SUDAN, LAMB COUNTY, TEXAS, MARCH 2, 1928

NO. 26

To The People Of Lamb County

We wish to be understood by all the people of Lamb county. We believe that there is much involved in people thoroughly understanding each other, their motives, and what actuates them in public, private and business life. We have known many good people to fall out and become deadly enemies, to nurse and foster imaginary wrongs, which would burst into flame at the least friction, because of a lack of a mutual understanding. When we understand one another it is easy to cultivate a brotherly love, a true regard for the material interests of all, and to be able to grasp each others' hands in genuine friendship. We believe that with the proper understanding nine-tenths of the malice, hatred, ill-will and dissension would be wiped out, and we all could see ourselves as others see us.

As we wish for you we wish for ourselves, that we may now and here be understood. We wish to assure all that personally, we have not the least malice or ill-will toward a single individual in Lamb county. On the contrary, it is our earnest desire to enter each and all upon our list of friends, as we strive to show and to prove to them in our humble way that we are theirs. We want to feel, and we want you to feel, that we are worthy of your friendship, and that we can work together in unity for the common good. What we have done in the past speaks for itself. Our efforts have been for the good of the whole of Lamb county and her people, regardless of race, color or nationality. In this, surely no one can justly impugn our motives, for you, and many of you, have as much or more at stake than the Sudan News, and whatever good we may accomplish will be yours as well as ours.

Lamb county is one of the best in West Texas, and it is our sincere desire to help make it a desirable and agreeable place in which to live, for our children and the children yet to be. Not only is this desirable and commendable for our present population, but many good people from afar seeing our good works, our prosperity and genial relationship, will come and settle among us. They will buy our lands and be our neighbors and friends and add to our strength and prosperity. Surely this is worth working for, and to this end the News will always do its best. It is the function of a newspaper to represent its people and institutions at home and abroad; it is an index to the town and community; it reflects the religious and moral status, and by it, in large measure, we are judged. Its editor may not be a very brilliant writer or a shrewd business man, but if the people see that it stands for the right, for law and order, and that the people cooperate with it in this stand, they naturally conclude that it is a good place in which to live. They will sell their old sawed-off shot guns and come and make their homes within our borders.

If, on the other hand, we disregard and break down the law, and allow crime to run rampant; if we deliberately turn the cross of Christ into a whipping post, all good people will shun us as they would a pestilence. Even some of our own good people would shake the dust of Lamb county from their feet and seek other fields. There is nothing that speaks better for a town and community than due respect and support of its laws. Where this is the case you will see a thickly settled, prosperous, happy and contented people every time. We have never seen any exception to this rule.

Our country, and especially Texas, has as good laws as any country on earth, and there is no wrong or condition that they will not redress if our people will trust to them and enforce them. Some may say that the officers won't or don't do so and so. The law also makes provisions for that. If an officer fails to do his duty you can have him removed, according to law, and put a man in that will do the work. Or should he be guilty of malfeasance, nonfeasance or misfeasance in office you can impeach him and remove him from office. Nor do you have to wait until the end of his term, the law says put him out right now. All this is in the hands of the people, and all they have to do is to use it.

But don't lose sight of the fact that an officer's efficiency depends in large measure upon the cooperation of the people. If the people are disposed to condole crime and shield the criminal, then the officer is rendered practically powerless. However fearless and diligent he may be he can do little. Therefore let us abide by the law, uphold the law, enforce the law, and make Lamb county one of the banner counties of West Texas, one to which we can all point with just pride, one in which peace and prosperity reign. You can safely count on it, that if we cannot live with the law, we cannot live without it, for without law our ship would be cast into a stormy sea without anchor.

Business Men's Meeting

A meeting of the Sudan Business Men's Association will be held at the City Hall in the Sudan Drug Building tonight at 8:00 o'clock. It is earnestly urged that all business men attend as there are several matters of importance that will be brought before the body. Don't forget the time at 8 o'clock to night.

Roy Mason Died at Odell

Roy, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Mason, of Olton, died at the home of his brother Charles at Odell Sunday night, after undergoing an operation for throat trouble. Roy, with his parents, has lived in the Olton community for the past three years, coming here from Wilbarger county. Roy was a fine young man and had many friends in Lamb county who regret to hear of his untimely death, and who are in sympathy with his parents and other relatives. Funeral and burial were at his old home in Wilbarger county Tuesday afternoon.

Thriftlessness and Crime

There is no disputing the fact that crime is steadily increasing in this country. Reliable statistics bear this out. The causes are the subject of much study, but no individual or group has yet been able to offer any convincing explanation.

While lack of personal thrift cannot be suggested as a major cause of increasing criminal practices, conditions could be greatly improved if there were more widespread devotion to this modest virtue.

A general application of thrift principles in the lives of the people of this nation would mean a radical reduction in the amount of gambling, drinking, and general debauchery now current. It would mean that the money now spent with bootleggers would flow into the legitimate channels of business. It would mean that thousands who are trying to get rich over night by all sorts of clap-trap schemes, would settle down to sensible methods of saving and investing. It would mean the elimination of a thousand and one forms of immorality, waste and extravagance that now lead directly to the commission of crime.

Those who are determined to get ahead in the world, know that they cannot afford extravagant indulgences. They must save their money. They must put their time and efforts to good use. They must be careful how they spend and how they invest.

While many of our reformers are floundering about in efforts to bring about the millennium through one short cut or another, it should be borne in mind that more attention to the simple practices of thrift upon the part of the people generally would divert many a person from the pathways of right living.

There is no way under the sun that thrift can be compelled. No law could ever be passed that would make people thrifty. But great changes can be made through the patient processes of education.—Thrift Magazine.

Considered Smoking a Crime.
Sultans and priests of Turkey once considered smoking tobacco so serious a crime that in many cases torture and death was the punishment meted out to those indulging in it.

Bureau Contract Legal

The marketing agreement of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association, together with several legal features of the cooperative marketing laws, were again upheld last week by the district court of Red River county, in an important case in which judgment to the amount of $44,325.00 was rendered in favor of the Association, according to J. W. Hammock, field service representative of the organization in this country.

Mr. Hammock stated that he had just received word to the effect that the case of Lennox & Lennox vs. Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association, which had been in court since 1922, had just been decided in favor of the Association. The defendants were further ordered to turn over 1,664 bales of cotton of the 1925 crop which they were prevented from selling by reason of a previous injunction. The case has been to the Texas Supreme Court on several occasions. Mr. Hammock said, and has attracted state-wide attention for several years.

"In October 1922, Lennox & Lennox filed suit against the Association to cancel their membership and for damages for mishandling their 1921 cotton," he said. "The association filed its cross action asking for enforcement of the contract, for injunction restraining further breach thereof, as well as for liquidated damages for the years 1922, 1923 and 1924."

20,000 Capacity Hatchery

Cooper and Cox are building a new 20,000 capacity incubator, and expect to have same in operation about March 10. The new building is located west of the Hutto Chevrolet Company.

Smoking a Real "Deadly Sin."
Smoking is a real deadly sin in some countries today. It is probable that more men have died for tobacco smoking at the hands of Sikhs, Senussis and Wahabis, whose religions forbid this practice, than died under the Roman empire for professing Christianity.

Poultry Car During Week of March 12th

As stated in a previous issue of the Sudan News that we would ship a car of Capons and other poultry the first of March, we have arranged to sell during the week of March 12th, loading date to be announced next week. We are not in position at this time to state just what will be paid, but you can rest assured that it will be the best that the central markets afford for that week.

We have arranged to have a special capon and poultry expert do the grading, and in the evening at a meeting, he will explain important features in raising of capons, the condition poultry should be in when marketed, and many other things that go to make poultry raising successful. This feature of the day alone will be well worth many dollars to the producer.

Our aim is to take care of the producers who have signed up to deliver poultry to the car, and as we will have only one car at this time, it is imperative that every producer list the number of birds, hens, capons, turkeys and roosters that they will deliver to the car.

It is our aim to keep the producer posted on the time that the car will arrive, or any other car for that matter, but it is out of the question to write each of you a letter, and the best way for you to keep posted is to subscribe for the Sudan News, if you are not already receiving it. If you are getting the paper it would be appreciated by the management of this paper for you to tell your neighbor, or lend him the News, about the efforts being put forth in behalf of the producer by this paper.

There is another feature for the producers that this paper has been advocating for the past few months, and that is the purchasing of purebred, state accredited and blood-tested baby chicks. This is most important if one wants to receive the largest profit from their flocks. We figure it folly to buy purebred cockerels to place with a bunch of mongrel hens, as the cost of the cockerels would be more each year than to buy a hundred or two, or five hundred purebred chicks. And then after placing a bunch of fine cockerels with a bunch of mongrel hens you are no better off than you were to start with, as you still have a bunch that never could be called purebred. Then when hatcheries search the country for hatching eggs, they pass up your bunch of mixed chickens, and pay the producer of purebred chickens three times what you can get for your eggs on the local market. Many hatcheries contract for all the hatchable eggs from purebred flocks at $3.00 to $4.00 per hundred, according to the grade of the flock.

