SOLOMON TWINNEY, so the story went, was talking to Jake Bingham about a job. There was plenty to be done and Jake himself was not just crazy to overwork. He meant to do a great many things which never got done. There was a well curb which had needed fixing for a decade or so, the fences were down or leaning in many places, and the corn ought to have been plowed a week ago.

"Well, when could you come?" asked Jake, thinking that Solomon would need a few days possibly to get his effects together.

"Right now," Solomon answered, "There's work to be done here, and done right away. I ain't one of the puttin'-off kind. What I say is, if a thing has got to be done, do it right away-not tomorrow, nor next day, nor next week, nor as soon as you can get around to it."

Hazleton, Pa .- The congregation of ! Our Lady of Mount Carmel, which holds the distinction of being the first Tyrolese organization of its kind to be formed in America and which, with intense national pride, styles itself Tyrolese even though the Trentino now is part of Italy, has just dedicated a handsome chapel at its parish cemetery. Made of marble and perched on the slope that commands the burial grounds, the building makes an impressive appearance when viewed the Hazleton-Allentown-Philadelphia State highway. The celebration of All Souls' day at the cemetery also is a possibility now that this consecrated structure has been put into use and this arrangement is considered quite desirable. The building also will be used for services at times that this stormy section of the state makes outdoor condi tions intolerable and grave digging sometimes out of the question. Services can be held at the chapel and the burial can be effected later.

Among the Tyrolese are found names like Annabale, which is Hannibal with the "H" missing. Amalcare also is to be found, and the name of the favorite general of Hannibal, Hamilcar, is recalled. Alacare is encountered, and Alaric's name thus is found preserved in a people's traditions, after the expiration of many centuries. Naturally, the Tyrolese who kept their national entity in those days of the Roman empire wish to keep it still and they are not disposed to accept the designation of Italian citizens, if unnaturalized, but still call themselves Tyrolese.

I bought a clock of Johnson four or five years ago. It was a good clock, but there was a flaw in the dial when it was delivered. The clock was got in celebration of an anniversary, and in spite of the fact that it was not perfect it seemed best to receive it.

"I'll see that the thing is made good, Mr. Clark," Johnson assured me. "The last thing I should want to sell you is an imperfect article. I'm expecting a new shipment in next week, and I'll sure make it right." I've called Mr. Johnson several times since. He was each time just on the verge of doing something and he thanked me for reminding him.

He had seen it himself often and Mrs. Smithers had called his atter tion more often than he had himself noticed it. He had meant to fix it. A single nail properly employed would have done the work, but he was one of the putting-off kind and, going out to the garage in the dark, he had tripped and cracked a bone.

There are all sorts of things we can put off if we are that kind-answering letters, paying calls or the monthly bills, joining the church, giving up tobacco, taking out life insurance-anything that does not absolutely have to be done on the moment. ick,

There were no guns, no casks, no bottles. The furniture was scant, and of substantial and inexpensive make. There was an oil heater in a corner, and a large tank nearly full of oil beside it. There was, an oil cook stove, also, with pans, kettles and rough dishes. There was fishing tackle strewn about, old magazines, and in a corner cupboard a few rough ends of food: beans, coffee, salt and rice. Some canned things, too, and a piece of salt pork. There were old pipes lying about, cigar stubs and scattered tobacco. The room in every respect was exactly as it would be left by a group of fishermen, lumbermen or hunters.

Officers, inspectors, any one might step into the room, examine it from ceiling to rough rock floor, and find it above suspicion. Yet Rand knew that within a space of two hours fully thirty men had left that very spot.

With revolver and flashlight in hand again, he left the basement room and went to the stairs. Heavy curtains, thick and wide, covered every door and window so that no possible ray of light from within could be seen from

On the upper floor were sleeping rooms, six in all, and two baths, although the water was not connected and the tubs were dusty and dry. One of these rooms, the one on the north looking down to the cove, Rand knew had been occupied, although but rough blankets were thrown loosely on the bed. Still it and the feeling about it of recent occupancy.

"Gay's gentlemanly Ingram," he thought with a boyish grin. "Couldn't stand it below with the Chinks. No wonder his eyes are sad."

Satisfied at last, he went down, careful to leave everything behind him as he had found it, and clambered up through the narrow basement window again, not without great difficulty. Once more he was obliged to crawl out, head first, and return in order to replace the window as he had found it which he did carefully, edging it tightly in, and blocking it loosely with rocks from without, Then he made his final exit.

