TREATY IS IN EFFECT; ITALY SIGNS

PARIS, Oct. 7.—King Victor Emmanuel of Italy late yesterday signed a royal decree ratifying the German and Austrian peace treaties, according to Milan dispatches received here today.

The ratification of the German peace treaty by a royal decree of the Italian king virtually completes the steps necessary for the putting into effect of the pact between Germany and the allied powers, which was signed at Versailles June 28.

Approval has been given by the French chamber of deputies and the senate is expected to take similar action Friday or Saturday.

The royal decree of the Italian monarch must receive approval from the next parliament, which meets December 1 at Rome, but it is considered certain there will be no trouble securing concurrence. Italy by the reported action of her king, is the first of the powers to ratify the treaty with Austria.

SOX STAGE THRILLING COME-BACK AND DRIVE RUETHER FROM THE SLAB

By Associated Press.

REDLAND PARK, CINCINNATI, Oct. 7.—The Chicago White Sox staged one of the most thrilling come-backs known in world's series history today and beat the Cincinnati Reds out by a score of 5 to 4 in a ten-inning game.

Coming in from behind after the Reds had piled up a four-run lead, the Sox got to Ruether and before the Cincinnati club realized what had happened, they had annexed the big end of the count. By winning today the Sox saved their scalp, for if the Reds had taken today's game they would have become world's baseball champions.

The game in detail:

First Inning. Chicago—J. Collins popped out to Rath. Roush took Eddie Collins' low fly. Weaver singled through Kopf. Jackson sent an easy pop to Groh.

Sixth Inning. Chicago—Weaver popped a Texas leaguer that went for a two-bagger when Kopf and Duncan played the Alphonse-Gaston act. Weaver scored when Jackson singled into center field. Felsch doubled to the center field crowd. Jackson scored. This was enough for Ruether, and Ring went to pitch for Cincinnati. Gandil hoisted to Daubert, Felsch holding second. Kopf took Risberg's grounder and threw him out at first. Felsch going to third. Felsch scored when Schalk singled between second and third, tying the score. Schalk stole second. Groh threw Kerr out at first, ending the inning.

CAR SHORTAGE IN TEXAS CAUSE OF HEAVY LOSS

AUSTIN, Oct. 7.—Because of the big crops and the intensive oil development, Texas faces a car shortage which promises to be a serious menace to the agricultural and commercial interests of the state, according to a statement issued today by the railroad commission.

EASTLAND FAIR OPENS WITH DAY LOADING AGAINST

The Eastland fair, its first day through which tractors, and other vehicles, arrived on the Ranger road Texas and Pacific will be held again at a meeting which is held in Austin, October 13, according to George Hemmingson, who returned from the brief conference held in Fort Worth Saturday to the situation here, at Wichita Falls, and at other points in West Texas, which portion of the state appears to be the principal suffer in Texas this fall.

Mr. Hemmingson submitted definite data at the session to show the conditions obtaining here. The main point he brought out in refutation to the assertion of officials of the railroad that consignees were not promptly unloading shipments brought to Ranger was that on some days when consignees asked for their cars that they might unload them, the cars were not placed but that after a wait of two or three days, the accumulation of cars was spotted on the unloading track, making a congestion for which the companies unloading were not responsible. He pointed out that if there was an even placing of cars they could be properly unloaded within the minimum time. But when the trucks were idle two or three days, during which time no unloading could be performed the railroads and the company both suffered. Then to have the several cars which had been waiting pushed into an unloading siding in one day caused a congestion in the company could not solve.

Another problem which Mr. Hemmingson elucidated before the session was that cars are often placed for unloading without the consignee receiving timely notice. It has been the practice of the company on spotting a car to notify the consignee by postal card dropped in the local office with the proper street or box designation. The letter or card of notification would remain in the office several days before being given to the consignee because of improper address. In a statement to a Times reporter Tuesday Mr. Hemmingson said that he was seeking to remove this difficulty. He is now compiling a list of the Ranger jobbers, industries and consignees receiving carload shipments, with their proper addresses, the list to be supplied to the local freight office. When a car of material comes in the clerk at the freight office will be enabled to address the postal notice to the proper address, obviating the necessity for the cars to remain an indefinite length of time in the postoffice.

