CITIZEN'S COMMITTEE TO END UP CAMPAIGN WITH FINAL CANVASS

The Goal—$225,000.00
Subscribed—$162,663.00
Needed—$62,337.00

Mr. Ranger Man: Are you letting the weather get under you or skin? Are you wearing a face like the leaden skies? Here's one who is not. He came into the Chamber of Commerce office this morning, from the dripping streets, dug down in a damp pocket and pulled out a ten-spot and tossed it out. "I want to help the railroad proposition," he declared. He was one that the Citizens' Committee, in its canvass of the business district, would not reach. He was a worker. His spirit brought to mind the popular response of the lads in the army, when the mud was deep, the soup and blankets thin and the skies overcast. Someone would toss out a query: "Is anybody downhearted?" And the answer would come back, unexpurgated and with enthusiasm: "Hell, no!"

With two days to go and the going bad on account of mud and rain and cold winds from the north, the citizens' committee has $62,337 yet to raise to reach the goal of $225,000 necessary to pay for the right-of-way which will bring the Wichita Falls, Ranger & Fort Worth railway through here. But rain and mud will not stop the workers. Friday will be the active day of the two remaining, as Saturday is a busy day for merchants and for committeesmen, every one of whom is a business man who is sacrificing his time from his own interests to give it to the city's advancement. Tabulations added to the entries already made by Leslie H. Hagaman today include: Ralph G. Stockman, $212.50; C. H. Rex, $500; Western Supply company, $200; John H. Moore, $5; Branch & Starr, $10; J. A. McCoy, $10; City bakery, $25; Robinson & Higman, $25; Ranger cafe, $25; O. H. Moffatt, $5; J. A. Moore, $15; Central Motors company, $25; Home laundry, $10; City tailors, $10; A. F. Hartman, $100; G. W. Brevant, $10; J. B. Drake, $20; W. C. Palmer, $25; Dr. B. C. Rutherford, $25.

TRADE COMMISSION'S REPORT SAYS CONTROL IS ALMOST COMPLETE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Reiteration of the claim that the five big packing companies of Chicago bid fair to dominate the wholesale grocery trade and already handle more than 200 foods unrelated to the meat packing industry, many directly competitive as meat substitutes, was made in the federal trade commission's report on the industry made public today. Another section, which was issued today, included in the commodities falling under the control of the "Big Five" poultry and game, dairy products, lard and butter substitutes, canned and dried vegetables and fruit, canned and frozen fish, cocoa, coffee, molasses and syrups. The report declares that the meat packers are large speculators and their control of capital and credit enables them to buy in such a way as to resell on the market which their purchases have forced up.

LLOYD GEORGE IS FACING HIS WORST CRISIS

International News Service.
LONDON (By Mail).—Political crises are meat and drink to David Lloyd George, England's "man of destiny," but the one which now impends promises to tax to the utmost the strength and dexterity of the little Weismann who has traded heavily thus far on the fact that he has the war and world's "British" peace.

During a holiday of retirement political duties he is obliged to do at least one thing—keep his feet on the ground. The heavy attacks of attack and defense necessarily involve one which the lawmakers are sure to be subjected to.

The American Foreign Relations Committee has received a "plot" by Lord Curzon, British Foreign Secretary, and Winston Churchill, Secretary for War, to form a cabinet majority to overthrow Lloyd George.

All labor, meaning the British Labor Congress, representing 5,000,000 workers, and, with their families, nearly half the inhabitants of Britain, have taken sharp action against Lloyd George's government on nationalization of the coal mines, military rule in Ireland, continuance of the war against Bolshevik Russia, and continuance of conscription.

On the face of things, it is seemingly inevitable that attempts to oust the Georgian government will be made from two directions. The editor who is credited with having "made" the Premier and the Premier's best known lieutenant, undoubtedly, would turn the trick tomorrow if they saw their way clear to do it. Lloyd, aiming not so much at Lloyd George himself as at the coalition government, would force a change of government if he could find if there were not bothersome and complicating circumstances.