"I hope nobody bangs me on the head before I have a chance to argue about it," he thought rather anxiously, as his legs sprawled out from beneath the piazza into the open air.

Evidently, however, the intrusion had been unobserved, and very hurriedly he threw the stones back into place to give the same appearance as before his entrance. Then he crossed the woods toward the Lone Pine.

It was after nine o'clock. Rand was not shaved, his face and hands were scratched and bleeding, his hair was matted with dust and bits of earth and moss, his clothes were grimy. He glanced down at himself, smiling. But he went on.

"I have no right to cheat her out of such a thrill as this," he decided. But he hurrled his steps, for he had no desire to explain his appearance to any other but Gay.

Her amazement at his appearance at her door equaled his expectations. "Rand-Rand," she gasped weakly.

"Let me in, let me in," he urged laughingly. "Don't leave me out here with the burden of crime upon me, for the first Chink to take a pot shot

Hurriedly she drew him into the room, closed and locked the door be-

"Rand - Rand - what have you done?" she whispered.

She listened silently while he told, in sketchy fashion, the events of the night. Her eyes upon him were terrified and troubled. When he finished his recital with a jaunty triumphant gesture, she turned on him passion-

"You shouldn't do such things," she cried thickly. "You should not! You have no right to take such chances. Oh, Rand, what do they care for murder? Think of that poor

It was not until he had been well fortified with strong coffee that she asked him gently, for her sake, to give up this ridiculous, dangerous enterprise and pay no more attention to the activities in the Little club. She said she was sorry she had ever told him anything about the affair in the cove, she felt she had led him into terrible danger.

"I keep thinking of that boy, Rand. They are utterly unprincipled, unscrupulous, I know they are. They would stop at nothing. If anything happens to you, it will be my fault."

Rand tried to reassure her, promised to take every precaution, but he would not consent to give up the undertaking. He was sure he had his finger on a thread that would unravel a vast network of intrigue and crime involving many thousands of dollars. perhaps hundreds of lives. He was going to have the reward the unraveling would entail, out more important than that, he was going to have the sport of unraveling. He would not and I'll prove it to you. Him, and his sad eyes!'

"Randle, dear," Gay said, her hands in his hair, drawing his face toward her, "did any one ever tell you that your eyes are sad, too? They are. Very sad. Your lips are merry and your voice is light, but your eyes are always wistful. The voice is what one makes it-but the eyes- Yes, open windows to the soul. Sad, very sad."

CHAPTER IX

It was amazing to Gay that the Island, enmeshed as it was in a network of lawless enterprise so flagrant as to include open murder, should continue its placid aimless course of every-day, unruffled calm. The Captain fluttered from the hotel drains to the Nixon porch and talked regretfully of the work he did not accomplish on his beat.

Auntalmiry, who after Mrs. Andover's stern denial of a Christmas party, had remained wistful, quiet lovely morning. Coming on to Christ-

Auntalmiry burst into joyous gentle laughter. "Oh, my dear, when I think of Alice Andover-dear Alice! She is a fine woman, for all her faults. one in a thousand. But when I think of all her administrating, and her bossing, and her scheming-and all she gets for it-oh, no," she interrupted herself, trying to sadden her exuberance, "oh, no, no Christmas party this year. Oh, no!" She shook her little silvery head, but could not shake away that air of joy.

She said she had only come to borrow a bag, a good-sized hand-bag. She wanted to take-some things-over to town. She said she would like to keep it several days, if Gay did not mind, and promised to be very careful of it. She chose the larger of two hand-bags Gay gladly offered, explaining that she wanted it to hold-well-plenty.

A few days later she came again to explain that she was not yet through with the bag, and to suggest to Gay, If she did not mind, that perhaps it would be better not to say a word about it to Alice Andover.

"She's a fine woman," she said loyally, "one in a million, a credit to the island, a typical Maine character. A capable administrator, too, and all that. But once in a while she getswell, as you might say-just a wee bit nosey.'

Alice Andover, too, climbed the hill to the Lone Pine.

"See anything of that foolish old woman down there?" she inquired, Jerking her head impatiently toward the orchard below.

"Once in a while. Not often."

"She's 'p to something. I don't trust that woman. You watch her, and if you see anything out of the way, you tell me. I'm the administrator, and I've got to keep an eye on

It was disappointing both to Gay and Rand that with all the little threads of mystery within their grasp nothing happened. They kept shrewd watch of forest, clubhouse and shore, but all remained silent and deserted. so that after a few weeks her interest waned. Rand, however, continued faithfully to go to the clubhouse every night, for he knew that eventually the gang would come again, and he was ready for them.

