THE AMERICAN CREED

"I believe in the United States of America and the principles of freedom, justice, equality and humanity upon which it was founded and for which American Patriots have given their lives and fortunes.
"I believe it is my duty towards my country to love it; to support its constitution; to obey its laws; and to defend it against all enemies."

Any erroneous reflection upon the character or reputation of any person, company or corporation which may appear in these columns will be gladly corrected upon its being brought to the attention of the management.

"BOOST OR MOVE."

ANOTHER CROP RIPENING

Huckins & Son, the get-rich-quick wizards, are under indictment and have come to the end of the road. This pair induced thousands of persons in the middle West to hand over their money for "investment" under promises of return of 26 per cent interest. The regrettable thing about the collapse of the Huckins scheme is the fact that it hit a number of widows whose loss represents their life savings. What do confidence men care about who gets the gold brick so long as they get the cold hard cash?
Ponzi didn't get them all. The Huckins didn't get them all. There will be another crop ready for plucking in a few months, despite the warnings of the newspapers, and the parasites, who refuse to do an honest day's work for their money, will reap a nice harvest. "Something for nothing" is still as hard to get in this year of 1930 as ever.

NOW WATCH FOR FIREWORKS.

An echo from the late presidential election comes from the Democratic State Executive Committee. Senator Thomas B. Love has made application for enrollment of his name on the Democratic primary ticket as a candidate for governor and has deposited the fee for same. Love supported the Democratic ticket in the late unpleasantness—with the exception he voted for Hoover.

D. W. Wilcox, chairman of the committee, has written Thomas an open letter in which he takes the position the committee is sole judge of the political status of would-be party candidates and will decide at its next meeting whether or not "Hoover Democrats" are eligible to place on the ticket.
Now watch the fireworks—in case the "regulars" dominate the committee and decide to stand pat.

BAD CHECKS.

"The number of bad checks is increasing rapidly," says a prominent banker, "and entirely too many people are writing checks without sufficient funds to cover them," he adds. Crooked people get more than 200 million dollars on fraudulent checks every year, it is estimated. Before cashing a check for an unknown and unidentified person it is well to make some inquiries about the person who asks this favor. If he is an honest person, he will take no offense. A high-class cafeteria in a certain city refuses to cash checks and will not accept a check in payment for a meal. Many oil companies now refuse to accept checks in payment for gasoline and oil. A telephone call to the bank on which the check is drawn, or to the signer of the check would not usually cost much, and would stop many such frauds.

WHY NOT HELP A LITTLE?

We never cease striving to make The Sudan News better and better. We are studying all the time to make it more newsy, more interesting and more useful to you. Why not help us a little? If you know of a personal item, an interesting farm story or any good thing that will be of interest and benefit to others, why not tell us of it? We have urged time and again that you turn in by letter, phone or personally tell us of any news items you may know. You like it, The News, we know you do. We like you and are proud of the friendship of our hundreds of loyal subscribers and friends. May we have your help to make our paper even better this year?

YOUR DOLLAR.

Those who delight in using reams of paper in figuring it all out, tell us that a dollar spent for living last year bought as much as $1.27 spent for living in 1920 and as much as 59 cents would buy in 1914. It is some consolation to know the value of the little iron man of 1929 increased over that of his ancestor of 1920, but it will likewise cause many now busy with inventories, assets and liabilities, profit and loss, to yearn for the pre-war days of 1914. May the power and prestige of the august dollar increase during the cycle of the days that are to come.

RADIO IS ADVANCING.

It is now stated that there is one radio set for every 22 people in the United States. At this time there is one automobile for every five. The radio is about 10 years old, and the automobile 25.

The year 1930 will have to travel pretty fast if it hopes to rival its predecessor in news produced.

Senator Capper, Kansas editor, is credited with being one of the twelve men in the U. S. senate rated at more than a million dollars.

Dr. Hugh W. Wiley, father of pure food laws, is 86 years old. He has attracted world-wide attention and respect.

WORTH-WHILE EDITORIALS

INDIANA SHOWS THE WAY.