Many of the producers will want to know where these baby chicks can be bought, and in answer to this we may state that we have corresponded with a number of reliable hatcheries whose catalogues may be found at this office, and from which you can order the best to be found.

We are planning on getting Judge Barton, of Fort Worth, who is a licensed poultry judge, and who knows the poultry business probably better than any other man in the State of Texas, to come to Sudan and talk to the producers of this community about poultry raising. In this way we can gather information that has taken years of hard work and plenty of money to secure as Judge Barton has produced fine poultry for the past 30 years, and has judged in our largest National Shows at Chicago and New York. This will be a rare treat, and we hope that you will keep yourselves posted on the date that Judge Barton will be here.

The Universal Mills, of Fort Worth, Texas, thus commends our efforts in behalf of our producers, and we know that in turn our producers will feel duly grateful for these efforts. With continued cooperation of our producers we hope to make our community one of the best and most profitable poultry raising sections of West Texas:

Fort Worth, Texas, Feb. 28, 1928.
H. H. Weimhold, Sudan, Texas. Dear Sir:—Our Mr. Vaughan, who covers the territory in which Sudan is located, has written us that your activity in publishing your paper and the healthful way in which you are building up in your community a real poultry property. He especially calls our attention to the fact that last year when turkeys were being sold at 23 and 25c you obligated yourself for the Sudan farmers with a Kansas City house to get them 30c. We are mighty glad indeed to pass on our recommendation for an interest of this kind. It is really worth while and shows an unselfish spirit that is wonderful in any community, and wholly tending to knit the community together in a way that really brings out the cooperative spirit.

If there is any way in which we can materially assist you in putting over some of your ideas in your community we will be mighty glad to do so. Call on our Service Department and they will be mighty glad indeed to assist in any way possible.

We are asking our advertising agency to send you an advertising for your paper commenting on the establishment of our account in your town.

Yours very truly,
Universal Mills.

Idle Island

By ETHEL HUESTON

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Gay Delane, successful New York artist, seeks rest at Idle Island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administrator." Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Auntalmiry," who consents to move to another abode, the "Apple Tree." On an exploration of the island Gay, standing on the seashore, is horrified by the appearance of the drifting body of a drowned man, which she nervously herself to bring to the shore. A bullet wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay makes her way to the "Captain" with the story. Returning with him to the shore, they find no body there, and Gay's story of the incident is set down to an attack of "nerves." Gay, unable to convince her neighbors of the truth, draws a picture of the face of the dead man, intending to send it to the authorities. She meets a stranger, to whom she tells the story and shows the picture. He asks her to let him take it, but Gay refuses. Next day Gay finds the picture has been taken from the cottage. "Rand" Wallace, wanderer, and considered something of a "black sheep" by the islanders, surprises Gay at household tasks. Gay's acquaintance with Rand ripens into affection. Rand leaves the island on business. Gay determines to stay for the winter.

"Didn't he ever come back?"
 "He died, dearie. Died away. But I had Buddy then. But Buddy went, too. Could I have a little more sugar, dearie?"
 That was all. They talked of other things. Auntalmiry's gentle interest was just as it had always been, her easy amiability, but after that flush of feverish hope she seemed pale and worn with her age.

The next day Rand came, and they two, Gay and Rand, drifted into a routine of joyous companionship and love. Frankly and trustfully they professed full sympathy and understanding in each other's whims. Gay joyed to be in love, but brooked no thought of marriage, demanding freedom, she said, freedom for work. Rand, too, admitted satisfaction in the arrangement, craving freedom from the very thing that she desired, freedom for freedom's sake, he called it.

If sometimes Gay wondered if love built on foundation so slight could long endure, she hushed her doubts. She was very happy, and she dreamed of long years of this same happiness for both, freedom for each for the things that each desired. She would come to him, he would come to her, they would summer together in this cool and lovely place.

September drew swiftly, goldenly toward its close. September is the death of summer in the northland. The hotels on the island were already closed for the season, the summer shops locked into their storm wind-down, the shore cottages deserted. Still Gay lingered. Between herself and Rand had been no suggestion of parting, no hint that the season was over, the time of separation at hand. The island was lovely in September, lovely and peaceful and willing. Gay would not let herself think of leaving.

She sat alone in her window-seat one afternoon and watched the sunset as it faded swiftly and darkness crept over the land. An hour passed, two hours. The dusk had deepened to night. And then, with one of her impulsive changes, she sprang to her feet, wanting brightness, wanting light. With her hand outstretched to press the button, she stopped suddenly motionless, holding her breath.

Pressed hard against her window on the eastern side, the side of the forest, she saw it again, that face of yellow parchment with the seamed scar beneath the slanting eyes. As she looked it faded away into the darkness from which it had come.

With its disappearance came sudden activity, flaming anger.

She ran to the window and flung it wide.

"Hello," she called. "Hello there!" There was no answer to her call, but, staring intently, she saw among the shadows of the wood one shadow that moved silently farther into the recesses of the forest, and merged at last into black. She closed the window thoughtfully, locked it and lowered the blinds.

Gay had a pistol, a handsome monogrammed one, which it was her pleasant conceit to keep loaded, well conditioned, ready for emergency use in the drawer of her desk near at hand. She had bought it during that memorable year abroad on one of her venturesome visits to London pawn shops, and with a sort of boyish vanity had carried it with her ever since. But it is indicative of the absolute confidence of her nature that in an emergency she always entirely forgot the weapon, reverting to the more feminine defense of screaming, calling or locking doors.

When she saw the yellow face at her window she did not so much as think of the boasted pistol, which she affectionately dubbed the "Baby, until she was safe behind the lowered blinds. Then she opened the drawer and looked at it.

"You're a useless old thing," she said impatiently. "Why don't you go off when there is some occasion for you, and scare the Peeping Toms?"

Expecting Rand, who came at his own caprice and kept her alert with expectation, she was not startled when, an hour later, there was a light knock at her door. It was past nine o'clock, but as his hours always suited his convenience, she only smiled tolerantly at his tardiness as she opened the door. But when she saw in the shadow, not Rand, but Ronald Ingram, she was startled into a little frightened cry, for which she quickly apologized with friendly laughter.

"Oh, you startled me. I—I was expecting some one else. Do come in. I am glad to see you again."

"What luck to find you?" Ronald Ingram said with a warmth there was no mistaking. "I had no idea you would still be here. You are rather outstaying the summer, are you not?"

"Well—yes—a little, perhaps. But I was—quite ill, and I need—oh, a great deal of rest." Her face flushed with her feverish explanations, and Ronald Ingram studied her keenly.

"So many of the summer people have gone," he said slowly. "I should think you would be afraid to stay on alone. Especially after your experiences here. Was it in this room you saw the light—that night after you found the body in the cove?"

"Yes. In that window, right there." "And the hand? Are you sure of that hand? Stretched out—"

"Of course I am sure. And when I came up in the morning, the sketch was gone. It was here, in this drawer." She lightly pulled out the drawer of the desk. Her pistol, businesslike, important, lay in full sight.

"It was here. And the next morning it was gone. Doors locked, windows barred, just as I left them. But the sketch was gone. So I knew the poor dear wished to be left in peace and undisturbed."

"By George, you make my hair stand on end. And after all that, you stay on here, alone, unprotected—"

"Oh, he was a gentle spirit. He would not harm me."

He smiled and dropped the subject. He said he had come to Portland on business, and had come to the island with only a faint hope that he might find her, or, failing to find her, to get her address in the city. He said he could not bear to drop the little acquaintance, which to him had proved so sweetly charming.

Then he went quickly away, waving back to her as she stood in the lighted doorway beneath the tall pine.

Gay waited about for a while, hoping still that Rand would come. but finally she went upstairs and kicked off her slippers rather crossly. When, a little later, she heard his quick knock on the door below, and his blithe whistle above it, she caught up her slippers in her hand and ran downstairs, laughing, to let him in.

"Oh, good!" she cried. "A minute later and I'd have been in bed."

"I'd have been earlier, but—I was detained. You are all right, are you? Nothing has happened—yo' haven't seen anything unusual?"

Gay sensed an undertone of anxiety beneath the lightness of his voice.

"Why, of course I'm all right. Of course nothing has happened. Why not? Or why?"

"Well, I saw a chap hanging about in the woods near your windows, sort of spying, sneaking around. I started up to see who it was, and he ran. Of course I chased him, and the two of us have hot-footed it all over the island. He was playing with me. Got me down to the city landing and dropped me like a hot cake. You haven't—"

"Oh, that must have been the Chinaman!"

"The Chinaman!" Rand's amazement was unbounded. "The Chinaman! What under heaven—"

"Oh, I must have told you about the Chinaman," she said evasively.

"You know darned well you never have. What about him?"

"Well, come and sit down. It's a long story—You are quite sure I haven't told you?"