He had inqu..ed about boats teavung Portland harbor at the time the Chinese immigrants left the clubhouse, and found there had been sev eral freighters outward bound two "And first of all, I'm going to show for the south, three for Errone, and my your sad-eyed friend. October faded goldenly away, and November settled down grayly over the islands of Casco bay.

About noon on the third day of November, a cold rain set in, driven by a hard wind from the northeast. By midafternoon the first nor-easter of the season was raging along the coast. The rain had turned to cutting bits of ice, like burning chips from steel. All afternoon Gay sat in her window-seat. listened to the wind lashing the bare trees of the dear little forest, watched the white sleet which tore past the window on great gales of wind, and looked down to the sea, snow white with foam. Finally she fell asleep.

It was evening when a step on the porch and an accompanying whistle wakened her. She sprang to her feet and went forward, dizzily, to meet

Gay took his hands, let him gently to the window-seat, sat beside him. "Rand," she said evenly, "if you want me to marry you, I will." "Now, say it again, slowly. I don't marry you, I will." "If I want you to marry me-you Rand repeated slowly. He "Thanks, Gay, but I

Gay sighed a little, sighed in relief perhaps. Certainly she smiled, but it was a drawn smile that did not touch her darkened eyes.

The island shut itself up, more and more, behind the protective screens and storm windows that presaged the coming of winter. The women baked, and sewed, and chatted. The men got in the last of the wood, sorted the winter apples, went over the furnaces and the plumbing.

Mrs. Alice Andover came to the cottage, but not often, for she was fond of creature comforts, and her enthusiasm for the winter climate of her native state was limited to an oil burner in her furnace, a birch log in her fireplace, and a pretty Parisian knitted scarf about her aristocratic shoul-

So they went down the hillslope and knocked at the door of the Apple Tree. There was no answer, although distinctly they could hear slight sounds within, quick shuffling, muffled footsteps, the sly creaking of a door. then silence. Alice Andover turned the knob, but the door was locked. She marched grimly around the house, Gay following, and tried the kitchen door, only to find it locked Shamelessly she peered in every window, one after another, but there was nothing to see but the tidy house, empty.

"The old fool is in the closet," Alice Andover said grim'y. She rapped smartly on the window. "Auntalmiry, Auntalmiry, come out! We see youcome on out, you big ostrich!" But there was no answer.

"She's up to something," Alice And over said anxiously. "She's mad about that Christmas party. All for her own good, and that's all the thanks I get.

Her larder had been bounteously and glorious stocked-a hundred pounds of sugar, brown and white, cereals, rasins, dried fruits, beans, canned goods. No. certainly she could not be in need of anything. Besides. there was her charge account at the grocery, and her modest account at

When Alice Andover had gone, Gay went down again alone. Mrs. And over's anxiety had communicated itself to her, and Gay was persistent. She meant to find out if Auntalmiry stood in need.

She anticipated a long wait on the door-step, and she intended to wait. So she was a little surprised when Auntalmiry, who had evidently been watching and knew she came alone, opened the door to her first light tap. "That was not nice," Gay said severely. "Alice Andover is very un-

But for all her pleasantness Gay returned at last no wiser than she

November did not live up to the threat of its coming. The weeks passed. But two days before Thanksgiving, Gay wakened in the morning to find the island thickly blanketed with snow, the trees pendant with it, the valley submerged. And great cloudy flakes whitened the air.

"This is beautiful, it is worth living for," Gay thought. "How childish to live always in a city where snow means only slush, and grime, and murky skles."

She sat in the window-seat and watched it for hours, tracing the course of the great white flakes, and listening for the soft little kiss with which each dropped among his brothers. By afternoon all the low brush and shrubs were thickly covered, the forest was a solid glistening wall, and the line of boats upturned on the shore was like a row of grave mounds. The afternoon waned, and finally, a little depressed with the silence and the aloneness of it all, she was aimlessly tidying up her rooms when she heard a gay voice calling:

"Hello, the house. Come out, and see the sun." She ran down to find Rand, in snow haif to his waist, at her window that led to the valley, which he was struggling to raise from without. Gay caught up a warm cape, and "You darling!" she cried, in warm PRESIDENTIAL YEAR! Politics ran to belp him.

