CITY SICK.

I want to run away from all the din
Of feet and horns and bells and grating wheels,
I want to lose myself completely in A trackless wood, through which a cool stream steals.
I want to leave the whistles and the cough
Of steam exhaust, of petrol, miss the cries
Of men with teams about a mud-girt trough
Where course mouths slaver 'mid the sweat and flies.
I want to let my body and my face
Do as they would awhile, without a thought
Of comeliness or cleanliness or grace,
Or anything that bears the stigma 'ought."
I want to stretch my arms far forth and reach
No other human—nothing else that lives;
To go where sob of mine or laugh or speech
Assails no ear—such wish the town-breath gives.
I want to lose the babel of the tall,

Slim office buildings—the typewriters' click,
The scratch of pens, the creak of lifts,
and all
The howling where raw voices, harsh and thick,
Are tested by the music master's rule.
I want to lose the raucous vendor's cry,
The hurt dog's yelp, the heat-sick infant's mew—
To go where are but earth, wood,
stream and sky!

MONUMENTS

In MARBLE and GRANITE

If it's a business proposition with you, ask the wily tongued salesman who comes to solicit your business, what commission he gets? What salary he draws? How much does he spend for railroad fare, hotel bills, the expense of the freight and return trip to set the work that he sells you, etc.? Then you consider that we are not out any such expense, that we don't have to add this amount to the price of your purchase in order to compete with him. There's a reason. Investigate. We are at your service.

A BUSINESS EXTENDER.

The Kind of Man For Whom There is a Big Demand.

"I am looking for a clerk, a man with a personality, a man who can do things and increase my business. Money is no item. I will not take salary into consideration. I will pay $100, $125 or whatever he is worth. I want the man." That is what a successful merchant said some days ago.

Let us pay our respects to the merchant who is looking for a clerk of this kind. A good clerk deserves a good salary and usually gets it. This matter of good pay for good services is the basic principle of the relations between employer and employee. While all merchants are not willing to pay enough salary to their clerks, there are more merchants who are glad to pay all a clerk is worth than there are clerks who are glad to be worth all they are paid.

Every village, town and city is looking for the man who can "increase business." The man who will work for the interests of his employer is wanted the world over. The world of business is crying out for such men, for men whom it can trust and in whom it can place confidence that a thing will be done when the "boss" back is turned. This man is wanted in every store, factory, at every post and in every great business in the land.

If you are attempting to avoid responsibility and as much work as possible you will, unless by great mistake, escape promotion or increase in salary. There are two kinds of clerks, and only two kinds. One the entire business world is anxiously searching for, and the other the entire business world is anxiously waiting to get rid of.—Twin City Commercial Bulletin.

Where Women May Not Pray. In some parts of the world the women are not even allowed to pray. Certain Hindoo congregations deny their women this privilege, and among the Ainus women can pray only in very rare cases as the deputies of their husbands. The natives of Madagascar, however, stretch a point and permit their women to intercede with the powers of evil, but prayer to their supreme being is strictly a masculine prerogative.

Silenced Him.

The young man in the barber's chair had been annoyed by suggestions of the white coated artist, although he had said clearly enough when he sat down that he wanted only a hair cut and a shampoo. Singeing, facial passage and hair tonics had been offered vainly.

Finally the barber perpetrated what is with barbers the crowning insult. Passing his hand over the young man's face, he said contemptuously: "Shave yourself, don't you?" "Sure," said the young man. "Don't you?"

And there was silence.—Washington Post.

THE "BREAK" IN THE GAME.

Baseball Almost as Much Psychological as Athletic.

Nearly every baseball game is won and lost on one play—a play that comes at the psychological instant. Among the players who do not study psychology—the crucial moment is known as "the break," a phenomenon which no one has analyzed and which the players themselves do not understand. Twenty men on the bench are watching closely and intently every move of the pitcher, every swing of his arm. The tide of battle rises, ebbs, and then suddenly at the start of some inning something happens. What it is no one outside the psychic sphere of influence ever will understand, but the silent, tight lipped, watchful, alert fellows on the bench see something or feel something, and the mysterious "break" has come.

"One ball!" The players on the bench suddenly stiffen and prepare for action.

"Two balls!" Two players jump for bats and begin swinging them; the coaches, who have yelled only because it was their duty, suddenly begin raging, screaming and passing the dirt, and the manager, who has appeared half asleep, makes a trumpet of his hands and leads his men, bawling loud orders and wild taunts.

