Rand helped with the Christmas party plans. On little white cards, gay with candles and holly, they printed the invitation.

> Auntalmiry's Christmas Party at the Lone Pine Christmas Eve Five O'clock.

Just one week before Christmas, the Budlong boys waded through the snow all over the Evergreen end of the island, and delivered the invitations, one to every house. It could not have been more than ten minutes after she received the announcement that Alice Andover was to be seen sailing grandly up the bill, a sort of full-rigged majesty in her advance. Gay met her beneath the pine.

"Now don't blame me. I hadn't a thing in the world to do with it. I only lent her the cottage as she asked. She did everything herself. She sold everything she owns to pay for it. and it isn't going to cost you a cent. She has gone without jelly, gone without butter, gone without cake, gone without sugar-it's her party, and none of our business, if you ask me." Alice Andover sank weakly into a chair. "I might have known it. That's the thanks I get. That's now folks take to good, honest, conscientious dacity to invite me to the party." "Oh, please come! She'll be so disappointed if you don't come. She wants you to see how cleverly she has managed." "Oh, I'll come. And since she's got the unmitigated audacity to have a Christmas party in spite of my orders, I'll send my presents as usual. Oh, I always give little things-people been here for years-all in the family, you know, and I being the administrator. So you can tell the foolish old woman I'll send my presents as usual. I've never missed one of Auntalmiry's parties yet, not since that first devilcursed one fifty years ago when-"

"Oh, don't. She-she thinks maybe he is the Unknown Soldler at Washington; she-

Alice Andover stared. She opened her mouth, closed it with great firmness and blinked hard at times. "Unknown Soldier!-Good heavens. What next?" Then she added humorously, with a bright glint in her gray eyes, "Well, whatever he is, thank God, it is unknown. That's all I've got to say for Buddy Bridges-Unknown Soldier."

The next day Rand climbed the tall pine and strung it with Christmas lights from topmost point to lowest branches, round and round, a hundred little colored bulbs, and connected them to a switch beside the window where Auntalmiry could turn it on before the party. Auntaimiry was enchanted with the idea of wiring the tall pine; she had not dreamed of such royal welcome to her Christmas guests. For days before the party she talked of little else.

It was only three days before Christmas, the twenty-second of December, in the thick darkness of the early evening, that Ronald Ingram came again.

He entered hurriedly, his manner for the first time showing something troubled, something furtive. He glanced over his shoulder nervously. and closed the door behind him swiftly.

"I shouldn't have come," he began hurriedly. "But I had to. I came to Portland to close up some contracts. and I simply stole the time and made the trip over on the afternoon boat to see you. I must catch the first boat back. Short-but I had to see you. Gay, I have thought of you constantly. Your face has swum before my eyes, your voice rung in my ears. the light little touch of your fingers-"

He shook his head impatiently. "Mr. Ingram," she said with pretty dignity. "please dog't do that. I as sure you I do not like it."

"Oh, you think I am chaffing. But mean it. 1-Miss Delane, tell me. If I should sell out-all my interests-my business connections-would you-marry me? Would you even think of it? I know it is too soon for you to know- But would you let me come where you are, let me see you, try to make you love me- Is there any chance for me at all? I would have some money. I could take care of you. We could go any place-West, or to Europe, anywhere."

There was no doubting the sincerty of his words, the eagerness of his desire.

"Don't," Gay said gently. "You will spoil our pleasant friendship, and I have liked it. It is because you have been away, you have been lonely, perhaps worried. It isn't really I you want. Why, you don't even know me. It is just-woman, companionship. sympathy, soft things. That is all."

But he shook his head, clung to her hands. "Gay, it is you. Nothing else. Nobody else. You. From the moment saw you down in the cove- Oh, I know you don't love me now-but couldn't you? If I get things all straightened out, and-do something ise- Gay, isn't there a chance?"

From somewhere down the lane ounded the low siren of a car.

Ronald listened a moment, but still lung to her hand. "Gay, don't say no. Don't say anything. Just wait, think of me a little, and as soon as 1 canwill come again. But try to think of me-if not with love-at least with a little tenderness."

Quickly he lifted her hands, palms upward, kissed them passionately, one after the other, crushed them to his face and went away.

Gay sank into the big chair and buried her face in her arms. A criminal! That artless, boyish, ingenuous man, with the pleading voice and the eager eyes? But even a criminal deserves some kindness of thought from the woman to whom he gives his love. Gay was very kind.

The next day, very early, Rand appeared at her door, dressed roughly for outdoor winter weather in heavy oilskin coat and breeches. He was hurried in manner, preoccupied. He told Gay he was obliged to run down to Boston for a few days on business.