First Rude Telescope Evolved by Accident

When the son of a Sixteenth century spectacle maker in Holland picked up some spectacle lenses in his father's shop one day and happened to hold up two of them, one in each hand, he was surprised on looking through both lenses to see the weathercock on a neighboring church steeple greatly enlarged. Excited by this discovery, he ran to his father and told him what he had seen. The father immediately took the two lenses and repeated the experiment. The result confirmed his boy's report and the father set to work at once. fixing two movable lenses on a board -an idea suggested to him by the varying view he had obtained by moving the lenses in his hands-and thus the first rude telescope came into

Moonlight and Plants

There is an impression that moonlight injures plants. This is a fallacy. The moon shiping brilliantly implies a clear night, and this in turn means a markedly lower temperature, even to the extent of ground frost-and it is this night celd, not the bright rays of the moon, which damages the being. Shortly after the news of this discovery had leaked out, a friend wrote to Galileo in Ital; describing the contrivance of the Dutch optician and it was from this description that the Italian inventor built the telescope that made him famous-Newcastle Weekly Chronicle.

The Button in History The button is a product of modern civilization, since the ancient people did not have any such form of holding their clothes together. They were first used for ornamental purposes. The next step was the use of the button and loop, the buttonhole being last in the development. Buttons were first employed in southern Europe in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries Their manufacture in England did not commence until the reign of Elizabeth. The earliest mention of the buttonhole in literature occurs in the year 1561. While men's outer garments are still made with buttons and buttonholes, the trend of the present is away from such fastenings. Almost all women's clothes and many men's under-garments are now made without but-

Panhandle Plains Dairy Show, Plainview, Mar. 31

Lubbock, March 28.-A final check up and discussion of plans and details of the first annual Panhandle Plains Dairy Show will be made Saturday, March 31 when the board of directors, the executive committee and heads of all departments and all committees of the Panhandle Plains Dairy Show Association will meet at Plainview at two o'clock

D. F. Eaton, of Lubbock, president of the show, has issued an urgent call to all the above individuals as well as any interested itizens to attend the meeting.

Everything is in good shape for the show which will be held at Plainview, April 3, 4, 5, and 6 and interest indicates that the first show will go over in much bigger proportions than was ever hoped when it was first proposed to stage the dairy exposition.

Entries are coming in nicely and all those who have not yet sent in their entries have been asked to send them to Maury Hopkins, Plainview, assistant manager of the show.

Details for the sale in connection with the show have been worked out and buyers are expected to attend from all over the Southwest.

Over $4,00 in premiums in the pure breed classes, grade cattle classes and milk production contest are offered.

Fifty-four counties in the Panhandle Plains and sub-Plains section are included in the area that will draw entries to the show.

A call to every one interested in helping to build up the sec tion to attend the show next week is being made by officials of the Association.

Officials of the show association point to the value of the dairy industry to this section and are trying to develop it to the ghest possible point with this annual dairy show. Cooperation of all communities will produce the best results.

I. R. Kelso, President of Texas Utilities Company and New Mexico Utilities Company, on March 17, 1928, in a letter to Managers, announced plans for building a super power plant to be located near the load center of the territory served by these Companies. Copy of letter to managers reads as follows:

TEXAS UTILITIES COMPANY

St. Louis, Mo. March 17, 1928.

Mr. J. B. Scott, Manager, Texas Utilities Company, Plainview, Texas.

My dear Mr. Scott: I am pleased to report:

Super Power Plant

1. That Texas Utilities Company has definitely decided to build a monster steam power plant to be operated in connection with present generating stations of Texas Utilities Company and New Mexico Utilities Company. In selecting location for the proposed super power plant, the engineers will be controlled entirely by load center, necessary water supply to economically operate steam turbines, fuel gas supply, and economies to be effected by operating the new plant in connection with with existing generating plants of Texas Utilities Company and New Mexico Utilities Company.

City of Amarillo Standby Pumping Service

2. That Texas Utilities Company entered into a contract with Southwestern Public Service Company on February 8, 1928, under the terms of which Texas Utilities Company obligated itself to furnish standby or protected service for the water pumping system of the City of Amarillo at Lake Amarillo.

> Yours truly, (Signed) I. R. Kelso, President.

