straggle something the other day in as having a party for readers the Texan with thirty to years to their credit. It seems some of the early day changes here, connected with the news and outside of the paper, were they are today, not of the high calibre and getting folks together offers an opportunity to be troubled that have long since buried.

By that I don't mean the has been altogether dropped are working on a similar job may meet with your approval.

At the Baptist Church there is a green and black inaw, evidently the property some child. It is size 6, and a gently brand new and can be used by calling at the Church. It was found several days ago.

Police Voice in Church Pitman, N. J. (UP)—The Baptist church congregation startled when a policeman's was heard over the organ during church service. In some unexplained manner system became tangled with two-way wave-length of the dispatch system from the station next door.

Dr. and Mrs. R. J. Harville mas, visited her sister, Mrs. Williams and Mr. Williams evidently the present Texan is not the first daily newspaper tonight.

McADOO'S DEATH

One of the last persons to confer with ex-Senator McAdoo before he died was Oscar Chapman, assistant Secretary of the Interior. During their two-hour luncheon the tall, erect, 77-year-old statesman appeared to be just as vigorous and youthful as ever.

McAdoo discussed plans for rallying the State of California around Roosevelt, told how he was booed for the first time in his life by the Al Smith delegation at the 1932 Chicago convention, and how he swung the California delegation to Roosevelt, thus stampeding his nomination.

McAdoo also told how he had been elected to the U. S. Senate from California despite the criticism that he was a "carpet-bagger". This criticism he obviated by telling how his father had gone down from the Tennessee mountains on a raft via the Ohio and Mississippi and fought in General Scott's army in the Southwest. It was this army which helped liberate Texas and California, and therefore McAdoo pointed out that he could consider himself a part of California.

McAdoo and Chapman talked for a long time. Then next morning at 11, Chapman called the ex-Senator's apartment to report on a matter they had discussed.

"The Senator died just 30 minutes ago," he was informed.

NOTE—Although McAdoo will be known chiefly for his vital part in the Wilson administration, he also played a greater role in the first part of the Roosevelt administration than most people realized. Under the agreement by which McAdoo threw the 1932 Chicago convention to Roosevelt, he was given the right to pass upon two members of the cabinet. The late Secretary of the Treasury Woodin was OK'd by him, and Secretary of Commerce Roper was McAdoo's man.

GOOD GREEK ADVICE

Sanest advice given to Americans of any descent or origin came the other day from George Vournas, an American citizen of Greek birth, who is vice-president of the Greek-American order of AHEPA. Counseling his fellow Greek-Americans, Vournas said:

"The true American spirit can best be displayed by Americans of Greek descent by extending a helping hand to their fellow-Americans of Italian descent against prejudices which may flow from Mussolini's action.

"Those who endeavor to turn the American of Greek descent against the American of Italian descent and divide America into antagonistic racial groups instead of a unified whole must be exposed."

Note—One of the biggest radio broadcasts in history will take place from Hollywood on behalf of Greek Relief next Saturday for one hour and a half beginning at 11:15 P. M. EST.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

One job Wendell Willkie already is signed up for when he returns is to write a book on the campaign and his British experiences. Bobbs-Merrill has the publishing contract. . . . Another GOP leader on the dotted line for a book is Bruce Barton, who before he entered politics was best known as the author of "The Man Nobody Knows" . . . To counter the Nazi propaganda drive in Latin America, alert Nelson Rockefeller, head of the Pan-America division of the Defense Commission, has drafted Nelson Poynter, crusading editor of The St. Petersburg, Fla., Times to handle press relations. Poynter, former Scripps-Howard editor, was press director of the National Committee of Independent Voters in the 1940 campaign and won even the opposition's plaudits for his spectacular work. . . . Administration insiders are predicting that Perry A. Fellows, mild-mannered chief engineer, will succeed the late Colonel "Pinky" Harrington as WPA boss. Harrington also was elevated from the chief engineer's post, but Fellows is not an Army man.

"KOMMY" INVASION

The FBI is quietly investigating what they believe to be an organized Communist invasion of the Capital this week.