"Now you sit tight while I'm gone," he cautioned her. "I'm on the trail, and I'm going through with it. I've told the folks I'm looking for a job. and they won't expect me home until they see me. You just wait here. Say nothing to anyone. Do nothing. Don't set your foot in those woods any circumstances. And at night, Gay, please, to please me. go down and stay with Auntalmiry. And don't worry, for I shan't be in any

"You are not going to Boston," she said bitterly. "You are going into those woods, to lie under the plazza and watch the clubhouse, and try to catch those murderers. They'll catch you, first. Rand, don't, please don't. What business is it of ours if they break the law? What are their affairs to us? Why should you risk your life--' "Oh, there's no danger, Gay, not a bit of it. I'll be careful, I promise you. Just a little weather eye out for squalls. No, I am going to Boston. I have gone to Boston. Get that in your mind, and stick to it. I shan't be able to write you, and I may not be home for several days. Just wait for me, and don't worry."

But Gay did worry, worried heartbreakingly. But she would not go to Auntalmiry. Rand might come, and she wished to be there, waiting for him where he left her. He might need her-a shot in the night, a scream of terror-Gay set her small sleek head determinedly. Nothing, nothing in the world should keep her from going to him in answer if he called for help.

She was glad for the excitement of the Christmas preparations to occupy her hands, if not her thoughts, through the dreary days that intervened.

It never occurred to her that he would not be back by the twentyfourth of December for the party on Christmas eve. But the morning passed, and he did not come. Gay had no heart for the laughter, the young excitement of the island tovers, the flushed joyousness of Auntalmiry. Rand did not come. It would be Christmas eve, her Christmas eve, and Rand did not come.

At three o'clock Gay took Auntalmiry by the hand and led her down to the Apple Tree, where she put her bodily to bed, tucking the blankets about her and begging her to take a sadly needed rest.

So it could have been but very little after three when she softly closed the door of the Apple Tree behind her and set her feet in the path through the snow to the top of the hill. And glancing up, ahead of her in the path saw a man walking toward the cottage. Gay almost called out to him, expecting Rand, because she wanted Rand. But before sound left her lins she silenced the call, for she saw that it was a stranger, one who seemed to make his way unsteadily it the face of the brisk wind from the sea, staggering a little.

When he reached the plazza of the Lone Pine, he did not wait to knock, but opened the door slowly and went in, closing it after him. Gay was but a little way behind, and she ran in breathlessly, but stopped short in surprise when she did not find him in the living room nor the kitchen.

"Hello," she called. "Hello! Anybody up there?" But received no an-

Frightened by the unnatural silence, and mindful of Rand's words of warning, she want to the desk, slipped her pistol deftly into the pocket of her heavy coat, and then she climbed the stairs, watchful and alert.

And there indeed she found him, lying face downward on the soft rug of her bedroom floor. "Wh-what are you doing?" she demanded foolishly. "What do you want?" He neither mo ed nor answered. So Gay went to him timidly and bent over him that she might see his face. His eyes were closed, his lips hard set. She tried to raise him, but his head fell limply from her hands. She shrank away from him, shuddering with fear.

CHAPTER XI

The crisp voice of Alice Andover had never sounded so sweet to Gay's ears as at that moment.

"Gay Delane! Where are you? I saw you take that foolish creature home, so I came to see if I could-What is the matter?"

Gay beckened to her sternly from the top of the stairs. "Come up," she said, and her voice was hollow. 'Come up.'

Alice Andover was never one to hesitate in a crisis. She came at once, breathing hard. Gay pointed dramatically to the bedroom Alice Andover gave one wide-eyed glance and saw the prostrate form. "Good heavens, oh, good heavens! Where did he come from-where did you get him-I mean-"

"He came up the hill just ahead of me. Walked right in. Came upstairs, and evidently fell down there. Or lay down. There he is."

Alice Andover crossed the room and stood above him, touching the inert body tentatively with the toe of her

"Drunk," she said disgustedly. "Dead drunk." Gay breathed more freely, in some "Oh, is that it? I-was afraid of-oh, terrible things!" At that moment, spasmodically he moved, and his face rolled back into the light.

"Oh, oh!" Alice Andover's explana tion was a startled gasp. "Oh, my God, I believe- Oh, poor Almiry. I be lieve it is Buddy Bridges. Come home to his poor trusting mother-dead drunk. Oh, it is all my fault. Oh. what in the world have I done? Buddy Bridges-poor Almiry. All my fault."

