Advantages of Co-operative Egg Marketing In the Panhandle

If you are satisfied with the price you are getting for your eggs then you need read no fure ther on this article.

Texas today is one of the most discriminated states in the country in regard to her eggs. No standard set, no standard used of any kind.

You bring your eggs in and take whatever you are offered for them. Recently, there has Mable Shaffer, Opal Carter, Herbeen a movement in Briscoe, Motley, Floyd, Hale, Lamb and Swisher counties to overcome the conditions that now exist. This association is known as the Plain's Poultry Producers Association, with main office in Plainview. They have selected some of the best men in the different counties to act as directors.

Take California, "today the most advanced state in the United States in the production of eggs," they did this by co-operative marketing. They ship eggs The groom is a prominent farmer to New York and get more for them than the poultry raisers of New York can get. Why? Because they have created a better article and caused a demand for it. The investment on the average poultry farm in California is from four and a half dollars to five dollars per hen. Most all of their feed is shipped into the state. Another thing is the long mons is putting in new machinfreight haul to the Eastern markets. Their eggs are all graded before they are packed for shipment and they only ship graded eggs. Here is the cost to produce eggs in California: The average hen eats sixty-nine pounds of feed per year. The av erage egg production per hen is 137 eggs. Feed cost per dozen eggs, 181 cents and yet the farm income per hen was one dollar and twenty-six cents. We have here on the plains an ideal poultry country, and by co-operative marketing association as above mentioned, there is no reason why we can't receive more for your poultry than California can.

This association will market your eggs for you and can increase your income. Trucks will go over the six counties and gather the eggs, and they will be brought to Plainview where they will be graded and sold in car load lots to the eastern markets. You will be paid by the grade of eggs you produce. The way you are selling your eggs the association will pay as much for your smaller eggs as you are getting feed your birds so as to increase over Wood's Store. your egg production, they will

How Many Hours Does a Farmer Work?

The question asked in the above caption is not asked in a spirit of frivolity or for the purpose of casting any reflection upon those who toil in the field to produce the food and fiber of the Nation. It is asked for the purpose of opening a vein of thought on a subject which should be of interest to every farmer in the Southwest.

Of course we have all heard of the sixteen-hour day the farmer puts in, and also that it takes thirteen months to make a cotton crop, but that is not the answer to the question. How many hours does a farmer work profitably during a year? If every farmer could answer that question accurately and honestly for himself he would know just where he was and be able to arrange his time on a more profitable basis. If every farmer could account for his wasted hours we would be making appreciable progress toward solving the agricultural problems of the Nation without the assistance of Congress or the State Legislature.

J. A. Moore, a farmer in Dal las, connty, Texas, whose 1927 income from a 200-acre farm was in excess of $15,000, says that there should be 300 working ting around the fact that if we ily and those of our friends from ed with grit and other foreign days out of every 365, and that each day should consist of ten hours of profitable employment for every man on the farm. He has but few peaks and valleys in his distribution of labor. He is thus able to make every hour count for every man employed. He produces heavily of corn and legumes and markets his feedstuffs through livestock, finishing his animals for the market.

Getting back to our original question, let us ask again, "How many hours does a farmer work? How many hours does a one-crop cotton farmer work? Does he put in 180 ten-hour days out of Dr. Frost, Dentist, will be in the year? Is it possible for him crop, cultivating and harvesting it? IDLE ISLAND

STORY FROM THE START

On the verge of nervous collapse, due to overwork, Gay De-lane, artist, seeks rest at Idle lane, artist, seeks rest at idle island. She rents a cottage, the "Lone Pine," from an island character, the "Captain," and his sister, Alice Andover, "administrator." Gay finds the cottage is tenanted by an elderly lady, "Auntalmiry," who consents to move to another abode, the "Apple Tree." On an exploration of the Island Gay is horrified by the appearance of the drifting body of a drowned man. A bullet wound in the temple shows the wound in the temple shows the man to have been murdered. Gay returns with the "Captain," but they find no body there. Gay. being unable to convince her neighbors of the truth, draws a picture of the face of the dead man, intending to send it to the authorities. She meets a stranger to whom she tells the story and shows the picture. He asks for it, but Gay refuses. Next day the picture is missing. "Rand" Wallace, wanderer, and considered something of a "black sheep" by the islanders, surprises Gay at household tasks. Gay's ac-quaintance with Rand ripens in-to affection. Gay determines to stay for the winter. The stranger whom Gay had met the day of her discovery of the body in-troduces himself as Ronald ingram. "Auntalmiry" tells Gay of nissing for years. Rand is suspiclous of Ronald In ram, and apprehensive of some evildoing in a house known as the "Little Club," apparently unoccupied "Aunualmiry" is planning her Christmas party.

-11-"I'm sorry he chose the Lone Pine for his hibernating this afternoon. He cheated me out of a pleasant hour. Does he think best in fne top of your pine tree? I saw him perching there as if he were quite at home."

Gay laughed merrily. "No, indeed. He was putting up an aerial. He is building me a radio. No, he does not hibernate in my tree top, and I wash you had come in. You would quite

"No, I shouldn't like him .- Not him, under any circumstances .- And I do not enjoy other people's cooing; it riles me.

"We don't coo. Fancy the state of Maine cooing."

Renald Ingram reverted again moodily to talk of the land. He was not yet sure what he really wanted to do with it, he said wondered if he would not be wise to sell it outright.