Mr. Hemmingson declared Tuesday that the Texas and Pacific had given "a very good service in Ranger under the best conditions, but that there has been some discrepancy which the Chamber of Commerce sought to smooth out. He paid a high compliment to the officials and local employees of the company, declaring that he knows of no road which maintained a more congenial set-up than at a station. The main conditions which have arisen here have been extraordinary. The cars to be used only by constant study of the situation. Many things have worked against a uniform service, which the chamber and jobbing and industrial interests wish to be established.

"We purpose to cooperate in every way with the railroad," said Mr. Hemmingson. "We want to aid the company in every possible way toward bringing about a uniform service. With this coordination of forces and the strictest harmony things will be brought to light. Our efforts therefore are contributory to the betterment of the service and we do not wish to be fault-finding, only to suggest in a helpful, profitable way some things which we believe our experience, observation and general study entitle us to submit.

"Therefore we are asking for a terminal traffic officer who can appreciate the situation here. We believe that the matter locally can be solved by the installation of such an official. He can keep the cars arriving here properly distributed to the various industries, without their gathering in strings unnecessarily and being spotted in bunches. What we seek is placement of cars on arrival and not after delays."

THIS GYPSY HAS SOME BUNCH OF "GLITTERS"

Mrs. Blannie Malone, mounted humane officer, and Byron Parrish and George Kiddle, of the Ranger police force, conducted one raid that brought unexpected results when they took in charge two or three thousand dollars' worth of jewelry, gold nuggets and coin of a dozen different realms.

The jewelry and money belonged to a Hungarian Gypsy band. The officers raided the place while looking for some stolen property. They found the Gypsies' camp on a vacant strip of ground in the east part of town. Their meager household effects were under an old tent and no one was at home but two small children. The police found about $1,900 in currency, numerous gold coins, some of American mintage, some from Serbia and other countries, several nuggets of pure gold, a number of diamonds, a necklace made of nuggets of Alaskan gold, and many other articles of jewelry, wrapped up in an old sack in the tent.

They took the sack and contents to police headquarters, pending an investigation. Before long the owner of the property came to headquarters and reported that he had been robbed. After questioning him closely the police turned the articles over to him and induced him to take them to town and place them in a deposit box in a bank.

The Gypsy stated that the money and jewelry represented the savings of a lifetime. He said that he came to America from Serbia thirty-two years ago and has been working and saving ever since.

SOLDIER LAUGHS WHILE SURGEONS AMPUTATE LEG

Alexander F. Gilmore, a recently returned soldier, had his left leg badly mangled when he attempted to board a freight train near Tiffin, about 5:30 last night, to come to Ranger. He was hurried to town in an ambulance and an examination by local physicians it was decided that his leg would have to be amputated. It is said that during the operation he laughed and talked with the physicians and nurses, displaying a wonderful nerve.

His leg was amputated just below the knee and he was removed to the Ranger General Hospital in the ambulance of the John E. Moberg company. Gilmore gave his home as Craven, Alabama. He had been in Ranger only a short time and had taken a job with the Texas Pipe Line company. He is reported as feeling well today.

How Mr. Phipps Digs.
The Big Iron Ball.
The Revolution We Need.

BY ARTHUR BRISBANE

Permanent improvements are alone important. Learn how Mr. Phipps is digging his cellar opposite the Ritz-Carlton hotel in New York city.

Mr. Phipps was very poor. He sold gunpowder as clerk in a store, and when his long day was ended he walked eight miles to keep books for a blacksmith not good at figures.

He, the blacksmith and Andrew Carnegie went into the steel business together. They were Scotch, careful, and made money, TENS of millions.

