

WHAT'S...

COOKING?

By NORMAN WRIGHT
We have left out a lot of news items and taken up a lot of front page space today to run this turkey story because we feel it is one of the most important things facing Ranger today.

It just goes to bear out what we said some weeks ago about Eastland County standing a chance to become the leading turkey producing county in the state, and that was probably the understatement of the year. Eastland County may well become the leading turkey producing county in the United States, and that not very far off.

We MAY be the leading turkey producing county in the state NOW. We most probably are, but we don't know for sure until all the figures are in and compiled for this year.

But the fact is, the industry has become so booming that the T & P Railroad thought enough of it to print this story in its monthly magazine "Topics," and the Fort Worth Press thought enough of it to spread it all over their paper a few days back, and where does that leave us?

We think the people of Ranger ought to get together and take a brand new look at this turkey business. It may hold the key to a lot of new prosperity we are hunting for this area and the thing is, IT IS HERE NOW. What we need to know is, are we doing everything we can to get some of it in Ranger? If we're not we need to have our heads examined because somebody is going to make something out of it, and the time to grab on to an opportunity is when it is young, like this one.

The Kincaids are making the turkey business pay off. And the fine part about it is, they're not trying to hog it all for themselves. They are intensely interested in helping other people get into the business and are happy at all times to give them the benefit of their experience and knowledge in how to make it pay off. They have learned a lot of things through trial and error and are willing to help everybody else avoid all these costly mistakes.

The county is also full of other turkey growers that are making money out of the business. Although they are perhaps not as big in their operations as the Kincaids, they are nevertheless making money out of turkeys. It is a business that does not require a big layout of land, and it is also one that is not effected too much by drought or flood. Nearly anybody with a genuine desire to go into it can get help. We believe that even the feed companies are in a position to extend financial assistance in many cases.

In addition to raising turkeys, the Kincaids have a big hatchery business over at Eastland and they are right now building a building that will triple their capacity. They broke all records this past year hatching 12,000 eggs a week and now they are going to be able to hatch 32,000 eggs a week. That's wonderful, but the heck of it is, that's over in Eastland. They also own a feed company over there, and since their hatchery is in the county seat they are planning to add to it by building a dressing and processing plant. Again we (Continued on Page 2)

Eastland Wins Regional Over Henrietta 27-20

Congratulations are in order today to neighboring Eastland who won the Regional round of Class A State play-offs by defeating Henrietta on a neutral field in Wichita Falls Friday night 27-20.

Ranger has followed this play-off with interest since it so closely parallels the path followed last year by the Bulldogs.

Eastland homefolks who did not go to the game were alerted to the victory at 10:10 o'clock Friday night when the fire siren, on a pre-arranged signal, set off a screaming blast and held it for about five minutes.

It was a see-saw battle all the way with Henrietta jumping off to a 7-0 lead in the first quarter, but Eastland came from behind to make it 13-7 as the first half ended.

Henrietta tied it up at 13-13 in the third quarter, but Eastland made it 20-13 in the fourth. Henrietta pulled up even again (Continued on Page Two)

ONE OF A SERIES OF PICTURES FEATURING RANGER STORES TO BE RUN BY THE RANGER TIMES DURING THE HOLIDAY SEASON—TODAY CRAWFORD'S REXALL DRUG

—Print by Capps Studio

Perhaps the busiest spot in Ranger, holidays or no holidays, is Crawford's Rexall Drug which has recently been purchased by Ray Lilley. Rangerites from school kids to bankers plan their affairs here and work out grave business matters over the coffee cups and many a man will tell you he can't officially begin his day until he has visited the soda fountain and had his morning eye-opener. "Meet you at Crawford's Drug" is a familiar phrase spoken many times by young and old alike all through the day and evening. Like all other Ranger stores, Crawford's is beginning to take on the Holiday Look with new Christmas windows and interior displays. The new owner, still assisted by both of the Crawfords, is beginning to fit into the scene like a wedge and is anxious to meet everybody in town as quickly as he can.

Great Response To Welfare Plea For Assistance

Mrs. C. E. May Sr., one of the leaders in the Child Welfare Organization here, said today the response had been "marvelous" to their appeal for a smaller building in which to work and store their used clothing, and also to their appeal for bedding to be distributed to needy families in the area.

Mrs. May said Andy Anderson had offered them the rear end of a building next to Capps Studio which would suit them fine since it was down town and at the same time off the street, and that Jack Garner had also offered a building that would serve wonderfully. She said members of the organization had not got together yet to decide which building to use.

Mrs. May also said they had been swamped with calls to pick up blankets and bed covers, and several articles of good clothing had been received. Anyone wishing to donate bedding or clothing may call Mrs. A. N. Larson at 402, Mrs. May at 440, or Mrs. B. A. Tunnell at 251.