The bothersome and complicating circumstances for Northcliffe, Churchill and Co. are:

They cannot swing a workable majority against the Premier.

They haven't found the Churchill name big enough for a headline in a new government, and,

Their first "platform plank," unrelenting warfare against the Bolsheviks to prevent Germany from gobbling Russia, has become very unpopular with the general public and is no longer tenable.

The bothersome and complicating circumstances for organized labor in all its rapidly growing power are:

Labor hopes one day to be the government.

Labor could force an overthrow of the Government on one of its major issues, but it could not do this by political action through its members of Parliament, who are not numerous enough for the purpose.

If labor forces the downfall of the government it will have to use the strike weapon or the threat of direct action. The government which "permitted" this would be discredited, and probably would fall. But the labor movement also would lose standing with the voters, and the day when labor can become the government party would be postponed.

So, while there will be spirited attacks and noisy battles directed against the doubts held by David Lloyd George, Northcliffe, labor, Lord Rothermere, Northcliffe's editor-brother and a score of minor factions, nobody is yet visible on the political horizon who can stare Lloyd George's downfall with safety to himself.

If King George started today calling in leading statesmen for the purpose of inviting them to form a new Cabinet he'd in all probability give audience to a goodly number of so-called "leading" statesmen without getting a single nibble.

A few weeks or a few months of the new session of Parliament may develop a different story. Some statesman may grow. The pile of "evidence" for the prosecution which the opposition is collecting at the door of Downing Street may grow to such dimensions as to make conviction certain.

IF YOU BREAK YOUR TRUCK

There is Really Only One Way to Permanently Repair Broken Truck and Automobile Frames—the U. S. Army Method Used by Ranger by the Brown Welding Machine Co.

Most truck frames are broken by excessive vibration under heavy load. This vibration travels from the ends of the springs along the frame and looks for a weak spot to fight the vibration from the other end of the frame.

This weak spot is usually found on the tension or bottom flange of the frame at a place that has been drilled for a spring hanger, cross-member or motor support, or else at the point where the cab and body meet.

The Army method of welding frames (patented by C. H. Brown while doing army contract work for the Brown Welding Machine Co.) is the only way to permanently repair broken truck and automobile frames.

It doesn't matter how much you've bent them, you can get them straight again. You can get them stronger than when you first bought them. You can get them to last longer than ever before.

Proprietor Brown and John Raper and later of his own way. Under the name of the Brown Welding Machine Co. they have made a name for themselves in the trucking industry.

GERMAN OFFICER AND BEAUTIFUL BARONESS IN LOVE TRAGEDY

International News Service.
HELSINGFORS, Finland, Oct. 16.—A dramatic love tragedy in which a beautiful young Finnish baroness, a young German who was an officer of a crack cavalry regiment during the war and the telephone played parts has just come to light here.

The young officer became enamored of the baroness on seeing her in a restaurant and sought an introduction. His advances were rejected, and the baroness avoided meeting him. A few days ago she was awakened at 3 o'clock in the morning by the telephone in her room.

"I must see you at once," said the pleading voice of the young officer.

"Don't refuse me. I've tried to forget you and can't." The baroness told him it was impossible. "If I don't get a telephone call from you in ten minutes consenting to see me I'll shoot myself," came the answer.

In the morning the young officer was found dead in his room with a revolver by his side.

ELIZABETH IS REALLY QUEEN;
CHARMS N. Y.

By AUGUSTIN LARDY,
 International News Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—How New York "just loved" Elizabeth, Queen of the Belgians, during her stay in the city before her departure with King Albert and Prince Leopold on their tour of the country, is an emotion
 the metropolis will experience
 far longer than in its feckle youth.

First, Queen Elizabeth proved to anything but "stuck up," and immediately endeared her to the Second, she was "chic"—a risisnely "chic"—and that is another characteristic of which Manhattan is enamored. Thirdly, the queen is pretty, and pretty in a wisdom, gentle soft of way.