The spectators do not understand anything has happened. Other batters have had two balls called many times, and it looks the same to the spectator who is beyond the mysterious "break" sphere. In two more moments the players' bench is a madhouse, with twenty men shouting, screaming, ordering, moving. "Three balls!" and a madman rushes out to the "deck." "Four balls!" and the spectators join the players in the demonstration. The madness is spreading. Crack—a base hit, a bunt, a wild throw; another base hit, screams, shouts, imprecations, a roar of frantic applause, a final long fly. The manager reaches for his glove, spits into it and says quietly, "Four runs—we've got 'em." The "break" is over, and the players' bench is again the quietest part of the grounds. The surge of enthusiasm, confidence and noise subsides, and the game is won.

Baseball is almost as much psychological as athletic. Why one team can beat a stronger one regularly and lose to a weaker with the same regularity, why one batter can hit one pitcher and be helpless before another, why one pitcher is effective against a strong team and at the mercy of another that cannot bat half as hard, are psychological problems.—American Magazine.

A MISER'S END.

Meanness of M. Vandille and the Way He Hastened His Death.

M. Vandille was chief magistrate at Boulgogne and by miserly habits left a fortune of $4,000,000. His usual diet was bread and milk. The bread cost very little, and after eating his loaf at home his habit was to become his own public milk inspector, whom as chief magistrate he had the right to appoint. And so, as he declared, to protect the inhabitants from being imposed upon by an inferior quality of milk he took his walk immediately after eating his loaf and demanded to taste the milk of every salesman he passed, thus saving himself from purchasing any. Misers are generally strong men—they have to be so in order to live a life of privation—but eventually Vandille, like other misers, was seized with illness, and the surgeons had to be called in. In those days they bled their patients. The surgeon asked Vandille half a livre for the operation, but the millionaire ordered him at once out of his sight and sent for the apothecary. The apothecary refused to cut the price down, so Vandille sent for a poor barber, who undertook to open a vein for three sous a time.

"Aye, but," said this worthy economist, "how often, friend, will it be necessary to bleed me?" "Three times." "And what quantity of blood do you intend to take each time?" "Eight ounces." "Well, but why can't you take the whole twenty-four ounces at once? You want to make a job of me, you scoundrel! Here, sir; there are four three sous. Take the twenty-four ounces immediately." The barber was generous to obey. M. Vandille lost the twenty-four ounces of blood and died in a few days, leaving all his vast treasures to the king, whom he made his sole heir.—Strand Magazine.

The Oldest Bridge in Paris. The Pont Notre Dame, is the oldest bridge in Paris. It was first built in 1413 in the reign of Charles VI, but it was carried away, together with the houses which lined it, by ice-floes when the frost broke in 1499. A new bridge was begun at once under the direction of Jean Jaconde of Verona and was ready for traffic in 1507. On that bridge stood the famous picture shop of Geraint, which had a sign-board specially painted for it by Watteau.—Westminster Gazette.

Jeeting Him. Bashful Youth—Miss Bella, does your mother object to my coming here so much? Fair Charming—Oh, I think not; I heard her telling papa the other evening that you merely came to pass away the time; you didn't mean anything serious.—London Tit-Bits.

The Division. "What!" exclaimed Mrs. Flatleigh. "You don't mean to tell me you pay a girl $10 a week for cooking?" "Oh, no!" replied Mrs. Urbanville. "We only pay her $2 a week for cooking. The other $8 is for staying."—Chicago News.

WEATHER FORECAST.

For Wichita Falls and Vicinity
—Tonight and Sunday, partly cloudy weather.

Wichita Falls, Texas, July 10th, 1909.

The natural or real increase in property values in this city during the past year, added to the assessed values as fixed for 1908, and taxed at the maximum rate of 65c on the one hundred dollar valuation, will be quite sufficient to pay all legitimate expenses of our city, pay interest on her bonded debt and create a sinking fund to pay off the principal. The Times gets this information from a signed statement made by our leading citizens, and it believed at that time, and believes yet, that if they had not known what the statement which they signed contained, they were too honorable to have affixed their signatures to such a document under any circumstances.

The last issue of the Olney Oracle is bubbling over with optimism about the town. Towns like Olney make Wichita feel proud she built the railroads that developed them. Their ball teams have not presented any loving cups to our umpires, but Olney is a good town just the same.

