NO SOUR NOTES HERE—U. S. Army deployed forces not only serve as our first line of defense but as ambassadors of good will. Typical is this cultural exchange between a musician of the 49th Army Band, stationed in Italy, and a local Italian lad who gets a tuba audition during intermission. In the past several years more than one million Italians have heard concerts by the 49th.

Covered Sugar

By Mrs. Cubian Perry
Has anyone called Art's Machine Shop and thanked him for replacing the clock that was destroyed some months ago? Every time I go past and find the time, if day or night, greeting me, I will say to myself (as an only child I've always talked to myself) as soon as I get home I will call up and thank the Artsburn's for the new clock; but the call has been put off till later. So here and now... thank you for the clock. It greets everyone that passes in such a friendly way, that you are glad you passed that way. If you have stayed out later than you thought, it makes you hurry just a little. Then it tells you if you have time for that chat with a friend that you have neglected for so long. The youth of the town use it as a guide as to getting their dates home. So if you have enjoyed the clock why don't you give them a quick buzz and tell them so? New clock. Have you ever stopped to think about the ways that man has had to tell time? Every since the beginning man has tried to reckon time. In the beginning it was night or day. Later it was the position of the sun in the sky. The Greeks used the terms "dawn", "noon", and "sunset". The ancient Babylonians used an upright rod so that it cast moving shadows on a smooth surface marked off into equal intervals. This method of time keeping was used, down to the 14th and 15th centuries of our era. If the sun didn't shine, no time. (What fun that must have been). Along came the Egyptians with a new idea known as the "clepsydra" or water clock. This told the time by water dripping through a tiny hole in the bottom of a jar. The jar was marked with dots and as the water receded the dots told the hour. The Romans and Greeks took up this idea and until the Middle Ages it was in use. Here comes the "hour glass" or "sand-glass". (We cook eggs with it now). During the "Middle Ages" a form of clock which is still in use was invented, the form in which a weight, attached to a cord or chain, turns a set of geared wheels as in our Grandfather's clock. Next came the pendulum in the 17th century. The word clock is from the French word "cloche", meaning "bell". The old clocks had no faces and the hour was made known by the bell at the end of the hour. As we think of clocks we think of time. "What is time? The shadow on the dial, the striking of the clock, the running of the sand-day and night, summer and winter, months, years, centuries—these are but arbitrary and outward signs, the measure of time, not time itself. Time is the life of the soul." — Longfellow. Thanks again, Artsburn's, for the clock.

Lake Leon Is Now Known Far And Wide

It all started about ten years ago, back in 1949 the people of Ranger and Eastland got together and made plans to build a new lake that would assure them of an ample water supply. After much planning and work the lake became a reality. The building of Lake Leon has done more for the Eastland-Ranger area than any one project ever undertaken by either of the two cities. Besides furnishing an unexhaustable water supply for the two towns, it is becoming to be known as one of the most widely known fishing and recreation spots in West Texas. Some of the finest catches of catfish, bass and crappie reported this year came out of Lake Leon. In the spring of this year when crappie fishing was at its best it was not unusual for strings of crappie averaging three pounds each to be brought in. Good strings of channel and yellow catfish have been taken out of the lake all of the past few years. Bass have been taking the hook all summer in the early hours of the morning. This has brought fishermen from all over the state and from as far away as California and Washington, D. C. to try their luck in the fish-infested waters. Out of the total amount of annual fishing permits sold in 1959, 21 percent have been bought by out-of-county residents. To give some idea of the distance that people are traveling to fish in our lake the out-of-county cities are: Fort Worth, Kermit, Breckenridge, Munday, Austin, Abilene, Palestine, Stephenville, Tomball, Goldsmith, Midland, Odessa, Sweetwater, Maryvale, Elden, Dallas; Hillsboro, Dublin, Palo Pinto, Plains, Amarillo, Crane, Seymour, Evans, Plainview, Hale Center, Lubbock, Caddo, Mineral Wells, Andrews, Galveston, Snyder, and Abilene. Also two from New Mexico and one from California.

Mrs. Cantrell and Diana returned early in order for Diana to enter High School in Ranger in September.