"I haven't money enough to finance things on a big scale. Of course if the boom ever comes-and it ought to boom-it seems the logical summer refrigerator for New York and Boston, yes, even for Washington, 1 have two companies figuring on it. What would you think of a Chinese group, imitation bamboo stuff, pagodas and all that? I know a Chinese artist from Boston. Moy Sen. his name is. He's been up a few times, making sketches for me. Clever chap he is, for a Chink. He was here yesterday. He thinks we can swing it

Mercurially, Gay was fully in sympathy with him again. By his candor he had entirely stilled the suspi cions that Rand had stirred to life. How frankly he spoke of the Chinese artist. How natural his explanation of the little foreigner's presence. In the face of his disarming, ingenuous outspokenness, his honest admission of his financial limitations, how very petty and narrow and mean appeared the cold suspicious nature of New

He said he was obliged to return to Portland on the early boat, and Gay went with him to the door.

"You are very game, I know, but do. please, be careful. Keep yourself locked in and everybody else locked out, won't you?"

The genuineness of his solicitude touched Gay. "I will be careful," she said. "I wish you were staying all winter. You are such a pleasant interlude.

"Interlude between Cavallers." he said regretfully. "Still it is something to see you, to touch your hand. I am grateful for that, You are verysweet. You will not forget me, will

Half an hour later Rand came, and without waiting for a word from him Gay launched at once into a long and fervid defense of Ronald Ingram.

"You may be right about some things, but on Ronald Ingram you are totally wrong. He's really a nice fellow, and you will like him. Perhaps he'll let you be Chief High Priest of his Chinese pagoda.' Rand laughed at her. The next day he went to the city to look up the records of real-estate transfers. He found that the entire property of the Little club had been bought outright, for cash, by Ronald Ingram of New York city, and that all publication of the transfer had been withheld from the press at his request, presumably for business rea sons. But the date of this purchase was not within the past month, as he had explicitly stated to Gay, but nearly two years earlier, since which time the place had not been offered either for sale or rental, and all taxes had been promptly paid.

land that served so effectually to conceal it from curious eyes. Every day with his gun he tramped the woods and shore, coming often upon the old house, as if by inadvertence, sometimes trying he doors tentatively, as did all casual strollers who passed that way. But in spite of his seeming nonchalance and the lazy aimlessness of his wanderings, he was always sharply alert for signs of 'ife.

With powerful field-glasses he examined the cove from a distance, and watched every day for a cloud of smoke to tinge the blue above the woods. But all of his efforts were unavailing.

After the first few tingling, nerve facked days, Gay's excitement flagged, her interest waned and all of her sus picions rested.

"Oh, it's just a bunch of rum runners, if it's anybody at all," she as sured him, half jealous of his immersion in the mystery. "Pay attention to me. It's none of our business .-Besides, maybe he's right, after all-Ronald Ingram. Perhaps the Chink is just an artist from Boston."

But Rand would not be drawn from the pursuit. The mass of evidence was too convincing. And now that his suspicions were fully aroused. he marveled that he had never before realized how completely the Little club was adapted for secret criminal exploitation-as was the island itself for that matter, securely bedded in sanctity as it seemed.

The occupation of the summer colony continued but for a scant three months of the year, and with its going the entire northern peninsula was deserted. Except for the Lone Pine on the hilltop and the Apple Tree in the orchard below, there was no restdence within a mile of the cove, which was admirably protected, shut in snugly by high cliffs to east and west, while directly before it lay the little rock-girt dome of Punkin knob. While the cove offered a perfect landing for small boats, it lay to the west of the course taken by ships going in and out of Portland harbor.

Examining those locked doors and windows afresh, with his suspicions aroused. Rand saw clearly that it was now far mor securely shut in than it had been in former years of its desertion. Every crack and seam of the frames that covered windows and doors had been sealed from within. It was locked from chimney to solid rock foundation, as tight as a drum. Often, in wandering about, both in the woods and near the club. Rand had a feeling that he was watched. but all his efforts to discover the secret source of this were unavailing. Gay admitted that she, too, felt watched sometimes. She said it was starter again and again.

the troubled spirit of the body that had come to her in the cove.

And then, after three weeks of keeping a watch so strict that he would have sworn that nothing untoward could possibly have occurred in the island without his knowledge. it was not, after all, the result of his assiduous guard that brought result, but the idle curiosity of the Females Wallace, the thing that Rand particularly disliked and took pleasure to

"Rand," began Miss Lida timidly. as they sat at supper, "you don't know who is moving off the island. do you?"

"No," he said briefly. "Is anybody?"

"Well, a big furniture van came by this afternoon. It went up toward the point. I walked up to the end of the lane, but it was out of sight, and I don't know if it went down the back shore or up to Colony corner. But it didn't come down."

Then for the first time Rand turned around with some interest. "It didn't come down," he repeated. "It must have come down. There's nobody on the Back Shore, nor up at the Colony either. It must have gone back to town on the last ferry."

"No, it didn't. Mary Malcolm was watching for it, to ask the driver." "If I hear anything about it, I'll let you know," Rand said, with unusual kindness. Quickly he excused himself from the table and went out. At the end of the lane he paused to consider.

The Back Shore was a long open road, subject to traffic. If a strange motor van went that way, it had legit imate business there. But the Colony corner, although nearly half a mile from the Little club, which stood at the other end of the forest, was separated from it only by thick and impenetrable forest. It was not the nearest point from the club to the motor road, but it was by all odds the most desirable for one who desired

Anyone, then, who wished to remove something from the Little club without attracting undue attention, would most certainly run a car to the end of the road at Colony corner, for the road ended there, and carry a secret burden through the dark and deserted woods to that point.

With this in mind, Rand turned up to the Colony corner on a dead run. Like every other islander, he carried in his pocket a small electric flash. But like no other islander, he carried also a revolver on his hip.