A Wichita Falls lawyer favors issuing licenses to newspaper men and forcing them to show evidence of good moral character before allowing them to get busy. We endorse the plan, but we think that shooting or Oslerizing would be much more expeditious.

Seven young men, from various parts of Texas and the Union, disembarked in Wichita Falls the other day. Inside of half an hour each was at work with a steady job. And that, too, in the dull, dreary summertime.

When men like Cree T. Work of Denton join in the feminine howl against the roughness of athletics, Texas people don't feel so proud of her representation at the Denver Educational meeting.

We understand the first message sent over the wireless equipment at Camp Mabry was "It's a long time between drinks." This encampment will go down in history as the butter-milk encampment.

In spite of the fact that women are urged not to marry until they get votes, we do not notice any dearth of marriage licenses in Wichita; and there was an enormous amount of June bridging.

A Michigan congressman said the senate insulted the house. From our understanding of the word "insult," we are inclined to think that is impossible.

Tennessee papers are taking no part in the discussion over "What is whiskey?"

The interest of education in this State demand the adoption of the constitutional amendments next month.

Dick Bowman of Amarillo will be a candidate for State senator from this district, it is stated. When did Amarillo get a monopoly on these offices?

A congressman from Connecticut recently celebrated his eighty-second birthday. It would seem that he is old enough to know better.

BILL LANGE'S FEAT.

One of the Famous Old Outfielder's Sensational Catches.

The greatest individual feat ever performed was one by which Bill Lange saved a game for Chicago and $300 for himself in Washington in 1905. There is an odd story connected with the play. Lange had missed a train in Boston two days before, failed to reach New York in time to play there, and Anson had fined him $100. Thereupon he missed a train to Washington—arrived on the grounds after the teams had practiced and just in time to play, and for that Anson fined him another $100. The game that afternoon went eleven innings, Chicago scoring one run in the eleventh. There were two men out and a runner on the bases when "Kip" Seibach, then one of the hardest hitters in the business, smote the ball a terrific blow and sent it flying over Lange's head toward the center field fence. The hit seemed a sure home run, but Lange, a man weighing 225 pounds, turned and without looking sprinted desperately straight out toward the fence, racing with the flying ball. At the last instant, as the ball was going over his head, Lange leaped, stuck up both hands, turned a somersault and crashed against the fence. The boards splintered, one entire panel crashed outward, and out of the wreckage crawled Lange, holding the ball in his hand, and the crowd went mad. Lange came limping in, with the crowd standing on seats shouting, and he said to Anson, "Fines go, cap?" "Nope," said Anson, and the catch had saved the big felder $300.—Hugh S. Fullerton in American Magazine.

THE FIRST ALMANACS.

They Attempted to Foretell Men's Destiny From the Stars.

The almanac, properly so called in its origin, is not merely a device for keeping people in mind of the progress of the year. It is an attempt to show what destiny has in store for us as indicated by the position of the stars in any particular year, and as, according to astrological lore, the destinies of men are ruled by the different aspects of the planets, so also the human body is subject to the influence of the constellations through which the sun appears to pass in his yearly course. A French almanac of 1610 gives a diagram of the human body surrounded by all the signs of the zodiac and indicates the various organs and members over which these signs have power, and this for a guide pour les saignes, or to show at what period blood may be let with safety. But the same almanac also gives directions sensible enough for the avoidance of the plague which would not be found fault with by a modern fashionable physician:

Who would keep his body in health And resist the infection of the plague, Let him seek joy and sadness fly, Avoid places where infections abound And cherish joyous company.

A few examples exist of almanacs of this character before the invention of printing, although none, it is believed earlier than the twelfth century. But some of the earliest specimens of printing are black printed German sheet almanacs, which are chiefly concerned about blood letting.—Westminster Gazette.

It's House Bills This Week

If you are figuring on a new house at this time, or contemplating building in the near future, let us make you an estimate on the material you will need.

And if you will get our estimate within the next ten days, we will make you particularly attractive figures, as we wish to sell as many house bills as possible during the month of July.

Don't neglect this. It will be very much to your advantage in a money-saving way to get our estimate NOW.

Our stock is complete and is of exceptionally good quality. It is well manufactured and thoroughly seasoned.