The Welfare Workers have also placed a box at the Chamber of Commerce to receive old and outgrown toys that can be distributed to the needy on Christmas Day.

Hundreds Line Main Street for Santa Parade

Main Street in Ranger was thronged with onlookers Friday afternoon as the big Santa Claus parade officially opening the 1956 Yule Season got under way at 3:30.

Hundreds upon hundreds of children and their parents greeted Old Santa Claus as he rode down Main Street in a red fire truck and returned to the City Hall where he passed out Christmas favors to every child who had come to meet him.

Sweetbriar's won first place in the float competition, a cash prize of $10; Montgomery Ward and Company won second place for a cash prize of $7.50, and Elliott Motors won third place with a cash prize of $5.00. The judges were from Sprawn, and were stationed in front of the Chamber of Commerce.

The judges were uncertain of the name of the youngster who won first place for the best decorated bicycle, but they think his name was Ronnie Gibbs and his bike had a decorated clock on the front wheel. If this youngster hasn't already done so, he can call at the Chamber of Commerce and collect his dollar.

Entries in the parade, in order of their appearance were: Ranger High School Band, The Globe Clothiers, B & W Pontiac, Ranger Garden Club, The Smart Shop, American Legion Auxiliary, Lone Star Gas, Elliott Motors, Montgomery Ward Company, I & J Supply, Bell's Young Modern, Motor Bikes, Lone Star Producers, Old Cars, an unidentified car and boat, Sweetbriar's, ABC Floral and Garden Shop, Kiddies Bikes, Santa Claus and Arterburn's.

Merchants all up and down the street reported a brisk day of shopping and it was expected that by the close of business Saturday night there would be a record number of Christmas packages stored away for this early in the season.

Through cooperation of the City of Ranger, a parking holiday was in effect all day Saturday, and each Saturday from now until Christmas will also be parking holidays. The city even extended this courtesy to include Christmas (Continued on Page 2)

Eastland County Turkeys Booming New Industry

Giving full credit to the Pilgrims for the tradition of general feasting on Thanksgiving, the turkey rates his due, too. For in a nation where people insist on changing practically everything every year, turkey has been Americans' chosen main course at the meal of the year since 1621.

From where, have you ever wondered, do all of these turkeys come?

Well, the family Kincaid of Eastland County, Texas, can account for thousands or even millions of them, depending on whether you count the full-grown turkeys or the eggs they sell.

The four farms run by this family — the father, Alvin, and his three sons, Robert, 27 years old; Aubrey, 26; and Don, 23 — produce 60,000 turkeys and 1 1/2 million eggs yearly.

Aubrey's farm, alongside Highway 80 West at Ranger, within sight of the Texas and Pacific Railway's main line, serves to illustrate one-quarter of the size and volume of the Kincaid family's turkey business.

On the 115 acres around his residence, Aubrey keeps 3500 breeder hens laying eggs, with one male turkey for every 10 hens. Egg production on his place runs to 800,000 yearly.

At the other end of town, he has growing turkeys. In early October this year, there were 7000 there that were 16 weeks old. Full grown at 22 weeks, they will be ready for the holiday season market. Customers for these turkeys — processors who clean and dress them for sale to supermarkets and such — extend from New Mexico to New Orleans. However, before selling his present flock, Aubrey will carefully select — for width of back and breast, length of breast and all — around balance — 2000 of them for breeder stock.

Going west via T&P to locate the Kincaids, Aubrey's farm at Ranger — 95 miles from Fort Worth — would be the first stop. Nine miles farther at Eastland is the family — partnership Kincaid Feed and Turkey Hatchery, and another nine miles up the line is Don's farm near Cisco. The father and Robert are located a half mile apart, about nine miles north of Eastland.

The convenience of the nearby T&P is used by these turkey ranchers for receiving supplies, such as feed by the carload, and for shipping out turkeys.

Naturally enough, the Kincaids market a lot of turkeys just before and during the fall months for the Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year holiday meals. But starting from the advertising message on their giveaway ball-point pens to everything about their setup, they emphasize they're in a "year-round business."

Aubrey Kincaid, who enthusiastically starts talking turkey on the handshake with visitors, says, "Any time during the year on my Dad's, my brothers' and my places we will have 35,000 to 40,000 turkeys."

The Kincaids switched from cattle and sheep ranching to turkeys in 1950.

"We got into turkeys with a flock of about 3000," Aubrey recounts. "The second year we tripled that production, third year quadrupled it, and by 1955 we reached our present size."

These present size tops any other Texas producer for the type turkey they specialize in raising, the Beltsville White. Developed in 1934 to meet the needs of the small family, it's a breed which grows out to 10-pound hens and 18-pound toms, and whose every feather is snow white. When they're bunched together, Aubrey's flocks at Ranger look like thousands of turkey heads sticking out of a sea of white feathers.