As he neared the end of the road. where it fell abruptly away to a steep decline of rocks, he skirted wider into the woods behind the Shingle shack, and drew up slowly to the fringe of the woods. It was very dark, but disfinctly he could make out a huge bulky shadow against the trees that outlined the end of the road. It was the motor van, beyond all shadow of doubt. There was no light attached. no sound from within, no stir of life. Rand held his breath to listen, but it was silent as a tomb. Suspecting the presence of a guard, he dared not venture on examination, but as he knew the van could not possibly get off the island until the ferry at six twenty-five in the morning, he felt he had plenty of time.

Gingerly, then, he worked his way to the rear of the cottage, with which he was familiar, and let himself into a basement window and up through the cellar stairs to the front room. There with blankets from an adjoining bedroom, and pillows from the couch, he made himself comfortable on the floor beside the window-too comfortable, for he fell sound asleep.

Hours later he was awakened by the sudden sound of a motor, and cursing his negligence he sprang up It was not yet full daylight, but the pale gray mist that creeps between day and night, holding a hand of each. lay over the Island.

In the driver's seat of the van a man huddled in a great coat, his cap drawn low, his hands encased in shaggy gloves. The motor was cold. and he was obliged to press the

Slap at Education

Education is really a very simple matter. A wise man once said that it consists of a log, with a teacher sitting on one end and a student on the other. last, the driver backed it around carefully, for the road was narrow and the rocky cliff rugged and precipitous, with trees jutting close. The guard stepped briskly down from the rocks and threw open the big doors in the rear of the van. A sudden jerk of his head toward the wood was evidently a signal, for on the instant appeared a line of men, small, stooped and shuffling, who came in a sort of loping run down the narrow path from the woods, single file, their soft feet making no sound at all, either on the rocks or among the dry dead needles of the pines. The guard at the back of the car gave each a hand in turn, and swung them up, deftly, into the van, one after another.

And as they turned about, facing him, to make the lithe spring into the car, Rand saw their faces. They were Chinese, every one, twenty-five of them by count. The guard hastily closed the door, snapping a lock upon it, and sprang up beside the driver, and almost before he was in his seat the car was rolling swiftly away down the cinder road.

For one moment Rand was irresolute. He could telephone to the police on the mainland, and a detail of them would meet the ferry at the pier and take the truck with its foreign freight into custody. But on afterthought, it seemed that the capture of these twenty-five little old Chinese men meant nothing. It was the ring that counted, the band that had grouped itself together to mock at the law. Making his decision quickly, he hurriedly got out of the cottage and ran through the woods toward the Little club.

Hastily selecting the trail in the rocks where the descent was least difficult, a trail held in his memory from boyhood adventures years before, Rand dropped swiftly down. from crag to crag, until he stood in the cove. The one great door beneath the plazza was securely locked, every seam and crack impenetrably sealed. Reluctantly he abandoned hope of dmission from below and made his way up the cliffs once more. Rand knew the construction of the building perfectly, having assisted indeed in in its erection. In the beginning there had been no bank of loose rocks be neath the plazza other than that afforded by nature, and there was a window to the basement on the eastern side, opening just above ground. Later on, for the sake of warmth. small rocks had been thrown under and although Rand felt some distaste for the task, he felt sure that by pulling out the rocks, he could get at the window beneath the plazza floor. and thus into the basement. It was unlikely that the small basement window would be subjected to such rigid sealing, sheltered as it was behind six feet of plazza floor well walled with rocks. In spite of his profession of indo tence. Rand was not averse to labor when the end justified the effort, so he fell sturdily to work at a distance which he judged, and correctly as events proved, would lead to the basement window

It was a long time before his efforts were rewarded by a cleared window. the usual small basement window. perhaps two feet long by eighteen inches high. Convinced, however, that something of great value must be concealed there to necessitate these precautions. he resolved to gain admittance at all costs. With renewed eagerness he attacked the window with the stout knife which had served him well a hundred times in the emergencies of boating, fishing and hunting, and worked it slowly around the edges, pecking at the cement which bound if in place. And finally he felt it give. sway slightly beneath his hand, and drew it carefully out.

Cautiously he thrust his hand into the aperture, and drew aside the black curtain which veiled it. The room was in absolute darkness. He listened long, but could hear no slight est sound in any portion of the house. Breathlessly, then, his revolver cocked alertly in his right hand, with the left he extended his pocket finsh. pressed the button, and swept the yellow light into the room, moving it slowly about, inch by inch, from wall to wall. The silence was like the grave itself.

To get in he was obliged to replace both his flash and his revolver in his pocket, and drop down, defenseless and in the dark, but this was a chance he felt he was obliged to take. And after that breathless moment of his descent, when he flashed his light into the room again. It seemed surprising ly commonplace, just what one would expect to find the basement of an olf abandoned clubhouse.

"Magic Stones" Draw

Visitors to Hawaii

Two "magic stones" at the town of Wahiawa, about twenty miles from Honolulu, have suddenly become a center for attention, ceremonies and efforts to secure relief from suffering. These stones-relics of earlier days in Hawaii when the natives attributed magic powers of healing to them-are now visited daily by crowds of other than the Hawaiian race. In fact, orientals are now in the majority among the men, women and children who go to the stones, making offerings of money, flowers and food and go through various ritualistic observances.