"Buddy Bridges? Oh, really? Oh, Auntalmiry-how happy-" came sickening realization of the pain t would be to the little old woman to have him come home to her like this, dead drunk. Better a thousand times for her to live on in her trusting ignorance, fondly believing him an unknown hero, pure and fine. "Oh, poor Auntalmiry! See here, Mrs. Andover, this drunken creature shall not spoil the poor dear's Christmas party. The way she has slaved, and saved. and starved herself-- He shan't! Let her have one happy night-it may be her last, since Buddy came home like this. He shan't spoil it. Not if I have to poison him."

Alice Andover, trained to efficiency by years of hard administrating, suddenly became practical and decided. Being in charge of things always aroused her latent cleverness.

"We'll just roll him over in the corner out of the way," she said briskly, and cover him up with the rug, and let him sleep it off. We'll lock the door, and keep him here till it is over.'

"Will be stay drunk all night?" Gay askked. "Shouldn't we give him something-"

"Whisky! I wish we had some whisky. If we had time-maybe we could keep him drunk for a week. I don't know just how long it does last, but I know the party lasts all night. He may sleep it off."

"I have a little cognac. Brought it in myself-from Paris-in the toe of my dancing slipper. Real stuff," Gay said proudly. "I was keeping it for a wedding, but he can have that."

"Good! We'll give him a bigswig-of it." She brought out the nautical term with a nautical swagger, both doubtless inherited from the ong line of seafaring ancestors. "We'll keep him as-tight as a lorduntil the party's over."

Carefully but sternly they rolled him over half out of sight beneath the window-seat, and covered him.

So Gay brought the precious smuggled bottle of cognac, never yet unsealed, and they gave him a generous swallow, forcing the bottle between his teeth not without much difficulty. He choked over it and coughed pain fully, while the conspirators held their breath in a panic above him. But presently he relapsed into troubled breathing again. "That'll hold him for a while," said

Alice Andover grimly. They locked the door upon him and went downstairs. But when Alice Andover moved as if to go to her own home. Gay refused to be left alone in the house with the drunken creature upstairs, and Alice Andover was obliged to remain, fixing herself up for the party as well as she could with Gay's face powder and electric curlers. They had tea to strengthen their shattered nerves, and at five o'clock tiptoed up to the bedroom to give him another potent draught of the cognac. He swallowed this time with less difficulty, and as he drank, to their horror, his eyes opened, eyes large and dark, Gay noticed even in that horrible moment, eyes now visionless, not seeing. When the muffled heavy breathing recommenced, they tiptoed from the room.

Alice Andover, because the opening of his eyes had frightened her, was freshly furious. She shook her fist at the door when it was safely locked behind her.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It cannot harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

HARD-COOKED EGGS IN WHITE SAUCE GOOD

Appetizing Way of Serving Eggs.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are many appetizing ways of serving eggs after they have been hard cooked. One of the best liked is to reheat them in a white sauce, either cut in halves lengthwise, or with the whites and yolks separated. In this case the whites are often cut up into small pieces and mixed with the sauce, while the yolks are pressed through a potato ricer and sprinkled over the entire dish. Eggs served in this way are sometimes called "goldenrod eggs."

The bureau of home economics gives these directions for preparing goldenrod eggs for a lunch or supper

Allow one cupful of sauce to each four eggs. A tablespoonful of chopped green pepper or minced parsley may be added. To make the white sauce, blend two tablespoonfuls of butter with one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, add gradually one cupful of milk and stir until thick. Season with one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper or paprika.

Arrange the toast, covered with the whites in the sauce, on warm individual plates or on a warm platter. Sprinkle the riced yolks over the top simmering point for 30 minutes. This of each portion and serve immediate-

Lemons have a new importance in the diet, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. They are no longer to be valued simply for their flavor, but also as a source of vitamines. Lemons can be used in all sorts of ways in the preparation of meals. There is a long list of beverages and desserts in which lemon juice is used, as well as a number of delicious sauces that expert cooks have invented to serve on fish and meat. this course.

TURKEYS REARED LIKE CHICKENS

Turkey rearing has been profitable when chick rations and methods of management have been used during growing period. The results of four years' experimental work with turkeys at Purdue university has shown that the turkey is very similar to the chicken in its feed and management requirements, in spite of the general belief that it belongs to the range country, must be hatched by hens, fed a special diet and given an endless amount of care the first few weeks of brooding.

Turkeys have been reared on limited grass range, confined to pens with outside platforms for direct sunlight and in pens with no direct sunlight when the ration carried 2 per cent cod liver oil.

The "all mash" and grain and mash type chick rations have been used with equally good results. When the "all mash" ration was used succulent feed, liquid milk, grit and grains were not fed, with apparently no unfavorable effect on the growth or mortality of the poults.

