DAIRYMAN'S WAGE SET BY QUALITY

Strikingly Shown in Records of Minnesota Test.

Dairymen set their own wages by the kind of cows they keep. This is strikingly shown in facts secured from the 1930 records of dairy herd im- existed during the winter, particularly Dakota counties, Minnesota. In the meantime, principal facts and leading teachings cents per hour.

The Dakota county statement, comshowed even more striking comparisons, being based on whole milk prices. The return above feed cost for the high herd in Dakota was 63 cents per hour, as against 8 cents for always a possibility of infection being the average herd of the county. Members of the dairy herd improvement associations received an average return of 33 cents.

In general, these figures check closely with those for the entire state in 1930. For all of Minnesota, a herd averaging 400 pounds of butterfat per cow returned 52 cents above feed cost for each hour of labor spent; while a 200-pound herd, which is the state average, returned only 17 cents. These figures are based on 40 cent butterfat, and would have to be reduced by 25 cent to conform with the present 30 cent price, says H. R. Searles, dairy specialist, University farm, St. Paul

Mr. Searles adds that low-producing cows, those making 100 to 125 pounds of butterfat, paid only 2 cents per hour above feed cost for labor in 1930, making about $3 for the year. This year, however, the man who wants to work with this kind of cow will have to pay about 3 cents on hour for the privilege. On 170 hours of labor, the average required for a cow, the loss will be about $4.

Test for Tuberculosis Reaches New High Mark

(Prepared by the United States Department A new high mark in the official testing of cattle for tuberculosis was reached in March, when 1,325,912 tuberculin tests were made by federal, state, and county veterinarians working co-operatively. This is the largest number of cattle ever tested in any one month since the nation-wide cooperative campaign to eradicate this disease began about twelve years ago. The previous high mark was in Octo-1930, when 1,320,885 cattle were

States Department of Agriculture, the | tankage and oilmeal, to 100 pounds of state of Iowa had 206.822 cattle tested during March, the greatest number of any state in that month. Wisconsin with 155,152 tests was second, Minne sota was third with 116,540, and Illinois was fourth with 111.069.

Another feature of the March report was the large amount of testing in some of the eastern states, especially in the highly infected districts. There of ten years of investigational work. have been many demands from cattle owners in this territory to submit their herds to the tuberculin test. Additional state funds for indemnity have recently been provided in some eastern states.

"The activities in connection with tuberculin testing of cattle," says Dr. A. E. Wight, in charge of bovine tuberculosis eradication for the Department of Agriculture, "show plainly that the demand for the work is still increasing."

Grinding Small Grains for Cows Is Right Plan

Dairymen have long known that it pays to grind small grains for dairy cows, and experimental evidence supports this procedure. Opinions, however, have differed as to the most profitable degree of fineness to grind such grains and as few feeding trials have hitherto been made with this specific question in mind, G. Bohstedt and F. W. Duffee, together with their associates in the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, have in the past year conducted investigations in which the relstive feeding value for dairy cows of finely ground barley was compared to that of medium ground barley. The preliminary results favor the use of medium ground barley, due to its greater efficiency in maintaining live weight and producing milk, Grinding barley medium fine, rather than fine, also costs appreciably less.

Depend on Pasture During the summer many dairy farmers depend upon pasture alone to produce the milk which is to be sold at a profit. A grass pasture furnishes just about enough to maintain the cow. A cow may produce a capacity flow of milk on pasture feed, but the result will be that she is underfed. In feeding for production a ration must be used that supplies the nutrients required to make the pro-tein, fat, carbohydrates and mineral

SWINE SHOULD BE IMMUNIZED QUICK

Always Danger of Infection in Hidden Places.

(Prepared by the United States Department In communities where hog cholera evement associations in Scott and in the North, says a statement from new litters farrowed on the premises, as well as other susceptible hogs piled by W. f. Watson, county agent, brought in from outside sources, are in danger of taking cholera from the in fection thus scattered.

All susceptible swine on such premises should be immunized. There is present in hidden places to which cholera-sick hogs have had access, thus constituting a source of danger, even after the dead hogs have been proper ly disposed of. In short, where hogcholera infection is known to exist, the federal specialists say, prompt attention should be given to the immuniza tion of the herd. It is not always safe to rely on ability to keep hogs away from places where infection may lurk. Once the serum and virus used in pre venting cholera have been properly ad ministered, the owner may rest assured that his hogs are immune and will not contract the disease.

Protein Essential to Raise Swine Cheaply Protein in liberal amounts is absorbed lutely essential for producing por profitably and unless some feed high in protein is supplied along with the corn, barley, wheat or other fattening feeds, gains are certain to be slow and costly, says A. E. Engebretson, extension live stock specialist, University farm, St. Paul, Minn.