According to inside information uncovered by the G-men, leftwing leaders chartered a Nyack, N. Y., bus line to transport 900 Red and fellow-traveler delegates to the American Youth Congress convention in Washington this week. The AYC hotly denies that it is Communist-dominated.

Build Now, Before Prices Rise--Babson

Babson Park, Fla., February 7. It is an inherent characteristic of man to want to build. In my time I have built a large number of buildings for educational, business, and other purposes. In fact, as I write, I have before me blueprints of a new office building. The art of building satisfies a creative impulse and a pride of possession. As a primitive urge, building has descended through ages. As an industry, it is the oldest known next to agriculture. The man of today reads the real estate and builder's ads or roughly sketches his own ideas for a home. He is actuated by the same impulse as was his primitive ancestor in piling up flat stones and weaving branches to make crude walls and a roof.

Advantages of Building

Everyone is agreed as to the good prospects of industrial building. More factory plans are being drawn today than at any time during the past ten years. Industrial building will exceed anything that has occurred for at least a decade. Therefore, if you contemplate building a house, start it at once. Certainly, it will be many years before you can build as cheaply as you can today. Moreover, if inflation comes, there is nothing better in which to have your money than a little house without a mortgage. Furthermore, a back-yard garden in which you can raise some vegetables, in an emergency, may prove a most valuable insurance. Carefully pick out your land and select a location which will improve with the years. If financing is necessary, and your local bank cannot accommodate you, get a twenty-year government mortgage.

Women are apt to buy a house as they do a car,—by its color and its style. This is a mistake. The location, the amount of land, and its accessibility are far more important than the house itself. A small house on a good-sized piece of land is better than a big house on a small piece of land. I am bullish on good real estate during 1941. This does not mean old houses anywhere, or city property in general, but it does mean suburban property and productive land. I sincerely hope that workmen during World War-II will spend their money on little houses before buying big cars, and on warm blankets instead of on silk shirts.

Cost of a Home

As in previous periods of great industrial expansion, more employment and larger pay rolls accompany a boom in residential building. The greater part of this boom should revolve around the small home. In recent years, there has been a tendency even upon the part of the wealthy to occupy a small salable property than to be stuck with a large white elephant. Homes today are adequately designed and arranged so that their efficiency from a utility and space point of view is far beyond anything heretofore known.

With an increased demand for houses, it is natural to expect some rise in costs. Building materials will be consumed heavily this year. This is especially true of many products, such as wood-fibre, metal lath, plaster, insulating materials, asphalt roofing, etc. The broad trend in their prices should be irregular upward. On the whole, any advance should be moderate and orderly in view of administration measures which can be adopted to head off a rapid price rise. This, the President seems determined to avoid. Upping of manufacturing costs, though rising wages and taxes, is primarily responsible. But costs will certainly be subject to government action to prevent a rise which would endanger home building.

GETTING REAL SECURITY

In many sections, particularly in defense areas and adjacent to shipyards and air depots, there is a shortage of housing. For rent, resale

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

might temporarily be profitable. I am, however, particularly interested in the problem of the average reader who for some time has considered building a home for his family. To him I say, "Go right ahead". Small home building reached a high level last year with 545,000 units constructed. This was the best year since 1928 when 436,000 homes were built. The trend is up and it is well to take advantage of prevailing prices and opportunities.

Large city dwellers are up against high taxes and other municipal restrictions. Fortunate are readers who live in small cities. With the coming decentralization of industry, communities of from 5,000 to 25,000 population will enjoy the best growth. Consider seriously the advisability of a home in such a locality. It would be good insurance against economic reversals, government inflation, or a temporary uprising of the masses.

ings. Wage workers of Germany, France, and even England learn this today. Yes, it is a far better thing to provide one's own security. What better way toward real security than to start building your own home? Aside from raising a family of good church-loving children, the average man does his best day's work when he acquires a home. Better see your bank or local F. H. A. office today while interest rates are still low! But insist on a twenty-year low-rate mortgage with a good down payment if you have not the ready cash.