Along came J. Pierpont Morgan, not Scotch, not careful. He bought them out for HUNDREDS of millions, added a thousand millions of watered stock to the financial salad and they were all very rich.

Now, Mr. Phipps, having torn down the building in which Vernon Castle used to give his dancing lessons, is taking out the rock from the bottom of his deep cellar. You will see hope for the solution of our labor problem in the way Mr. Phipps digs solid rock, with one single workman in the hole, thirty or forty feet below the sidewalk.

Dynamite has loosened the rock. P lies in huge pieces, weighing tons or more. A hundred men down there could not lift one of them. In day when pyramids were built thousands would have sweated and died under the lash, with barely enough to eat moving that rock.

Today Mr. Phipps' rock mover gets $6 to $7 a day, and the hardest work he does is to move his right hand gently.

There is a steel crane on the sidewalk; the crane lowers and sets up a steel cable with an iron ball at the end.

At the solitary workman's feet lie a great solid iron ball that must weigh half a ton, half as big as a barrel. The workman beckons, and steel hooks come beside the iron ball and is attached by a fisherman's arrangement to which is fastened a long rope.

The ball is hauled up into the air forty feet above one of the huge stone blocks. A slight pull on the rope, the ball falls with terrific force and shatters the rock into small pieces. This operation is repeated until all the big rocks are broken conveniently small.

If you put fifty men with sledge hammers pounding for an hour they could not shatter these blocks of granite as they are shattered by the one iron ball.

The workman's moving finger, the small bottle and a few sounds have done all the work.

Men put the small pieces of granite in wooden carriers and the boxes are lifted, no physical effort, and the engine on big rollers carried away.

Mr. Phipps, who lives in the city of Manhattan, where a block of granite is quarried in an effort to break his rock, the workman, expanding, to haul it up the power of gasoline, explains it away.

The digging process you will be utilizing only the labor and production. With steel, gasoline, brains, a dozen workmen at $5 Phipps will dig his rock rapidly than a thousand men digging it in the old way.

is saving labor in the creating one man to 40

the work of a hundred, so labor being saved in the fields by harvesting machinery, and in the mills where a machine, in one day, can do the work of a thousand reedleweavers.

Men, machinery and brains combined will produce plenty for all; including reasonable leisure for all; good pay for those that work, fair profit for those that invest, generous pay for those that invent and improve.

The trouble has been, in the past, unwillingness to give workers a fair share of the increased production.

That man in the stone cellar, intelligently directing the steam engine above, does the work that a HUNDRED men used to do. It is not too much to give him the pay that TEN men used to get. Even at that price you are ahead the labor of ninety men.

"The profiteers of death," they are called. Besides exacting stupendous prices the self-appointed undertakers show little consideration for the precious burdens which they convey.

SATAN AND GOOD ROADS TO BLAME, SAYS PASTOR

TILTONVILLE, Ohio, Oct. 7.—Satan and good roads are blamed for keeping down church attendance, on Sunday, by Rev. H. L. Ward, a local pastor. "I will thank the Lord when roads become so bad that auto touring will no longer be a pleasure," he said to his congregation.

"ET TU, BRUTUS"

Sometimes our neighbors say deprecating things about us. If we are patient and long-suffering, we hold our peace. If the slights are repeated, our anger rises and we get on the gladiatorial wagon and whet our sabre and go after the captious neighbor.

Bricks have been thrown at Ranger many times.

Fortunately they have never hit us. But they're getting too close.

An article recently appeared in a paper in a neighboring town, jealous of the phenomenal and imperishable growth of Ranger, to the effect that that town was the logical center of the oil fields and that Ranger's field had evanesced and been pumped dry. The article was written by a person ignorant of conditions in the oil field—a person who was more eager to injure Ranger than to tell about the oil in the field. It was all for his town and that the Texas Ranger.