Rand laughed. "Quite sure, you little liar, and so are you."

"Well, you weren't here when I came in. I was so tired, and sick. I was a perfect wreck. Auntalmiry was here, and while she packed up I lay down on the couch here, and slept.

Slept! It was the sleep of death for weariness. She awakened me for dinner, and I ate, and went to sleep again. So she went away and left me sleeping—Well, it was evening. And I felt—You know how one feels things in one's sleep?—I felt eyes looking at me. I could hardly squeeze a look out beneath my lids for the weariness. But I did. And in the dusk, faint and yellow, I saw the face of a Chinaman, thin pinched features, slanting eyes and a small seared scar beneath one eye. As I looked, the face just melted backward into the darkness, so I knew it was a dream. And went to sleep again."

Rand lighted a cigarette hastily but said nothing, and Gay went on.

"Well, you know how sometimes I sit, just dreaming, as the sun sets, until it is dark—I did tonight. And I jumped up suddenly to light the lights, although it was not entirely dark, and I saw it at my window, that window—same face, the very same. So it could not have been a dream."

"When was that?"

"Oh, hours ago! Just before the final darkness."

"But it was late when I found him—about an hour ago.—In the meantime, what? Any noises? Were you afraid—"

"No, Mr. Ingram was here."

Rand flicked the ashes from his cigarette thoughtfully. "Ah, Mr. Ingram.—Mr. Ingram—I suppose you told me all about him, too. May one inquire, who is Mr. Ingram?"

"He is the man who— It was he who— It was Mr. Ingram who—"

Gay closed her lips stubbornly. She had often wished to tell him of the affair in the cove, but resentment had always forbidden the confidence. He should have asked her. She glanced at him furtively. His chin was set, and his eyes were anxious. Gay re- lented.

"Well, Rand, I suppose the family females told you—what happened in the cove?"

Rand smiled faintly, his fingers caressed her arm. Gay hardened again.

"I know they thought I was out of my head, but you surely do not believe any such nonsense."

"They thought you saw driftwood, a log or a barrel."

"How about my handkerchief? Did they think I put it on a piece of driftwood?"

"They thought— Now, remember, Gay, you did not mention the handkerchief until they reported there was no body. They thought—well, they thought you made it up to sort of carry out your story, make it hold water."

"What did you think?"

"I thought," he said tenderly, "that some time, in a moment of great confidence, my Gay would tell me about herself, and then I should know all."

Gay laughed, bent suddenly and kissed his hand. "You work me, outrageously," she said.

"And Mr. Ingram—" he prompted softly.

"Well, then.—No, the cove comes first.—The reason I like Mr. Ingram is because if he is interested in anything, he talks about it. If he wants to know anything, he asks. He doesn't think other people are crazy just because they happened to see something he didn't happen to see himself.—Like the state of Maine," she said indifferently.

"And the cove—"

"Well, then. I slid down the rocks into the cove."

"Why, Gay, why? With a whole island full of accessible shore, why slide down the worst cliff in the bay?"

"Because I thought I couldn't," she answered promptly. "Because every body said one couldn't get down.—So I did."

Rand rolled his eyes heavenward. "A woman," he said devoutly, "is heaven's greatest miracle.—She did, because she couldn't.—Go on.—Like your Mr. Ingram, I understand perfectly."

"Well, I tried to get into the clubhouse, and I couldn't. And into the boathouse, and I couldn't."

"You should have burned them to the ground.—If you couldn't get in, you should have."

Gay laughed. "Don't be silly.— Well, it was lovely in the cove, and I stood there and saw—it—coming in.— Rand, it was a man. He came in and with my two hands I pulled him up on the sand. There was a rope about one ankle, a stout rope, with one end dangling loose. He had been shot in the temple—here." She touched her brow with a slender finger.

"The blood was washed away, but the hair was clogged about it. I laid his hand upon his breast, and put my handkerchief over his face. I called for help, but of course nobody heard me. So I went for the Captain. You know what happened."

Rand was impressed. She could see that.

"It sounds very—reasonable."

"Oh, Rand! When I went back the sand was wet where the body had lain. I showed it to the Captain, and he said it had splashed there. It couldn't have splashed. It hadn't splashed anywhere else."

"And Mr. Ingram—"

Gay smiled at his persistence. "Well, I sent the captain away, I could see every line of the poor, tired, anxious face, and the long thin hand, and the drenched hair. I took my drawing pad, and drew it, line for line. I was going to send it to the police department, so they could try to trace him.—Mr. Ingram was looking for a way down to the shore, and I went up and took him back through the woods the other way. I showed him the sketch, and he was greatly interested. He wanted it. He is a newspaper man."

Character Shown in Likes and Dislikes

If you are ever in doubt as to whether an acquaintance would prove a good companion, there is one infallible sign by which you can make sure of the matter. When you talk to him notice whether he tells you first of something he likes or dislikes. If he is prone to air his dislikes you may be sure he will not prove a very cheerful companion. His mind is destructive. He is more concerned with pulling to pieces than with building up. Such a person has a tendency to shut up one's mind or put it on its guard against impulses and innovations. He has a sensitive nature that withdraws itself into its shell on the least impact of the common things about him. One will get nothing from him but grumbings and animadversions.

Too Much for Ostrich

The digestion of an ostrich is said to be about as powerful as that of a goat, yet there are some things that an ostrich cannot digest. This was proved by a recent post mortem examination of one at a zoo. The bird, it was discovered, had swallowed a can opener and this had caused its death. Among other articles found in the ostrich were two staples, a cent and a zoo attendant's hat badge.

what he likes is one who will prove a fine stimulating companion. He is ardent, curious, adventurous. He will communicate his own enthusiasms and awaken in those he meets tastes and sympathies and ideas. He is a builder, a creator, a doer. Such men of infinite likes are to be cultivated.

Books Must Have Air

Recent tests by the United States bureau of chemistry analyzing a large number of worn leather bookbindings, show that leather books need pure air and deteriorate when exposed to harmful sulphurous and acid impurities. Backs of leather books deteriorate quicker than the sides because ordinarily they are more exposed to light and impure air, the tests reveal. To prolong the life of treasured leather bindings, steps should be taken to prevent their deterioration through the absorption of atmospheric impurities, the bureau advises. Certain coatings and finishes, notably neat's foot and castor oil, are stated to be excellent for the purpose.

ASPIRIN

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain. But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Bayer Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If it says Bayer, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it is not! Headaches are dispelled by Bayer Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Bayer—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

ELLEN'S VOICE WAS DISCOVERED

(By D. J. Walsh.)

"MOTHER, she won't hear me!"

Ellen North dropped her music-roll on the kitchen table, and with shaking hands fumbled at the clasps of her long gloves.

Mrs. North set the iron back on the stove and came around to Ellen's side.

"Here, honey, I'll take them, and your hat, now." She drew the bright bobbed head to her thin shoulder, and with a gulp Ellen released the sob she had been fiercely holding back all the way home. "What did Mme. Vanecchi say, dear?" the mother asked gently.

Ellen raised her tear-wet eyes. "We didn't even see her," she answered dolefully. "She has a whole suite at the hotel, mother, and we only got as far as the reception room. There was a crowd waiting, too—reporters, I guess, and Herr Mueller with two of his prize pupils—you know, those fat Goodbinder sisters. And all the other musicians in town, it seemed to me."

"And what did you do?" her mother asked.

"Nothing—just waited. The cutest little French maid let us in, and then went on arranging loads of flowers in vases. Well, and at last a funny-looking little Italian man came out of another room—madame's secretary, they said. Mueller and Miss Newcomb both started for him, but Miss Newcomb grabbed him first. She began telling him about how she's written madame of her talented pupil, and how much we hoped she would give me an audience. Then Mueller chimed in about his talented pupils and they both talked so hard at the little man—it was funny, really!" Ellen forgot her grief for a moment and giggled weakly.

Mrs. North smiled. "Yes, and then?" she prompted.

Ellen's mirth faded. "Oh, he just put his fingers in his ears till they both ran down," she answered unsmilingly. "Then he said angrily: 'It is impossible! Madame sees no one before the concert. Madame reposes herself!' And he gave us a stiff little bow and went back in the other room and slammed the door. So we came away."

Mrs. North sighed. More even than Ellen and her teacher she had built high hopes on this enterprise. It was not often that a singer of Vanecchi's class came to their grimy, bustling coal town. It might be years before it happened again. And Ellen's voice was wonderful! Mrs. North knew it was simply a question of the girl's getting the right training, the right start. Kind Miss Newcomb could do little more for her, and though mother and daughter through years of rigid economy had built up a little fund, Mrs. North was painfully aware that they could afford no false moves. Just a few words from the great diva—where to go, what teacher to approach—would make all the difference between success and failure.

With an effort she pulled herself back into her accustomed cheerfulness. "Oh, well, let's not worry," she said. "You're very young yet. Let's have lunch now—I want to have plenty of time to get ready for the concert."