"Skimmilk or buttermilk, fed at the rate of three pounds to each pound of grain, or approximately a gallon a pig daily throughout the feeding period, will take care of the protein needs," Mr. Engebretson explains. "When skimmilk or buttermilk is lacking, mixture of equal parts of tankage and oilmeal is recommended. This mixture may be self-fed when pigs are on full feed. However, when any one or a mixture of such ground grains as barley, wheat, oats or rye is fed, pigs may eat more of the tankage and oilmeal than necessary because the above grains contain more fiber than corn. This over-consumption of the protein feed may be avoided by mixing it with the ground grain, using eight pounds According to records of the United of tankage, or ten pounds of mixed

Barn and House Flies Carry Various Diseases

Cholera is not, as commonly supposed, carried so much by man or pigeons as it is by both barn and house flies. This finding is the result chiefly in Iowa. By liberating flies that were colored for later identification, it was learned that they traveled as far as 13 miles, going six miles in 24 hours. Horse files followed a team two miles.

According to Dr. C. N. McBride, of the United States bureau of animal industry, if middle western farmers would bale as much straw as needed and burn the rest of it, they would be doing a wise thing as far as cholera is concerned. Wet straw and manure piles make ideal breeding places for stable flies, and should be spread on the fields with a manure spreader, Tather than be allowed to accumulate around the barns or feed yards.

Skimmilk and Pasture

Grass Quite Valuable Skimmilk and pasture grass are both relatively bulky feeds for the nutrients contained. Pigs are unlike cattle, they cannot utilize large quantitles of bulky feeds. Furthermore, skimmilk and pasture grass, when constituting the sole ration of growing pigs, supply more protein than is required for normal growth, Gains are relatively small, and there is a waste of protein. What appear to be cheap gains are, in reality, expensive gains. The proteins of the skimmilk and pasture grass are made much more valuable when barley or corn is added to the ration.

Mares Need Exercise

Many mares fail to produce living foals because of idleness and improper feeding, according to L. P. McCann, Ohio State university. Mares that work regularly at light jobs generally produce the best foals. Heavy pulling backing and forcing them to wade through deep mud are injurious, how-ever. A ration suitable for broad nares is one consisting of liberal allowances of legume hay and grain composed of four parts oats and one of bran.

REVIEW: JESUS THE WORLD'S SAVIOR: SUFFERING AND SOVEREIGNTY

GOLDEN TEXT-For God so loved the world, that he gave his only be-gotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have verlasting life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Savior.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Savior.

Since the lessons of the quarter center in one Supreme Person and have one transcendent theme, Jesus Christ the world's Savior, the best method of review for senior and adult classes of each lesson. The following suggestions are offered:

Lesson for April 5. Jesus taught humility to the disciples by the parable of how guests bidden to a wedding should seat themselves. The bumble man will take the lowest place. Those who choose the lowest places in life have a chance of promotion.

Lesson for April 12.

The younger son, becoming tired of the restraints of home, demanded of the father the portion of goods which he would inherit. The father acceled to his request, and after his life of profligacy joyfully received him back into his home. This act portrays the forgiving mercy of God. Lesson for April 19.

The story of the rich man and La arus gives us a look into two worl In this world the rich man lived luxury while Lazarus begged at h door. In the other world their postions are reversed.

Lesson for April 26. Prayer is an obligation on the par of the believer. It is essential to sp ritual life. All true prayer is a companied with becoming humility. Lesson for May 3. Zacchaeus brushed aside all difficu ties in order to see Jesus. The son which earnestly seeks Jesus shall ne er be disappointed. Zacchaeus prov the reality of his conversion by ma ing restitution. He was saved stantly upon receiving Jesus Chri Lesson for May 10.

The Parable of the Pounds spoken to correct the misapprehers of the disciples as to the immed establishment of the kingdom. While the kingdom awaits establishment, it is incumbent upon the believer to use faithfully the gifts left in his hands by the Lord. While the size of the gift is a matter of sovereign choice on the part of the Lord, fidelity in its use is demanded. There is a time of reckoning coming.

Lesson for May 17. Christ's entry into Jerusalem was his official offering of himself as the promised Messiah. His coming was in exact fulfillment of prophecy. Christ's driving out of the temple the money changers demonstrated his authority over the temple and its service. Lesson for May 24.

Jesus knowing that the hour of his eath was near, instructed the disiples to make preparation for the Passover, that he might have fellowship with them in this ordinance beore his crucifixion. In connection with the Passover Feast, he instituted he Feast of the New Covenant, The read was symbolic of his broken ody. The cup was a symbol of his atoning blood shed on Calvary.

Lesson for May 31. Jesus' indescribable agony in the arden shows us what it cost the siness Son of God to identify himself with a sinning race. The load of sin was so revolting that the face of the oving Father was turned from his be-ved Son. Lesson for June 7. The story of the crucifixion of Jesus esents the greatest tragedy of all istory. The sinless Son of God sufering for a sinning race should move all sinners gladly to accept salvation at his hand.