The Times has been less captious in its remarks of this nature appearing in newspapers jealous of Ranger's greatness. It is the person or thing that succeeds which always is censured or belittled. Ranger and The Times are sawing wood without trying to counteract the infinitely small damage which an article of this nature in a small newspaper will produce, for we are sure that all those who ever become sufficiently interested in the oil fields in Eastland county and who have a thumbful of brains will not make the mistake to locate a great industry or venture anywhere save in Ranger.

While the other towns are jealous we are going ahead with our building construction. While other towns are causing outsiders to faint at reading of the stupendous development they are going to make, Ranger is knocking 'em dead with news of actual building.

Even the blind men know Ranger is the best town in West Texas. Else how account for their coming here by tens? The big oil men come here. The trains unload here. Everybody comes to Ranger. Other towns atop a few passengers. After nine o'clock at night their streets are deserted. Ranger is at present putting up more substantial and permanent business houses than all the other towns in the oil field combined. More residences are being constructed. More business is being done here. Merchants and industries are reaping greater fortunes. They are satisfied.

If we haven't any oil around Ranger—or if we have been pumped dry—we wonder what in Sam Hill is putting so much life in this oil town. If we are to enjoy the greatest prosperity of our lives without oil, we are therefore not dependent on the oil fields. If our business can be maintained on the "hot air" and "memories" of the good old days, we are ready to part with the oil that our neighboring town claims is getting close to it.

BUILD A HOME.

Back under in the days when oil was king in Oklahoma Tulsa sprang into existence. It grew from a meagre country plenty men to one of the largest cities in the Southwest. Everything and everything came from Tulsa brag on the town. show Tulsa World its leading news-which is it, bears the earmarks of a model last year's success. Among oil men Tulsa has the most honest name.

COLLEGE TEA GET RAISE

By announcing a second Tulsa! SAN FRANCISCO... that unless... for teachers... colleges... bigger than... from... our city leads... present in an... opportunity.

"THAT LITTLE GAME" --- The Bird Who'd Kill for a Pinkie

for the homebuilder and the prospector. In these columns we have tried to picture something of the future greatness of the city. We have essayed to employ the eyes of a seer, though we are not experienced prophets, to tell the people here and afar off the gold which is ready to pour into their laps, pockets and wallets if they'll come and take the chance. Aside from the opportunity for investing and reaping profit here, the Times would implore those who have come and contemplate coming, to invest in real estate still held at cheap prices in many parts of the city. Residence lots in several additions are within the means of every wage earner. The terms for their acquisition have been made so easy that possession is in our reach.

Material Brought Into Jakehamon in Big Stream

Ranger cannot be bigger than Tulsa unless it builds from within. Its people must not only have confidence in its power to produce wealth for them, but they must have confidence in it as a home city. With all the modern conveniences possible in Tulsa and other large cities, and with a climate much superior, both in summer and in winter, and with an altitude that has made other towns health resorts, and with many other advantages possessed over Tulsa and other cities, it appears that there should be no hesitancy in quickly procuring residence property here for building a home section of the city where contentment would reign supreme. Ranger is largely made up of males. It has been estimated that if all the married men regularly employed in and about Ranger at large salaries should build homes and bring their families here, the city would have no less than 50,000 inhabitants and a municipality of several more square miles. The Times has witnessed a wonderful residence construction in Ranger in the last two months. In fact, the tide seems to have turned. The building of residences has eclipsed anything in West Texas. Yet the number of new dwellings that should have been constructed has been restricted. Now is the time for every wage earner to buy a lot and build a home.

"Second Birth" Is Elucidated

The "second birth" was elucidated in a sermon preached by Rev. W. W. Moore at the Christian and Missionary Alliance revival meeting at the east end of Hunt street at the service Monday night. The crowd was small but intensely interested. The songs were up to the usual standard.