The announcement with regard to the building of a super power plant at this time is in line with the policy which these companies have always followed in respect to taking care of the territory served by building a number of generating plants with sufficient capacity to meet all of its requirements. Texas Utilities Company now has a number of generating stations which are interconnected with the generating stations of New Mexico Utilities Company

Manko Maize

This is a Dwarf Straight Necked Milo Maize, which has been recently developed by an experimental station. The origin of same is a cross between Blackhull Kaffir and Dwarf Milo, which was selected to a Dwarf, early straight neck plant and then crossed back to Dwarf Milo. Our experience with it has been uniformly dwarf, as early or earlier than regular Dwarf Milo and Straight necked.

The outstanding features of this Milo as furnished us by responsible people of Oklohoma, are, as follows:

The heads develop from ten to eighteen inches in length, the depending largely, of course, on the kind of soil and rain fall. Under favorable weather conditions, while it is in the making and in the average make up of the soil, it will easily yield

Seventy Five Bushels to the Acre

This being so, much more than the ordinary Dwarf Milo, farmers have almost unanimously come to the conclusion that this is the only kind of Milo to plant.

Your advantages in planting this seed are that it will make a greater yield, can easily be harvested with a row binder, wagon header or combine- Further, we do not believe that it will fall like the Dwarf Crooked Necked Milo, as it stands straight. will make you more profit per acre than any other grain and provide more fodder and fine feed.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetaable, you can give it as often as diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes than fifty acres of poor untilled land, with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its

If Back Hurts Flush Kidneys

Drink Plenty of Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water-you can't Wrink too much: also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trou-

TRIED MEN'S WORK

HE men folk of Padgett county were very chivalrous toward women so tong as they kept on their raised pedestals. But when they descended into a man's place they lost their right to homage.

Margaret Fitzgerald forfeited all when she stepped into her brother's inefficient shoes and tried to run the Fitzgerald plantation in a man's way -a real man's way. Her brother had not been a real man.

Her downfall was owing, perhaps, to her mother's being an invalid. It left her without the proper training, the proper idleness. The overlooking of the household intensified rather than toned down her natural energy. Both children had been left education money by their grandmother and both went counter to that grandmother's wishes. Ralph's ambition had been to evade study and all other responsibilities. Margaret took her money and went to a practical instead of a fashionable school, and from there to a coed college, where she competed with men, generally to men's discom-

Padgett county was rural, and its chief industries were melons and race tracks. The climate and soil had been found exactly suited to melons; and the large sums made sending trainloads of them to Northern markets there's a sign of colic; constipation; had, in her second generation, gone considerably to fast horses,

Margaret returned home just in time to attend her brother's funeral. But I was too fast in saying she stepped into her brother's shoes. Rather she stepped into new shoes of her own that were more serviceable The plantation had dwindled to less divided by broken fences. Margaret promptly substituted the word farm for plantation, to her mother's horror. and at once began plowing and harrowing and repairing fences with such shiftless labor as she could get. Negroes are copyists, and, therefore. they inwardly derided a woman who tried to do practical things. Though she was obliged to pay more she could not get nearly so efficient labor as her male neighbors.

Through good management and economy she had brought back part of her school money. This she tried to make go as far as possible. In fact. she was obliged to, for no more was viet museums will be augmented by in sight until her melon crop should

They start images of Alexander the Great and with high prices, and continue, with King Philip, 16 Roman coins, two of little falling off, for perhaps ten days Carthage, double gold coins bearing or two weeks; then the counties above images of Czarina Sophia, Czar Ivan begin to ship, and after a desperate and Peter the Great, coins of the clinging on for another week, Padgett y is dead. She cannot compete with the freight rates, and fully twothirds of her crop is allowed to decay in the fields, with a few fed to hogs and poultry. But none the less is she jubilant, for the early-cream prices have turned in her usual flood-tide of

They loitered over the plowing, and gossiped and shirked at the harrowing. neighbors got their seeds in, saw their plants rise above the surface and begin to grow, and still Margaret struggled with her preparations.

> Instead of following the usual custom of getting the most for the money. Margaret had expended $50 of her hoard for five pounds of seed when she might have had such as her neighbors bought for 75 cents a pound. But this was a wonderfu! new variety, of tested worth and much advertised.

> The neighbors were naturally kindhearted and cordial. Had a stranger come among them, a man, and started into melon-growing, they would have been quick with sound advice and with help in an emergency.

