German Peace Plans Are Hit With Anglo Statement

What appears to be a budding German peace overture was turned down flatly today in a joint statement by Great Britain, her dominions and the nine refugee governments from lands already overrun by Hitler's Nazi troops.

The joint statement strongly implied that none of the signatories would accept a separate peace, and made it clear that no German offer would be considered that would leave Hitler and his cohorts in power.

German planes, which have not raided Britain in force since Rudolf Hess, No. 3 Nazi, parachuted to Scottish soil a few weeks ago, came over last night in numbers and rained pamphlets on Anglo villages.

The leaflets said the British people were being misinformed, especially by President Roosevelt, of the true state of affairs; that British shipping losses were far greater than England admitted; and that British people face starvation by late 1941 or early 1942.

Meantime, Germany continues to concentrate a military force near the Russian Ukraine, which may have a two fold purpose: 1, to force Russia to give the Reich badly needed oil and wheat concessions; 2, to lead Britain to believe that if she will now agree to a peace, Germany will turn its attention to the Soviet. Observers last night said Hitler is already waging a war of nerves on Moscow.

British and Free French at noon continued their slow but steady advance in the British program to take over Syria, and thus keep the Germans from using it as a springboard for an attack on Suez.

British say the slow advance is to give French troops in the country a chance to surrender or join

Rites For Wreck Victim Are Today

Dumas — Last rites for Mrs. Mary Ann Holcomb, one of three killed last Sunday in an automobile accident near here, were held from the Boxwell Brothers chapel in Amarillo this morning at 11:00.

Rev. J. C. Sizmore, pastor of the Buchanan Street Baptist church, will officiate. Following the services, the body was taken to Lamar, Colo., for burial.

Survivors are a son, J. L. Holcomb of River Road, Amarillo, and two other sons and a daughter.

O'Daniel Asking Crack At Capital

Austin. — Gov. O'Daniel, seeking the U. S. Senate seat of the late Morris Sheppard, asked voters today to just give him a crack at the job.

He said if he couldn't make any headway he would be glad to return and serve Texas as a third-term governor. It was his first indication of third-term ambitions.

"You can't lose," he told his radio audience. "At least I'll get a peek behind the scenes in Washington, and if I can't get what I want I can come home." He said that meanwhile Texas politicians would be on probation.

Attorney General Gerald Mann said today that necessity of 100 per cent farm parity is second only to national defense. He also called for a soldier and sailor basic pay of $40 a month.

Congressman Lyndon Johnson today heatedly denied that he had voted against farm parity as charged by Mann. Either Mann is uninformed, Johnson said, proving that he doesn't know what's going on, or he is deliberately spreading untruths.

Congressman Martin Dies bolstered his campaign by putting his sons, Robert and Martin, Jr., on the stump trail.

Senate Urges Death For All Saboteurs

Austin. — With 27 ayes and no dissenting vote, the Texas Senate today passed a law making sabotage in Texas punishable by death.

There was immediately wide speculation about what Gov. O'Daniel will do if the bill goes to his desk. He is strongly against subversive activities; he also is deeply opposed to capital punishment, and several times has asked the legislature to abolish it in Texas.

There was renewed hope today for legislative action on the House proposal to recess the legislature from June 14 to July 16; and then adjourn July 21.

FLU VICTIM

Mrs. Bill Gaines and daughter, Mary Carolyn, have both been ill for several days with the flu.

Jury Completed In Brown Trial

Spearman. — A jury was completed here last night for the trial of Orrin J. Brown of Chicago, an asserted mail order Romeo who is accused of the hammer slaying of Leota Frances Murphy, 45-year-old Marion, Ind. poetess. Her body was found last March 20 on a little used road west of Spearman, and officers for more than a month were balked in all identification attempts.

Finally, with only a shoe label as a cue, Sheriff H. L. Wilbanks and his men opened up a trail to Marion, Ind., identified the woman and subsequently nabbed Brown, with whom she had assertedly carried on a correspondence courtship. He has vehemently denied any knowledge of the affair.

Mrs. R. C. Wells Is Dead In DeRidder

Friends here have just learned of the death of Mrs. R. C. Wells of DeRidder, La.

She died in an Alexandria, La., hospital, and was buried in Oak Grove cemetery at DeRidder.

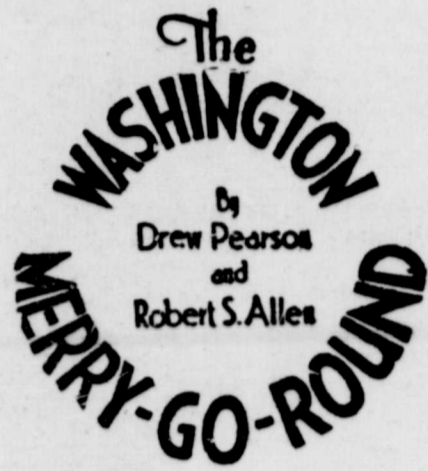

She and her husband and family were widely known in this area of the Panhandle and in Northeastern New Mexico.

Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Mary Ella Wells, and a son, James L., both of DeRidder; another son, Sgt. Robert L. Wells at March Field, Calif.; and a daughter, Anna May Upton, Savannah, Ga.; her father and step-mother, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. McNeese of Amarillo; a sister, Effie Weaver, Amarillo; a brother, Jim McNeese, in Oklahoma; and a sister, Mabel Sandefer in Sandel, Calif.

WASHINGTON.—When the auto makers (with the exception of General Motors) thumbed their noses at Price Administrator Leon Henderson and boosted prices, they fanned up more trouble for themselves than they ever imagined. Possibly they started what Britain long ago instituted—the curtailment of auto production.

For War Department chiefs immediately advised the White House that if the auto moguls were unwilling to cooperate with the Government in the control of prices, then it was time the Government stepped in to curtail production, which should have been done long ago.

Army and Navy heads long have been sour about the fact that the OPM ordered only a 20 per cent reduction of auto output. They wanted a reduction of at least 50 per cent.

Recent admissions that a serious steel shortage is in the offing have added point to this demand. Next to defense, the auto industry is the chief consumer of steel, also of alloys, which are of supreme importance in making tanks, planes and other arms.

A confidential Army memorandum to the President reported nearly 200 specific instances in which companies could not promise to deliver urgent defense orders in less than eight to fifteen months, because of heavy auto industry commitments.

This memorandum flatly asserted that the only way to obtain the huge amounts of steel required for pipeline, freight car and ship construction is to cut down the amount going into automobiles. Otherwise, it was declared impossible to meet the production schedules set by the President.

NOTE.—Ambassador Winant expressed astonishment to Roosevelt at the high level of production the auto industry is being allowed to maintain. He stated that Britain long ago geared private auto output to defense needs.

Stone, 62, was appointed an associate justice by President Coolidge in 1925. President Roosevelt's action marked the second in history that an associate justice has been elevated to the chief justiceship. In 1905, Justice Stone is the nation's eighth chief justice.

War Relief Golf Meet Be Here June 14-15

Dalhart Country club has a National Handicap Golf tournament to help relieve the suffering of the stricken people of Britain who are having to bear the terrors of active warfare.

The national event has been organized by a representative committee of golf enthusiasts, headed by Bobby Jones and with H. Boardman Spalding as associate chairman. Cooperating is the British War Relief Society, Inc., of which Winthrop W. Aldrich is president.

Leading golf and country clubs throughout the U. S. are supporting the national event, said Elmer Elliott, tournament chairman of the Dalhart club, who will have charge of the local program.

For an entrance fee of $2, he said, a golfer may play 18 holes of golf either Sunday or Monday, June 14 or 15. He will receive one Spalding golf ball in a specially-wrapped box. He will also get a greens marker, symbolizing the event. Both will carry the British War Relief Society's emblem. A prize will be given for the low net score at each participating club.

"How You Goin' To Keep 'Em Down On the Farm?"

It was just a few weeks ago that we had the pleasure of driving along the highways of the Panhandle with a young soldier boy as our companion. We have never had a more interesting traveling partner and we thoroughly enjoyed the short trip.

This young man started us to thinking when he made a chance remark as we passed a farmer operating a tractor. "That's what I was doing before I got in the Army, and after I got acquainted with my buddies I found that lots of them were farm boys." Quite naturally we wanted to know if, when the emergency is over, the boys are going back to the farm. "Well, it's hard to say now," was this soldier's reply. "You see so many things that you might want to do after the war."

Then we thought of that song that became so popular following the last war. The boys were all singing, "How you goin' to keep 'em down on the farm, after they've seen Patee?" It's true that many of them didn't go back to the farm, but then lots of them did, and even some that had never been on the farm.

Right now we know that farm labor is going to be at a premium from now until after the emergency. In addition to the young men Uncle Sam is taking others are going to work replacing those taken out of industry, the wages are good and the hours short. It is increasingly important that the farmer be in a position to do as much of his own work as possible. Good farm equipment makes this possible. Hundreds of acres can be taken care of by one or two men equipped with FARMALLS and other International Harvester Farm Equipment.

Let the FARMALL solve your farm labor problems.

STEEL PRIORITY

Proposed solution of this bottleneck is mandatory steel priorities, now possible under the newly enacted Priorities Act. The auto industry would get only a proportional share of the metal left over after allocations had been made for all defense needs.