The factors that have been found most important for brooding are: 1. A good brooder with a temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit under the hover the first two weeks and adequate heat as long as the poults show a need for it. 2. A good chick ration fed in the same way one would feed chickens. 3. A clean pen and clean range (if used) throughout the growing period.

Wet Mashes Should Be

Fed to the Goslings Goslings should be fed soft feeds. or in other words wet mashes, made up of say four parts corn meal, three parts wheat bran and one part red the prices for bunch asparagus are dog. Five per cent of meat scraps should be added when one week old. in abundance. The main point about This mash may be mixed with water or skim milk and fed in a trough, if scalded and allowed to cool so much the better. One precaution, which many beginners do not take, is necessary because goslings must have a certain amount of grit. This should consist of fine clean sand, which may be put in the bottom of the drinking dishes or added to the mash, one pound of sand to 100 pounds of mash. This mash should be fed four times daily for the first two weeks; three times daily for the next two weeks, and then, morning and night will do, provided, of course, they have plenty of range.

for Raising Broilers Heavier breeds should be used for broller production, even though they do mature slightly less rapidly than tered bread crumbs. Place in an over light breeds. Any of the heavier breeds will be found satisfactory-the particular breed adopted for the purpose depending for its success upon the way it is handled. Just as we often make the statement that there is no best breed for egg production, so we will make the statement that the tender portion from the stems. there is no best breed for broiler production. There is a greater variation the tips in a small amount of salted between the individuals within a breed water for five or ten minutes or until than there is between breeds, and for soft. Close Inbreeding With Turkeys Is Dangerous

Close inbreeding with turkeys, as with all forms of live stock, must be carefully guarded to safeguard vitality. If you had but one old turkey hen so that you know that the young tom and young hens to which you refer are full brother and sister, there might be some danger in mating them, unless they are all especially strong and well developed. If you had more than one hen last year so that these birds might be only partly related the dangers would be much lessened; but vitality and development are essential even there and must always be guarded.

Favor White Hollands

White Holland turkeys are greatly esteemed by those who raise them. They are inclined to be more docile than the other breeds. Probably they amount of water until almost tender. are not quite as vigorous. The ques-Beat the eggs slightly, add the milk tion of health is one of foundation

Undoubtedly the feathers of the White Holland are more highly prized than those of other breeds. The Bronze is the largest breed and undoubtedly excels the other in vigor until set in the center. Serve at once, and vitality.

Renewing Hen Flock

It may not pay to replace entirely your older hens with pullets every year, especially if you have Leghorns which are likely to lay pretty heavily in their second season. The cost of raising an entire new flock may offset the gain from a larger egg yield. But about half the older birds ought to be replaced with pullets, and the sale of the old hens and broilers, together with the heavier egg production will usually show a profit from 7 x 2=14 x 2=28 Billion

Rocks to Tell History

A history of the world told in rocks of each period, with words of pebbles and the pages of stone, is being prepared by Dr. A. R. Cook, who has just returned to England from a geological expedition to a number of districts in North America. He says that he will use the walls of a corridor in a museum for his history. Initial "pages" will show only stone formations. They will be followed by the first-known types of life embedded in stone, and then by fish, birds and reptiles, until human remains are reached.

the bright spring sunshine is very pleasant, and because of it the house seems fresher and cleaner. Later, however, when the sun becomes unbearable, shades have to be lowered in place of the curtains that have been put away. Shades shut out both light and air. The modern way is to use very simple, easily washed curtains and keep them up the year around, laundering them as often as they need it. In very formal homes sometimes two sets of draperies are used-heavy ones for winter and gay, light-weight curtains for summer,

There seems little excuse for having bedroom or lower floor closets full of unused articles so that they are not cleanable when the room is cleaned. In apartments or small houses where storage space is limited, the top part of a closet can usually be devoted to storing boxes of out-of-season clothing and other articles.

When it comes to the actual weekly care of any room, the bureau of home economics has a few suggestions: Have a definite plan. Dust and remove small pictures and bric-a-bracs from the room or place in a pile and cover. Pin draperies up unless they are to be taken down for cleaning. Dust and cover furniture, mirrors, and pictures before beginning to sweep. Both sweeping and dusting should be done so as to remove as much dust as possible, not to scatter it. Radiaters or registers should be cleansed also the grate, stove, or fireplace. Then work from the top of the room

More Canning In More Kitchens

We have advanced far in the knowledge of quality in foods and the nutritive needs of the body, and probably no one item in kitchen management means so much to the housewife, not only from the standpoint of economy, but the general welfare of her family, and good living, as the canning of vegetables and fruits.