(Fort Worth Star-Telegram.)
In Indiana, Purdue University, which has taken the lead in other things besides football, has literally made four bushels of corn grow where one grew before. More than 100 farmers of that state, made beneficiaries of the university's educational campaign, conducted through the medium of five-acre corn-growing contests, last year produced an average of 100 bushels of corn an acre, whereas the general average for the state was 25.7 bushels. One contestant checked in a production of 130.3 bushels to the acre. In 1927 the contest recorded the record production of 152.53 bushels per acre.
The contestants, of course, followed scientific directions as given them by Purdue agricultural experts, in seed selection and preparation, in making the soil ready for cultivation, in cultivation and in fertilization. The advice paid them handsomely, as results show. More than that, the results show farmers generally that one is never too old to learn.
Indiana's experience has point in every agricultural state, whether the main crop is corn or wheat or cotton or what not. The corn crop is becoming increasingly important, alike as a cash crop and as one used in processing cattle and hogs for the market, and feeding dairy cattle and poultry. Corn is not frequently thought of as a major crop in Texas, although in 1928 this state produced a greater total crop than two of the corn belt states and one almost as great as that of Indiana and Ohio. But the average per-acre yield for the past five-year period for Texas has been hardly half that of Indiana. Indiana has been one of the most backward of the corn belt states in respect to per-acre yield. But results such as that obtained in the Purdue contests are likely to change this situation soon.
The need for stimulation of corn growing and increased per-acre production in Texas is greater than in any other state, because we have here the possibilities for turning into profits a much larger crop than could be handled elsewhere. Texas-produced hogs, cattle and poultry finished for market on Texas-grown corn would bring about a tremendous betterment in the economic condition of Texas agriculture.
The Indiana record, taken with the announcement that 40 acres of corn stalks subjected to a process of fermentation practical on any farm, will produce methane gas sufficient to light and heat any farm home for a year, should serve to arouse new interest in corn culture in Texas. There is an immense saving in making four bushels of corn grow where one grew before. Agricultural education scores again.

HE HAD A LIGHT.

(The Dallas Morning News.)
The explosion of the Old Town coal mine at North McAlester, Okla., which cost the lives of sixty-one men, was not due to any failure of the company, it appears, to provide proper facilities in the way of safety. At least the mine inspectors say that every other cause for the trouble has been eliminated except a lighted match. Reconstructing the cause as it must have been, it appears that somebody felt the craving for a cigarette and lighted up. That was his last smoke on earth.
The National Capitol caught fire the other day. An artist was laboring in an upper room. His table was pretty well consumed, we learn. Maybe he wasn't smoking. Maybe he didn't lay a cigarette down carelessly, as so many artists—and so many others, for that matter—are in the habit of doing. But two former fires in the same building were started from cigarettes.
Nobody knows how many billion board feet of timber have been burned to the stump by cigarette devotees. And that is a mere beginning on the cost of carelessness. The smoker ordinarily assumes that he hurts only himself. As long as that is true he is on defensible ground. But the incendiary smoker who doesn't stop to see whether he is an incendiary is a public nuisance.

SLIPPERY STREETS ARE SAFER.

(Amarillo Daily News.)
The chairman of the Executive Committee of the Public Safety League in Detroit, bewailing Detroit's high traffic casualty list, suggests ironically that the city flood the streets every day in winter time so that they would be good and slippery.
"During our last seven days of icy pavements," he points out, "not one person was killed. The driver thinks about his own life when it's slippery, and so does the pedestrian. As a result, everyone is more cautious."
All of which seems to indicate that under ordinary conditions we're a pretty thoughtless bunch of motorists. If we always drove as carefully as we do when the pavement is slippery, there would be mighty few fatal automobile accidents.

Electric Cooking

The causes which underlay the success of electric cooking are many. To begin with, it is far the most convenient method of preparing food in the household kitchen. A turn of the switch turns on the heat, there is no fire to build, nothing to be lit with a match, no fuel to bother with.

Automatic control, too, adds much to the convenience of Electric Cooking. A meal is placed in the oven and, without further attention, its cooking will be started and stopped by automatic control. Its cleanliness also commends it to the modern housewife.

MR. MOODY'S THREAT.

(Fort Worth Star-Telegram)
 Governor Moody, it appears, has found, to his own thinking at least, a point of vantage for wielding the big stick over the forthcoming special session. It will be remembered that in previous sessions the governor had at hand the simple expedient of holding up submission of other matters which the legislature desired to consider, thereby forcing the legislature to consider his favored measure or nothing. Now, with his announcement that nothing will be put before the next special session but these favored measures, the governor must resort to threats of what he will do if the legislature doesn't do as he desires. And Mr. Moody's threat is nothing less than that he will put convicts to work on the roads! How the countenances of legislators must blanch! It is to be hoped that if the legislature proves still stiffnecked despite this terrible threat, that the convicts who will be herded out in chain gangs and the free labor which will be displaced will appreciate that the blow is directed at the legislature and not at them. They will merely be in the case of the innocent bystander who gets it in the neck.