Defense orders would not have to wait their turn. Instead, steel output would be apportioned arbitrarily on the basis of defense requirements first; the rest divided among consumer industries. Incidentally, this last allocation would be in the hands of Henderson, no lover of the auto makers.

Under such controls it is possible that auto output would be slashed by as much as 75 per cent. There are some defense chiefs who contend that if a cut of this size had been made three months ago, there would be no steel shortage now.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Naval officers are casting a covetous eye at Vincent Astor's luxury yacht, the Nourmahal, upon which Roosevelt used to take fishing cruises. They would add it to the Atlantic fleet, replacing the battleship Wyoming, which is to become an airplane carrier. . . . New radio broadcast on health sponsored weekly by the Woman's National Emergency Committee will feature such speakers as LaGuardia, Paul McNutt and Dr. Thomas Parran. At 10:30 every Friday night, it will emphasize the lesson the British learned, that proper food and health are even more important in wartime. . . . The White House is elated over a test poll showing Representative Lyndon Johnson, New Deal candidate in the Texas special Senate election, leading the field by a decisive margin. He led Governor "Pass the Biscuits" O'Daniel by 2 to 1, even in the rural districts where O'Daniel is strongest, with Representative Martin Dies trailing a poor fourth.

It is not supposed to be known, but the State Department recently OK'd a proposal from the Vichy Government to send several French ships now in American waters back to Africa carrying U. S. supplies to the French.

The State Department figured that if the ships were sent, it might win over General Weygand and secure aid for the British. The British also OK'd the deal, providing the French sent an equal number of bottoms back to the U. S. A.

However, the Maritime Commission puts its foot down. It absolutely refused to permit French ships to leave American waters. They are still here.

The Maritime Commission is made up of sailors and business men, but perhaps they had watched State Department diplomacy with Vichy. Perhaps they remembered Colonel Bill Donovan's useless trip to woo General Weygand; the shiploads of food sent to woo Vichy; the fact that French military supplies in Syria were sent to help the Germans against the British in Iraq.

Note — Even some State Department officials now admit that the worst mistake the United States made was ever to recognize the Vichy Government of Marshal Pétain.

the British forces. A good many of the French troops assertedly have already done this. The Vichy government says the British are going slowly because of heavy French resistance.

Germans assertedly gave the French some aerial aid in Syria yesterday, and a few observers claimed German ground troops were being used sparingly. Vichy denied this, and said France had even turned down Nazi offers of aid.

Britain today admitted loss of a gunboat and another light armored vessel off Libya.

The U. S. State Department said today that the American ship, Robert Moor, was sunk the morning of May 21, off the Brazilian coast by a German vessel, and that the German commander knew full well that it was an American ship.

The White House said President Roosevelt feels definitely that Germany must accept full responsibility for the incident. Only 11 of the 45 crew and passengers aboard were saved.

The State Department said the ship carried no contraband of war, and was not in or headed for any of the areas designated as combat zones.

Berlin said noncommittally that if by any chance a German U-boat or submarine raider had sunk the Robert Moor it had acted in full accordance with international law.

Social tongues are wagging because Cohen was invited to dinner the other day without his Brain Trust partner, Tom Corcoran.

PRESIDENTIAL KISS

The nation will remember the President's last fireside chat for its historic proclamation of "unlimited emergency," but brunette Ann Gillis, Columbia Broadcasting's special events expert, will remember it for a far different reason.

Just before the President went on the air someone told him Ann was to be married. He summoned the young lady from a labyrinth of radio apparatus being set up to carry his address all over the world.

'Ann' said the President gravely, "is it true that you are planning to take the matrimonial leap?" "Yes, Mr. President, that is correct."

"Ann, bend down here." And the President kissed Miss Gillis with a resounding smack. (Copyright, 1941, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Saw a couple of big onions on J. R. Fox's desk yesterday and was informed that they were raised by J. M. Woodmer Dallah County farmer, located near Dallas on a farm. Woody is a mighty fine gent and here's hoping he does well in his new place. The onions indicate that he is getting to eat anyway.

The dog and cat business sure slowed up. Haven't looked a stray in almost a month. They have all joined the army.

Varied Movie Fare Is Being Offered

The La Rita theater this weekend will have a Sunday and Monday show — Wallace Beery in "20 Mule Team." Co-starred are Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau, Anne Baxter and Douglas Fowley.

Ordinarily the La Rita has only a Friday and Saturday attraction which this week is a lead-slingin' saga — "The Desert Bandit" — headlining Red Barry.

The Mission the last time this afternoon and tonight is showing its triple-action program — "One Night In Lisbon," the Joe Louis-Buddy Baer fight, and the latest March of Time release on the Battle of the Atlantic.

Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll, the lovers of "Honeymoon in Bali," and "Virginia," are in love again in "One Night in Lisbon." MacMurray is a Yankee pilot who is trapped in a London air raid after ferrying a warplane from the U. S. across the Atlantic to the RAF.