A healthy diet must include vegetables. The housewife of today knows that, and to keep her table suppled during the winter months is one of her liv ing problems.

The art of canning in one form or another is as old as civilization itself. The Chinese possessed the secret long before the era of modern civilization. They sterilized their fruits and vegetables and made preserves and jellies, but "why" they sterilized them was unknown to them.

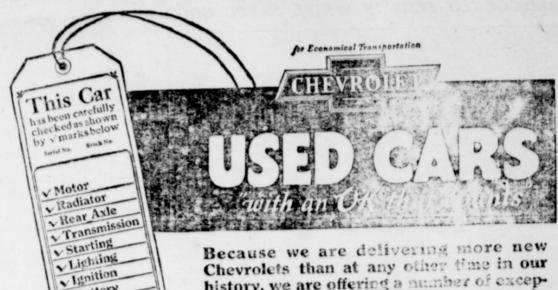

Even in 1883 methods of can ning were primitive compared with present-day methods and improved canning equipment.

Like most other manufacturing industries, the process of canning has undergone a complete change, as the scientific principles involved have become understood, and that the great secret lies in what is known as complete sterilization, and the exclusion of air from canned products which was formerly supposed to be so important, is unnecessary provided the

This is a Dwarf Straight Necked Milo Maize, which has been recently developed by an experimental station. The origin of same is a cross between Blackhull Kaffir and Dwarf Milo, which was selected to a Dwarf, early straight neck plant and then crossed back to Dwarf Milo. Our experience with it has been uniformly dwarf, as early or earlier than regular Dwarf Milo and Straight necked.

The outstanding features of this Milo as furnished us by re-

Seventy Five Bushels to the Acre

This being so, much more than the ordinary Dwarf Milo, farmers have almost unanimously come to the conclusion that this is the only kind of Milo to plant.

Your advantages in planting this seed are that it will make a greater yield, can easily be harvested with a row binder, wagon header or combine. Further, we do not believe that it will fall like the Dwarf Crooked Necked Milo, as it stands straight. will make yov more profit per acre than any other grain and provide more fodder and fine feed.

famous American Duels

By ALFRED SORENSEN

T A dinner party given in London in 1772 by General Oglethorpe, who took quite a prominent part in the settlement of Georgia, a discussion rose over the question whether elling was consistent with moral duty. Dr. Samuel Johnson, who was one of the guests, maintained that a man had a right to defend his honor. Turning to Boswell, his biographer, he asked: "What would you do if you were affronted?" "I should think

It necessary to fight," was his reply. "That solves the question," said Goldsmith. "No, sir!" emphatically declared Johnson, "it does not follow that what a man would do is therefore right. He who fights a duel does not fight from passion against his antagonist, but out of self-defense to avert the stigma of the world, and to prevent himself from being driven out of society. I could wish there were not that superfluity of refinement; but while such notions prevail no doubt a man may lawfully fight a duel."

Henry Clay, who fought two duels-one with Humphrey Marshall, and the other with John Randolph-held virtually the same opinion as Doctor Johnson, and advocated the passage of a bill by the United States senate against duelling. He admitted, however, that "the man with a high sense of honor and nice sensibility, when the question is whether he shall fight or have the finger of scorn pointed at him, is unable to resist; and few, very few, are found willing to adopt such an alternative."

During the days of chivalry in the southern states it required great moral courage not to accept a challenge, and there were very few refusals. John Randolph, whose duel with Clay was a bloodless affair, was challenged several times, but declined owing to "religious scruples." When he stood in front of Clay his hair-trigger pistol was accidentally discharged, muzzle downwards, before the word to fire was given. In the second round Clay missed his mark, and Randolph fired up in the air. Thereupon they "made up" and shook hands. Randolph was frequently branded as a coward, and was once publicly "posted" by Gen. James Wilkinson in the following insulting language: "In justice to my character I denounce to the world John Randolph, member of congress, as a prevaricating, base, calumniating scoundrel, poltroon and coward."

Notwithstanding this great provocation, as well as others of a like character, Randolph stood firm in his determination not to engage in "affairs of honor." In replying to Wfikinson's challenge Randolph concluded his note by saving: "I cannot descend to your level. This is my final answer.' This was the cause of Wilkinson's vitriolic "posting" of the congressman from Virginia.

In 1785 Gen. Nathaniel Green twice declined to accept a challenge from Captain Gunn of Georgia, who thereupon threatened to personally assault him. But Gunn failed to carry out his threat as General Green sent him word that he was prepared to defend himself as he always carried pistols.