In addition to his threat, the governor by implication charges the legislature with bad faith in connection with the proposed relocation. He apparently having anticipated that that body will reject the proposal to pluck the penitentiary system up by the roots and transplant it "within 20 miles of Austin." He infers that the appointment of a commission, which was a compromise reached between the legislature and the governor at the last session, amounted to a contract between parties by which each agreed to be bound by what the commission recommended, and takes the position that now that the majority of the commission has recommended relocation near Austin, a recommendation which he "wholeheartedly" supports, there is nothing left for the legislature to do but to sign the document with the rubber stamp of legal enactment.

The governor conveniently forgets that this is exactly the sort of thing which the legislature refused to do in the previous instance. Mr. Moody then directed the legislature to authorize relocation with a power of attorney to the prison board, which would allow the board to select any site it wished and spend any amount it wished to build a new prison position that it could not, in respect to its duty, even if it agreed to do so, turn over its legislative prerogatives to any other individual or group of individuals. It agreed to the appointment of a commission so that information might be gathered, but it expressly reserved to itself the right of final action. This was the key of the whole compromise, and yet Governor Moody's memory is so short that he now says that what the legislature did at that time was not to appoint a commission without plenary powers to report back to it, but to appoint a commission with plenary powers to relocate the prison system. That is what his infernal statement that the legislature is now bound to accept the report of the majority of the commission amounts to. And by the same token, Mr. Moody is now asserting that it was the legislature that knuckled under at the last session, surrendering fully to his demand that the thing be rushed through without further ado.

If the members of the legislature accept the Moody edict they will have to reverse completely their own interpretation of the rights, powers and duties of the legislature. Moreover, they will have to reject the views of the majority of the members who constituted a group, though a minority group, of the membership of the relocating commission. The majority report of the relocating commission, which recommends a radical disturbance of the present prison system including location of the central plant within 20 miles of Austin, may or may not contain the best prescription that can be found for the state's prison troubles. It is the right and duty of the legislature to satisfy itself entirely on this point. A great deal, besides the expenditures of some $11,000,000 of tax money, depends upon the decision. A decision hastily reached is likely, at odds of about 100 to 1, to be wrong in spots if not all over. It would seem that the worst place in the world for such a matter to be decided is in special session, where the members of the legislature, already at such personal loss due to three preceding special sessions necessitating their presence at Austin, will be under constraint to hurry up and get through with it, for good or evil. The legislature would be wholly justified, even if all its members were fairly convinced that the commission's recommendation was judiciously arrived at, in electing to wait the more balanced deliberation of the next regular session for a vote which will have such important results.

How to Raise Poultry
By Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S.

Chick Saving Brooder Methods

A Little Attention to Details Will Not Only Lower the Mortality Rate of Artificial Brooding, but Will Also Provide Stronger, Healthier Chicks.

A proper start in life means just as much to the newly hatched chick as to a newborn babe. Even though a chick may inherit all the desirable traits of many generations of blue blooded aristocracy, its hereditary advantages may be completely offset by lack of proper attention during the day immediately following its coming from the incubator. Correct brooding methods, on the other hand will not only reduce the infant mortality in your flock, but will give you more robust and more productive members for your flock of the future.

Such care should start even before you are ready to receive chicks from the hatchery or to transfer them from your own incubator to hovers. See that all parts of the hovers and brooder quarters are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected. Spray all parts of the room with a fairly strong solution of dip and disinfectant to guard against lice mites and other parasites. Be sure the room is well ventilated but free from draughts. Then put sand and litter on the floor to give the chicks something to scratch in and to keep the floor covered.

See that heating units are in good order, burners clean and regulating mechanism working well. Then start your stoves, lamp, or electricity running several days in advance. In this way you will be able to thoroughly familiarize yourself with operation and control of the devices. You will also have the quarters evenly warmed throughout. Place a temporary fence around each hover to keep the chicks near the source of heat making allowance for gradually enlarging it from time to time. This is usually managed by using a roll of one inch netting two feet high. Do not cut it, simply unroll a little more each time you feel that the growth of the brood demands more room.

When the chicks are ready to be transferred or have arrived carry them carefully in a well lined box or basket and place them gently under the hover. The basket or box should be carefully covered to keep the chicks from getting chilled. After the chicks are installed in their new home I give them some water, grit and milk. They are allowed to come out several times during the day for grit and water and each time I put them back under the hover. In this way they learn quickly and easily. My plan may mean a little more trouble at first, but my experience is that it saves time in the long run because the chicks are more quickly trained to seek the hover for warmth and protection.