When he ducks into an air raid shelter he meets Madeleine. Though the story has a war background, the picture is really a romantic comedy, and the critics say MacMurray and Miss Carroll reach a new high in fun in this, their fourth, venture together.

The March of Time film, "Crisis In the Atlantic" shows pictures taken aboard and from a British tanker during a convoy crossing of the Atlantic from Canada to England. It also offers the first pictures to arrive in the U. S. from Greenland — Denmark's strategic island continent in the Western Hemisphere, now under full U. S. protection.

The film emphasizes how vital the Battle of the Atlantic is; how it may determine the fate of Britain, and what a terrific impact a Nazi victory there could have on this nation.

The Louis-Baer film is a picture of their championship fight, and brings once more before fans the hotly-argued question of whether Louis fouled Baer.

The Mission for prevue Saturday midnight and Sunday and Monday will offer a brilliant four-star picture, "The Great American Broadcast." The four stars are Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, John Payne and Cesar Romero. It is described as "the greatness of the screen, the magic of the radio, combined in the gayest musical of them all."

C.-C. Still Works Toward Creamery

Chamber of commerce directors are still accumulating data on quantity of milk now available if a pasteurization plant and creamery should be established in Dalhart, and how much, and how quickly the supply might be increased.

A number of farmers recently asked directors to investigate possibility of securing a creamery. They pointed to prospects of a bumper feed crop this fall, and said they would like to market the feed through milk sales if an assured and attractive market could be secured.

A Tucumcari creamery owner has already evinced interest in establishing a plant here, but said he would have to have a minimum supply of 100 gallons of milk daily.

Wheat Marketing Quota Meeting Will Be Monday

Wheat processors, buyers, operators, warehousemen must understand their responsibilities under marketing quotas authorized by S. farmers in a national referendum May 31. O. J. AAA marketing quota of College Station, said he continued, U. S. of agriculture officials held four Texas meetings these duties and responsibilities will be fully explained. Both the department of the state AAA organization on hand, Moss said. Meeting for the Panhandle at the Herring Hotel at June 16. The Fort Worth falls is tomorrow; the one Saturday. All four start

This particular cutworm has already wreaked extensive damage on wheat and other cereal grains in this Great Plains area, the full extent of its forays not yet being known.

Dr. Hixon for a number of years has been with the entomology department of Oklahoma A. & M. college at Stillwater and is considered an authority in his field.

Poison bran mash, spread on top of the soil, is effective against all types of cutworms except the pale Western which works entirely underground. Only tillage methods are effective against it, Dr. Hixon said, and must aim at two things: 1, making the field unattractive for egg laying; 2, killing the larvae before the crop is seeded.

The moth that lays the cutworm eggs prefers wheat stubble, weedy fields and loose soil. Ordinarily if the young larva are plowed under early enough in the spring, many will fail to develop. Also careful June summer fallowing may starve out the worms by plowing under their food before they are full grown.

The Farmers Wheat Field Day is to report on tests constantly carried on by experiment stations to determine the best kinds of wheat for specified altitudes, climates, soils, systems of farming, etc. and to enable farmers to exchange helpful experiences of their own.

Worm Lecture Saturday

June 12 — A highlight annual Farmers Wheat at Panhandle A. & M. Goodwill Saturday, will be by Dr. Ephriam Hixon on the control of the pale cutworm in the Southern region, according to the program of the Goodwill station.

Gehrig, the "Iron Man" of baseball, always was extremely popular with America's youth through his exploits on the diamond and his appearance in a western movie.

"Spoiled Girl" by LUCILLE MARSH JOHNSON

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Sam Snow remained indoors for three full days. It couldn't be said that he rested entirely though, because anyone could see that he was worrying about something.

He rose late each morning, teasing Gabrielle for bringing his fruit juice, toast and coffee to his room.

"You're making a softie out of your old father, Gaby," he complained, smiling.

"It won't hurt you for a little while, Daddy," she said gayly. "Besides, to tell you the truth, I like coming up here for a second cup with you, and a good chat every morning."

"Well, what'll we talk about this morning, honey? The wars, inflation, my health, your excellent cooking, or—Peter?"

He was smiling most of the time but Gabrielle thought he looked as though his mind was not on what he was saying. It was strange, she thought, but ever since his sickness her father had seemed preoccupied, worried. She wondered if it was because of his enforced absence from his office.

"Oh, let's talk about you, Daddy. How soon do you think you'll be well enough to have me drive you to work?"

"Me? Why, say, I'm well enough now. Helen is just pampering me, and Dr. Lee is in cahoots with her!"