NEW SPRING COLORS ARE NAMED FOR LATIN AMERICA

The Color Affiliates, style creators allied in behalf of color harmony, named seven new shades for 1941, all with Latin-American names. Brazilian beige is the color of coffee rich with cream; Argentine navy is black-haired blue; Trinidad tan, a warm, sultry brown; Lima lemon, a vibrant yellow; Chile sauce, spicy golden red; Bogota blue, rain-washed sky tint, and Peruvian pink, a paste of time-tempered adobe. At left is a suit made of Argentine navy crepe with brass buttons. The bag and shoes are in matching navy, the sombrero banded in navy, the gloves in Chile sauce. The cape and dress in the ensemble, center, are in Lima lemon, the straw gaucho bonnet in the same shade trimmed in tan, shoes and bag are in the same brown, and the gloves are beige. The third outfit uses lightweight wool in Brazilian beige. Pouch bag and gloves match the suit, Trinidad tan is used for the shoes and crepe blouse, both shades being combined in the draped hat.

"HONEYMOON PREFERRED" by May Christie

SYNOPSIS

How could he win back Walter Mallory, well-known lawyer? That was the question uppermost in the mind of Jean Garrett, lovely young debutante as she danced with Tommy Alden, society playboy at the Yacht Club. A few nights previous, Walter had told her he would not be third man in a party which included philandering Pedro de Moraes and Tommy, and had dropped out of the picture. To add to Jean's chagrin, he was squiring the beautiful Helen Hobart tonight. Overhearing a remark that Walter was planning a party aboard his yacht later that night, Jean contrives to see him alone, hoping he will invite her. He treats her coldly and refuses to permit a photographer to take their pictures together, sarcastically remarking, "Press agent stuff isn't my line".

CHAPTER TWO

Jean could have burst into tears. Walter had turned her down. She wished that the dance floor would open up and swallow her, she was so humiliated.

She murmured: "Beast! That was childish. Rude. But she was miserably wrought up."

Blindly, she started for the bar. She was conscious of a man beside her. Walter? Repenting his obstinacy, his hard-heartedness?

No! It was Pedro. . . .

She did not want to talk to Pedro de Moraes. He had been one half of the cause of their misunderstanding. She hated Pedro for it now, hated his sleekness, his assured, suave air.

"You run away from me. You avoid me when you know how I feel for you. But you are cruel, Jean! And beautiful—like the American flower with the black heart!"

She would have been amused by Pedro and his exaggerated lingo at any other time. She snapped now: "Airedale!"

"And what is that?"

"A dog. The snooty kind!"

"You do not mean it, cara mia. You are upset? Will you have a glass of wine?"

"No. You go ahead, though."

He ordered a rum fizz. His eyes were twin volcanoes turned on her. When he downed the drink, they'd surely burst into flames, erupting molten lava.

Tommy, she saw, was doing well (or ill) for himself at the bar. He was with Helen Hobart. She was urging drinks on him. "To get him plastered and humiliate me!" Jean told herself, bitterly.

Well, trust men to have a good time. And the woman paid. Their silly compliments and protestations meant nothing.

Tommy had wanted her to elope with him. And he was openly flirting with Helen now. Pedro's black eyes had swivelled in the same direction. The red-haired girl at the bar tilted her glass. She yelled: "Hey, Pedro! To you! To the new Caruso!"

He beamed. Childishly vain. He rose and bowed. Jean could willingly have slapped him when he said, smugly: "That is a nice tribute. Your friend—she is like a tiger-lily—no?"

"She's a hellion. Go on over and join her. She wants that."

"But you are—jealous?" Surprised delight in the black eyes. "Then you have a feeling for me, cara mia? You are sorry that so soon I sail for Cuba? You meet me tomorrow, and we take a nice motor ride? It is so beautiful in the Fall now! We stop at a road-house—a quiet place where—"

"Cut it out, Pedro! Just for once, can't you get women off your mind?" Walter's curtness—and then this ardour—it was enough to drive a girl crazy. . . .