Lesson for June 14. The resurrection of Jesus Christ one of the foundation truths of Christianity. It is the supreme proof that Christ was what he claimed to be and is the unmistakable evidence that his offering on Calvary's cross was accepted by God. The empty tomb is the supreme and grand proof of the delty of the Son of God and of his vicarious sacrifice.

Lesson for June 21. Disputes and misunderstandings are ound to arise even among those who are members of Christ's body. Those who have been vitally united to him will be scrupulously careful lest they cause to stumble those for whom Christ died.

A FAVORITE

The American public have their "favorites." Whether person or product, these favorites enjoy unusual popularity. For instance, Babe Ruth's popularity is the result of his home run hitting and colorful personality. Constance Bennett's fame results from her beauty, her ability to act and wear clothes effectively. Bobby Jones, the golfer, occupies a pre-eminent position because of his uncanny skill and pleasing personality. And so it goes, on and on, St. Joseph's Genuine Aspirin is now the largest selling pure asand on, St. Joseph's Genuine Aspirin is now the largest selling pure aspirin in the world for 10c because it is as genuine and as pure asmoney can buy. Thousands now realize that it is neither sensible nor necessary to pay more than 10c for twelve tablets of genuine pure aspirin. Last month alone more than one million people laid down on druggists' counters more than one million dimes for one million boxes of St. Joseph's Genuine Pure Aspirin. Always ask for "St. Joseph's", it meets every government standard.

But Mowery did learn to read and write—especially write. He acquired education so avidly and with such good effect that a few years ago he was drafted by one of the largest institutions of learning in the country—the University of Illinois—to be an instructor in English.

Every time he got a vacation he spent it in the North country, principally along the Mackenzie river from pally along the Mackenzie river from its headwaters clear down to the Arctic ocean. He became an authority on the forest and muskeg wilderness. Finally the fascination lured him to drop everything else and devote himself to making literature of the region. His stories are thrilling in the highest degree and have the unique quality of combining great charm, authenticity and refreshing character studies with the thrills.

One of Mowery's happiest achievements is in the very real, but none the

CHAPTER I The Killers

Father Claverly, leaning against the rall of the Midnight Sun, suddenly straightened up, stiff with shock; and stared incredulously at the six men.

For moments he could not believe he actually was witnessing a robbery. Here in this Canadian Northland where outlawry was rare and furtive, here on the mighty Mackenzie where river boats time and again carried unguarded cargoes of half a million in furs and gold, a brazen daylight attack upon a big steamer was simply

A few minutes ago the six men in a pair of birch-bark canoes had skirled out of the tributary river, the Big Alooska, and halled the steamer as though they were merely trappers or a trading party wanting passage up south. A ladder was innocently let down for them, and they had come aboard, taking a despicable advantage of the friendly, accommodating spirit extended from man to man in this North country.

Now under the leadership of hugh red-bearded fellow, they stood on a pile of deck cargo amidships, watching each way. With repeating rifles alert in their hands, they loomed ugly and menacing over the crowd.

Father Claverly, quickly recovering from his shock, stared sharply at the six men, trying to identify them. One was a 'breed; the other five were nondescript whites. All of them were unknown to him.

While he was wondering what their next move would be, a girl among the passengers suddenly cried out: "Bandits! They're bandits! Oh-

To half the people aboard the Midnight Sun the girl's cry was a first warning of the holdup. Whirling, the passengers stood transfixed, staring at the six vicious strangers who had em covered.

Fearful of bloodshed, Father Claverly glanced around at the crowd. Realizing that a fight would turn this deck into a shambles, he prayed that somehow, by quick thinking, he could avert

There were courageous men among those fifty on deck; but only one man "Andre, you and John go below. Git the dust. Sort out some furs, too, good furs, ax or seven hundred had the quiet deadly courage to draw a long belt-gun against six rifles. He was Jimmy Montgomery, mate pounds-marten, mink, dark fox. You know what's light and valyble." of the steamer.

Crouched beside a bale of wolfskins, Jimmy had been pointing out things ashore to his four-year-old daughter. At the cry he glanced up, saw the bandits, understood instantly; and his face hardened. He was Mounted-trained, Jimmy was—seven years with the scarlet-and-gold Maintainers of the Right. Shoving his baby girl behind the wolf peitry, he whispered, 'Lie down, sweet; keep down, down," and rose to his feet.