Ellen slipped a gingham apron over her best frock and listlessly set about laying the table. She ate little, and when the meal was ended she began gathering up the dishes. Then she set them down again and turned impulsively to her mother.

"—I just can't go, mother," she broke out with trembling lips. "Would you mind very much going without me?"

"Not go? Why, Ellen, the tickets are bought and paid for—and they cost two dollars!"

"I know," Ellen answered miserably, "but my head aches, and—well, I just don't think I could stand it!"

Her mother eyed her thoughtfully. "I expect you're a little done up, dear," she said at length. "You've practiced so hard, and then this disappointment. Of course, Ellen, stay home and rest if you'd rather."

Ellen squeezed her mother's hand. "You always understand," she said gratefully. "You run along and tell me all about it. I know I'm silly, but I just couldn't sit through it now. I'm sorry about the tickets, though; it does seem an awful waste."

"Well," Mrs. North paused on her way to the bedroom. "If you're sure you won't go, Ellen, I thought I might ask Mrs. Giolotti, next door—she'd love it, I know."

"Oh, mother, that Wop!" Ellen's lip curled protestingly. "She'll go in a purple-banded taffeta and a pink satin hat—you don't want to be seen out with her!"

Mrs. North's rare frown showed itself. "I don't like to hear you talk that way, daughter," she said reprovingly. Mrs. Giolotti has old country ways. I know, but she is the kindest soul alive. And like all Italians, she knows and loves good music—it will be a real pleasure to have her with me."

Ellen bent to kiss her mother. "I'm sorry," she said contritely. "I know I'm hateful today—I didn't mean it. I'll go ask her, shall I, while you dress?"

Mrs. Giolotti joyfully surrendered her wash tubs to the eldest of her numerous bright-eyed brood, and hastened to array herself in the flamboyant finery her soul loved.

When the two strangely contrasting figures had disappeared down the street, Ellen turned desolately to the empty flat. She could not practice, she did not feel like sewing or reading—there was nothing in the world worth doing. At last in desperation, she pulled on her hat.

For hours she walked. On she went and on, till by and by she found some of the ache had gone out of her heart. It was not as though madame had heard her and condemned her voice—there would have been real tragedy! She still had her hope, her faith in herself, her spirits rose steadily and she even hummed a little to herself as she turned homeward.

Dusk was falling as she entered her street, but to her surprise the flat was still unlighted. She let herself in, wondering what could be keeping her mother so late. Then she saw Mrs. North's hat and gloves on the bed and with them a hastily scribbled note: "Mrs. Giolotti has asked us to dinner. Come on over."

Ellen wandered into the kitchen, where a window on the narrow court gave an excellent view of their neighbor's kitchen. Yes, her mother was there. And Mrs. Giolotti and a strange Italian woman—an immense creature in one of Mrs. Giolotti's vivid plaid bungalow aprons. She stood and stirred an immense iron pot on the stove, from which rose a cloud of steam and a pungent aroma of tomatoes and peppers and garlic. Her black eyes flashed, her white teeth gleamed and she talked incessantly with shrieks of laughter. Mrs. Giolotti was talking and shrieking, too, and Mrs. North stood by the table cutting rye bread and smiling, with an occasional word when she could make herself heard. Small Giolotti rioted about underfoot.

Ellen turned restlessly away from the window. She did not want to join the merry, noisy group. In spite of her brave resolutions, a little ache of disappointment still throbbled at her heart. She went slowly into the shabby living room and switched on the shaded lamp by the piano.

Her mother had restored to the music rack the showy aria she had rehearsed to impress madame. Impulsively she buried it deep beneath a pile of music. Some day she might be able to bear the sight of it again—not now. Words from an old song drifted into her mind. "It may be for years and it may be forever; then why art thou silent, thou voice of my heart?"

Her fingers, resting idly on the keys, wandered into the melody. "Kathleen Mauvournen." Softly, absently the golden voice took it up and in a moment Ellen was singing again, her own woes forgotten. That was the blessed thing about her gift. Always when she sang the everyday world fell away and she floated in a realm of beauty and harmony all her own.

Exquisitely, tenderly the heart-stirring old ballad sighed to its close. Then as her hands dropped from the keys every light in the room flashed up and from the doorway came a patter of hands and a chorus of "Bravas!"

Blinking, Ellen swung about on the piano stool. The room was full of Giolottis, big and little. Papa Giolotti was wiping his eyes on a crimson bandana and the smallest Giolotti of all was smiting his fat fists together from the shelter of his beaming mother's arms. Before the amazed Ellen could speak a huge bulk in plaid gingham darted toward her, scattering the group right and left. Ellen felt herself engulfed in an embrace of kisses and passionate Italian ejaculations of which she could make nothing.

When the strange woman released her at last Ellen looked up to meet her mother's smiling eyes. "It is Mme. Vanecchi, dear, and she likes your voice," she explained, trying hard to appear calm and matter of fact.

The plaid lady nodded vigorously. "Si, si, little one, I like-a heem!" she proclaimed. "It is I, Rosa Vanecchi, who say it to you—we shall make-a from you the great artist—like-a me!" And she smote her broad chest resoundingly.

Ellen turned beseechingly toward her mother. "But how—I don't understand," she faltered.

"Why, you see," Mrs. North began, "Mme. Vanecchi and the Giolottis come from the same village—their families were neighbors years ago. Mrs. Giolotti did not know who she was till the concert—she recognized her old playmate then. Afterward we went around to madame's dressing room—"

"And she say, Rose, come home with me—we make da spaghet!" interrupted the distinguished visitor excitedly. "Ah, da spaghet!" she rolled her magnificent eyes heavenward. "Where do I find heem in deesa crotree? Deese hotel, he have ice water, shower bath, jazz music everything I do not want they give-a me, but da spaghet they know not! So when my little Tessa here say come, we eat, I laugh, I rejoice, I come quick!"

Here Mrs. Giolotti gave a sudden blood-curdling shriek. "The pot!" she cried wildly. "We forget—we let him burn. Oh, beautiful heavens!" she scurried screaming into her own flat.

Madame drew Ellen along with a massive arm across her shoulders. "Presently we talk of the treasure-voice, and what you must do to become the great artist. But now—" She gave her deep, full-throated laugh. "Now we have other things to think about. Come, now, my little one—come and help Rosa Vanecchi eat da spaghet."

Proving That Truth Has Fiction Beaten

Amy Lowell was, as all the world knows, devoted to Keats. She believed herself spiritually attuned to him.

"I shall never forget the last time I visited at her home near Boston," says Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach in "Books and Bidders." "After a delightful dinner we went into her library, where we lighted our cigars and talked."

"Suddenly she leaned toward me and, with an excited brightness in her eyes, said:

"Doctor, there is a certain book I want more than anything else in the world! Keats' own copy of Shakespeare, with his notes through it."

"I put my hand in my pocket and smiled. By one of those unusual chances which really do make truth stranger than fiction I had that very volume in my pocket. She caught her breath and grew pale with joy as I handed it to her."

The Overactor

Louis Marshall, the New York lawyer who represents the theater ticket agencies, was criticizing a young actor.

"This young fellow," he said, "over-acts. I'd like to tell him the anecdote about Doctor Johnson. It would do him good."

"Doctor Johnson was finding fault one day with the acting of his friend, David Garrick, in the ghost scene of 'Hamlet.' He ridiculed Garrick's over-acting, and when he finished Boswell said:

"But that famous start! Wouldn't you, sir, start just as Mr. Garrick does, if you saw a ghost?"

"I hope not," said Johnson. "If I did, I should frighten the ghost."

Cat Finds Only Bridge

How Bonzo, a black cat belonging to Bert Pierson of Hertz, England, found his way back home, is puzzling his owner. Pierson moved recently from Sheerness, on the Isle of Sheppey, to Hertz. The only means of access to the Isle of Sheppey is by way of the King's Ferry bridge. The cat found the crossing and traveled the 80 miles back to the old home, where he remained until found.

The Greater Man

Somewhere in Belleville, N. J. there are two extremely fortunate men. Each of these men has an extremely fortunate son, and the family of each man is, we feel sure a mighty happy one.

We don't know the names of any of these people, and we have never been in Belleville. But here's what leads us to make the statement written above:

schoolboys were asked: "Who would you like to be?" More than half of the boys, 363, to be exact—answered—naturally enough—"Lindbergh." President Coolidge, Edison and Henry Ford were grouped pretty closely in the next position.

And away down at the bottom of the list were to votes cast for "Dad."

Which, we repeat, makes us confident there are two extremely fortunate men, with fortunate sons and happy families in Belleville.

The percentage of boys who are able to make their fathers their chief idols is probably about what that poll would indicate—two in 628. The average man, if he is any sort of man, can win the affection of his son, to be sure; and there is nothing much more soul filling and heart warming than the love of a boy for his dad. But generally the son doesn't idolize his dad—not after he passes infancy. He may brag to a chum "My dad can lick your dad," but deep down in his heart he knows perfectly well that dad would stand precious little show in a real, knock down fight. Living in close intimacy of the home the son realizes that dad has his faults. He accepts them, his eyes to some of them, gives his love and his loyalty; but when his school teacher asks him what man, of all living Americans, he would most like to be, he answers "Lindbergh" or "President Coolidge" and forgets all about dad.