> This was different. They believed the best way to help Margaret was to hasten her to a knowledge of her folly. It would be less time wasted A neighbor who had bought fifty bounds of seed for much less than Margaret had paid for her five compared the difference as a proof that the woman was in a false position and should be encouraged out of it

> Meanwhile Margaret had gone into the field and grasped a plow with her small but determined hands in a last desperate effort to win out. She hoped it might influence the men toward more faithful work

In reality it had the contrary effect They never had seen a white woman at a plow before, and they became as openly derisive as they dared. Then Margaret wrote to a coed student who had kept very close to her through class after class. He was a young fellow who had worked his way through schools and college, and by his own unaided efforts raised himself high above most of the other students. He had a strong taste for agriculture and had studied with that end in view. He was unacquainted with melongrowing, as Margaret knew, but with his nature and knowledge he could soon master that part. Besides, what she needed just now was some one who could manage the negroes and make them work. Ray Northrup. with his forceful manner, would do that. Her letter ran:

"My Dear Ray: I'm up against it. I've risked my little all on a melon crop. But the neighborhood, my mother and my helpers are all against me because I am a woman. Down here, as I've told you, a woman should confine herself to playing the plane and being agreeable. Frankly, my prospects of a melon crop now look very small; it is too late. And just as frankly, I can't pay you anything for work at present. I'm broke clean. as the girls used to say when some one wanted to borrow for candy. "Don't you do that. Property obliknow I did tutoring and other jobs pocket."

"I couldn't-" "Got to. Workmen have to be paid on the minute, or they're only half workmen. I'll wait for the crop, and then take interest."

Before the next night he had the negroes in hurrled obedience, jumping to their work at his slightest look or nod. The land was finished and seeded in record time.

But it was too late. When their first melon ripened the neighbors had been shipping for two weeks. One shipment yielded a small profit, the next barely paid freight. The following day they looked over the field together. Thousands of melons, fully grewn, and many of them ripening, and other thousands in all stages of growth, lay before them. The ground itself was hardly to be seen for its covering of melons. "Well, what shall it be?" asked

"Yes, indeed, and with a good surplus left. Mark my words. Why, just look at the thousands of them, with their hearts packed full of legal-tender seeds." Then his face fell. "You are starting out to be a rich woman, and I've got just that $240 with interest."

"But half those melons are yours." she insisted. "I never would have thought of saving the seed by myself, even if I did hint. You must take half."

"And the owner?" with sudden boldness. "May I have her, too?" Only a moment did she hesitate.

"Why, yes, if .you want her. No one has more right, the way she

Rural School Needs Shown by Professor

A feeling of cultural inferiority persisted in persons trained in rural schools despite greater, though latent, educational possibilities in rural districts, Prof. Orville G. Brim of Ohio State university told Missouri county superintendents, meeting in the annual sessions of the Missouri State School Administrative association.

"Rural life has definite limitations of which the school must take particu-lar note," he said. "While ease and range of travel have improved and increased, variety, freedom and intimacy of social contacts have not kept pace. Intellectual contacts with the outside world suffers.

"Local cultural resources are lim ited; music, art, books, etc., are far too meager. Consequently a feeling of inferiority remains.

"To meet this situation the school must enlarge its capacity to serve."

Health Work Is Stressed in Home Demonstration Plan.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.) Health has always been closely related to and considered a definite part of almost every activity included in the home demonstration program. Much helpful and valuable health instruction is given in a more or less incidental way in connection with some other phase of the work, particularly with nutrition in its various aspects, such as food selection, food preparation, and meal planning. lunches has been to promote in mothers a greater interest in correct child feeding and to help educate children in food and health in such a way that hygienic habits would be formed early in life. The health score card has been widely used to call attention to such health factors as sufficient sleep. fresh air in the sleeping rooms, frequent bathing, care of the teeth, correct food selection, and weight as an indication of physical condition. Many of the farm children thus encouraged both at school and by their mothers to form good health habits, later become 4-H club members in which health is strongly emphasized. In addition to the skills they develop in demonstrating club activities, they must be free of physical defects in order to qualify as representatives of their clubs in many county and state contests. The total effect of this requirement is continual improvement in girls' physical condition and increased recognition of the importance of health.

The illustration, taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, shows a child keeping track of her own weight in connection with her health score card.

