I have been wonderfully blessed in being restared to active life after being crippled in nearly every joint as my body and with muscular screeness from head to foot. I had Rheumatoid Arthritis and other forms of Rheumatism, hands deformed and my ankles were set. Limited space prohibits telling you more here but if you will write me I will reply at once and tell you how I received this wonderful relief.

We are very dry here but we do hope that you paused long enough in your observance of the 4th of July to remember and to remind your children of all the blessings which we enjoy as the Family of Uncle Sam. We hope all of you saw' the Flag of the U. S. A. and said a silent prayer that we may help to hold it high in our ideals and in all the traditions from which it stands. We even hope that you either helped sing The Star Spangled Banner, America the Beautiful and My Country 'Tis of Thee, or at least thought of those words.

The Dying Towns of Texas

(Editor's Note: Following are parts of an address by Attorney General John Ben Shepperd to the Jacksboro Chamber of Commerce, April 24. Castro County almost doubled its growth between 1940 and 1950, but this was not so in more than half the other counties of Texas, which lost population during the same time. Mr. Shepperd tells why many of these and other counties and cities in Texas are losing their people, and consequently much of their initiative.)

lost population during the same time. Mr. Shepperd tells why many of these and other counties and cities in Texas are losing their people, and consequently much of their initiative.)

I want to talk to you about a subject that politicians ordinarily avoid. I've been accused many times of being brash—of wading in where angels fear to tread. But this matter is of deep concern to me, and it also concerns you. I want to talk about what is happening to many of the small towns of Texas, and why.

Take a trip sometime from the Oklahoma border through Wichita Falls, and down through Corsicana to the Coast. It makes you sick to look at the dying towns. In some of them you don't see any children in the streets. You don't see any cars in front of the houses. There is no bustle or activity. It makes you feel that private initiative is dead. Some of these little towns have tried desperately to bring in new business and industry. Chambers of Commerce have met until three in the morning. Foundations have been set up in the hundred of thousands of dollars to attract new industry, usually with little success. Many of these towns are losing what little industry they have.

Worse than that, they're losing their people. What are we going to do about the exodus of people away from the small towns? Those that don't actually lose population fail to gain as much as they should. The people leaving the farms pass them by and go to the city.

One hundred and forty-six counties in Texas—more than half of the 254—lost population between 1940 and 1950. One out of every four pulled out. That has been changed (in Jacksborro), but not in many other towns.

A certain part of this is normal migration. It has been going on since 1800 when only 5 per cent of the people lived in the city. Nowadays it takes more people to work the factories and fewer to work the farms.

But some of this exodus is not only abnormal, it is fatal to the little towns. A lot of middle-aged people are living in the city suburbs. A lot of middle-aged people are living in t due to the fact that the younger people are moving into industrial areas, while older people tend to remain in the same location."

We can illustrate that fact with Andrews County in West Texas, where oil developments lifted its population 290 per cent; or with the Houston area, which gained more than a quarter million new residents in one decade. . In the counties of West Texas along the Coast, and in the Valley, where population has grown, the number of people over 65 is sometimes as low as one per cent of the total. That's where the young people have gone.

For the first time in history, the percentage of Texans living on the farm or in the small towns has fallen below the national average. We're more citified than most other states. Forty-seven Texans out of every hundred are living in the 15 big cities of the state; that's three-fourths of all the people who live in towns of more than 2,500 people. . . . I find a lot of older people spitting at the young ones about it, and the young ones spitting at the young ones about it, and the young ones spitting at the older. The old people say, "There are very few young people leth in my town, and the ones there are don't want to do anything. They don't have any initiative. They don't lift themselves by their bootstraps . . . " But the young people say, "There's no chance in my home town. They don't lift themselves by their bootstraps . . . " But the young people say, "There's no chance in my home town. They don't want any competition. A lot of people are living on their insurance and savings and they don't want any new business to change the old landmarks or distrub the quiet. They won't sell their real estate. There's nothing to do but get out."

This seems like a two-fold problem—getting new business and industry on the one hand and holding the people on the other. But it is the same problem. A lot of Chambers of Commerce have said, "If we can just bring in some new industry, our people won't leave." But maybe it's the other way around. Maybe if we find the means

Department of Industry and Commerce to help—... small towns stay alive; to help them survey their resources and potentialities, their water supplies, and their industrial advantages. Most of them do not even have the funds to look around and find out what resources they have that industry would want, or that they could use to start their own industry. ... We don't have any such agency, and we are losing millions of dollars a year in new business. I don't believe in burdening taxpayers. Such a department could be financed on a self-liquidating basis. It could pay its own way.

Many youngsters are growing up and going away to school on scholarships every year. Why not give some of them jobships? Why not set up a foundation to determine what a town needs in the way of professional or business people and send youngsters away to be trained to fill the gap? If you need a veterinarian, train one and bring him back home to work. If you need a mechanic or lawyer, train him. Train nurses. Train doctors. Train architects. We need to do less reting and more screting.

him. Irain nurses. Irain doctors. Train architects. We need to do less geting and more creating.