The word Cuba brought her mother to her mind. Laurel was in Cuba, visiting on a sugar plantation. She'd have been in Biarritz now if the war hadn't been on. Jean had been to Europe twice with her mother. Lovely at forty-three, Laurel wasn't so keen now about parading a nineteen-year-old daughter. Jean loved Laurel—much more than she cares for me! she thought bitterly. She'd wanted to accompany Laurel to Paris last June, before the war broke out. But her mother seemed to look upon her girl as competition, and wouldn't agree.

Jean loved France. Why wouldn't she? Laurel had been in France during and after the big World War, and it was shortly before the Armistice that she'd known she was going to have the baby that was Jean. She had just been widowed. Gene Garrett, good-looking young "doughboy" of the famous 125th Division whom she had married four months before the Armistice, had been killed in action. Laurel had come home to America. Their daughter had been born here.

Rupert Van Auken, the industrialist whom Laurel had married a happens that neither he nor I care for publicity. You saw that I wouldn't be photographed!"

Helen let loose an unpleasant snicker. "Well, I'll be darned! So that's why your mother pays a press-agent—to keep your picture OUT of the papers! That's the best one I've heard yet. Jean Garrett! He's so darn smart at getting you INTO the papers that he ought to be fired!"

"So it was you told Walter about the press-agent?" The words were out of her mouth before Jean realized her blunder.

Tommy swung round. "Whash this? The battle of two jungle cats?" he shouted.

A voice behind them. Walter's. He was with the pretty girl whom Jean had heard telling her friends of his invitation. He said: "You'd better get your wrap, Mary. I'll few years later, was kind and generous to them. But sometimes Jean felt that her mother had never gotten over her first, her real love.

She was restless, gadding. Looking for who knows what? Love, maybe? True love, again? As though Laurel would find it in "Café Society," or what had long been termed "The International Set!"

Rupert, thought Jean, was getting fed up with these absences. And sometimes, now, he took out his irritation on his stepdaughter. He'd been growing stricter of late. Wanting to know whom she went out with. Laying down the law about being home at reasonable hours.

"Listen, Pedro. We've got to get Tommy away from that bar. Go into the library and bring a cup of coffee. Meantime, I'll talk to him."

She got up from their small table.

"Hello Jean. All alone?" Helen drawled.

Jean ignored that. She said: "Tommy, come over to the table in the corner. We've ordered coffee."

"Oh, what the heck! 'S'all right here!" he mumbled.

"Your boy-friend doesn't sound enthusiastic," Helen mocked.

Jean spun round. "Who do you mean by boy-friend?" she snapped.

"Tommy, this time. Or Walter."

The green eyes challenged. "Or—shall I continue?" impertinently.

"Walter? What's Walter got to do with this?" Jean was furious. She flushed hotly.

"He just gave you a turn-down, didn't he? I heard!"

"He certainly did not. It just round up the others and we'll meet at my boat."

The girl cooed back at him: "It's mighty sweet of you, Walter. I'll love the river ride, and it'll be my first dance at the Cruise Club!"

The two disappeared. Helen's face was a study. To have gloated about Walter, and then be let down just as Jean had been! Her mouth fell open.

But she was a girl who stuck at very little. Tit for tat! A plan sprang to her mind. She'd get Tommy thoroughly fuddled. But he would be game for it, if she could get him out of his torpor.

Seeing that Jean had returned to her table in the corner, awaiting Pedro, she shook Tommy who was now nodding. "Come up out of your sleep, my lamb!"

He grinned at her. A swell egg. Helen.

"Whash the idea?"

"How'd you like a fast boat ride?" She knew he was an expert speed-boat enthusiast. She whispered her plan. It sounded swell, and he told her that.

"But there'll be the devil to pay, angel."

"Phooey!"

"Mallory'll masshacre us!" She grabbed his arm. "Come on. Out the back way."

"You'll freezsh to death!"

"Nix on that," Helen laughed. "I'm burning from the inside, like a coal heap!" Before he could argue further, she'd got him to the pier. Swell little manager, Helen. It would be a peach of an adventure.