Because of two favorable characteristics when dressed — its fair skin and absence of pin feathers — the Beltsville White brings the Kincaids a premium of three to four cents a pound from processors who order as many as 10,000 at one time.

Even before going into the oven to be prepared for the extra special meal, the Kincaid turkey goes through a lot of heat. As an egg, it's put for 25 days in an incubator where the mercury registers 99 1/2 degrees, then transferred for three days to a hatcher that's kept at 99 degrees. After breaking from its shell as a poult, (Continued on Page Two) say that is wonderful for the county as a whole, but we want to see some of this turkey business centered in Ranger and that is why we need to take a brand new look at it.

We already have a wonderful start here because Morris Newsum has one of the finest and best processing plants in the state and he hopes to make it even bigger. That plant means a lot to Ranger and we would like to see it grow to be ten times as big, and it will.

With such a concentration of turkeys as we have here, buyers are soon going to be beating a path from all directions to buy Eastland County turkeys on the hoof. Don't worry, they'll be here. Where the birds ARE is where they will come. And the finer the birds, the higher the price, and the more we can raise the more money there will be floating around here.

And one way for a turkey grower to make money is to cut down on his expenses and his losses. Many growers suffer losses on account of diseases that reach their flocks. That is why we must let no grass grow under our feet in bringing that A & M school here early in 1957 that is going to show these growers how to cope with the disease situation. It will be for a 15-county area and we must get it here, IN RANGER.

We must also encourage other people to enter the turkey growing industry. And we must ourselves make a study of it to find out all the various angles to it, and all the other businesses that develop out of it and revolve around it, and bring some of them to RANGER.

 It stays in a brooder house for seven weeks in a temperature of 95 degrees. And finally the young turkey is turned outdoors where sometimes it gets hotter than anything it has yet experienced. The climate of Texas—where a record crop of 4,457,000 turkeys is being raised this year—is ideally suited for early egg production, especially for the northern and eastern markets. And the Kincaids sell their Beltville White Turkey eggs for 22 cents apiece to customers in 33 states and Canada.

The Rangers put a well-balanced team on the court consisting of Jim May, Weldon Curbo, Bubba Cantnesson, Phillip Stovall, and James Tull. Tull was high-point man for the Rangers—racking up seventeen points. This season's Rangers show to be a promising squad with lots of hustle, spirit, experience, and man-power. Coach Pett is doing an excellent job putting together an almost entirely new squad. With a few more days of practice the Rangers will be ready to make a much better showing against Abilene Christian College B squad here on December 3.

Moral Case

5 p.m. Tuesday in Abilene after a U. S. District Court jury found her guilty on a white slavery charge.

The jury of 10 men and two women deliberated about 40 minutes. The trial got underway at 9:30 a.m. Testimony was completed by 4 p.m.

Mrs. Hagler was accused of transporting Mrs. Francis Louise Blackmon, 20, of Venice, Calif., in interstate commerce from Ranger to Sheffield, Ala., on March 23 for the purposes of prostitution.

Mrs. Blackmon, first witness called in the case, testified that she was forced into prostitution by the Ranger woman through fear of losing her two small children.

She said that she first met Mrs. Hagler last February in Venice, Calif. Mrs. Hagler, accompanied by her small son, took a room at the same apartment house where she lived, she said.

They became friendly, she said. Mrs. Blackmon said she confided in Mrs. Hagler that her one ambition was to become a waitress.

Mrs. Blackmon said Mrs. Hagler persuaded her to accompany her back to Ranger, where Mrs. Hagler promised she could get her a job as a waitress.

The California woman agreed. The two women and their three children arrived in Ranger March 20 and stayed at the home of Christine O'Shields. Mrs. O'Shields, who now lives in Andrews, was the sister of Mrs. Hagler's husband.

On the night of March 22 Mrs. Blackmon said she and Mrs. Hagler went to a "beer joint" in Mingus where they met two men. She

The following day Mrs. Blackmon said she and Mrs. Hagler left Ranger with the two men for Sheffield, Ala. On their arrival they checked into the Sheffield Hotel, she said.

It was then, Mrs. Blackmon said, that the Ranger woman threatened if she did not do as told, she (Mrs. Hagler) would "go to the authorities" and have Mrs. Blackmon's two children taken away from her.

Mrs. Blackmon said she agreed, and also consented to let Mrs. Hagler have her small daughter. She said the daughter was later adopted by a Texas family.

Correlative passages to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include the following (273:21-24): "God never ordained a material law to annul the spiritual law. If there were such a material law, it would oppose the supremacy of Spirit, God, and impure the wisdom of the creator."

The Golden Text is from Jeremiah (10:10,12): "The Lord is the true God, he is the living God, and an everlasting king . . . He hath made the earth by his power, he