Picnic Tables, Rest Rooms Are Built at Lake

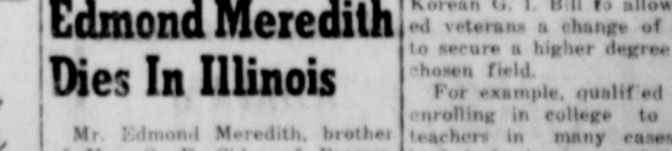

Recent improvements at Lake Leon have made the huge Eastland-Ranger lake even more attractive to area outdoorsmen. Milton Fullen, president of the Eastland County Water Board, explained Tuesday that 12 new picnic tables have been installed in the public picnicking area, and four rest rooms have been completed. Seven picnic tables have been placed in the area east of the new Staff bridge and rest rooms for men and women have been constructed. One table has also been placed on the west side of the bridge. Picnicking at the dam also has been improved. Two tables have been placed below the dam and two above the dam. New rest rooms have been completed below the dam, too. Fullen said that the Board plans to build a boat dock "for better landing area" on the east side of the Staff bridge in the near future.

Korean War Vets Eligible For More Education

President Eisenhower has signed into law a bill by U. S. Senator Ralph Yarborough which permits some 7,000 Korean War veterans to secure additional education or training under the G. I. Bill of Rights. President Yarborough's measure corrects a technical error in the Korean G. I. Bill to allow qualified veterans a change of program to secure a higher degree in their chosen field. For example, qualified veterans enrolling in college to become teachers in many cases set a bachelor's degree as their educational objective. Other veterans planning the same course of study set their objective as a master's degree. Under the original law, even though the veteran might be qualified for additional educational benefits, if he had mistakenly set a bachelor's degree as his objective under certain circumstances, he was not permitted to go on to college to work on his master's degree. Senator Yarborough's bill, S. 906, gives veterans the opportunity to have a change of program in their original field of training or education to work for higher degrees.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE
 What can you do if someone doesn't keep the terms of a contract with you?
 You might (1) get money damages for your losses, (2) get back what you gave him as your part of the contract, or (3) get a court to order "specific performance" on his promise, on pain of contempt of court penalties such as fines or even jail sentences.
 As a rule, a court prefers money damages for a broken contract, since it is definite and often more easily enforced. But in some cases money won't do: For example, since no two pieces of land are alike, you could not take the money given to you in a contract to buy another piece of property "just as good."
 And so courts, as a rule, enforce contracts to buy land by specific performance. They make the seller hand over the precise piece of property. Likewise you may get specific performance on contracts to buy or sell unique art goods like a painting of a great master of which there are no two alike.

which there are no two alike.
 You can seldom if ever get specific performance on personal service contracts which call for personal or confidential relationships, or special knowledge, good judgment, or skill. Their enforcement would be too hard for the court to supervise. But instead you may collect money damages; or perhaps in the first place you could provide in the contract for forfeiture of money for failure to perform.
 No one can enforce specifically an agreement to get a third party's consent. Captain Miles Standish could not make John Alden get Frisella's consent to marry him.
 Or suppose a man and wife own property together and the husband alone wishes to sell. No court will make the wife sell her half against her will.
 Before a court orders specific performance it looks carefully into the "equities." Was the "injured party's" contract fair and free from fraud? Did he take unfair advantage of the other party? Or wait too long to claim his rights? Could he have carried out his part of the contract?

Protection For Clothing And Infants

THE RIGHT WAY . . . The correct way of disposing of plastic garment bags is to tie them in knots, and throw them in a covered garbage can. They should never be used in the nursery or be given to children to play with.
This mother knows that the disposable ultra-thin plastic bag in which her dress is delivered after cleaning should be disposed of after the bag has served its original purpose. She is following the safety precautions endorsed by safety experts cooperating with the Society of the Plastics Industry by shredding or knotting the material and disposing of it in a covered container.
Plastic bags used to protect foods, clothing and other merchandise have been put to many useful supplementary purposes around the house. The heavier plastic bags used for fruit and vegetables are widely and safely used to store leftovers in a refrigerator, keep food in an ice cooler for picnics, carry wet clothing or diapers, or protect books from rain.
The ultra-thin plastic bag, though, presents a hazard when misused as a substitute protective covering under infant's sheeting on cribs, play pens, baby carriages, furniture, etc.
The Society urges parents not to mis-use this ultra-thin plastic bag, but after it has served its purposes to destroy the bag by shredding and/or knotting and placing it in a covered disposal unit away from infants.