From this point on, detailed instructions cannot be given. Your exact procedure will depend on the kind of apparatus you employ. Following the manufacturer's instructions carefully, watch the chicks at all times and make sure they are comfortable and growing at a satisfactory rate. A word about correct temperature will not be amiss. Many experienced poultrymen never look at a thermometer but are guided entirely by the actions of the chicks. If they lie quietly in small contented groups, they are comfortable, but if they spread out flat, lifting their wings and panting, they are too hot. Extend their fence so they can get away from the heat or if a canopy top hover is used lower the temperature. If they huddle together, they are too cold. Gently force them to hover closer to the stove by decreasing the circumference of your brooder fence or by using the brooder curtain.

These things are only learned by observation and experience. If you do not care to trust your judgment in that respect, the following schedule will be found helpful. The first two or three nights the temperature at level of sleeping chicks' backs should be between 95 and 100 degrees, but never over 100. As the chicks begin to exercise they require less heat. The latter part of the first week begin to lower the temperature gradually until it is around 85 at end of the third week. As many chicks will be fairly well feathered by the end of the fourth week, the temperature may run between 85 and 70, being reduced until finally artificial heat is no longer required.

Avoid sudden variations at all times. An even heat is the ideal condition. The general temperature of quarters outside the hover should never be lower than 60 to 70 degrees. If it runs lower, some auxiliary means of heating should be provided.

A new type of piano with two key boards and a chime attachment is about to be put on the market. We hope that its price will for a time be prohibitive.—Rockester Democrat and Chronicle.

THE LAREDO INCIDENT

(Fort Worth Star-Telegram.)
The passage of time has brought into proper perspective features of the Laredo incident which have placed it very definitely within the category of technical discourtesy of one government toward another. The Mexican government has closed a Mexican port to trade from the United States and by so doing has in effect closed an American port. That is an action whose implications cannot be limited to the country in which the American port is located. It is a matter affecting the interests of the whole country, and one which, in its extreme connotations involves a thrust from the outside against the sovereignty of the United States.

This is the view of the situation presented to Washington on behalf of Laredo and Texas, with Senator Connally of Texas as the Texas spokesman. Senator Connally has pointed out to the State Department that it is the duty of the Federal government to take prompt action in support of its own dignity as well as in conservation of the interests of American citizens. It is a reasonable and patriotic view which gains ground with the passing of each additional day.

The Mexican government thus far apparently has not been approached by our own government for a definite statement of the reasons for closing the port of Nuevo Laredo and removing its consulate from Laredo. Its enumeration of reasons at the time was general and rather vague, consisting of the announcement that the action was in consideration of an accumulation of incidents over a period of years and would endure "until such time as Mexican citizens might travel with safety through Laredo." To this the Mexican consul general in Texas, speaking presumably as official representative of the Mexican government, added the astounding statement that the reopening of the port depended on the removal of an official of the County of Webb, the State of Texas, and of the United States.

It is well known what was the incident that caused the Mexican action. It was the threat of John Vails, district attorney of Webb county, to seize the person of Elias Calles, former president of Mexico, upon a grand jury indictment for murder in connection with the assassination in Webb county some time ago of two Mexican political refugees. The United States government intervened in the case and notified Mr. Vails that as Calles possessed diplomatic status certified by a state department visa, his arrest was not permissible and that it would be prevented by the federal government.

Mr. Vails at once conceded the federal government's superior authority, and accordingly made no attempt to interfere with the progress of Calles through Webb county on his return to Mexico, even though there was a valid reason for his arrest, this reason consisting of a legal process regularly returnable to a court of Texas.

In thus submitting to federal authority Mr. Vails gave complete denial to the contention of the Mexican government that its citizens could not travel through Laredo with safety. Also the United States government gave full proof that it can and is disposed to preserve its authority over local agencies in international matters. Nothing remains of the Mexican government's contention, therefore, save the well-founded suspicion that its real purpose is to force the removal or resignation of Mr. Vails.

And when the Mexican government or any other government attempts to decide who shall or shall not hold office in the United States, whether the office be that of President or the humblest public office in the land, it is an overt act against the United States, and one that should be resented by the federal government and every American.