A new use has been found for the rough sandstone excavated from the basement of the new structure. It is being hauled to lots in the Hodges Oak Park addition for foundation stones for new residences springing up there. Until utilized for that purpose, it was heaped up west of the church. Much of the earth removed in the excavation and in the deep ditch to contain the sewer connection is being hauled to the lowly property to the west of the church to fill in. A duct is being dug and banked with stone to provide a channel for the small creek which traverses this property, the water being carried in a straight course across the property, thus preventing washing. Much valuable improvement is being done in that section of the city.

The laying of sewer pipe for the basement of the new church edifice is taking place. The church will be amply provided with all the conveniences of a modern church. Many frames for the large windows already have been shaped and stored until they are to be used.

THE TIMES' DAILY SHORT STORY

"ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL"

By Lillian Hall Crowley.

"Come, girls," called Mrs. Stevens from the next room, "we shall be late for the train."
"In a minute!" "May has to put in another hairpin!" answered two joyous young voices. The girls then hurried in to join their waiting chaperon.
A taxi was standing at the entrance to the hotel, into which they piled and were furiously driven to the station where they were to take the train. They had finished a three-days' sight-seeing visit in the national capital and were on their way to Annapolis to attend the January hop of the Naval academy.
May Withers, who was engaged to Midshipman Roy Bloomer, had persuaded Jean Stevens and her sister to go with her. Both girls were attending college and this was holiday time. May intended finishing her college course the following June and Roy would graduate the same month. Then they were to be married.
"You'll like Roy's chum, Phil Carson, Jean. Roy says he's a sharp for study—like yourself—bones up on literature and writes verse. You let him know that you're the high-brow of our class."
"I wanted to meet him because he is Roy's friend, but now I want to meet him for myself," said Jean.
"I don't see how he and Roy ever became roommates, because old Roy never reads a book unless he has to We're alike, there."
When they arrived at the station in Annapolis, Mrs. Stevens called rickety old carriage that had two distressed horses and a fat darkey driver. They ambled along Maryland avenue until they came to their hotel, a large white building in the center of the town.
For dinner they had some of the famous Maryland soft-shell crabs, and then went into the parlor to wait for the "boys."
Presently May was introducing Roy Bloomer and his friend, Phil Carson, to Annapolis.
They soon exhausted all the small talk, and wise Mrs. Stevens suggested a walk. She would write letters while waiting time. She was repaid for her thoughtfulness with the joy she saw in the faces of the lovers.
Later when they all came to Roy and May were blissfully happy. No one could mistake the fact that they were genuinely in love. Phil looked noticeably bored, while Jean seemed bewildered and wretched.
At retiring time, May said:
"Oh, Jean, I made a mistake about Phil being a student of literature. He's an athlete and never reads I have confused his name with that of another fellow Roy wrote me about."
"Well!" exclaimed Jean, "that's why we didn't hit it off. I would have every subject I thought he would like—not that I cared myself, for I would rather have talked about this quaint old town. What must he think of me?"
"What did you say to him?"
"I started out on the technic of the short story of today in comparison with the long-drawn-out stories of Richardson, the father of the English novel."
"Heavens!" exclaimed May, while Mrs. Stevens repressed a smile. "He didn't know what you were talking about. I'm sorry for my mistake, Jean. What else did you say?"
"When he didn't respond, I thought: 'He doesn't care to be serious tonight,' so I told him a joke and he didn't even smile."
"What joke did you tell him?"
"That extremely funny one about the New York publisher who, on his first visit to England, asked Herbert Spencer to give him the sole right to 'The Faerie Queen.'"
"How could he laugh at that? There's nothing funny about it, is there?"
"Perhaps not?" Jean answered wearily.
"Never mind, dear," said her mother, "it often happens that two admirable persons cannot be congenial. Remember, there is the dance tomorrow night."
"Phil Carson has missed a lot," exclaimed May, "because you're the dearest and sweetest thing that ever lived. Present company not excepted."
Next evening the two midshipmen were at the door of the gymnasium, where the balls are held, when the girls arrived with Mrs. Stevens. Their programs had been filed by their escorts before, as was the custom.
Roy said: "Phil and I are sorry about Billy Westernman. We want you to know him, but he's so popular that all of his dances were taken before we knew you were coming."