It is a wonderful thing to have a son at all. Merely to be a father is a great privilege. To feel your son's love and regard is a greater one.

But blessed beyond all men is he whose son puts him on the very highest of boyhood's pedestals—above Lindbergh. Blessed also, is the son who has a father to whom he can look up in that way. The home that houses such a son and father is sure to be a happy one.---Levellaand Herald.

The Man Inside

"The smartest man in the world is the Man inside. By the Man inside I mean that other Man within each one of us that does most of the things we give ourselves credit for doing.

"I say he is the smartest man in the world. I know he is infinitely more clever and resourceful than I am or than any other man is that I ever heard of. When I cut my finger it is he that calls up the little phagocytes to come and kill the septic germs that might get into the wound and cause blood poisoning. It is he that coagulates the blood, stops the gash, and weaves the new skin.

"I could not do that. I do not even know how he does it. He even does it for babies that know nothing at all; in fact does it better for them than for me.

"When I practice on the piano I am simply getting the business of piano playing over from my conscious mind to my subconscious mind; in other words, I am handing the business over to the Man Inside.

"Most of our happiness, as well as our struggles and misery, comes from this Man Inside. If we train him in ways of contentment, adjustment and decision, he will go ahead of us like a well-trained servant and do for us easily most of the difficult tasks we have to perform."—Dr. Frank Crane.

Gliders of Early Times.

Short glides in the air were made as early as the reign of King Harold of England by a monk named Eilmer, who, after several successful flights, jumped from a lofty tower with wings strapped to his body. He glided for a furlong or more, when, striking a cross air current, or "air pocket," he fell to the ground, breaking both legs. He attributed the accident to his neglect "to fit on a tail."

At the time of baby's arrival all is paid so that the family exchequer is not overtaxed all at once.

The Difference.

The rector of a fashionable London church was induced to preach at a well-known prison. When in the vestry he said to the prison chaplain: "Now I have come, I don't know what to say to your convicts." The chaplain replied: "Preach to them exactly as you do to your own congregation; and remember only one thing: my people have been found out and yours have not—yet."

Panhandle-Plains

Dairy Show

Lubbock, Texas, Feb.—With only six weeks left until the first Panhandle Plains Dairy Show, D. F. Eaton, Lubbock County Agricultural Agent, president of the dairy show association, is sending out an appeal to over 2,900 citizens of the section to cooperate in making the first show which will be held at Plainview, April 3, 4, 5, and 6, a big success.

The association was first discussed at a meeting at Tullia, Nov. 19 and later formed at Tullia Dec. 16 was organized to foster an annual dairy show to promote the dairy industry on the Plains and to advertise the quality of the Plains dairy cattle to outside buyers.

Eaton is calling a meeting of directors, for March 3 to be held at Plainview. He hopes to have not only the directors from each of the 54 Panhandle Plains counties present at the meeting but hopes to have a number of interested citizens accompany the directors to take up at the meeting.

The section that is expected to join in the association forms a square with corners at Lipscomb, Dallam, Andrews, and Nolan counties. Each county is allowed one director on the board and Eaton is writing a number of Chambers of Commerce secretaries, county agents and others in counties where no directors have been appointed urging that they appoint a director, get him to agree to attend the meeting at Plainview, March 3 and to notify Bob Anglin, Tullia, secretary of the association the name of the director.

The executive committee of the association has already worked out a number of details for the first show. The catalog is going to press in the near future and is expected to be off the press and ready for distribution by the time of the directors' meeting at Plainview, March 3.

W. L. Strangel, Lubbock, has been appointed manager of the first show and is working with Maury Hopkins, secretary of the Plainview Chamber of Commerce to get everything in readiness.

The first show will have a premium list amounting to over $4,000.00 and will include classes for pure breed Jersey, Holstein, Guernseys, and Ayrshires, a class for grade cattle, and a milking or production contest.

Baileyboro News

The indications are that we are to have rain soon. It has been raining some here today. A good rain or snow would be greatly appreciated by our farmers. Quite a few have been putting up land the past week, but of course there are some that always wait until the eleventh hour to begin anything.

Mr. J. W. Bayless has purchased him a Fordson and is turning the soil in a hurry.

Mr. Stringer, our energetic principal, spent the week end with his wife and children at Demitt, Texas.

Bro. Booth filled his regular appointment at Baileyboro Saturday and Sunday.

T. W. Coffman has two children that have been quite sick for a few eays.

Little Miss Flora May Lee visited Miss Bonnie Pearl Davis last Sunday.

R. Hargrove was a Sudan visitor one day this week.

Mr. and Mrs. H T. Davis and family were visitors to Sudan last Saturday and while there took in the matinee.

The young people enjoyed a song feast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Sterling's one night last week.

Mrs. W. B. Lee has been quite sick with flu for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Bayless from Ralls, Texas, visited in the homes of J. W. Bayless and Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Lee last week.

Since our last write up we have been visited by a real snow storm. We think at least a 2-inch snow fell here. Farmers are wearing a real smile.

The Crone girls, Misses Ruth and Edna, and their brother attended singing at Morton recently and report some real firstclass singing there.

Chas. Crone and Miss Effie Garth were visitors of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Bayless last Sunday.

We wish to report the arrival of a son at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hall recently. Mother and babe are doing well.

Mr. and Mrs. Crone, of Baileyboro, are the proud parents of a 10-pound girl. Mother and baby doing fine at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Coffman visited their daughter Mrs. J. D. Bayless, last Sunday.

Available Gabriel's Call.

What has become of the man who always wanted to die "with his boots on?" He has a son who now expires peacefully in bed sans tonsils, appendix, a tumor or two, and with a silver plate in his knee joint. Times have changed since the pioneer days of America—worse luck!

Progress.

At every crossing on the road that leads to the future, each progressive spirit is opposed by a thousand men appointed to guard the past. Let us have no fear lest the fairest towers of our days be sufficiently defended. The least that the most trained among us can do is not to add to the immense dead weight which nature drags along.

Among the natives of South Africa there is a general belief in the split soul. One tribe believes in three souls—one in the head, another in the stomach, and a third in the big toe.

Suicide.

Invention is the most interesting ramification of the human intellect—and sometimes the most startling. There is hardly anything that has not received the attention and midnight oil of inventors. In London an old inventor, George Stevens, is found dead—killed by his latest apparatus, a machine for committing suicide painlessly and scientifically. It worked all right. But did you ever hear of a stranger inventive quest?

Some Hope.

The superintendent of the Sunday school was bubbling over with enthusiasm at the regular attendance of his pupils. "Dear children," he announced, "now today out of the whole school only one of us is absent—little Maggie. Let us hope that she is ill."

Only Centenarian Bride.

The only centenarian bride of which actual record exists was Margaret Subburie, who was one hundred years old at the time of her marriage to Thomas Belland, on November 20, 1059, in the town of Claypole, England.

Objects to Being Listed as Dead

Charlotte, N. C.—James W. Pegram, young Guilford county man, has proved to the satisfaction of the World War veterans and the Red Cross that he did not die while enlisted for that memorable conflict.

Pegram has been on the list of Guilford county's war dead since shortly after the armistice. His name is third from the top on one of the two bronze plates flanking the entrance of the stadium which has been erected at Greensboro in honor of the slain soldiers.

These facts didn't prevent Pegram from walking into the office of the Red Cross and explaining that the reason his parents had not applied for adjusted compensation was because he was not a dead man and could apply for himself.

December 31 was the final date on which applications for adjusted compensation could be made, and as a

Marion Crawford of the Red Cross, but that they considered it either a joke or a mistake on the part of the authorities, and had not taken the trouble to correct it.

Pegram has been employed for some years at a factory in Greensboro. He said a fellow workman told him last spring that his name was on the tablet, but Pegram thought the man was joking.

He himself helped to haul the steel reinforcement for the stadium, but he did not chance to attend the dedication exercises when the names of the World War dead were read, and did not notice the appearance of his name in the newspapers carrying the story of the dedication.

Pegram's name was placed on the war dead roll as the result of information furnished by some person whose identity is not now remembered. McDaniel Lewis compiled the list for

Wealth in Quarry

Denver, Colo.—Travertine, a rare building stone, found heretofore only in Italian quarries near Tivoli, has been discovered and is now being produced in a marketable quantity from a quarry near Salida, 75 miles south west of Denver.

J. J. Kerr, former owner of the estate upon which the stone was found recognized the material after he had made a trip to Italy to inspect the product of the Tivoli quarries. Immediately he began advancing his newly found enterprise. The quarry on his property has been in operation periodically since 1880, but the product has been used only for its lime deposit. A local storage building was the first to be constructed with it. Shortly after its completion, however, Kerr died.