Many legends center about the stones, one tale describing the larger of the two as the Hawaiian god Lono, first healer. Some "old-timers" insist that both stones are feminine-sisters of royal blood who were turned to stone. Candles and incense burn about the stones almost night and day. Recently many visitors have gone at night, doing queer things whose meaning is hidden in oriental mysticism,

When men invade the realm of women in ladies' apparel shops often the scene resembles that created by the proverbial bull in the china shop. The clerks of one downtown store tell about two young men who desired to buy hosiery.

"What color?" asked one of the other in reply to the clerk's question. "Now, what color did she ask that we get?" And the pair grew quite perplexed.

"Oh, yes, I remember. We want that shade called buckshot."

"No, no, not buckshot was it?" questioned the other. "Wasn't it shot-

"Now," queried the clerk helpfully, "do you mean you want gunmetal?" "Yeh, that's it. Gunmetal. Gosh, we missed it a mile, but we were on the right track anyhow," the two replied in chorus, laughing at their own

But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature-colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness-and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on

SALADS FROM VEGETABLES AND FRUITS

Salads Made With Cabbage

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.) The habit of including salad frequently in the family diet has been increasing steadily during recent years, as is shown by the enormous increase in the amount of lettuce produced and sold. Because of their facilities for storing and handling perishable foods, city markets carry lettuce and other salad materials the year round. The family living in the country, however, except in the Far South, cannot get fresh green vegetables such as lettuce after the FREE Send name and Address for 11 growing season is over, and so it tories, Desk 3, Hallowell, Maine often happens that salads are omitted from the menus during the winter months. This means a reduction in the amount of vitamine-rich food being served, and consequent lack of balance in diet. Home demonstration agents have therefore made a point of showing rural homemakers, as in this group from New Hampshire, how salads can be made from such ingredients as cabbage, carrots, apples, and other vegetables and fruits that are easily stored and transported in the country and that are valuable when eaten raw in the form of salad. The recipes below are furnished by the bureau of home economics.

Cabbage Salad.

Chop 3 to 4 cups of either white, green, or curly cabbage very fine. Combine it with a dressing made as follows: Beat one-half pint of thick whipping cream until stiff; add 41/2 tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, 2 tablespoonfuls of fresh grated horseradish, a grating of onion, a few drops of tabasco, and salt to taste. These seasonings may be changed according to individual taste, but one must be sure there is enough dressing in proportion to the cabbage. A dash of cayenne pepper may be used if you do not have tabasco. If the horseradish is in vinegar use only 2 tablespoonfuls of lemon. Combine the dressing with the chopped cabbage. Serve on a cabbage leaf or in a hollowed out head of curly cabbage. Or place a slice of canned pineapple on a cabbage leaf or lettuce leaf, and on that spread a thick covering of the Grated cheese may be added

Cabbage Slaw.

Select a small hard head of cabbage, cut in quarters and wash thoroughly in cold water. Drain, wipe dry, and shred with a sharp knife. Put in a cloth on ice or in a cold place until crisp. Pour hot dressing over the crisped cabbage and stir until well mixed. Serve hot or cold. A cupful of cut celery may be added, or 1/2 cupful of finely shredded green pepper, or 1 cupful of thinly sliced tart apple.

Dressing for Slaw.

2 eggs. water 4 cup water or 2 ths. sugar l or 2 tbs. butter

4 tsp. salt ¼ tsp. mustard 1-16 tsp. celery seed

Beat the eggs, add all the ingredients except the butter, and cook in a double boiler until thickened. Stir constantly and just before removing from the tire add the butter. Pour over the cabbage while hot. If served as cold slaw, chill after the dressing

DELICIOUS DISH FOR LUNCHEON OR TEA

Cream Cheese With Toast and Jam Is Easily Made.

Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics. United States Department of Agriculture.) Cream cheese with toast and preserves is a delicious and easily made luncheon or supper dish, and it will answer the purpose when light refreshments are wanted for an afternoon or evening party. The custom of eating something sweet with cream cheese probably originated in France. where a special kind of cheese known as "Gervais" is served with the famous "bar-le-duc" preserves.

The United States Department of Agriculture has a bulletin on making cream cheese of the Neufchatel type, similar to Gervais, and many stores now carry cream cheese either in small separate packages or by the pound. Cottage cheese may be used Apricot and Pineapple Jam With Cheese.

Instead of cream cheese, if more convenient. The recipe for the preserves. which can be made at practically any season of the year, from materials available in he grocery store, comes from the bureau of home economics: Dried Apricot and Pineapple Pre pound dried ap-ricots, soaked apple over night 3% cups of sugar

Wash the apricots thoroughly, then soak overnight in 1 pint of water. In the morning chop the apricots and add 1 cupful of the sugar. Drain the pineapple and cut it into very small pieces, and cook with the remaining 2% cupfuls of sugar for 20 minutes. Add the apricots and cook for 25 minutes Watch carefully to prevent the apricots from scorching. The pineapple holds its shape, but the apricots soften and the mixture has the consistency of thick jam. The amounts given make a little over three pints.

COOKING JERUSALEM ARTICHOKES TASTILY

May Be Served for Family in Many Various Ways.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)
Fried Jerusalem artichokes may be compared to potato chips, and many people like them better. The artichokes should be pared, sliced very thin, and soaked for 30 minutes in cold water. After drying them between towels, drop them into very hot oil or lard (400 degrees F.) and fry to a crisp chip. Lift out, drain well, and place on absorbent paper. A very good, quickly prepared cream soup can be made from Jerusalem artichokes. Heat 4 cupfuls of milk in a double boiler, and thicken with 1 teaspoonful of flour blended with 2 tablespoonfuls of butter. Add 2 cupfuls of grated raw artichokes, 11/4 teaspoonfuls of salt, 1/2 teaspoonful grated onion, and 1/2 teaspoonful chopped parsley. Heat for five minutes and serve.