"Who is he?" asked May.
"He's the fellow I wrote you about—the shark of the class—writes verse."
"He's the one I meant," May whispered to Jean.
Jean and her gallant, having started badly, could not get adjusted, especially after Jean, to show her interest in the best baseball pitcher in the academy, asked:
"Why do some of the players wear gray suits and the rest blue?"
The lock on his face decided her that no subject was safe, so she became icily polite; he caught the infection, and so the evening passed.
Many times Roy tried to corral Billy, but did not succeed. However, as Phil had seen that Jean's program was full, she enjoyed all the dances except the six with him.
At last the beautiful ball was over and Mrs. Stevens gathered her charges into the carriage.
"There is one thing I regret, Jean," said May, when they were again in Mrs. Stevens' room; "I wish you had met Billy instead of Phil—although Phil is a love!"
"Never, mind, dears," said Mrs. Stevens, "we all had a delightful time. Remember, we take the early train."
Next morning the same old rickety arriage was waiting to take them to the station. May was late, as usual, and Mrs. Stevens was hurrying them along. Each carried a heavy suitcase. The darkey piled the bags on the seat beside him. They climbed in. When he closed the door the glass broke in a thousand pieces. He only grinned.
"Hurry!" exclaimed Mrs. Stevens. "We must get our train."
There had been sleet the night before and the street was very slippery. The crazy vehicle slid from side to side, while its occupants were confused with laughter. They enjoyed the primitive thing, and the girls, with showers of broken glass, were precipitated on poor Mrs. Stevens.
When they could separate themselves they saw the horse running down the street, with the darkey pulling on the reins. The three suitcases were sliding after them. The tongue of the carriage had gone to the horses.
The shock of the fall had jammed he lock tight and they were unable to open the door. They could hear the whistle of the train. They must take it.
May called to a man in uniform who was hurrying down the street. He looked at them and laughed. Then went to their assistance.
Jean recognized him as Billy Westernman of the night before. Mrs. Stevens explained their predicament. The young man could not unfasten the lock, so he knelt in it with his foot.
Each woman grabbed a bag and ran for the train; the young knight helping first one and then another, but helping Jane the most. He asked her: "Didn't I see you at the hop last night?"
Gasping she answered: "Yes, I saw you, too."
By this time they were a half-block from the station and could see the conductor with his hand on the bell rope ready to pull it.
Billy gave a shrill whistle. The man hesitated and saw the frantic and exhausted women running, their faces contorted with merriment. Even Billy was panting.
"Thanks," they mumbled to the conductor.
The women climbed on and stood immovable on the platform while the porter threw the bags off their feet. Billy jumped after them.
"Pay you tomorrow," shrieked Billy. The darkey's face broke into a satisfacted grin.
"I must extricate you, again," Billy removed the luggage from six tired feet and found seats for the owners.
"Permit me to introduce myself," he smiled and handed his card to Mrs. Stevens. She read: Midshipman William Westernman, Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland.
Mrs. Stevens presented him to Ma and Jean.
"Oh," said May, "then you Roy Bloomer. I have heard all about you."
They laughed and chatted on the way to Washington. Billy learned that they were all going again for the hop in February.
"May I claim my dances, now?" he asked. "I won't trespass too much on Roy's reserves," said he, as he took three dances from May, the same from Mrs. Stevens, and while the others were looking at the scenery he claimed them from Jean.

H. L. J. Timps Delves Into Phrenology and Learns About Bumps From Visitor

By Paul C. Yates.

In front of a dilapidated and abandoned building in Ranger a huge sign painted on canvas announced, "Hard Luck John Timps—Phrenologist and Fortune Teller. Your Past, Present and Future as long as it lasts, told for four bits."