Gen. Sam Houston turned down several challenges. "If they quarrel with me that is their privilege," said he, "but I shall try to take care that they do me no harm."

Fabius Stanley and Zechariah Johnston, United States naval officers, had a misunderstanding in 1850 and the former sent the latter a challenge. Johnston refused to fight, thereupon Stanley "posted" him as a coward in a Washington hotel. and was court-martialed and dismissed from the navy.

General Harney, whose courage no one ever doubted, was challenged by General Summer, but instead of accepting he had the moral stamina to have the challenger court-martialed.

In 1884 John S. Wise, member of congress from Virginia, in replying to those who expected him to resent some severe newspaper assaults by fighting a duel with Page McCarty, said: "Mc-Carty's abuse of me has no more effect than a dog barking at the moon. His invitation comes too late. Time has been when I might have been fool enough to indulge in such folly, but with age, and with a broader view of life and its responsibilities, I have bidden farewell to the McCarty type of manhood,"

Sir Walter Raleigh, after he had killed several men in doels, and had declared that he would never fight again, was challenged by a young man to whom he replied. "If I could as easily wipe from my conscience the stain of killing you as I can this spittle from my face you should not live another minute."

Although duels, in various forms and with rules differing from time to time, date back to remote ages, "when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," it was not until early in the Sixteenth century of the Christian era that duelling was adopted in Europe as a method of settling so-called "affairs of honor" in accordance with an established code. So prevalent did duelling become in France that Louis XIII issued an edict against the practice and sent many duellists to the scaffold. This severity, however, did not much abate the sanguinary encounters, but early in the reign of Louis XIV quite a number of noblemen, whose courage was unquestioned, made a compact to refrain from the fighting of duels. Their stand caused a falling off in these combats, and in 1644 Louis XIV organized a court chivalry to pass judgment on "affairs of honor," which up to that time had been settled by a resort to arms. Today there is a law in France making the killing in a duel punishable as a homicide. In recent years duels have been of rare occurrence in France, generally resulting harmlessly and regarded as a joke carried out for notoriety.

In the United States-especially in the South and in California-duels were very common up to the close of the Civil war, army and navy officers and politicians being the most frequent participants. Today, however, a meeting to "shoot it out" on the "field of honor" is an unheard-of event and would be a front-page sensation.

One of the most determined and desperate duels ever fought in the United States was that in which DeWitt Clinton and John Swartout exchanged shots five times. It was the result of differences and bitter quarrels between the political followers of Clinton and the adherents of Asron Burr

DeWitt Clinton was admitted to the bar of New York at an early age, and immediately entering the school of politics he became an apt pupil under the tutorship of his uncle, George Clinton, Republican leader and governor, who made him his secretary and appointed him to other secretarial positions. George Clinton was a deputy in the New York provincial congress; a brigadier-general in the Continental army; was successively elected governor of New York from 1777 to 1795; then served in the legislature; was again elected governor in 1800; and was made vice president of the United States in 1804, filling that office until his death, eight years later.

DeWitt Clinton rose rapidly to eminence and power in the Republican party, and had fully as distinguished a career as his talented uncle. When he was twenty-eight years old he was elected a member of the lower house of the legislature, and the following year he became a state senator. From that time to the end of his life he was, with brief interims, a continuous office-holder. He was United States senator from 1801 to 1803, when he resigned to accept appointment to the office of mayor of New York city After serving four years in this position he was removed, but was reappointed two years later. He was again put out of this office in 1810, but was reinstated and continued to serve as mayor

Clinton was an unsuccessful Presidential can didate in 1812. From 1811 to 1813 he held the honorary office of lieutenant-governor, and in 1817 be was elected governor; was re-elected in 1820; declined to be a candidate two years later: and was again elected in 1824 and in 1826. His brilliant and remarkably successful career was cut short by death while still in office.

Clinton was a public-spirited citizen. At the very beginning of his career he was an earnest advocate of public improvement. It was owing to his efforts that the Erie canal was built, and this great achievement added much to his popularity.

Clinton and Burr became engaged in flerce political disputes in which offensive personalities were the outstanding features. John Swartout, an intimate friend and defender of Burr, became more or less mixed up in the quarrels of the

Swartout, who had himself been nard hit by

Clinton's vituperative references, took up an active defense of Burr and charged that Clinton's vicious attacks were based on personal and selfish motives. This angered Clinton, who denounced Swartout as a llar, a scoundrel and a the Israelites are to be the central villain. Such vilifying epithets were more than Swartout could stand and he accordingly challenged Clinton, who promptly accepted.