One reason every mother in New York felt her heart go out to the queen was the evident love that exsists between her majesty and her 18-year-old son; and they are good chums, too. Queen Elizabeth and her boy. At all the receptions and other public appearances of the royal party it was the heir apparent to the Belgian throne rather than the king who was swift in those little attentions of politeness which Europe rigidly demands that men pay to women.

When the king was occupied with listening to a speech from some official, Leopold, Duke of Brabant, it was
 who stood behind the queen, smilingly relieving the noblemen inwaiting of their duties in helping her off with her furs and her wraps, arranging her fall furs for her, or lending her his hand upon entering or alighting from a limousine. The son is fully a head taller than his mother, while Albert, grave, dignified, courtly, is head and shoulders taller than his wife.

Queen Elizabeth is not more than five feet four inches in height. She is slimly, delicately fashioned, but there is nothing languid in her carriage.
 She carries herself with the uprightness of a little soldier—as befits a woman who has deliberately risked her life under shell fire to attend her wounded countrymen. Her face is serious, and there is an appealing wistfulness about it. She uses not the slightest trace of "make-up." Her smile begins in her eyes, changing their dark, serious gray to a merry twinkle of delicate blue, and her smile is a quick, sunshiny affair that starts unexpectd dimples playing tag with themselves over her cheeks and firm little chin.

She has a penchant for white in her attire. It seems. Despite the gray skies and the chill breeze that fell when the royal party landed from the George Washington at Hoboken, she was dressed entirely in a cream-colored traveling suit, with laced shoes and a saucy little white traveling hat decked with a saucy little white pom. When she went aboard the same night along New York's White Way she still was in white—her not-too-deeply cut evening gown
 being a Parisian creation of shimmering white satin and her opera coat being lined with heavy white silk or satin. About her comely self she wore a white veil of some white, diaphanous material.

The eyes of fashionable and official New York were upon her when the king was tendered the freedom of New York at the city hall, by Mayor Hylan. She has the gratifying well returned it, in fact. As she stood on the king's left while Recom, chairman of the reception committee, and Hylan read their speeches of welcome in the collection second floor of the el-her murmured their

there is sweet as a flower."
 He spoke, not of her frock, the mode of her hat or the cut of her shoes. It was not in his untrained masculine eye to see that the queen
 was robed in a cream-colored dress;
 that her white, closely-feathered toque bore a brown cigarette; that there was a string of fine pearls
 about her bare throat in one medicined loop; that her gloves were of white silk and that there were bracelets of plain gold on both wrists. All he saw was the brave, sweet soul of the woman, speaking in her steady, frank eyes.

Except when he had a chance to ramble about New York "incor," as he did upon the night of his arrival, King Albert is always attired in the uniform of the Belgian armies. He wears the ribbon of the Legion of Honor and one or two decorations.
 There is not another costume simpler than his among his party, and compared with some of the bright blue and red uniforms of the colonels, majors
 and captains on his staff, his dress
 may truly be called the medicines and decorations flash, glitter and gleam upon the breasts of his staff.
 There is not a military member of the party who has not received fully half a score of decorations for service.

Leopold, the heir apparent, how-

of a private of the 112th Belgian infantry, with whom he fought at Dixmude. The prince saw eighteen months in the trenches, living the life of the Belgian soldiers, and no favors shown, either.

He just about looks his eighteen years, resembling his mother quite a little. The same frankness is in his face and gaze. It is a thin, boyish and handsome countenance, quite serious in repose, but lighting up mercifully with his sudden smile.

Simplicity is the keynote of the Belgian royal family.

"COME ON, REMORSE," AROUSES THEM ANEW

"Come on, Remorse!" How well one remembers the cry in "Checkers," the famous racing play which held the stage so many years, played the country from end to end over and over again, and made millions for its owners. Remorse wins the rich stakes in the play, although unknown up to that time. Remorse, Checkers, Push Miller, Bert Barlow and the rest—they all come to life again in the mammoth William Fox film production of "Checkers," which was shown yesterday at the Liberty for a run of two more days. Richard Stanton, who staged the picture, has taken advantage of the outdoor atmosphere to make one of the most spectacular pictures ever shown. Checkers is a reformed race track tout who falls in love with a southern beauty. His adventure is beset with troubles, but he overcomes every obstacle.