His first bullet, fired from the hip, sang between two bandits and whanged into the pines beyond. His second knocked the flop; stetson from a bandit's head. His third was never fired. A Savage spoke out sharply. Jimmy grabbed at his breast, his revolver dropped to the boards, he swayed a ent, then sank down, shot cleanly

Father Claverly heard a mutter arising among the crowd; heard the shuf-fling of feet, the half-hysterical sobbing of women, the snarling oaths of nen. Out of the corner of his eye he saw men glancing at one another, waiting for one of their number to raise the long yell; and he realized that this ominous, swelling mutter was the prelude of a concerted rush The bandits realized it, too. It was

> The whisper spread. . . . "Wait! Wait'll they start away. . . . Men folded their arms, and watched quietly, biding their moment of vengeance. And then, when the canoes were loaded with their booty, the redbearded leader played his last and best card. Flipping his gun at Margaret Fournier, he ordered her:

"Git down into one of them canoes, sister. We're going to carry you a couple miles up this Big Alooska here and set you off on a bar, see? He raised his voice so that every one could hear; he spoke to Margaret Fournier, but his words were intended for the men aboard:

CHAPTER II .

A Northern Man

At Fort Endurance, in his big threeroom cabin overlooking the rest of the post. Alan Baker was changing uniform and making himself regimental again, after a four-day patrol to a camp of drunken Hares,

Just turned thirty, tall and lanky and powerful of body, Baker had shaken off the last vestige of an unhappy boyhood and his three harrowing years Across. He was in the prime of a virile and hardened manhood. Coming here to Endurance as corporal seven years ago, with Jimmy Montgomery and Curt Spaulding as his constable, he had speedily showed his worth as a "northern man" and a detachment leader able to cope with frontier problems. To him it was like coming into his own. In his boyhood he had daydreamed of hunting big game; and here, at this post just beneath the Arctic circle, these daydreams had been realized, though in a strange way. For here he had hunted the biggest of big game-human game that had intelligence to match against his; that carried a rifle in its hands, and wore a belt-gun, and must be captured alive, at risk of his own life.

During the years that he had been officer commanding here, he had built up an enviable reputation. With his gradually increasing pack of northern men he had successfully brought his blg territory through Indian troubles and epidemics, and had smashed those lawless elements that came in with the oil-prospecting rushes farther south.

With a record like that and with Superintendent Williamson as his friend, Alan had expected to get his commission last fall when the post was raised to an inspectorate. No one in all the Three Rivers country doubted that Baker would be the chosen man. To them, to Alan, the blow came unexpectedly. A political appointee named Haskell, a newcomer to the Force, a worse than raw newcomer to the North, got the inspectorship and command of this coveted detachment

In these last months, Alan had been very thoughtful about his future. Here, at thirty, he found himself in blind alley, a non-com on meager pay, with no hope of promotion. He had turned down the opportunity of going into a big mining company that was prospecting by planes through the Athabasca country. He had refused half a dozen offers that held prospect of advancement and fine money. And then the Force that he had given such loyalty to had betrayed him. Worst of all, most stinging of all, he was forced to manage this territory still. straightening out the mistakes and enduring the arrogance of the man who had got the place he himself had earned

Fortune in Croquet Box A manuscript worth hundreds dollars a page was found in the lumber room of an English castle.

One summer's day the guests of Lord Talbot de Malahide decided to play croquet and sent servants to fetch the mailets and hoops from their box in an old lumber room. The servants pened a box and, instead of mallets, found a mass of musty crumbling papers yellow with age.

These proved to be the manuscript writings of James Boswell, the great-great-grandfather of Lord Talbot, and among them were 107 pages of his fa-mous Life of Johnson. Only 16 pages of this manuscript had been found ( fore, and their owner was offered

That is, the brim can be snapped on or taken off to achieve a brimless effect. These "snappy" hats are quite the thing in Paris. The hat illustrated is a navy blue panamaiac straw with white flower petals on the bandeau.

Hats made of heavy starched "chalkwhite" lace are among the handsomest povelties brought out this season. Not only are they charming for brides malds' wear but with the summer girl's ingerie frocks they are lovely. Insets of stiffened white lace are also introduced in many a wide straw brim. Also sheer white hair body hats' are elaborated with motifs of Jace. Heavy Sheer Crepe.

Every wise wardrobe will have at east one dress of a heavy sheer crepe. There are handsome weaves to be had which there who dote on good material will appreciate. These com-

There would be lots of wear in either a black or navy suit fashioned like the one pictured and in white it would prove a veritable treasure, the sort that always answers the "what to wear" question. The white coat would serve beautifully as a summer wrap to wear over lingerie frocks.

One or the gratifying features about these heavy sheers is that they admit of such perfect tailoring. This with the fact that there is almost no wear out to them makes crepes of this type an especially advisable investment. By the way had you heard that the smartest costume slips are made of taffeta these days? Be sure to acquire one of the new taffeta slips in matching color for worn with the ensemble of heavy sheer crepes it will add greatly to its swank.