"No, that isn't it, Daddy," disagreed Gabrielle, wondering at the new lines which had etched themselves around Sam's eyes and mouth. "You see it's gotten awfully cold and disagreeable out since you went to the hospital, and you positively mustn't take any chance of taking cold you know!"

"Just the same this can't go on much longer. We'll be bankrupt, first thing you know," grumbled Sam.

"Well, don't forget — your daughter is an heiress!"

"I certainly don't expect to live off my daughter!" snapped Sam, frowning angrily.

"Why not! Hasn't she lived off of you all these years?" demanded Gabrielle; but she didn't like the seriousness in her father's voice.

"That's different," he growled, then lapsed into one of his silences. These silences had been growing on him since he had been sick and Gabrielle was frankly puzzled by them.

She asked softly: "Is anything wrong, Daddy?"

He said: "Wrong? No, of course not!"

Gabrielle took the tray off the bedside table. She thought Sam had looked startled at her last question, but she couldn't be sure. She wondered if he was hiding something from them all; if his health was not improving as it should. But perhaps he was only impatient at being kept in.

"I'll have the fire going in the living room and your paper and the new magazines ready for you when you're dressed, sir," she said, curtseying prettily.

"If I ever get well, I'll have to have a valet," grinned Sam.

Gabrielle laughed; she went out of the bedroom, closing the door gently behind her. Going downstairs she meditated upon her father's words. Something was troubling him. She determined to have a talk with Dr. Lee the next time he came to the house.

The next morning Sam surprised them by appearing at the breakfast table fully dressed. He had shaved, and there was an air of excitement about him.

"Good morning, my dear wife and daughter," he said, taking his usual seat.

"Sam, are you sure you feel well enough to get up so early?" Helen demanded, frowning a little, although she had been plainly pleased when she first caught sight of him.

"I never felt better, Helen," he declared.

Violet came in bearing hot biscuits, ham and eggs, and the silver pot of coffee.

"Well, laws a-me, Mista Snow! How come you-all come down for breakfast?" she cried, her eyes glowing with happiness at sight of him.

"I'm a perfectly well man, Violet," he smiled.

"Yas, suh, you's a lookin' mighty good, suh," she beamed.

"I see by this table that I've been getting the little end of breakfast too," Sam said, his eyes taking in the bountiful meal. "Toast, orange juice, coffee! If I'd had this man's meal, I'd have been well much sooner!"

"But, Sam, you know Dr. Lee said you should stay on a light diet for a while," protested Helen, although she couldn't help grinning at him.

"He would!" Sam said, helping himself to ham and eggs. "That's how he insures himself of a good living."

"Oh, let him eat, Mother," said Gabrielle, her eyes twinkling.

"Let him!" expostulated Helen. "Heavens! How would I go about stopping him?"

They had a merry meal together, talking on general subjects mostly. Finally, Gabrielle said:

"Daddy, I think I should trade off my car. After all, I've had it over two years now, and it's beginning to cost something for upkeep. What do you think?"

Sam wiped his mouth carefully, laid his napkin on the table, then said: "It's a pretty good time to conserve right now, Gaby—money's anything but free."

Gabrielle laughed, then sobered as she saw that the worried look had come over her father's face again.

"But I've spent scarcely any of Uncle Gabe's money, Daddy," she said. "Not even all of my interest money this year."

"That's good," he commented, smiling slightly. "You'd better hang on to it—you may have to keep your father and mother in their old age."

With this he excused himself and went into the other room.

Gabrielle and Helen naturally thought he was going in by the fire to read, as he had been doing since he came home from the hospital. Therefore, when they went in to join him, a few minutes later, they were considerably surprised not to find him there.

"I guess he went back upstairs," said Helen, straightening up the magazines on an end table.

"I'll go see," offered Gabrielle. She had a feeling that she wouldn't find Sam upstairs, and she didn't. Purposely she loitered in her bedroom, making the bed and picking up odds and ends of clothing. She was really worried about her father. If he were going back to work she would have much preferred taking him herself. Now, she hated to go downstairs and tell her mother.

However, she didn't need to, because she heard Helen coming up the stairs.

"Where's Sam?" she asked, a moment later, coming to the door of Gabrielle's room.

"He must have gone back to the office, Mother," replied Gabrielle trying to sound matter of fact.

"Oh, my goodness! Surely he didn't slip off like that!"

"He probably thought that would be the only way he'd get out!" grinned Gabrielle.

"I'm going to call down there right now," stated Helen.

Sam was back at work and he continued to go to work, putting in the same number of hours as he had prior to his sickness. Before their very eyes he grew thinner and more worried looking, and the silences became more pronounced.

Gabrielle wrote Peter about it, one night when her heart was so full she felt that she had to tell someone. And Peter wrote back right away, urging her to ferret out what was wrong with Sam. He ended his letter:

"—because, you see, Gaby, Sam means an awful lot to me. He has always seemed to me the very finest of fathers, perhaps because I never was privileged to know my own. Take good care of yours, and let me know about him. As ever, Peter."