His estate was bought by Eastern capitalists who began marketing the stone on a nation-wide scale. Several of the leading buildings on both coasts, as well as through the Middle West, have been built with the Colorado product.

According to an official of the producing company, the deposit, composed of crystallized lime or marble coming from hot springs carrying lime solution, is sufficient to last 200 years.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Plants' Digestive Functions

The green coloring matter of plants called chlorophyll acts much the same as the gastric juice on the food we eat. Digesting the carbonic acid absorbed by the leaves of the plant, it separates the oxygen from the carbon, throws off the oxygen, and the carbon, which, mixed with water, forms the starch so necessary to plant life.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

THE BUSINESS OF GETTING WELL

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I HAVE not had much personal experience with illness. I have had too busy a life to "enjoy poor health." If I have not felt well at times I have said very little about it, have gone about my affairs, and the trouble has cured itself. Not that I want to give the impression that I do not believe in illness—there are active germs in the world ready to pounce down and conquer the susceptible. I know, and glands and organs and curious appendages in this complex body of ours which are sure to get out of order. I have just been lucky. The germs have looked me over, have shaken their heads and passed on to a more savory victim.

I have not often consulted a physician. Occasionally I have submitted myself to his hands to be thumped and tested and examined to see that everything was working as it should. I am told that 95 per cent or at least some high percentage of people who are ill would get well whether they consult a doctor or not. Of course, they would suffer longer and more severely, but they would finally come around.

I had a slight injury to one of my joints a few months ago which did not yield readily to treatment, but rather grew worse. I had the most expert advice on the matter that I could get and followed it. It was the advice of sympathetic and wholly unselfish friends which interested me most. I had never before suspected how many people had been in the same situation as I now found myself, and in what various and curious ways they had found relief.

"It's rheumatism that's the matter with you," Bland said to me. "We all get it as we grow older. Now I had the same thing. What you need is massage, and then soak a red flannel cloth in turpentine and bind it about the joint and you'll be all right in no time. Now try it; it's simple, but effective."

"There's a man over in Ohio who will fix you up," Grogan suggested. "A wonderful man! He isn't a doctor, but the way he can straighten out troubles like yours is amazing. You ought to see him."

"What you need," Blake said to me —he had heard about my trouble and came a long way to see me—"is an osteopath. You know they may not be regular doctors, but they do know all about bones and joints and things. I was in an awful fix with my knee—worse than you are—and I just went to an osteopath. You don't need to tell anyone who's treating you."

"It's your tonsils," the next friend suggested. "You'll have to have your tonsils out," and the next one thought it was probably my teeth or gallstones, or a bad digestion which was at the root of the matter. All sorts of lotions and medicaments and appliances were suggested to me, no two alike, and no two persons giving the same advice.

It is a complicated business, this business of getting well, and one which every other man knows far better than you do yourself.

AMERICA'S FIRST LADY

This new photograph of Mrs. Calvin Coolidge is one of the few profile views which she has approved and permitted to be given to the press.

Brunettes Score First

New York.—The love of blonds and brunettes is under scientific comparison. Preliminary tests have indicated to Dr. William M. Marston, professor of psychology at Columbia, that brunettes are more responsive.

Father Sage Says:

The average married man attributes his successes to himself and his failures to his wife.

After a blade in the center of a new implement is used to cut a ring of rind from around an orange its spoon-shaped end is used to remove the remainder of the rind.

"Yanks" in France

Paris.—Though college yells are missing and university grid teams unknown, American students are flocking to France by the thousands to round out their education, statistics revealed by the American University union in Paris show.

Exactly 5,870 Yankee students are enrolled in French universities, and the vast majority are working in the arts or the liberal arts, the report divulges.

The University of Paris, of course, leads all other institutions, with 1,069 Americans enrolled. Of this number 1,031 are in the school of letters, 742 taking the special course de civilisation, which was specially designed by the rector of the university to give the American student a general and broad view of European and especially French culture.

Forty-eight are in the Sorbonne preparatory school and the other 241 are scattered through the other departments of the Sorbonne. Sixteen Americans are law students in France's greatest law school, sixteen in the medical college, and six in the science college.

COCOA ERMINE COAT

An attractive coat for both afternoon and evening wear is worn by Helen Costello, Warner Bros. star. It is made of cocoa ermine and trimmed with white ermine, and fits loosely enough so that it can be worn comfortably over a bouffant dress. With it is worn a smart evening hat of green georgette and a green georgette scarf.

show-capped Alps, attracts 80 Americans to the University of Grenoble, with 263 more attending the summer school there. Several hundred other students are scattered about such provincial cities as Poitiers, Tour, Dijon, Toulouse, Nancy, Bordeaux, Rennes and Lyons, this number preferring student life in the provinces, where they have greater opportunity to come directly in touch with French people and where their progress in the language is accordingly more rapid.

The Alliance Francaise, a school devoted exclusively to instruction of foreigners in the French language, has more Americans than all other nationalities put together. Seven hundred and fifty-six are enrolled there.

Life's Span Grows

Newark, N. J.—In the animal kingdom, the biological engineers have it the span of life usually is seven times the period of growth. For instance, the life of a horse is 28 years, seven times the period of growth, and the span of the chicken, 49 months, figures out the same way.

Man matures in 21 years, and seven times that is just short of 150. We should live that long, but don't. Why? Disense, explained Dr. Roy Schaffer, a lecturer, before the Woman's club of Glen Ridge.

"If you go back in history, we find that the average life of the Romans was 18 years. This meant some neglect from the time of birth to death. The average life in America in 1890 was 32 years, in 1900, 45 years, and 57½ years in 1926. In a little more than a century we have almost doubled the expectation of life by taking proper care of our children," he said.

"New York doctors have determined to eradicate diphtheria by 1930, and you can help to do this by using the Schick and other tests. Take an interest in the reports from your school medical inspectors; analyze them and do not pass snap judgment on them.

Rat Killing Profession of Two College Girls

New York.—Overcoming the feminine aversion to rodents, two college girls, Miss Helen Caldwell, graduate of the University of West Virginia and Miss Evelyn Wagar, graduate of the University of Minnesota, have adopted rat killing as a profession.

"We have already exterminated rats in important cities in 39 of the United States, two provinces in Canada, Hawaii, Alaska and many Mexican border cities," Miss Caldwell said. "As we travel in our own automobile we have had much sightseeing and pleasure as well as profit out of our profession, and we can recommend it to other college girls."

Miss Caldwell got her original idea from a community rat drive in Virginia, during which she learned the use of barium carbonate, the most effective rat poison known, from her study of chemistry in college.

Pay Honor to Cheesemaker

Farmers and dairymen of Wisconsin have honored the memory of Henry Krumrey, cheesemaker and dairymen of Sheboygan county, founder and long president of the Wisconsin Cheese Producers' association, and who launched the co-operative cheese marketing movement in the Badger state. The bronze tablet on a granite bowlder, shown above, has been dedicated at Plymouth, Wis., and another like it was placed on the campus of the University of Wisconsin.

Gosh!

New York.—Love is so blind it can't see traffic lights. This was Lucille Grogan's explanation in court for falling to stop her car. "The most wonderful man in the world had just asked me to marry him and I was in clouds of dreams," Lucille was fined $3.

A device has been invented by which gas engines are cooled by steam instead of water or air. The inventor believes the new cooling method will be especially important in the construction of airplane engines.

COMMON DEFECTS IN DRESS FITTING

Wrongly Cut Shoulder Seam May Cause Wrinkle.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)
A shoulder seam incorrectly cut or located will throw a dress entirely out of position. It may cause the garment to draw or wrinkle in various places, or to poke out in front or back at the hem line, or to stand away at the neck, or to droop off the shoulders or pull across the back. Clothing specialists of the bureau of home economics tell how to remedy such defects if they occur.
To begin with, they need occur but once if you work with a foundation pattern made of gingham or some other firm cotton material. When the foundation pattern has been cut and properly fitted, all future garments made according to it will fit. In the following notes it is assumed that the suggested alterations will be made on the foundation pattern, not on the dress material.
Make the shoulder seam on the back section one-half inch longer than the front section, and ease this extra width into the seam. This is intended to give room for the shoulder blades and is partially necessary in the case of a slightly round-shouldered figure. The shoulder of the garment should be wide enough for the set-in sleeve to take the position indicated by the dotted line in the illustration. If it is too broad the shoulder will have a drooped appearance as in the second picture.

Sometimes diagonal wrinkles develop from the neck end of the shoulder seam to the armhole. These are due to shoulders more sloping than those for which the pattern was made. The seam may be let out at the neck and gradually sloped toward the armhole so as not to change its size. Or it may be taken up from the armhole end and material cut out from the underarm if necessary. Care must be taken not to make the armhole too low or too wide at the underarm.
The opposite difficulty is caused by the shoulders that are unusually square. On slight figures the shoulder seam can be taken in at the neck and the neck trimmed lower if necessary. On stout figures, if the width of the seam permits, it may be let out at the armhole and sloped toward the neck, in order to give extra room for the arm.