It may be that our government has become accustomed to being flouted by the Mexican government. Indeed there can hardly be any other explanation of the failure of the state department thus far to put on record its recognition of this aspect of the indictment. Even though the state department should desire the removal of Mr. Vails, as there seems reason for believing is the case, it can hardly contend that a desirable way to accomplish this result is to allow the Mexican government to thrust its hands into the administration of public affairs in American territory.

UP TO THE SCHOOLS.

"Let the schools do it." That, declares Will C. Wood, ex-superintendent of public instruction of California, is the public's present attitude of burden-shifting. "The school," he says, "is the younger brother of civilization. We have had turned over to us the old clothes and chores of the older institutions."

Parents expect the schools to develop children's character. The government expects the schools to teach respect for law and order.

Industry expects the schools to train workmen in all trades, formerly trained by long apprenticeship.

Commerce expects the schools to train young men and women to fill positions formerly reached through long experience in commerce itself.

City congestion and modern methods of living have forced the schools to take up the work of teaching sanitation, health education and hygiene.

And everybody, it seems, expects the schools to solve the problem of leisure—the right use of spare time.

It is a large order and only the most dauntless and inspired educators are very hopeful that it can be filled. The public, according to Mr. Wood after putting this heavy burden on the schools, has been niggardly in its support of them. It will have to give, sooner or later, not only more money but more thought and more co-operation. The sooner it gives these things, of course, the better for the public.—The Devils Lake Journal.

KIWANIS NOTES

We are gone for a goal as sure as you are born. Off to a good start with our new officers and all.

President Pete tells me he is going to institute an educational campaign right away. Come on out and let us see what he has for us. Sure hope he can instill some new ideas in the secretary. Be you are all getting about as tired reading this old bunk as I am of writing it.

Didn't we get a good snow? And ain't we off to a prosperous start on the new year with moisture and everything? Not to mention that the Honorable Ves is Papa now. And he has the nerve to say that it looks like him. And it's a boy. Ain't we happy! Luck to you, boy, and lots more like it.

You know, I think the most important thing we need now is ATTENDANCE. Let's all get together and have some more of it. Believe me, we need it.

Come on, now, all of you. Let's be out Tuesday at the old H-B office building.

And don't you all wish you knew what Ducky's secret is? Just him and seven more know it. Don't you all think Simon Hay is the man for Boy Scout leader in Sudan?

F. E. MILLER, Secretary.

PROOF OF WEST TEXAS PROSPERITY IN RAILROAD BUILDING, SAYS HAMILTON

(Fort Worth Star-Telegram) Evidence of the particularly bright year that is in prospect for all sections of West Texas during 1930 is seen in the great programs of railroad construction for that territory. It was said Saturday by W. B. Hamilton of Wichita Falls, president of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Interviewed upon the outlook for the coming year, Hamilton declared there is not a cloud in the sky of West Texas prosperity that can be detected at this time. With more than $25,500,000 to be spent by the great railroad systems of the nation in West Texas, and with West Texas holding practically a monopoly on such construction, this in itself is proof positive that there is unbounded prosperity ahead for the section, he declared.

No part of West Texas is suffering now, and no essential industry of the section is working under any handicap, Hamilton declared. The cattle industry is on a sound basis with all of the cottonmen enjoying good markets good ranges and good prices. The sheep, wool and mohair industry, while set back slightly by low prices that prevailed last year, is looking forward to a good year during 1930 with an increased take on wool and mohair expected. Despite the comparatively low prices for wool and mohair the yield has been heavy, and this has offset to a large degree the lower prices paid for the products, he declared.

The oil situation was viewed in an optimistic light by the Wichita Falls executive, as he predicted the discovery of more oil pools for West Texas during the year with conservation programs insuring no cut in crude prices. There will be no decrease in the production or price of West Texas oil, Hamilton said, and so 1930 will be prosperous and the discovery of new pools will mean a continuation in future years of this prosperity.

The increase in dairying in West Texas will mean still more prosperity for the farmers of the section, Hamilton said, with the fruits of other forms of diversification to be enjoyed more fully in 1930 than in any past year. The escape from the one-crop system will be near when the farm programs of 1930 are worked out, he added.

Wheat growers of West Texas, who found 1929 one of their banner years should enjoy just as good conditions in 1930, providing the promise of present weather condition is continued, Hamilton said. The snow that has lain, in the past week, when melted will provide plenty of moisture and the prices of last year should be paid again this fall, he said.

Snow Blankets All Northwest Texas

Entire Panhandle and South Plains Receive Several Inches Snowfall. Good Moisture For Crops Assured.