The shooting match took place in 1802 on the ground at Weehawken, N. J., where the famous duel between Burr and Hamilton was held in 1804, and where Hamilton's son had been killed in a duel in 1801. On reaching the designated spot Swartout demanded that Clinton should sign a written apology. Clinton indignantly refused to do anything of the kind. Just before taking their places Clinton remarked: "I wish I had the principal here." He referred to Burr, who, if he had stood before Clinton at that meeting, might not have lived to kill Alexander Hamilton.

Clinton by Richard Riker. The first shots were resents the redeemed who shall pass harmless. Riker, in accordance with the instruction of his principal, now requested Colonel Smith to ask Swartout if he was satisfied. "I am not," was his answer. Another exchange of shots were made without effect, and again Swartout was not satisfied. A third exchange resulted without injury, and Swartout, upon being again asked if he was satisfied, replied: "I am not, and I shall not be until the apology is made which I have demanded." His defiant attitude was certainly that of Macbeth who shouted: "Lay on, Macduff!

And d-d be him that first cries 'Hold, enough!' The prepared apology, dictated by Swartout, was again presented to Clinton for his signature, with the declaration that if he refused to attach his name the fight must go on to the finish. Climton declined to sign any paper regarding the matter in dispute, and said that "he had no animosity against Mr. Swartout and would willingly shake hands and agree to meet him on the score of former friendship." This friendly offer was declined and the combatants resumed their positions and fired the fourth shot. This time Swartout was wounded in the left leg, about five inches below the knee. He was not disabled and insisted upon proceeding with the contest, saying that it was useless to ask him to quit. At this stage of the affair Clinton once more asserted that he entertained no animosity. Furthermore, he stated he was sorry for what had occurred, and then offered to shake hands and forget the past. While this conversation was in progress, the attendant surgeon extracted the bullet from Swartout's leg.

For the fifth time he faced Clinton, and was again wounded in the left leg, a few inches above the ankle. Still standing, and determined as ever, perplexity. The immediate cause of this he called for another shot, Thereupon Clinton refused to comply, and walked away. Swartout said he was much surprised at his action in neither apologizing nor affording full satisfaction.

While Clinton was in the United States senate he became involved in another "affair of honor." In the course of an animated debate he had used language that was offensive to Senator Dayton of New Jersey, who was a friend of Burr. The next day Dayton sent him a challenge which was accepted without any long-winded correspondence. They met on October 24, 1803, and upon Clinton making a satisfactory explanation and offering an apology the duel was called off.

Two years after this incident Swartout fought duel with Riker, who was severely wounded. Riker became a judge of the city recorder's court of New York, and served on that bench for many years.

Early Recreation Spots

The earliest form of a public preserve devoted to outdoor recreation in the territory of the present United States was a city park, Boston common, acquired in 1634. The next example of public action of this kind covered a field related to that at present usually held by state agenciesthe reservation to the people for "fishing and fowling," by an ordinance of the Massachusetts Bay colony in 1641, of "great ponds," water surfaces of ten acres or more. The first state park of larger size, set apart primarily for recreation. was one which is now a famous national park, Yosemite. Congress ceded it to California in 1865, and later it was returned to federal control.

TRANSFIGURATION AND SERVICE

LESSON TEXT-Mark 9:2-29. GOLDEN TEXT-He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit; for apart from me ye can PRIMARY TOPIC-Jesus Shows His

JUNIOR TOPIC-Jesus Shows His INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-C-What Faith and Prayer Can Do. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC-The Meaning of the Transfigura-

When Christ announced His death which was to take place on the cross, the disciples were unable to see how victory could issue from death. Jesus took with Him Peter, James and John into the mountain.

Two men from the upper world were sent to converse with Jesus about His approaching death at Jerusalem-the very thing about which the disciples refused to talk. The transfiguration is therefore a foregleam of the coming kingdom.

I. Jesus Christ Glorified on the Mountain (vv. 2, 3). He took the disciples "by themselves" and was "transfigured before them." This shows that the purpose of the transfiguration terminated upon the disciples and not on Christ. Christ's rebuke of Peter for his unwillingness to hear concerning His death apparently for a time estranged the disciples from Him. To beal this breach an enusual transaction was required. His shining raiment was typical of that glory which shall be manifest when Christ comes back to the earth. His appearance on the mountain typifies His visible appearance on the Mount of Olives (Zech. 14:4, 9).