Mr. Crowell is a versatile writer. Previous to identifying himself with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce he was a shining light in the newspaper fraternity of Texas. He has the added faculty of being able to retain verbatim a 5,000-word speech or oration. Since he has been in his new position he has done much to tell the world interestingly and convincingly the verities of West Texas. Mr. Crowell frequently visits the Ranger. His friends predict for him a successful career in the literary world, judging from the interesting gems from his facile pen.

HARRY MOREY AT OPERA HOUSE IN "BEAUTY PROOF"

Harry Morey as Corporal Steele of the Northwest Police has a splendid vehicle in "Beauty Proof."

Corporal Steele, known as "Beauty-Proof" Steele, because of his hatred of women, is sent to Le Pas to bring back a prisoner, Thorpe, who had threatened the life of Hodges. When he reaches there, Carol, Thorpe's sister, makes him a prisoner and conveys him to Hodges' office, where he overhears her accuse Hodges of gaining her brother's confidence in order to win Carol. Hodges attacks her and she shoots him. Steele then realizes that Hodges was the man who robbed him of his wife. His aim is revenge and he takes Hodges to a hospital to save his life. The verdict of the trial of the Thorpes is "not guilty." They start on their journey to Le Pas and are overtaken by Hodges, who again attacks Carol. However, Steele arrives and after a desperate struggle, Hodges falls over a cliff and is killed. Steele is happily united to Carol.

BIG PICTURE COMES TO LIBERTY NEXT WEEK

One does not ordinarily go to comedy for art, but in Mack Sennett's big five-part super-comedy, "Yankee Doodle in Berlin," which is to be shown at the Liberty theater next week, there are to be seen some wonderful works of art. The picture was taken in the most beautiful part of California and some of the scenic pictures almost make the spectator creep in admiration. Although one doesn't have much time to look at the scenery, so much is going on in the course of the story, wherein a young American aviator disguises himself as a girl in order to vamp a war secret out of the notorious Kaiser. Still, the scenery is there.

COL. LACKLAND LANDS LAND OF GRANDE VALLEY

Col. Rufus J. Lackland has returned from a trip to the Rio Grande Valley where he and his brother, Sidney C. Lackland, will open a new town some time in the next two or three months. The grant of land is carried away with the wonderful possibilities of the Rio Grande Valley and predicts that it will some day be the garden spot of America. He says that it is like Ranger in that no description, however forcible, will give an adequate notion of the potential greatness and the actual development now going on.

Col. Lackland told of seeing eight-ton muscova grape fruits growing from one limb. He explained that the Valley is better than California or Florida for grape fruit culture on account of the total absence of alkali and the milder, and more equable climate.

"The soil deposited by the overflow of the river is the best fertilizer in the world," said Col. Lackland. "In California and Florida it is necessary to spend around $35 an acre annually for fertilizer, in the culture of grape fruit, while in this wonderful valley the land grows richer each year, without artificial fertilizer. Cabbage and all varieties of winter vegetables flourish in this Southern paradise," he declared.

The Lackland brothers have signed a very advantageous contract with Couch and Couch, of Knox City and Haskell, for the exclusive sale and handling of a new town in the heart of a rich agricultural region now being opened up by the Steppell Land Company, of Kansas City. The new town will be called Wadaco. A date has not been set for the opening.

MEXICAN WAS 'MUCH FRIO,' TAKES SWEATER

A Mexican laborer was arrested yesterday afternoon by Constable Faircloth in connection with the theft of a sweater from a local store.

It is alleged the Mexican was trying on a pair of shoes in the store and slipped a sweater from a nearby pile and wrapped it in an old jumper. One of the employees of the store happened to be watching him, for he was suspected of having stolen a silk shirt from the store several days ago, in company with two other Mexicans. The employee grabbed him, it is claimed, and found the sweater rolled up in the bundle. Mr. Faircloth took him into custody. The charge against him probably will be petty theft.