Withing the room the versatile Mr. Timps waited expectantly to see how his latest venture in the realm of business should turn out. He had two chairs and a home-made table in the way of furniture.

A tall, raw-boned man stopped outside and laboriously spelled out the announcement. After some hesitancy he entered the room.

"Be you the fortune teller?" he asked Timps.

"Yes," responded the latter. "I'll tell your fortune for half a hour."

"How do you operate?" asked the visitor dubiously.

"I see by the bumps on your head," explained Timps. "Every bump means something to a phrenologist like me. Sit down."

The man sat down in the chair and the chair promptly turned over. The "subject" sprang on the floor.

"What in thunder do you mean by that?" he demanded wrathfully.

"I forgot to tell you the chair ain't not but three good legs," apologized Timps.

"Well, I ain't got but one good one now. The other one's broke I do believe," said the subject as he tenderly rubbed his shin.

"The chair's all right but they's an art in sitting in it," explained Timps. "The visitor got to his feet but refused to sit in the chair again, saying that he preferred to stand up."

Mr. Timps assumed a professional air and ran his hands over his subject's head.

"I see from this bump that you're an awful curious person," said Timps. "In fact you've got the biggest bump of curiosity that I ever rec'ard a-ain on a man. I low it's as big as a hen egg. Just feel it."

The man felt of his head eagerly.

"That's where my dome h't that brick on the floor that I he declared. That bump warn't there a month ago." He showed at Timps with keen suspicion.

"So that's the way ven t'll fortune-tellers is it. Get a feller in here and have all kinds of contraptions fixed up to raise wits a-l over his head and then judge by the size of the bump whether he's favored by fortune. See what kind of a fortune lump this here will indicate."

He swatted Timps just above the left ear and knocked him into a corner. He walked out, limping slightly and tenderly rubbing the "curiosity bump" on his head.

A REASONABLE MAN

By Paul C. Yates.

I wonder why folks can't agree;
They're always arguing with me—
Why ain't they smart enough to see
When there is room for argument?

Why, nearly everything I say
Some man disputes it right away
And then we talk for half a day.
That's how most all my time is spent.

If I was wrong I wouldn't mind,
But just because some folks are blind
Ain't no excuse to get behind
The wrong side of the fence, say I.

They can't fool me, I wouldn't tread
As much as half an inch ahead
Of anything I ever said—
I'll stand behind it till I die.

WATER WELLS IN HILL CREST ARE ADEQUATE

Success is crowning the efforts of the promoters of Hill Crest addition, in southeast Ranger, in finding adequate supplies of waters for the inhabitants of the popular division of the city, according to the company's officials.

One well was brought in yesterday at a depth of about eighteen feet. It will afford 200 barrels a day on the pump. It is a six-inch drilled well, twenty-four feet in all, and being sunk in order to provide the residents of the division with adequate supplies pending the completion of the city water mains.

"Three veins of water are encountered in the Hill Crest addition," said an officer of the company this morning. "one at around fifteen to eighteen feet, another just above the line and another just below the line. The water question, we believe, has been settled in that portion of the city for keeps," declared the officer. "The laying of the city water mains means that this district will be adequately supplied."

"While the sewer system has not yet reached our addition, application has been made for the service, and as soon as the present work in other parts of the business section have been completed, we have assurance that work will start in Hill Crest. We are already supplied with natural gas in abundance. It will be only a short time until we shall have plenty of power and electric lights."

Evidencing the fact that there is a tremendous demand for choice residence property in Ranger, much of the north part of the Hill Crest addition has already been disposed of. A plat of the property in the office of the county clerk shows that the "red" predominates in that part. The "red" is to designate properties sold.

During the week a farmer from near Waco has negotiated with the Hill Crest authorities for a dairy farm in the south extremity of the immense property. It is understood that he has sixty Jersey cows and wants to put in a complete dairy for Ranger.