North and Northwest Texas was covered Wednesday night and Thursday with a blanket of snow varying in depth from 8 to 12 inches, and thermometer for several days was hovering within 10 to 20 degrees of the zero mark.

Telephone and telegraph service over North and West Texas was greatly hampered. Live stock suffered in many sections, but farmers generally were jubilant over the moisture received.

Plainview reported 10 inches of snow, Vernon about the same amount. Eight inches fell at Miami, Quanah, Matador, Wellington, Childress and Clarendon.

Other points reporting snow included Breckenridge, Bowie, Henrietta, Memphis, Slaton, Abilene, Lamesa, Electra, Wichita Falls, Shamrock, Paducah, Paris, Colorado, Pampa, Sweetwater, Sherman, Amarillo, Borger and Lubbock.

Lamb county received a fall varying in depth from 6 to 10 inches.

The inference is natural that Chicago's pineapple crop is largely the fruit of grafting.—Weston Leader.

NEWS OF TEXAS TOLD IN BRIEF

LEXINGTON.—Dr. A. C. Conner recently quietly observed the fortieth anniversary of his service to this section of Lee county as a country doctor.

AUSTIN.—The date on which the new motor truck freight rates will become effective has been postponed from Feb. 15 to March 1, Mark Marshall, motor bus director of the Railroad Commission announced.

A major contribution to Texas mineral output is the 100,000 ounces of silver produced monthly by the mine at Shafter, which in 48 years' operation has yielded 33,000,000 ounces of this metal.

SLATON.—Members of the local American Legion Post, with their wives, mothers and sisters, held a rally Friday night at the Slaton clubhouse to launch plans for organizing a Legion Auxiliary unit here.

FORT WORTH.—Three youths who sought to "spite" Mrs. Bettie Treach, 705 West First Street, by heaving rocks through the windows of her house, were arrested.

WHITE DEER.—Rev. Samuel C. Osborne and his wife, Mary J. Osborne, 83 and 82, respectively, celebrated their sixty-third wedding anniversary Christmas at their home here, surrounded by their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren and other relatives. Sixty-nine were present.

Texas produced in 1929 lime valued at $751,729 from plants in Comal, Coryell, El Paso, Travis and Williamson counties. It quarried and sold $2,522,495 worth of stone, mostly limestone for road building, but with a considerable quantity of limestone and granite for building purposes.

DALLAS.—A race with death over 294 miles of slippery highways in sleet and rain and the use of a rare surgical instrument at a Dallas hospital saved the life of a San Angelo girl choking from a piece of walnut meat lodged in her windpipe.

The Amarillo Rotary Club will be responsible for the future conduct of Ernest Ellis, charged with negligent homicide in connection with the shooting of Joe Carl Steirlin, 11, last October 9.

More than 1,000 acres were planted to field peas in Gregg county the past season, producing an average of 20 bushels to the acre and bringing an average price of $3 a bushel.

MART.—Funeral services were held here Friday for T. H. Lumpkin, 65, Mart pioneer who died of heart failure late Tuesday while conducting a funeral. Lumpkin had been an undertaker here for 50 years.

Railroad rates and classifications will be applied to commercial trucks on Texas highways, effective February 15, according to a decision handed down by the railroad commission of Texas.

Texas leads all the states in long distance bus service, having eighty routes covering 12,000 miles. California, with thirty routes covering 6,000 miles of highway, is second.

DIMMITT.—Equipment is on the ground and workmen are busy erecting a derrick for the drill which will, it is hoped, give to Dimmitt a city waterworks system.

WILL DEVELOP NEW FARM.

J. W. West and family of Sentinel, Okla., have arrived in Lamb county and will develop a farm on a tract of the Boesen land west of Sudan.

Mr. O. A. Jetton of Sentinel, Oklahoma, is owner of the farm and Mr. West has undertaken the oversight of the building and development of the estate.

One by one they come to secure homes in this part of the Plains country. Many are here, but there is room for many more. No better opportunities for the building of real homes is offered in any part of the world than right here in Lamb county and Sudan community.

GEESE AND GANDERS.

The following is an essay on geese written by a boy not so many miles away:
"Geese is a low, heavy set bird which is mostly meat and feathers. His head sits on one end and he sits on the other. Geese can't sing much on account of the dampness of the moisture. He ain't got no between-his-toes and he's got a balloon in his stummick to keep him from sinking. Some geese when they get big has curis on their tails and is called ganders. Ganders don't haff to sit and hatch but just eat and loaf and go swimming. If I was a goose I'd rather be a gander."