Gabrielle wondered over the "as ever", hoping Peter really meant it as it sounded. Between the worry over her father, the shielding of her mother, and the longing for Peter, she really had very little time to think objectively of herself; but when she did, she knew that sometime, somehow, she must arrange a meeting with Peter. She felt the futility of letter writing more and more. . .

"Mother, if you were buying a car right now, what type would you buy, and what kind?" she asked one morning when she had just returned from taking her father to work.

"Well," Helen was busy with pencil and pad, making out the daily grocery list, and menu. "Let's see, now. I think I'd buy the same kind as you have—but of course I'd want a sedan."

"What color?" prompted Gabrielle.

"Oh, blue of course," smiled Helen. "What is this anyway? Are you going to buy your mother a car?"

"That's just what I am going to do," smiled Gabrielle, sitting down beside her. "You see, Mother, I'm going to New York and see Peter next month some time, and I'm going to trade my car in for one for you. I'd like you to have what you want."

"Oh, I've always wanted a car all my own," Helen said, her eyes glowing. "But, what about when you come back, dear? Will you like to drive a sedan as well as any other?"

"I hope I won't come back, except to visit," smiled Gabrielle, as she looked dreamily out of the window with unseeing eyes. "And if I do come back—any car will do."

Helen eyed her daughter closely: "Has Peter been urging you to come, Gabrielle?"

"No, he hasn't said a word about it," admitted Gabrielle unashamedly. "But I'm going just the same, Mother. I want to talk to Peter face to face. Letters are no good. I want to see him when I talk to him!"

Helen sighed, but patted her daughter's hand affectionately: "Your mother wants you to be happy, dear. I'm probably mostly to blame for your marriage not being a success."

"Now, don't talk silly, Helen," said Gabrielle; but there were tears in her eyes.

Things went on very much as they had before Sam became sick, except that Gabrielle couldn't overcome the feeling that something was radically wrong with her father.

She went to work with him each day, usually going for him in the evening too, although sometimes her mother went.

Gabrielle had purchased the long blue sedan for her mother. It had been delivered on Helen's birthday.

Never, thought Gabrielle, had she seen her mother so happy as upon that occasion. She had put the deed to the car in an envelope and stood it up against the ruby water glass, directly in front of her mother's blue breakfast plate.

Gabrielle, inasmuch as Helen drove the blue sedan all the time, took to driving the old car belonging to her father, or if he were using this, she simply walked. She went few places anyway.