Boiled Jerusalem artichokes may be served in various ways. A puree may be made from them just as puree of artichokes through a strainer and adding milk or broth. A suggestion of onion flavor in the seasoning would be acceptable to many persons.

Uncooked Jerusalem artichokes are also used. The tubers have a fresh, crisp texture, and when thinly sliced are excellent in salads. They resemble Chinese water chestnuts in flavor. and could doubtless be used in such dishes as chop suey and chow mein. The bureau of home economics sugthey should be sliced thin or diced after paring, and then used on lettuce leaves mixed with watercress, or used as part of a vegetable salad composed of any preferred combination of available raw vegetables, such as tomatoes, cucumbers, onions, peppers, or rad-•hes French dressing is recom-

MAKE PROFIT IN RAISING TURKEYS

Most people consider that it is practically impossible to raise turkeys. However, the results of some breeders as well as those of the experiment stations show that it is not only possible to raise turkeys, but it is also possible to make a profit at the work.

When turkeys are being raised a producer has only one thing in mind, namely, keeping them alive and healthy so that they will grow into marketable poultry. With chickens there are two propositions to watch, eggs and market poultry.

Turkeys are subject to many of the ailments that bother chickens, but the chief trouble has been a disease known as blackhead. This disease affects turkeys of all ages, but is particularly disastrous when poults are just nicely feathered.

There has been a reason for these losses in many cases. Chickens are affected with blackhead, but it does not usually kill them. In many cases chickens have acted as carriers of the disease to the turkeys. In view of this many people have found it advantageous to raise the poults away from chickens and on fresh ground. This has encouraged the use of incubators and brooders for turkeys and, where properly managed, they have proved very satisfactory. When young poults are reared with chickens they usually get worms. Worms seem to help the parasites that cause blackhead, as it makes an opening for the parasite to enter the system. People who raise their young turkeys on fresh ground, away from other poultry, are not apt to be troubled with blackhead. Turkeys will even stand confinement, if plenty of green stuff, good sanitation and adequate protection is provided. The Minnesota experiment station raised turkeys in confinement for the last three years. It is not necessary for the young poults to catch grasshoppers, as animal protein needed in their ration can be supplied with meat scraps.

First Feed of Poults

of Much Importance The first feed of the poults is very important. The second day they should be given a little clean drinking water and have access to some fine sand.

The third day they will show signs of hunger. Feed them about five times each day for several days. Hard-boiled eggs, clabber cheese, corn bread and pinhead oats are all good foods for the baby turk.

Give only what they will clean up quickly. Keep them hungry and lookng for more. As they nay be given cracked wheat, corn meal and hulled oats. Good results will be obtained by keeping bran before them at all times. Sweet skim milk and btutermilk may be given in the early morning. Green feed and grit should be given, if it must be purchased from the poultry supply dealers.

When the hen is allowed to range, the turks will get plenty of exercise and pick up lots of bugs and worms as well as weed seed and green material. One must be careful to drive the mother in before a rainstorm and put her and her brood in a house that does not leak.

The hen should not be allowed to roost away from her coop a single night while poults are small. Rats and skunks may steal her young and a storm may come up during the night and destroy the young. Keep a watchful eye on the flock and success will be assured.

Late Molters

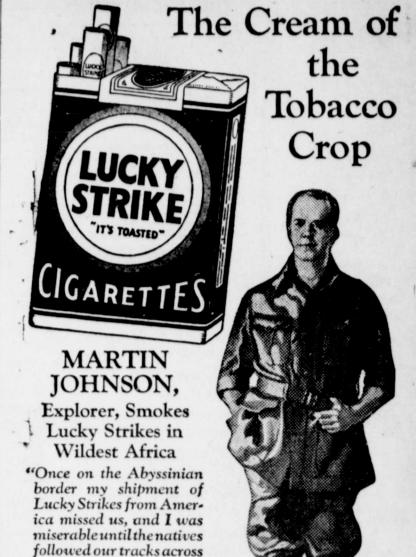

The most desirable of the late laying hens which molt as late as September 15 or later should be mated with the best males of the flock or preferably with males secured from a breeder of a good strain of production-bred stock. A small pen of 15 to 25 breeders will produce cockerel potato is made, by rubbing the cooked for the flock matings the following season and, furthermore, will help to lay the foundation for a flock of high producing birds.

Giving Eggs Air

Cooling the eggs gives them an airing and replaces the stale air in the egg chambers. It also slows down the hatch. The early hatches need no cooling except the amount received while they are turned. If the eggs gests that in using them for salads are cooled too much twice a day it is evident that it will take some time to bring them back to 103 degrees. It often means that three or four hours out of each twenty-four the eggs will be developing at a temperature below 103 degrees.

Kill Weak Chieks

This advice given by the Ohio College of Agriculture seems a little bit cruel, but it is probably worth following: Do not under any circumstances help chicks out of the shell. Chicks which do not have enough vitality to get out of the shell, either because of a lack of vitality in the egg or because of faulty incubation, are not worth having. "Kill and burn all weak or crippled chicks as soon as the hatch is over. Weak chicks are always a menace to the flock."

RAISE GOOD MULES

The world needs mules. The lack of breeding is making a great shortage of power. The shortage of big mules is sure to make strong demand and high prices in the immediate future.

Mules work in all climates. They stand the heat better than any other work animal. They have the wind, no thumps, no heaves, no founder, and will not over feed.

As beasts of burden the mule stands supreme in the corn field, in the wheat field, in the cotton field, or on the sugar plantation.