II. Peter, James and John Represent Israel in the Flesh in Connection With the Kingdom (v. 2). Christ is peculiarly the King of Israel. According to Ezekiel 37:21-27, people in the kingdom. This people shall be gathered from among the nations and united as one in that kingdom, in their own country

III. Moses and Elias Appeared in Glory With Jesus (vv. 4-13).

These men in the glorified state are typical of the state of the saints in glory. Moses, who was once denied an entrance into Palestine, appears now in glory representing the redeemed of the Lord who shall pass through death into the kingdom. Multitudes of the Lord's own who have fallen asleep shall be awakened at Christ's coming Swartout was seconded by Colonel Smith, and and pass into the kingdom. Elias repinto the kingdom through translation. Some shall be living upon the earth when the Lord shall come, and they, without dying, shall be changed and thus pass into the kingdom (I Cor. 15: 50-53; I Thess. 4:14-18).

1. Peter's proposal (vv. 5, 6). So definitely was the method of the kingdom unfolded before Peter that he proposed to erect tabernacles for Christ, Moses and Elijah. It is true that the unveiling of the majestic person of Christ and the panoramic display of the kingdom somewhat disconcerted Peter; yet he grasped its central meaning and proposed to celebrate the advent of the kingdom which had been prefigured in a tangible way. 2. The divine voice out of the cloud (vv. 7, 8). God declared Jesus to be His beloved Son in whom He was well pleased. If one would know what is pleasing to God, let him study Jesus. who perfectly did His Father's will.

3. Jesus' charge (vv. 9-13). He charged them that they should tell no man concerning the things which they had seen until He had risen from the dead.

IV. A Demonstration of the Purpose of the Establishment of the Kingdom (vv. 14-29).

When they descended from the mountain of transfiguration they witnessed a great multitude in a state of state was the grievous condition of a young man possessed with a demon (v. 18). The father of the young man had appealed to the disciples to cast the demon out, but they were unable to do so. When they brought him unto Jesus, the foul spirit was rebuked and came forth. This young man's state is representative of the nations who are oppressed by the Devil. Just as this young man was grievously oppressed, causing him to east himself into the fire and into the waters, so the nations today in their perplexity are doing the things which will result in their own destruction. The Devil will be peculiarly active in the oppression of men and nations in the last days.

Good Job for Hermit

Washington.-The lighthouse keep- | instruments, the towerman keeps con- | ment have employed women observor, the prospector, the sheep herder have lonely jobs, but what is probably the loneliest of all is that of the for-est-fire observer. Perched high on some towering mountain top in the cabin of his steel tower, surrounded for miles about by almost inaccessible forest, the fire observer goes for weeks, often months, without seeing another human being.

Not all contact with the world, however, is lost, for by the very nature of his work be must be in daily and sometimes hourly telephone communication with the ranger's or forester's headquarters. Equipped with the indispensable telephone, his maps, range ander, binoculars and meteorological

He must understand telephone line repair, must be able to read maps and know enough about triangulation to locate forest fires by taking their bearings, must be able to make temperature and humidity readings on a wet and dry bulb thermometer, and he must be able to cook his own meals.

These towers, the more modern of which are of galvanized steel, vary in height from 20 to 100 feet, though there are some even higher. When built on the highest peak of a moun tain range a 60-foot tower will usually permit a view of all the surround ing forest. In clear weather the observer may be able to see 40 miles or more, but the average visibility is between 10 and 20 miles.

It is customary for political parties to include almost anything they want to in a state or national platform and the people in general pay very little attention to it. However, the platform is the authoritative word of the party, setting forth what it has done or expects to do, and at least the party in power should be judged to a great extent by the fulfillment of its platform promises. Sometimes the party in power is unable to put over its program for one reason or another, but there is always ample proof that it has tried or has not tried, whichever the case may be, and it can be judged by its sincerity of purpose if not by its accomplishments. In 1924 the Republicans promised the American farmers relief from the deplorable conditions in which they were then in. In 1928, at the recent convention at St. Joseph, they called attention to what they claimed was the fact that the party had fulfilled its pledge by including farm products "in the national program of protection." This claim of the Republicans that they have attempted to help the farmer in any way

"There is a tide in the affairs of men which taken at its flood leads on to fortune."

Seven thousand baby chicks is the tide that has come through the agency of the Sudan News to be reared in different portions of our community, to enrich our people and put Lamb in the front ranks of poultry producers. These chicks are all full stock and unusually thrifty.

When our producers get thoroughly stocked up with the kind of chicks that are arriving here daily, the pink boll worm will be an outcast, and even cotton itself will be an insignificant "side line." We can let the people back East have a monopoly on it, and we can buy their goods with chicken money.

The editor has 400 of these little money makers in his brooder house in his back yard, where any one can get a fair idea of what can be done in this line. What we can do you and the other fellow can do.

As the season is advancing, we would advise all who wish to order chicks to do so at once, especially for the popular breeds.