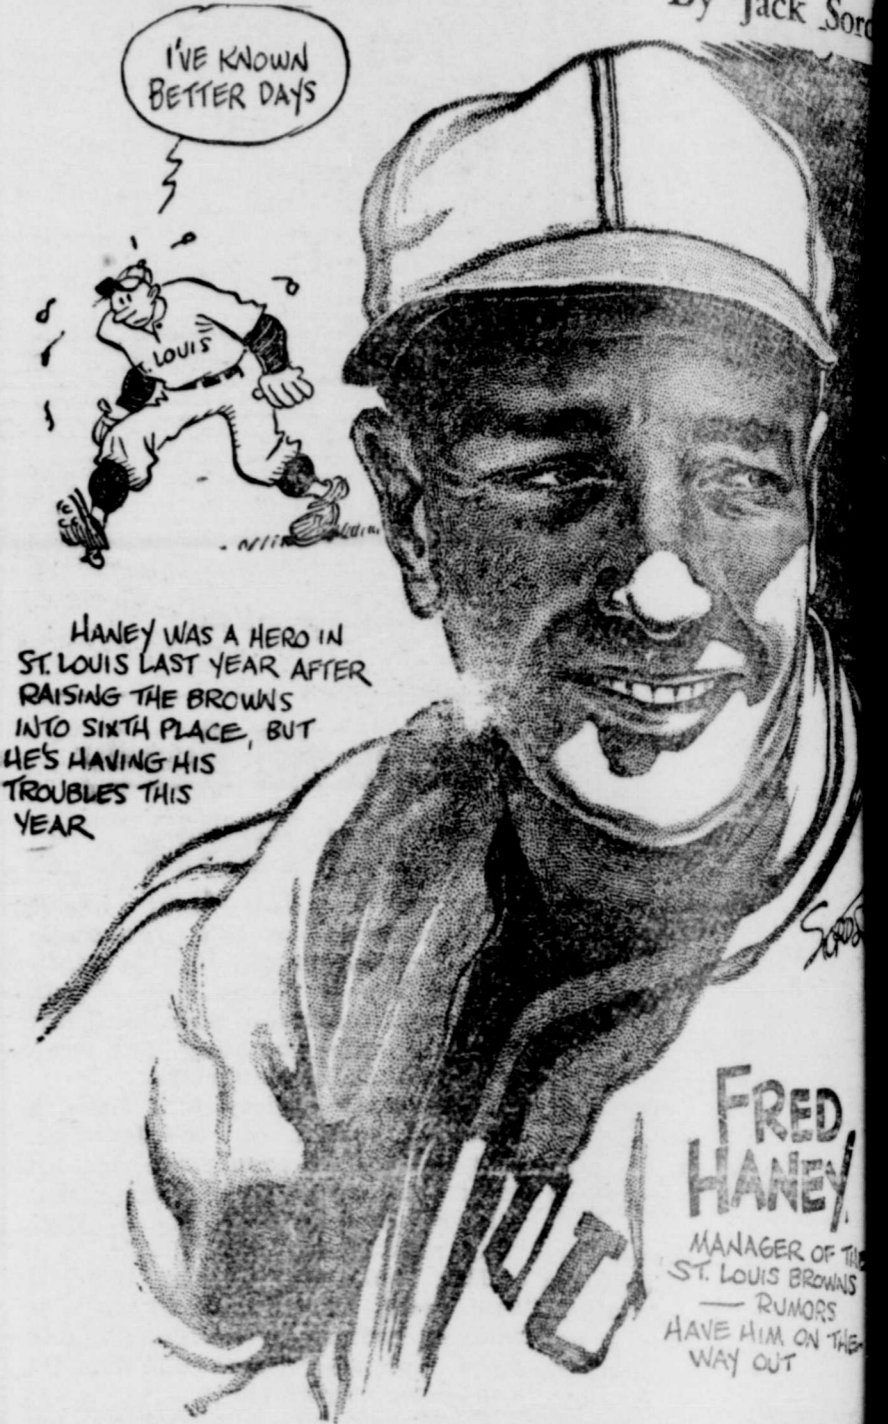

It was only seven blocks to the small house where Dorothy and Tony lived, and it was here that Gabrielle went mostly, because she felt Dorothy really needed her these days.

IN THE ARMY NOW! WHY AND HOW

By S. T. Williamson

The United States Army has been more temperamental about headgear than other articles of clothing. Its uniform changes are few and slow and are not made until people in the Quartermaster Corps have thrown all sorts of conniption fits. Swatches of cloth undergo sun, wind and water punishment both real and artificial. For fussbudget persnickiness, a down-east elderly spinster can be surpassed by purchasing Quartermasters at such gigantic sewing circles as the Philadelphia and Chicago bases.

Most women would carry on pathetically if their bonnets changed in style as seldom as Army hats; but as armies go, the U. S. aggregation has been almost giddy in its turnover of hat models. It has altered the peaks of garrison cap as expertly as Thirty-eighth Street milliners can make you up something out of ribbon and a bit of basket weave. It has two or three models of rain-in-the-face field caps. And now that things are a bit more prosperous for the Army, it's fashioned a combination steel helmet and inner fiber hat.

The fiber hat may be worn instead of the present field cap; and just as you can tell football teams by the color of their helmets, it may be possible to distinguish the infantry blue, artillery red and cavalry or armored force yellow by the new helmet linings. The steel helmets are being turned out by a firm which in more settled times would be making radiators. Strange things are going on these days. Dainty Maid Shoe Company is working for the Army, and a hosiery outfit which boasts of long wearing socks is making mosquito netting which is full of holes.

The mail brings us—

M. G., Wilmerding, Pa. 1. Can a man who is a public official be drafted into the Army? 2. Does this apply to all public officials? 1. Yes. 2. No. The law defers the Vice President, Governors of States and territories, and Feder-

City Tax Is Set At $1.50 Tuesday

City council Tuesday set the rate at $1.50 on the $100 valuation—the maximum allowed by law and where it has been for several years.

The only change is that the rate will now be split evenly between the general and sinking funds. The general has been 65 cents for the past year and 85 cents for the sinking fund.

City Attorney J. S. Bailey said a special council committee, yet to be announced, were authorized to their own judgment about installing suits to collect delinquent taxes.

Mayor Herbert L. Peoples authorized to take any necessary steps to clear obstructions from the west end of Seventh street, make way for U. S. Highway paving that is soon to be laid to Dalhart 3.2 miles southwest.

Council authorized immediate bids for a city depository.

Council also added G. C. Paul to the Purchasing committee. E. F. States to the Finance committee. They replace John Colburn who resigned a fortnight ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Langhorne and family of San Antonio are here visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Langhorne. Before returning to their home, they will go to Denver.