An effort is being made to locate the other two Mexicans.

Such sugar as is procurable in towns in West Texas comes from old stock and does not represent that from the new crop, it was reported.

COUNTY JUDGE C. R. STARNES TELLS OF HIGHWAY INSPECTION TRIP OF COUNTY COMMISSION

A public servant we feel that we owe the public a full and fair statement of the things we are doing and planning and that the best way to reach this end is through the press.—County Judge C. R. Starnes of Eastland County.

At this time no matter concerns the people of Eastland county more than the good roads for which bonds were recently voted. Work on the roads cannot begin immediately that the people expect themselves favorable to them. The bonds must be approved and considerable survey and outline work must be done.

Since the roads are assured, the county commission, including Judge C. R. Starnes, has visited all the important counties of the state to inspect already-built highways—all intended to be serviceable to the maximum degree. The faults of the one are remembered and the good features of others indelibly impressed upon the minds of the commission.

The entire commissioners' court of Eastland county made a trip through all of the larger counties of the state during the last week, inspecting the various types of roads and finding out the reason the better constructed roads were good and why those that had gone to the bad had failed.

Between Llano and Fredericksburg a bad mudhole was encountered that could be crossed neither on the right nor on the left hand, but only by a combination of the two, attempting the left-hand side the wheel got stuck and had to be pushed stark and everybody unloaded and pushed. This mudhole ended with a ditch, slopingly full of black mud and Commissioner Eppler, who was very little at night, asked Mr. Eppler (Eppler) could jump the mudhole. When Mr. Camp told him he was in the jump he began the jump when he was standing. The mudhole was standing. When Mr. Eppler jumped it he jumped in the middle of it. When they got to Fredericksburg everybody dried and scrubbed the mud off of their clothes as best they could. Several available San Antonio surface roads. P. of bituminous surface roads. With the good luck to find these valuable kinds upon one stretch of road with the same base construction and same traffic conditions, and under conditions that are as near similar to ours as can be imagined. This is the road from San Antonio to Camp Stanley, which was during the war subjected to unusually heavy truck traffic. On this road was the direct penetration method, or the so-called Finley method, the inverted penetration method or Wardmitte process; the hot-rolled Uvalde rock asphalt; the cold-rolled Uvalde rock asphalt, both one inch thickness and one-half inch thickness. Part of this road had not stood up well under the traffic and part of it had done so unusually well.

They saw both direct and inverted penetration with sand, gravel and trap-rock. It would be rather technical to go into reasons why some of these roads are good and some are bad, but the court, in consultation with the judge and county engineers, and oftentimes some of the commissioners, made road inspections in all of the counties through which they went.

In most of the counties they found an automobile and driver were at the disposal of the court to facilitate their inspection of the roads, and these counties seem to think it was the best money spent upon their roads, as there never is a lawful excuse why the roads never were inspected.

Some-how, bad luck was encountered by Travis county, and the roads in that county were not at all to compare with the roads of the other three counties, and they attribute their failure to improper drainage.

The oldest road, of the bituminous in first class condition was south of Waco in McLennan county. This road is a water-bound road with inverted penetration method, gravel and limestone aggregate for the wearing surface. This road has been down a little more than five years and only recently was re-treated. In this connection it may be said that the roads of Bexar and McLennan counties are above the average in their condition of maintenance, and each of these counties use the section system, having the roads placed in definite sections upon the principal that the railroad is divided into sections. From the inspection and results obtained it is to be by far the best method.

In some of the counties the absence of much money wasted in not having had sufficient maintenance, and in other places, BEXAR, general maintenance, and no more two days this week.

In the field, the guest of Judge Starnes thought who is building the White Sulphur Springs and Fort Worth roads. The Bexar county made a study of the best method in the oil fields and spent a considerable amount of money in the construction of various points of contact.

Special to The Times: and in other places. J. K. HAMON, Hill county, where all the roads are in engineering and no more two days this week.