The mule will never fall into a well or a hole in the ground, but if you will stick to him he will keep YOU "out of the hole." Raise them to work, and raise them to sell. There is usually a market for them at a good price, and a few good mules make better security at the bank for a loan than a whole lot full of used trucks and tractors.

Manko Maize

This is a Dwarf Straight Necked Milo Maize, which has been recently developed by an experimental station. The origin of same is a cross between Blackhull Kaffir and Dwarf Milo, which was selected to a Dwarf, early straight neck plant and then crossed back to Dwarf Milo. Our experience with it has been uniformly dwarf, as early or earlier than regular Dwarf Milo and Straight necked.

The outstanding features of this Milo as furnished us by responsible people of Oklohoma, are, as follows:

The heads develop from ten to eighteen inches in length, the yields as established by the farmers who planted this past year run from

depending largely, of course, on the kind of soil and rain fall. Under favorable weather conditions, while it is in the making and in the average make up of the soil, it will easily yield

Seventy Five Bushels to the Acre

This being so, much more than the ordinary Dwarf Milo, farmers have almost unanimously come to the conclusion that this is the only kind of Milo to plant.

Your advantages in planting this seed are that it will make a greater yield, can easily be harvested with a row binder, wagon header or combine- Further, we do not believe that it will fall like the Dwarf Crooked Necked Milo, as it stands straight. will make you more profit per acre than any other grain and provide more fodder and fine feed.

REAL CHINA DRAGON AMERICA WOULD KILL

Toll on Goods in Transit Is Cause of Trouble.

Washington.-American representatives have laid before the great powers and China a proposal to free China from foreign restrictions on tariff levies in return for abolition of the "likin."

"The real dragon of modern China, is the 'likin,' in the opinion of foreign traders and many Chinese," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its, headquarters in Washington, D. C. "The abolition of a similar tax by the Constitution of the United States helped save the Union. The Americans at Peking may be doing for China what George Washington, Jefferson, Franklin and others did for the colonles at Philadelphia in 1787. It was not until 1870 that the 'likin' was abolished within the German Union.

Taxes Levied in Transit. "The nearest equivalent which English has for the Chinese word "likin" is 'per cent.' The Chinese term means per mille,' that is, a tax apportioned according to thousands. It has taken on a different meaning in the course of years until now a 'likin' station is known as a 'squeeze' station. Likin stations are toll posts where taxes are levied on goods in transit. While some of the collections made at the 'squeeze' stations go to the central government, most of the revenue falls into the hands of the provincial governors or the district mandarins.

"From Shanghai to Soochow it is 84 miles and goods going from one city to the other have to pass eight likin stations. At the first and last stations all goods are dutiable; at the rest all goods must be examined. and there is scarcely a single article that does not in that transit pay at least three taxes.

"If a parallel system were set up on the New York-Philadelphia highway, all the motor trucks would be compelled to stop at customs stations in New York, Hoboken, Newark, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Princeton, Trenton and Philadelphia. At each station the entire contents of the truck would be ransacked and the drivers would be compelled to pay a certain sum. Obviously the road run of a few hours would lengthen into a day or two. The expense of tax and time would put a burden on business which would be shifted to the consumer. In the end commerce by truck would be smothered. This cycle is complete in China where foreign goods commonly penetrate only a brief distance from the free treaty ports, and even domestic trade drib bles along in anemic fashion.

Likin Is Not Old. "Unlike most Chinese creations, the tkin is not old. It was invented about 1850 to raise money for the support of the army suppressing the Taiping rebellion. Its success as a source of cash soon recommended it provinces. These officials are always pushed to acquire personal and civic finances. They knew as well as any one that in the past money which went to Peking stayed in Peking. Likin offered a satisfactory answer.

"Continued existence of likin recognizes that China is a collection of semi-independent states such as the United States and Germany were when in embryo.

"The problem of the likin has been up before international councils before. Agreements have been made that foreign traders could purchase through transit tickets for their goods at the point of departure which would free shipments from likin toll. But even in the recent meetings of the conference there have been reports that provincial war lords have ignored these pacts. They were charged with levying double and triple likin to support their armies."

Indians Break Rule;

Ute Tribe Mourns

Durango, Colo.-Attorney Barry Sullivan, a Harvard law graduate, was killed along with his wife, when their automobile, driven by their daughter, skidded from a mountain roadway near Durango, in southwestern Colo-Mr. Sullivan had been legal counsellor and an adopted member of the five confederated Ute tribes of Utah and Colorado for more than twenty-five years, sitting in many of their important councils and guiding them both as a lawyer and friend.

Sullivan's tragic death was a severe blow to the Indians and they broke all tribal customs and traditions by galia and in participating in the services at the graves of Mr. Sullivan and his wife. So far as can be learned this is the first public funeral of a white man in which the Ute tribes have taken part.

Farmers Need High-Grade Poultry

The farm is realizing more and more all the time, the importance of keeping only pure-bred chickins, for egg production. A more correct term is bred-to-lay standard bred chickens. Only as many as fifteen years ago pure-bred chickens on the farm were the exception. Texas is still far behind the general progress in this respect, but fast coming to the front. It is a mistake to keep mongrel or mixed chickens. It indicates poor farm management to have a flock of mongrel hens on the farm. They are poor producers and consume just as much feed as good pure-bred hens that lay well and keep the cobwebs out of the nest boxes.

Buying Baby Chicks

One of the cheapest, quickest and best ways of getting a start in the pure-bred poultry business is by buying baby chicks from some reliable hatchery.