CONTRACT NOT YET AWARDED ON M. E. CHURCH

The contract for the $125,000 Methodist Episcopal church, south, which was to have been awarded Monday, will not be let until sometime about the end of the present week, according to Rev. Edgar M. Wisdom, pastor. The delay is occasioned by the desire of the official board to permit another bidder to get in his bid and specifications. This should be done within a day or two, after which the board will meet and award the contract.

The announcement made in The Times about the new building, which is to be the most commodious and valuable in West Texas, has elicited much praise for the membership and officials of the denomination in Ranger. Inquiries already are being received, asking fuller information as to the materials and general plan of the structure. When the contract has been let the structure as it will appear will be adequately described in a news item to be given out by the official board.

The fact that the new church is seriously needed never was better exemplified than on last Sunday night. The church was crammed and jammed with people who had come to worship. On the outside stood a large number, hearing the songs and the sermon through the windows of the small building, which in times past served adequately for the needs of the small congregation.

The annual conference of the Texas district, of which Ranger is a part, will be held at Waco, beginning November 12. Rev. E. M. Wisdom expects to be present with a full report and conference claims paid in full. The work of the church in the oil fields will be reviewed at this session. Rev. Wisdom has served nearly two years at Ranger, in a faithful and fearless way, and has made many friends. It was through his fastidiousness and love for the church that it has grown to such magnitude.

Miss Mable Wood who spent Sunday in Abilene has returned to Ranger.

NEW COMEDY COMPANY AT HIPPODROME IS BIG HIT

Bert Smith with his "Ragtime Wonders" arrived in Ranger yesterday and received an enthusiastic reception at both the afternoon and evening performances at the Hippodrome. They will be here one week. The company is better known than any that has been at the Hippodrome this season. The chorus lives up to its reputation of being the dancing-circus chorus ever.

Daisy and Harry De Grace made the hit of the show, with their songs, dancing and clever repartee. "Just for a Girl," as sung by Miss De Grace, is a rather catchy little bit. Harry DeGrace follows this with "Woman is the Cause of It All." It is a good song. The dancing trio—Phil Hart, Arlene Hart and Babe Smith—gave a peppy exhibition of both soft shoe and clog dancing.

Joe Fields, as the Jew comedian, is by far the most finished seen here. His work is for the most part free from the vulgar crudeness so apt to be used here.

Bert Smith does not appear upon the stage, but it is evident in the work of his company that he is an experienced producer.

MARY PICKFORD AT TEXAS IN "DADDY LONG LEGS"

In addition to Ruby Darby's Musical Comedy company the Texas presents today and tomorrow, Mary Pickford in her latest screen success, "Daddy Long Legs." The Texas no longer is an airside, but is a covered show house with good acoustics.

Wednesday at 4:15 a special performance of "Daddy Long Legs" will be presented to the school children. The thoughtful manager of the Texas wishes to give the children the opportunity of seeing their favorite in her best picture to date, without having to see the night prices. Admission will be 15 cents.

One of the funniest of all the humorous things in "Daddy Long Legs" is loaded into a series of scenes which Mary, as Judy Abbott, takes with hard cider. The funny little "dime" is not indulged in by Judy Abbott, the orphan child Miss Pickford plays, with malice aforethought. It happens that she and a funny little orphan with a very freckled face have just had a "prune gremlin" in which they have sought to obtain better food for the children of the asylum, who are fed on thin soup and prunes.

The technical head master has the bottle, however a large woman, able to dominate the cowering waifs who are charges of the institution, and to receive Judy and the little boy who aided her in encouraging the children to strike, the master sets them out into the world with nothing to eat. A thief who has been stealing from a nursing woman through the fence a bag of hard cider had some sandwiches.

Judy and the boy have been working for food. They think this has been dropped from heaven and proceed to eat and drink without inquiring into the nature of the donation. So it happens that in the most recent scene both children become victims. Miss Pickford's portrayal of the surprised Judy, who panics her enemies, wins her to all the children and defies the ocre of a matron is wonderfully done.