Patterns bought by bust measure are often too large across the shoulders. If this is likely to be the case, work first with the paper pattern. Take small lengthwise darts through the center of the shoulders of both sections, then cut the foundation pattern out, and fit it. The armhole will remain correct in size and in the right position. To alter a ready-made dress with this defect, rip the shoulder seam, make a dart or group of tucks in the front shoulders, and trim out the armhole in the back.

Cook Rabbit Slowly

Large rabbits, like large chickens, often need long, slow cooking. The United States Department of Agriculture suggests that the flavor of many slowly cooked rabbit dishes is improved by first browning the pieces of rabbit in a little bacon or other fat, and then cooking them slowly either in water or in a gravy made from the same fat. Fricassee rabbit is first browned and then boiled.

FIGURES ON HOME SEWING MACHINES

Survey Showed Large Majority Using Them.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)
Out of 1,981 home makers recently surveyed by the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture in a study of present trends in home sewing, only 165 reported that they did not own a sewing machine. The women included in this study represent 32 states and the District of Columbia, both rural and urban communities, and have incomes ranging from less than $1,000 to over $5,000.

Thirteen per cent of these women who reported on sewing machines had motor-driven types, the percentage of these increasing with the size of the community and the income. Only 1 per cent of the 668 rural women and only 2 per cent of those with incomes under $1,000 have motor-power machines. Twenty-five per cent of the group living in towns of from 5,000 to 10,000 population had this up-to-date type of machine. Nearly 30 per cent of those with incomes over $5,000 who had sewing machines reported motor type.

Several questions on the use of sewing machine attachments were included in this study, but nearly 40 per cent of the 1,981 women did not answer. From those who did, it was found that the hemmer and the ruffler are used more than any other attachment. The braider was used less than either of these two or the tucker.

Copies of the complete report on present trends in home sewing may be obtained from the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Savory Pork and Veal Cakes Are Appetizing

Just a little different from other ways of serving ground meat are these appetizing cakes of veal and pork, baked in a casserole. Because of the pork in them they must be cooked until thoroughly done. The recipe is from the bureau of home economics.

- 1 pound veal, chopped green pepper
- 1 pound pork, 1 small onion, cut fine
- 1 teaspoonful salt, 1 tablespoonful butter
- 2 tablespoonfuls chopped parsley, 1 tablespoonful bacon

Wipe the meat with a damp cloth and then put it through the meat grinder, using fine knife. Cook the onion, pepper and parsley in the butter, add the salt and mix well with the meat. Form into medium-sized cakes, fold around each one a slice of bacon, and fasten with a toothpick. Sear the cakes on both sides in hot fat until golden brown, then place the balls in a casserole, cover, and cook at a low temperature from one-half to three-fourths of an hour (because of the pork in these cakes, they must be cooked until thoroughly done.)

Make a gravy with 4 tablespoonfuls of fat, and 4 tablespoonfuls of flour. Cook until brown, then add 2 teaspoonfuls of minced onion and 2 cupfuls of cold water. Stir until thickened. Pour over the meat cakes in the casserole and serve. No extra salt is needed because of the bacon fat.

Stuffed Spare Ribs Are One of Farm Delicacies

Spare ribs are one of the delicacies of the farm butchering day. The bureau of home economics suggests an excellent way of cooking them with apple stuffing.

- 2 pounds spare ribs, in two lengths
- 1 1/2 cupfuls dry bread crumbs
- 2 tart apples, diced
- 1 onion, sliced
- 1 teaspoonful salt
- 2 teaspoonfuls butter
- 1 teaspoonful chopped parsley

Select well-padded ribs, wipe them with a damp cloth. Spread one length of the ribs out flat, sprinkle with salt and a small amount of pepper. Brown the onion and parsley in the butter, then add the other ingredients and mix well. Place this mixture over the ribs, cover with the other length of rib taking care that the bones are directly over each other. Sew the pieces of rib together. Sprinkle the outside of both ribs with salt and lightly with flour. Cook the ribs in a hot oven until golden brown, then add a small quantity of water, cover, and continue the cooking 1 1/2 hours or until done.

Dropped Codfish Balls Are Light and Delicate

Dropped codfish balls are lighter and more delicate than those that have been molded into cakes in the hands and then fried or sauted. The bureau of home economics gives these directions for making codfish balls:

- 1 1/2 cupfuls (packed) salt codfish, shredded
- 3 cupfuls mashed potatoes seasoned with milk and butter
- 2 eggs

Shred the fish, soak it in cold water until freshened, and cook until tender. Place the fish in a double layer of cheesecloth and press out all the liquid. Mix the cooked codfish with the hot mashed potato and the well-beaten eggs. Beat until light. Drop by spoonfuls into hot fat and fry to a golden brown. Drain on paper and serve as soon as possible.

Community Building

Human Dignity Lost in Big City's Hustle

No person can live in an American city and maintain one's respect for humanity, one's belief in the dignity of man.
I defy anyone to look on the hundreds of people scurrying this way and that to their street cars, to the "L," to the subway, looking like so many swarming ants, and not lose entirely every scrap of admiration or sympathy for human kind. It offends not only a sense of mere personal dignity but of all human dignity.

Individuals seem larger on the small-town stage than on the large-city one. And human beings look more dignified when we see them as individuals—friends and neighbors—than in the mass.

A small town gives more opportunity to emphasize individuality and importance of self. Also, it gives one permanence, space and leisure. These things make for personal dignity. And seeing people, numbers of them, with a fair amount of importance, permanence, space and leisure gives to the onlooker an impression of human dignity and a consequent respect for humanity may not seem an important thing to city people. But to me it does seem important. It makes all the difference between life seeming worth while or not. For my part I want it to seem worth while. And so I prefer to live in the small town.—Emily Newell Blair in the Bookman.

Two Purposes Served in Identifying Town

In the simple, but essential, needs of commercial flying today as they have been shown by the experience of the test ship of the Shaw publications, "there is a real suggestion for every business man. Every chamber of commerce might well consider this need to make sure that its community has done its utmost to bring about more rapid development in flying."

"It would be an extremely simple matter," continues the story of the ship's experience in the Magazine of Business, "for the business men of every town to buy a few gallons of paint and identify their town with large block letters. The main hard roads entering the city could be used as signboards. If large roofs are not available, arrows could indicate direction to nearest large cities and give mileage. Just as our road signs do today. With such simple devices as these, cross-country flying could be immensely simplified.

"If business men all over the country will co-operate in providing these simple facilities, we shall not only have more efficient and effective commercial flying right now, but shall see more rapid developments in the airplane itself."

Care in Foundation Vital

Since dependence of the house on its foundation extends to every phase of its endurance through the years, and to the trouble-free pleasure in occupancy, the new home builder does well who looks carefully into the construction of that foundation. Any compromise with quality here will result in failure involving the entire structural frame of the home and even to wall decorations, since a settling house invariably cracks its plaster.

It involves also the peace of mind of the owner, for repairs caused by improperly constructed foundations are uniformly pretty costly.

Newspaper's Creed

A newspaper, whose aim is to serve the community, and whose purpose is to disseminate the news of the community and section from which it derives its patronage must of necessity express views and advocate measures to which some of its readers are opposed. But our views are held and expressed in good faith. We take no position on any subject because some one else entertains an opposite view. But in all matters affecting the community interest our aim is to advocate the measures which will mean the greatest good to the greatest number.—Andalusia (Ala.) Star.

Beautify the Home

One of the prettiest sights in some countries is the individualistic roof of a house as it appears in the distance. Perhaps it is centuries old. Looking down at such houses from a hilltop is to experience thrills of emotion that bind the past with the present.
We have in this country every reason to beautify our homes—outside and inside. It is both a family and a community duty. If it turns out to be a hobby, well, it will be a pleasing one.

Rules of the Road

The Alabama state highway department has assumed police duty of the highways of the state assisted by the various city and county officers in regulating traffic thereon. The rules of the road and the machinery which enforces the traffic laws will no doubt bring many a man to the sudden realization that Alabama has laws that really protect. Every citizen should inform himself of these new laws.—Lafayette (Ala.) Sun.

JESUS AND THE TWELVE

LESSON TOPIC—Mark 3:13-19; 6:7-13. GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Chooses Twelve Helpers.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Twelve Apostles and Their Work.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Call to Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Training of the Twelve.

1. The Twelve Ordained (Mark 3:13-19).

Jesus, knowing that His earthly career would be cut short, made provision for the carrying forward of His work after He was gone by calling and ordaining the twelve. Before doing this He spent a whole night in prayer (Luke 6:12). The burden of His prayer is indicated by what He immediately did. From among His disciples He chose twelve, whom He ordained for a twofold purpose.

1. "That they might be with Him" (v. 14).

Fellowship with the Lord is not only the highest privilege of a disciple but the indispensable qualification for witnessing for Him. Personal association with Jesus Christ—the interaction of personalities—the impact of His personality upon ours is the essential preparation for Christian service.