We strongly advocate buying pure-bred baby chicks. Baby chicks are sold in boxes of twenty-five, fifty and one hundred. Of course, you can buy most any number. Most are shipped by parcel post, live arrival guaranteed.

The BABY

Why do so many, many bables of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic: or constination: or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Ugly House Costly

as Attractive One

"It's no more expensive to build an attractive house than an ugly one, while there is no economy in cheap material," is what Rhys North and Marcia Mead declare in explaining adventures in home building in Mc-Call's Magazine. However, they say: "The architect's wide knowledge of construction often enables him to select materials which are less expengive, although thoroughly satisfactory. Stock sizes for doors and windows and local stock patterns for trims and moldings could be used throughout. All these factors would help to keep the initial expense at a minimum, while insuring low upkeep cost and long life to the house.

"The contract is a very simple document. It explains in full what services are to be performed. This agreement, the Standard Form of Contract Between Architect and Owner, published by the American Institute of Architects, signed in duplicate by both parties in the presence of witnesses, is to the effect that for 6 per cent of the total cost of the building, the architect will draw all necessary preliminary sketches, working drawings, full-size details, and write speci-fications covering the work to be done and the material to be used by all the building trades concerned in the operation. Also that he supervises the construction of the building to see that the work is performed according to his plans and specifications.

Planting of nut trees is comparatively new in this country, says the American Tree association of Washington. Until within the last ten years, except in the regions where commercial nut raising had become established, the individual's proposal to plant trees for the raising of nuts was usually met by scornful comment.

In some European countries nut and fruit trees along the roads are sources of material profit. These trees are owned by the public, and the sentiment of the community has been sufficient to protect the crops against marauders.

Wide Roads a Necessity

According to a writer in the Memphis Commercial Appeal "road widening has become a definite policy in several states in which the automobile registration is high"; one of these states has been adding strips of paving three to six feet wide to some of its roads; another is placing along its roads lateral extensions of from twelve to eighteen feet, and these widening policies are particularly to be noted in metropolitan areas around some of the larger and more important cities of the country. Narrow roads do not take care of the traffic and besides they are more dangerous than roads of wider types.

THE PRINT OF A BABY'S HAND

UTH MASON, leaning over her husband's shoulder, stared at the advertisement to which he had called her attention. For once the dull pages of the Weekly Tattler held for her an item of surpassing significance.

The Bangs house was for sale! The wonderful house which Ruth had admired so long. It happened most opportunely, too, for the lease was up in a month on the Mason apartment and they had been planning to buy rether than rent again.

"Here's your chance," King Mason said, grinning up into his wife's young, flushed face. "I've heard nothing but the Bangs house since we moved into this neighborhood. Of course, if they want more for it than I am prepared to pay, it's out of the question."

"Call her up," Ruth suggested eagerly. "If we wait a moment somebedy will snap it up. It may be even too late now. Lots of people have seen that advertisement besides us, King went to the telephone. Presently he turned from it with a gratifled look.

"Mrs. Bangs wants us to come over now and look at the house," he said It was eight o'clock of a wild March evening, but they had not far to go. Ten minutes later they were ringing the doorbell of the attractive house In which Ruth already felt a thrilling sense of proprietorship.

Mrs. Bangs admitted them, She was elderly and fat with great, wistful blue eyes. Although Ruth had met her several times socially she had never been in the house. All she knew about it was what she had heard Mrs. Bangs say-Mrs. Bangs was always praising her house-and what she had seen of the exterior as she walked past daily on her way to market,

The parlor to which the young people were led was dimly lit by pink shaded light. Evidently Mrs. Bangs was fond of that beguiling tint. Ruth, sinking into a pink brocade chair, thought the effect unusual, although she could see in the mirror opposite that rosy tint glorified her face, giving her the flowerlike prettiness she had always craved. She settled back complacently and let King and Mrs. Bangs do their talking. Mrs. Bangs explained that she was leaving town because her husband's new position forced them to move to the place where he was employed. She hated to leave her dear home, but she had heard they wanted to buy and she would rather they had the place than anybody else. She was sure Mrs. Mason would take care of it. Here she faltered a little, but rallying courageously that a party was coming to see it in the morning who would be sure to take it if they didn't. Wouldn't they like to look around a bit? They would, of course, and were shown the dining room and the guestroom upstairs, both dimly lighted with colored shades. She was sorry not to let them see more of the house but. with her packing everything was at sixes and sevens. They could take her word that everything was all

King, judging the whole by the three samples, was urged on by Ruth, who nudged his arm every chance she got. Ruth couldn't let the party who was coming in the morning have her house. She already thought of it as her house. In the end King said they'd take it.

"We'll we've done it," he said as they walked home arm in arm. "I know that's no way to buy a house, but I guess it's all right. And the price was absurdly low. I expected to pay more than that for our first real

"I'm so happy!" Ruth danced. "I've wanted that house, dear, ever since I first laid eyes on it. Think of having a whole bay window and porch to ourselves!"

They did not see the house again, for Ruth forbore intruding upon Mrs Bangs while she was in the throes of moving. When the last vanload departed Mrs. Bangs came to bring Ruth the key. She was on her way to the

Ruth beheld the key with emotion. She actually kissed it. Then she snatched her coat and ran down the

Of course she knew that, dismantled the house could not possibly look as it had when Mrs. Bangs' handsome furniture was distributed about; but she was unprepared to find that the shaded lights had created an illusion in the rooms she had seen. The rooms she had not seen had been obviously kept hidden from a purpose.