SPLIT PEA SOUP IS STANDBY ON OCEAN

Nothing More Welcome on Shipboard When Hungry.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economica. United States Department of Agriculture.) Ocean travelers are familiar with the filling, sustaining qualities of well-made pea soup, for it is a standby on every liner that plies between Europe and the United States. People are hungry on shipboard, and there is nothing more welcome than a savory, hot pea soup that appeases the ravenous appetites induced by the cold salty air. Similarly, on winter days, when the various members of the family come in out of the cold from work or school, a first course consisting of pea soup will go a long way toward filling them up agreeably -and at the same time, inexpensively. Dried split peas can be kept on hand for use at any time, but they must be soaked overnight before they are cooked, so this soup cannot be

Liver and Rice Source of Iron and Vitamines

Since nutrition specialists have pointed out the value of liver as a source of iron and vitamines in the dlet, many new ways of serving it are being suggested. The recipe be-low is from the bureau of home economics.

1 cup rice
4 slices bacon
4 lb. liver, sliced
1 tsp salt
1 onion, sliced
3 tbs. bacon fat 1 onion, sliced 3 tbs. bacon fa 1 cup rice water Few drops ta-basco.

Wash the rice free of all surface starch and cook it in 2 quarts of boiling water until it is soft. Drain the rice in a colander, cover it with a clean towel, and place it over hot water to steam and become flaky. Save some of the rice water. In the meantime, fry the bacon until crisp. remove it, and brown the onion in the fat. Salt and lightly flour the liver and fry it slowly in the bacon fat. after the onions are done. Cook the liver over low heat until the red color disappears, turning it frequently. Cut up the liver and bacon, mix with the onion, and add more salt to taste and a few drops of tabasco. Mix the bacon fat with the rice and make a layer of the rice in a greased baking dish. Add the liver mixture and continue until all the ingredients are used. Pour the rice water around the sides of the dish, cover and place the dish in the oven until thoroughly heated. Serve at once.

The illustration shows one of the most important of these-a new bathroom. made possible by the installation of a complete water system. This water system is supplied by a tank built on the exterior of the house above the second floor. The tank can be filled from the roof by gutters and also by a ram placed at a spring at the foot of the hill. A small, convenient, welllighted room on the second floor was made over into a bathroom with modern fittings. Water was also supplied to the kitchen, which was greatly improved in arrangement and equipment. Other remodeling that was done included the living-room, a sur. parlor and enclosed porch, and a nursery and upper enclosed porch, as well as the bathroom. The home demonstration agent under whose guidance such home improvements were made is emplayed co-operatively by the United States Department of Agriculture and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. There are now approximately 800 home demonstration agents employed in the 48 states.

FIRST WEEK IS CHICK'S CHANCE

The first seven days are the hardest a baby chick has to live. It is during this week that careful feeding and close attention to brooding and temperatures are especially impor-

Many poultrymen feed their chicks too young. A few make the mistake of waiting too long to give them their first feed. The proper time is between 48 and 60 hours after hatching, says J. G. Halpin, poultry specialist at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture. A chick ration, developed by poultry specialists at the college farm and used by thousands of poultrymen in Wisconsin and the Middle West, cons.sts of 80 pounds ground yellow corn, produced without notice. The recipe 20 pounds wheat middlings, 5 pounds is from the bureau of home economics. each of raw bone meal and chicksize oyster shell, and one pound of salt with skim milk to drink and plenty of sunlight.

This ration may be used as the first feed and continued until the chicks are several weeks old, says the specialist, who emphasizes that all ingredients must be of the highest quality. Using musty or moldy feed invites disaster to the brood and the same is true of the litter on the Close brooding and high temperatures also take their toll. The chicks will thrive better if given an opportunity to run about in the sun and kept at a slightly lower temperature during the day. He cautions against letting the temperature fall too low, which may cause crowding and smothering of the weaker chicks.

This attention should be carried through the following weeks, too. The chicks, after coming safely through the first week, must be kept growing every day if they are to return their owners the biggest profit.

Grains Are Essential

in Any Feeding Plan Farm-grown grains, corn, wheat and oats are good feeds and are essential in almost any feeding plan, but unless a good mash is also fed, they will do little more than maintain the life of the bird. Most state experiment stations have worked out formulas for mashes that may be home mixed, also numerous concerns are manufacturing prepared mashes. Either the home-mixed or commercial mash will give good results when fed as directed. They do not direct, however, that a little be fed today and some more next week, but tell you to keep it before the birds at all times. No one should expect one sack of mash to go very far in feeding 50 or 100 birds, any more than they would expect one feather to make a feather bed.