Sam Ed Brown, who has completed his junior year at Texas A. & M. college, is now at Camp Bullis with the ROTC. He will turn home soon after the middle of July.

al, State and Territorial Legislators and judges. Local boards have the power to defer officers "necessary to the maintenance of the public health, safety, or interest." Each case, however, is decided on its own merits; it means that some public officials are deferred and some are not.

Dr. T. C. Lockport, N. Y., of the Army need veterinarians.

At present, it has sufficient recently local boards were urged to confer deferment of veterinarians whose professional services may be needed in their localities.

Shoe Leather, Brains Can Make A Success

... and bombing planes, but

... of heating from wood-
... stove and then to the
... but the heating industry still remains fundamental. Those who stick to their industry but are willing to change their methods are, in the long run, successful.

Finding New Uses

Our great-grandparents did their reading by candlelight; our grandparents read with a kerosene lamp; our parents lit the house with gas; while we use the incandescent lamp. The mode of lighting changed, but those who stuck to the lighting industry and were willing to change the method of lighting came through with flying colors. The easily-frightened and the "die-hards" were wiped out. Certainly, there is a lesson in this for all of us today. Do not give up the business or line of work for which you are trained because Harold Ickes says "Boo" to you and tries to scare you.

There is something more in this connection, however, which we should now remember. It is this: Notwithstanding the changes from candles to kerosene and to gas and electricity, this astounding fact is true: MORE CANDLES ARE SOLD TODAY, MORE KEROSENE IS SOLD TODAY, AND MORE GAS IS SOLD TODAY THAN EVER BEFORE IN HISTORY. This means that even some of those who remained in these "vanishing" businesses are making millions today. They are making these millions because they developed new uses for their products. They taught people to use candles for decorative purposes; to use kerosene to operate the kitchen stove; and to use gas to heat the house, operate the ice-box, and a score of other things never dreamed of before.

Use Your Brains

A famous magazine publisher interested in developing national advertising once gave me the job of discovering some industry in which no one was making a fortune. I spent a year on the quest, traveling thousands of miles and making all kinds of inquiries. I was absolutely unable to find a single industry from candles to coffins in which someone, somewhere, was not making millions. Certainly, this proves that it is the MAN rather than the INDUSTRY which determines success or failure.

If you lack courage and imagination, better get a job with the Government or enlist in the Army as soon as possible. These are two fields where you need to do only what you are told and you will get your pay check just the same at the end of every month. If, however, you have courage and imagination and are willing to use your brains and your shoe leather, you need not fear how the war will affect your business. Remember that you have in your head the most wonderful and profitable machine which God or man ever created. For heaven's sake use it for something besides supporting a hat!

Remember Plastics

The priority regulations chiefly affect metals. These regulations would have been a severe handicap to manufacturers of refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, radios, etc., during World War I, if these things had been in general use 25 years ago. Since then, however, the use of plastics has been discovered. In most things now sold for household use, plastics can today take the place of metals. Think this over before getting frightened! Also remember that plastics are only one of a score of other important substitutes which have been developed since World War I. Make priorities and other war restrictions stepping stones to better business, more profits, and real prosperity, instead of getting frightened and running for cover.

Cantrell's Home Furnishings Will Open On Saturday

Cantrell's Home Furnishings in the La Rita theater building will hold its formal opening Saturday from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m.

There will be souvenirs for the ladies and cigars for the men, said W. E. (Emory) Cantrell, owner.

"And", he added, "we are anxious for every man, woman and child in this Dalhart area to be our guests that day. We have made preparations for them, and we are looking forward pleasureably to their visit."

The store emphasizes complete home furnishings, Cantrell said, including Tappan Gas ranges, Kelvinator refrigerators, Firth wool rugs, Sealy mattresses, venetian blinds and fluorescent lighting. Special buys, he said, will be featured for the formal opening day.

Cantrell and his family came to Dalhart 12 years ago from Everton, Ark. and since that time he has been in the furniture and home appliance business. He said his wife and son, Earl J., would be associated with him in conduct of the business.

Texans Bow 12-4 To Boston Team

Hamstrung by 11 errors, the Dalhart Texans last night lost a 12-4 decision to the mighty Boston Hoboes, topflight traveling ball club that opened a three-game schedule in Dalhart Monday night.

Dalhart took the opener 9-4. The Tuesday night game was rained out.

The Hoboes' ace southpaw hurler last night was able to hold the Texans to six hits, but "Big Jim" Koehler, Dalhart's husky right-hander allowed only ten. The southpaw got ten strikeouts, and Koehler got nine.

The Hoboes playing airtight ball, made Dalhart earn all of its runs. Two scores came in the third frame, when Peyson banged out a home run with a man on base. In the fourth inning Dalhart was leading 4-3.

When errors started piling up, more and more work was shoved on Koehler, because he was having to pitch to more batters. However, his strikeout record testifies to the spitzerinkum he continued to put on the pellet.