She bit her lips to keep from crying as she saw the faded wall paper full of nail holes, the flyspecks and smoke stains, the floors lacking varnish now that they were no longer covered with rugs. The kitchen range had gone with the house, but it looked ready to fall down. And the furnace was no better.

The opening of the door made her jump. It was King entering. "Well, how is it?" he demanded.

Then as he saw her face." Pretty Ruth choked back a sob.

"I believe they've never had a thing done to this house since they lived here. And that must have been for years and years!"

She pointed to places on the wali paper and varnished wood where grimy little band prints showed. There was one behind the dining-room door, perfectly distinct and tiny.

"Mrs. Bangs' only child left those finger prints there," Ruth said. "He has been dead twenty years. There has never been another child in the house, Mrs. Westlake says. I was talking with her this morning. She has known Mrs. Bangs always."

They stood silently looking at the tell-tale marks. Somehow the print of that baby hand made Ruth feel kinder toward Mrs. Bangs than she would otherwise have done.

They resolved to make the best of it. They had a little money left over from the purchase price. King found he had a knack for pasting paper and varnishing. Ruth had skill in other ways. Soon the house began to display real beauty. At least it was sound. The real trouble was it had been neglected. Mrs. Bangs had been too busy with her clubs and bridge parties and had trusted to her pink shades to hide the defects of her housekeeping. It was a lot of fun, too, polishing up this, their first home.

And then one day when the house glowed inside and out and the first crocuses were blooming under the windows Mrs. Bangs came back. Ruth was astonished to find her there at the door, but gave a cordial greeting and led her into the parlor.

Mrs. Bangs gazed around at the soft wood-brown tints on floor and wall. It was another place altogether.

"You've changed it entirely," she said a little sadly. "It was beautiful to me the way it was. Of course, I knew everything was in bad shape+ wall paper and like that, but I couldn't bear to change things. So I got up a scheme of lighting that hid everything. I am afraid you were decelved somewhat, my dear."

"Well, the house was well worth what we paid for it, and we're satisfled," Ruth replied. "It has been a lot of work getting things as we like them but we are very much pleased now. Please come here!" she arose suddenly and led the way into the dining room. "Look there." She pointed behind the door,

They had left the print of the baby hand on the varnished woodwork. Mrs. Bangs gazed at it unbelievingly. Then she went down on her knees and kissed it.

"Georgie made that when he was two," she said with tears, "My husband was painting and he thrust his little hand into the paint pot." She still stared at it. "He died when he was four. That's one reason why I couldn't bear to change anything." Suddenly she turned to look at Ruth. "Oh, you understand! I see why you

They smiled at each other through tremulous women's tears.

Greeks Built Nation on Old Civilization

Somewhere in the neighborhood of the year 1200 B. C., the Greeks captured Troy. It had taken them eight ilization, for we may conjecture that they came into Greece about the year 2000 B. C. They had been a nomad race then, driving their flocks and herds with them, carrying their women and children in crude carts pulled by horses, says a writer in the Boston Post.

When their advance guards came to a hilltop overlooking the sea, we can dimly visualize the amazement that struck them du.nb with wonder. They could see in the distance walled towns with high structures, rising over the sea they caught sight of great ships. All these were as marvelous to the Greeks as the ships and the guns of Columbus were to the red men of the New world. But the Greeks were to conquer the civilization that awed them,

By Homer's time, they, too, were living in walled towns, although these were not so imposing as the Cretan cities. The Greeks had begun to farm extensively. They were making pottery and furniture, tools and weapons of metal and ornaments of gold. Although they had not learned to read or write, they were finding music and dancing an outlet for their delight in the arts.

Another thing which it is well to remember of the early Greeks is that they were not a pure race. They did not kill off the peoples they had conquered. Some fled, as did those Cretans who crossed to Palestine and became known to the Hebrews as the Philistines. Some were killed. But those who survived and did not flee, who must have numbered thousands upon thousands, intermarried with the conquerors, and the mixed race that came out of these unions became the Greeks of history. The Cretans, splendidly gifted in so many ways, may have had much to do with giving the Greeks that impulse for artistic creation which has set them apart among the peoples of all times.

The Tape-Line

S. R. Guggenheim, the New York financier, said on the Mauretania:

"Every man has a different tapeline, his own special tape-line, to measure his fellow by. The rich man measures his fellows by their wealth, the blue-blooded man by their blood, and so on. "Once an important personage lay very ill, and I said to an editor at the Lotos club:

"How is Blanc today?"

"'Blanc,' said the editor, 'passed on this afternoon. "'Poor Blanc!' I said.

Prospective Watermelon Acreage

Georgia, Florida, and Texas are the principal commercial producers of the early watermelon crop. Other states grow them, but not on the scale that these three states grow them. Therefore, what these states do is of interest to watermelon producers throughout the South.

Investigation indicates an increase in acreage in North Florida, where the principal Florida commercial acreage is situated, of from 15 to 20 per cent. West Florida and Southwest Alabama will probably increase the acreage from 5 to 10 per cent and South Georgia in the neighborhood of 10 per cent. Whether Texas will increase her acreage is not yet definitely known, but indications point toward an increase

If all these increases materialize and weather conditions are favorable for a good yield, there is danger of overproduction, or at least, more melons than can be sold at a reasonable profit.

In a season of overproduction it is always the high quality, big melon that comes the nearest to producing a profit for the grower. We suggest, therefore, that every poesible effort be made to produce the highest quality melbest possible condition. Quality important things to be consider twice as much per pound as wil the 16-, 18- or 20-pound melon Let's therefore, give every possible attention to the production of quality melons this season, and not plant too heavily .- Pro gressive Farmer.