2. "That He might send them forth to preach" (vv. 14, 15).

To proclaim the good news of salvation to the lost world was the supreme mission of the disciples. Their credential for this mission was the endowment of the power of the Spirit—"To heal sickness and to cast out devils" (v. 15). Concerning those who were to be Christ's messengers observe:

(1) That twelve were ordained (v. 14). This was the beginning of the process by which the triune God was to make known His grace to the whole world, therefore He sends forth the number of men corresponding to that purpose. The number twelve is the product of the heavenly three and the earthly four indicating the purpose of the triune God to reveal Himself to the four quarters of the world.

(2) Their characteristics. (a) Men of average ability. They were not from schools and colleges, yet men of mental capacity and efficiency. This has been the history of the Christian church. Not many noble, not many wise after the flesh are called (1 Cor. 1:26). (b) Middle rank of society. They were not chosen from among the rich, neither from among paupers. The most efficient workers are those who are able to sympathize with the common people. (c) Diverse temperamental gifts. They were so grouped as to have impulse and leadership—reflection and questioning went together, and among them were found men of practical business ability.

11. The Twelve Sent Forth (Mark 6:7-13).

1. They were sent forth in pairs (v. 7).

Two reasons may be assigned for this. (1) A cheering and comforting companionship for the workers.

(2) Confirmation of testimony. In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established. People would more likely believe that which was verified by two.

2. Supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 7). He gave them power over unclean spirits. He endowed them with power to work miracles, in order to demonstrate their divine commission.

3. Their maintenance (vv. 8, 9). They were to depend wholly for their support upon the Lord who sent them. Having received the message and the power gratuitously they were to give them out in the same way (Matt. 10:9).

4. Contentment with hospitality (v. 10).

According to Matt. 10:11, inquiry was to be made upon entering a city as to a reputable place to stay. Upon being directed to such a place the missionary was to be content.

5. The responsibilities of the hearers (v. 11).

Judgment was to be pronounced upon those who rejected their message.

6. Their message and work (vv. 12, 13).

They went out and preached that men should repent. Matthew adds, "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand" (Matt. 10:7). This means that the kingdom promised to Israel was at hand, that the Messiah was present and ready to set up His kingdom. In confirmation of this message they cast out many devils, anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

God's Overflowing Love

There is such a thing as putting ourselves in the way of God's overflowing love and letting it beat upon us till the response of love to Him comes, not by struggle, not even by deliberation, but by necessity, as the echo comes when the sound strikes the rock.—Phillips Brooks.

POULTRY

KILL PESTS IN POULTRY HOUSE

How would you like to sleep in a bed with bedbugs? The hen likes no more to sleep with mites, lice, fleas, etc., than you do with bedbugs. These pests are not so prevalent in the winter as in the summer, but if they are not properly eradicated they will make it very uncomfortable for the hen in winter. The general public has the erroneous idea that these pests of the hen go into hibernation in the cracks and crevices of the buildings and never bother the birds in winter. This does take place to a small extent, but what better place does the pest want to pass the winter than the good, nice, warm, feathery body of a hen?

These pests may be destroyed by careful and vigilant methods throughout the year. The buildings must be sprayed or dusted frequently with some good insecticide. Common old whitewash is a very effective spray or wash for the poultry house if carefully applied so as to fill all cracks and crevices, as well as cover the smooth surfaces. Then, too, it is very practical to apply one of several good commercial disinfectants. All such applications should be made at intervals of three or four months if no pests are seen, but in case some are noticed, apply immediately.

Then comes the treatment of each individual bird. This may be done by either dusting or dipping, but preferably dusting, especially in winter. There are several good commercial powders for the eradication of these pests. In applying the powder hold the bird head downward with left hand, dust powder down into feathers, rub the feathers the wrong way and rub powder into skin.

Mash Used in New York Egg-Laying Contest

At the New York state egg-laying contest the following ingredients were used to make 1,005 pounds of mash:

- 200 pounds yellow corn meal $7.14
- 250 pounds wheat bran 5.00
- 100 pounds red dog flour 2.85
- 100 pounds ground rolled oats 4.15
- 100 pounds alfalfa meal 2.89
- 100 pounds dried meat scraps (50 per cent protein) 4.20
- 50 pounds dried milk 4.75
- 5 pounds salt01

This makes the cost per hundred pounds about $3.08, and in the contest the best laying pens returned a profit of more than $4 above feed cost for each pullet. At the end of the forty-ninth week the best pullet had laid 283 eggs. The scratch grain used with the above mash consisted of cracked corn.

Crop-Bound Hen

Soon after the poultry are on range watch for the laying hen which has become cropbound from eating too much dry grass. The bird will show a lack of appetite and the crop will appear bulgy. Sometimes the material can be loosened by kneading and removed through the mouth. A lot of cropbound cases die because they are not located until the bird has about starved to death through the clogging of the digestive system.

Poultry Facts

Some poultrymen use the incubator for hatching turkeys, but the turkey or chicken hen is better.

Dirt, wet and darkness breed lice, mites, mange and other parasites. And these things are drains on your profit. Cleanliness and sunlight save losses—make you money.

In extremely cold weather it is a good plan to hang a burlap in front of the chicken roosts, as it helps guard against drafts, and also raises the temperature several degrees.

A hen throws off about a teaspoonful of moisture in her breath every three hours. This means a damp house, and probably roup or chicken-pox, if the house isn't ventilated.

The hen's crop is small and the winter nights are long, consequently the heavier feeding should come near the close of the day.

Each hen should have four square feet of floor space; this can be made more possible by raising all fixtures two feet above the floor.

The ventilation problem in the poultry house is much easier to solve if the hens are given enough floor space. Three and one-half square feet of floor space should be allowed for each hen.

Sprouted oats is the handiest substitute for out-door green feed. You can sprout the oats in pails.

Hundreds of successful poultrymen are now feeding cod liver oil in the winter to their layers and feel that this is a paying practice.

If the hen must go out of her way to avoid drafts, or walk around wet places in the litter, or if her working hours are cut short by a lack of light, or if she is crowded her egg production will be lowered.

STRAWBERRY OMELET

4 eggs, 4 tablespoons water, 1/2 teaspoon salt, pepper, 1/2 teaspoon Calumet Baking Powder.
Beat yolks until thick, add rest of dry ingredients. Fold into white beaten stiff. Pour in frying pan. Cook on top of stove until brown on bottom. Place in hot oven.
Spread strawberry jam over cooked omelet and serve while hot.

Quart of Water Cleans Kidneys

Take a Little Salts If Your Back Hurts, or Bladder is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster without the burn. You feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

Lubbock, Feb.—D. F. Eaton, President of the Panhandle Plains Dairy Show Association, is a man who practices what he preaches.

Last week he sent out about a thousand letters to dairy breeders and producers, county agents, chambers of commerce, vocational agricultural teachers, home demonstration agents and others over 54 Panhandle, Plains, and Sub-Plains counties and urged that they begin making plans to cooperate in the first Dairy Show that will be held by the Association at Plainview, April 3, 4, 5, and 6, this year.

Soon after the letters were in the mails, Eaton called in a group of Lubbock county farmers who have good dairy cattle and take an interest in them. At this meeting a committee, composed of J. C. Newton, C. E. Merrell, W. H. Blackmon, Douglas Pounds, J. B. Meadow, and H. O. Petit, was appointed to canvas the county to sign up stock to be entered and to create more interest in the show.

President Eaton has called a meeting of all the directors of the association to meet at Plainview March 3 to work out final details for the show. He is hoping that each of the 54 counties in the Panhandle Plains section will be represented.

Those who attend the meeting this week will be given full details of the show, will have a chance to inspect the mammoth barn where the dairy stock will be housed during the show and will have a chance to get acquainted with the other dairy boosters who will be present.

The meeting will be held at the Plainview Chamber of Commerce Auditorium, and is being called for eleven o'clock Saturday morning.

J. H. Bradley is Out For Commissioner of Precinct Four.

J. H. (Jim) Bradley authorized this paper to announce his candidacy for County Commissioner of Precinct No. 4, in the coming Democratic primaries.

Mr. Bradley resides six miles south and four miles east of Sudan; having been in the county for the past several years, and is well known throughout the precinct and county, reputed to be a Christian gentleman, capable and well qualified to perform the duties of the office.

He states that he has had considerable experience in road building; that he has made a financial success for himself, and would if elected do his best to make Lamb county one of the best commissioners in its history.

Mr. Bradley's write up will appear in this paper at a later date.

Dangers.

Thirty-nine people in a year slip on soap in the bathtub and are injured enough to collect insurance damages. This is the record for just one company, the Aetna, which also pays damages to 505 injured in a year by tripping over rugs and 369 who fell down stairs. Sixteen golfers collected damages for being hit by golf balls and nine others for falling into bunkers. Five dancers had valid claims from colliding with other dancers.