Give Chicks Chance

Taking the first hatched chicks away after they have become dry and fluffy may prevent the hen from leaving the nest with them before all the hatchable eggs are hatched. This is the chief advantage; they are not likely to be killed by the mother hen. Accidents in the nest do occur, of course, but, in consideration of possibilities, they are few. If chicks are taken away, they should be kept in a warm place in a covered basket and. when returned, given to the hen at

Q+0+0+0+0+0< Poultry Hints

Comfort and contentment are necessary if hens are expected to lay well.

From the hens' standpoint, the house that is dry, wind-proof, light, bright, and clean is most satisfactory.

Milk and water are not interchangeable, and milk is a real food for protein building when hens require it most.

The newly hatched turkey is a weak little creature and must have the best of care. It is said that only about 50 per cent of the turkeys hatched ever grow to maturity.

Profit made on a flock of poultry depends not on the cost of the house in which they are kept but upon the kind of house.

The turkey hen can hover about 14 eggs. If more are given, she is liable to let them chill, as her body cannot keep them warm enough to incubate.

Water forms a large part of the ingredients of the egg, and if the hen has not everything that goes into the manufacture of an egg, her body will, of course, refuse to produce one.

When one gives baby chicks all the milk they will drink it is not advisable to put any meat scraps in the ration. If no milk is given to them, tion a combination of meat scraps and dried milk would be all right.

Doctoring roup is not very satisfactery. Probably the best treatment is a dose of epsom salts, one-half pound to 100 grown birds, in the drinking water. Afterwards put enough potassium permanganate in the drinking water to give it a wine color.

Education by Mail

To meet educational needs of families living in remote parts of Manitoba and of children unable on account of physical handicap to attend school, a system of correspondence instruction has been inaugurated by the provincial department of education. It is estimated that about every fourth person in the province of Manitoba is seeking by study to reach a higher educational standard.

In Saskatchewan, where an outpost's correspondence school has been maintained for two and a half years, enrollment has reached 247. It is believed that about 20 per cent of the students are of foreign extraction.

That Comfortable

Easy feeling is what you experience when you trade at Stuart's Cash Grocery. We don't want you to have that vague, uneasy, uncertain feeling that you have not only paid for what you got this time, but maybe paid a right good installment on that "bargain" you thought you got last time. It also destroys one's appetite. Let us sell you at the lowest possible prices and feel right all the time. The best at the lowest, one day with another,

Nicaragua

The refusal of the Nicaraguan Chamber of Deputies to pass the McCoy electoral bill, providing for American supervision and insuring fairness in the approaching presidential election in that country, is evidence of the fact that the Conservatives under the leadership of Diaz were not so sincere in their expressed desire to Col. Stimson for a fair supervised election. Obviously, it is clear to them that the majority of their fellow countrymen are not in favor of the administration continuing to remain in their hands, as this bill was defeated by their efforts. Fifteen of the seventeen who voted for its passage are members of the Liberal

Before the intervention by U S. Marines the forces of the Liberals were gradually defeating the forces supporting Diaz and the former were approaching the capital city, Managua. Seeing that they were in iminent danger of defeat and overthrow the Conservatives gladly welcomed the Marines of this country, and when it was proposed by Col. Stimson that both parties lay aside their arms and await the outcome of the next election they agreed along with the Liberals. Now those in power express their gratitude to the United States by refusing to pass a law which makes a fair election

This refusal does not back the statements and contentions concerning the integrity and honesty of Diaz and his regime made by those responsible for the seemingly uncalled for intervention by the United States in the affairs of that small country. main about the same and apparently the lives of a goodly num not-yet." ber of American Marines have been uselessly sacrificed. Yet was some suppression of the sacrificed of the sacrification of the sacr the position of the United States is similar to that of one who has bridge. Our word has been given that recognition shall be given to the victorious party of the next election and that that election shall be fairly conducted. Yet, since the Chamber of Deputies has refused to pass laws providing for United States supervision of the election of October, it is wondered how the promise is to be fulfilled. It has been predicted that President Diaz will be called upon to issue an order to take the place of the bill that failed to pass. This prediction causes two questions. Will Diaz give such an order, and even if he should, would it be legal?

It has been stated officially that President Coolidge does not know that ratification of American supervision by the Nicaraguan Congress was absolutely necessary. On the other hand, without ratification it becomes necessary to force upon an administration that has been recognized by the United States something that is entirely adverse to their sentiments.

All in all the situation presents a dilemma that is hard to solve, one in which most any solution leads to further difficulties. In the meantime the forces of American Marines in that country are suffering almost daily casualties.