The people of Texas are entitled to other things, too. They are entitled to a forward-looking, energetic local government and business leadership. . . . If one little community is drooping or dying out, it hurts all its neighbor-

OPERATION IVY

The first full-scale thermonuclear explosion in history took place at the Pacific Proving Ground of the Atomic Energy Commissiion in November 1952, and was designated as "Operation Ivy." During this operation a series of colored motion pictures were taken, both for the historical record and for information and educational purposes. This film was highly restricted until April 1, 1954, at which time it was released, in black and white copies only, to television, radio and press. Further restrictions on the colored version of the film have been released in part, and I have been released in part, and I have been able to purchase one of the colored versions. This will be made available to any of the groups that desire to view the film. It is 16-millimeter size and requires approximately 28 minutes to screen. It occurred to me that many of the people in the 18th Congressional District would want to have a first-hand view of this explosion. I will be happy to loar the film which has a sound track, to any groups desiring it if you will write me. Just address your communication to Walter Rogers, Member of Congress, 1712 House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

FOREIGN AID AND THE FARMERS

The House of Representatives considered two bills during the week of June 28. The first was the Foreign Aid bill, which involved an expenditure of approximately three and a half billion dollars. The second was the Agricultural program in this country. I was somewhat amazed at the ease with which the Foreign Aid bill sailed through the House. A bill providing three and a half billion dollars, in addition to the nine billion plus already appropriated but unexpended, to be spent overseas. I voted against this bill, as I have similar bills in the past, for the reason that I do not believe that this country is getting value received or near for the dollars being spent under this program. I have long contended that this money could and would produce ten times the results if it were operated on the basis of exchanging the products of this country in which we are in oversupply for the use of the manpower in many of these countries in which they are in oversupply for the top of the manpower in many of these countries in which they are in oversupply weapon in the battle against Communism. It would enable many an American boy to remain on his home shores to help produce the goods, wares and merchandise needed in this fight, and it would also enable the manpower of these recipient countries to stand up and be counted against Communism and do something about it. In addition, it would furnish the economic aid more effectively because the funds for the services rendered would reach the individual citizers. In many instances in the past it has been definitely shown that tremendous amounts of these foreign aid funds paid over to the governments of these countries suffered a terrific evaporation loss before they reached the people in the every-day walks of life. Such a process would also remove from any of the funds, goods, wares or merchandise, ary taint of charity.

Just after the House had increased the funds available for foreigners to some there and a half billion blus dollars, the agriculture bill was brought before the Ho foreigners and for the farmers. Sorry my side didn't win.

Junior Brown slipped quietly through the house. The gray light of a new day peeping through the Venetian blinds gave him enough light to find his way around. He stole silently up the stairs. He knew exactly where he was going.

He listened at the top of the stairs for any sounds that would tell him the people were awakening. He heard only the floor groan as a heavy body turned in its sleep. There was nothing else. He was safe so far.

He slid his fingers along the wall until he came upon a door panel. He groped around in the dark until he felt his trembling fingers grip the doorknob firmly. The click of the latch resounded throughout the house like a shot in the stillness. Junior froze in the dim light, waiting for the sleeping house to awaken. He stood ready to run if necessary, but no one stirred.

Slowly he opened the door inch by inch and stood gazing about the room. Absently he rubbed his chin, lost in thought. When he realized what he was doing, he jerked his hand away swiftly. This had become a bad habit, and it bothered him.

For a moment he stood doubtful, wondering if he should go through with it. It was a tremendous decision to make.

He hated stealing through the house like this, but he could see no other way. He couldn't take all the ridicule and questions. It was better that no one know.

He wondered if his face would betray him at the family gathering at the breakfast table. He had never been able to conceal things and hoped he could act natural, as though nothing had

During Allan Shiver's Administration more money has been spent for roads than in any other comparable period in Texas history.

For that money Texas added 14,926.10 miles of smooth roads to the state highway system and maintained all roads to keep them safe and sound for you.

Allan Shivers knows the importance of good roads to you. Whether trade-routes that speeds goods to market or modern super-highways that make your driving a pleasure, good roads save you time and money.

IN CASTRO COUNTY $853,763.84 has been spent on roads for you during Allan Shivers' Administration. You have 49.14 more miles of roads today than when he became your governor.

This means better Farm-to-Market roads, so important to farmers and citizens of small towns.

It means modern, safe highways that make your trips enjoyable and inexpensive.

- Balanced work load gives less wear on drive
- Develops rated capacities at minimum pressures Smoother power flow eliminates light flicker
- Available also with windmill or engine hookups
- Pump and motor have V-belt drives

Let us help you choose the right pump!

Fairbanks-Morse line of deep well heads offers pumps for well casing diameters ranging from 2" to 6". Installing a pump larger than you need is as inefficient and expensive as putting in one that is too small. We'll be glad to come to your home or farm, make an on-the-job check of your needs, and recommend the right pump. This service is free! Or, drop in at our store and ask for booklet on Fairbanks-Morse deep well water systems.

Wedding music was provided by O. C. Renfro, organist, and Miss Louise Simpson, vocalist. The Rev. Harry B. Harris of Houston, brother-in-law as best man and Troy Stafford and Bob Ballard were ushers.

Miss Ometa Bradley was her aunt's maid of honor. She wore a street length frock of orchid or gandy with matching mitts and carried green orchids.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her wedding gown was an original model of with timported French lace over nylort tulle taffeta, designed with a portrait neckline outlined with upstanding pleated ruffles held with applique of lace. The fitted bodice had short sleeves completed by gauntlets worn over the hands and termenates with a deep point at the center-front of the waist line. From this streamed a voluminous waltz length skirt, made of fan-pleated lace. The fullness of lace tulle and taffeta was emphasized by hoops, net and taffeta worn underneath. The veil of slik illusion was pin med to the pill-box type cap of lace ebroidered with sequins and seed pearls. Her bounquet was a white orchid and stephonotis fied with white satin streamers and atop a white bile. The reception was in the lovely were Misses Gwen Smith and Carolyn Rothwell, who served the cake and punch. Miss Pat Brock, sister of the groom, registered the guests.