YOUR COFFEE TASTE CAN BE EXACTLY SUITED

We have learned from quite an experience—that about 95 per cent of all coffee tastes can be suited to a "T" with either our Revere Brand Coffee or with our Concord Brand Coffee

The Revere Brand is, so far as we have been able to find, the finest coffee that is produced at any price. It has that rich, smooth and mellow flavor that makes a person feel like smacking their lips and calling for the second cup.

It is 40c, 75c and $1.10 in 1-2 3 lb tins.

The Concord Brand is a close second to the Revere Brand, containing only a little less of the rich flavor, and at that not so much less as its price, 25c would indicate.

We believe that one of these two coffees will just suit you, but, if by any chance they don't, we want to tell you about two or three others that we have.

Don't Sweat and Worry

Over an old Coal or Wood Stove when you can get a Detroit Jewel Gas Stove or Range by just calling at our store or ringing 364

You don't have to guess at what you are buying when you buy a Detroit Jewel. Neither is there any speculation. Now, as to what make of Gas Ranges uses least amount of Gas, don't take our word for this. Just ask your neighbor who has had the misfortune to be talked into buying one of these so-called Gas Savers. Our stoves are sold at one price to everybody. Also remember, no one else in Wichita Falls sells the Detroit Jewel except ourselves. Give us your business. We are prepared to take care of your wants in Gas Goods as we handle nothing except an exclusive line of Gas Stoves, Ranges, Light Fixtures and Appliances of All Kinds

A FATAL FRIENDSHIP.

Devotion of Princess Lamballe to Marie Antoinette.

SLAIN BY A PARISIAN MOB.

The Assassination of the Princess, Who Escaped and Returned to Comfort Her Friend, Was One of the Worst Acts of the Reign of Terror.

It was in the historic Carignano palace at Turin that the Princess Lamballe was born. Her father was Louis Victor of Carignan, of the royal house of Sardinia and Savoy.

Her childhood was spent in Turin during the period that followed the defeat of the French through the brilliant military tactics of Prince Eugene of Vienna. At eighteen she was married to Stanislaus, son of the Duke of Penthièvre of France.

The chief place of this duchy was the town of Lamballe, about fifty miles from Rennes. The Prince de Lamballe died in one year, and as soon as etiquette allowed a marriage with Louis XV. was contemplated. This did not go into effect, however, and the princess withdrew from the court.

She met Marie Antoinette when that princess first came to Paris, and they were mutually attracted and became friends. The Princess de Lamballe saw the dangers to which this young foreigner was exposed, and when Marie Antoinette became queen of France in 1774 and appointed the princess superintendent of the royal household she entered upon her duties with the sympathetic understanding of a loyal friend. The closest ties of affectionate regard drew these two young royal personages together. Through the careless gaiety of court life the Princess de Lamballe was the judicious friend. When illness came to the queen she was faithful and devoted.

When the storm of adversity broke over the royal family and it was arranged that an escape should be effected Mme. de Lamballe got safely to England, going across from Dieppe, but the royal family were arrested at Varennes and declared traitors to France.

Mme. de Lamballe's devotion was so true she at once hastened back to Paris to be with the queen. Her friends urged and implored her to think of the danger to herself and pointed out that she could be of no real service at such a critical time. But she knew better than they did what a comfort her presence would be, and her heart was entirely occupied with the sorrows of her sovereign. She was allowed to become a prisoner with the royal family in the temple, and for one week she was a cheerful and helpful companion, full of affectionate arts to make the hours less bitter and giving to Marie Antoinette the loving, devoted care that only a friend so loyal could give.

When those about the prison saw what an influence of joy Mme. de Lamballe brought to the royal prisoners an order was issued for her removal to the prison of La Force. From here she was taken for a mock trial and offered her life if she would take oath against the monarchy. With scorn she refused to do this.

Then came one of the most terrible acts of the period of the reign of terror. She was delivered to the people, wild with the desire for blood, and was killed in the courtyard of La Force prison. They stabbed her with sabers, cut off her head, tore her heart from her body while it was yet palpitating and then dragged her body through the streets to the temple.

On the way there they stopped at a hairdresser's and made him rouge the beautiful face and friz and powder the hair. This man nearly died with fear while at this awful work. When it was done and the head set on a pike, the long, fair curls of her pretty hair fell about the neck. Those of the mob who suggested this hideous work upon the head said, "Antoinette will now recognize her friend."

The heart was also put on the end of a pike and the route to the temple resumed. The royal family were together, and Louis was reading to them, when they heard the sound of the mob and loud, high voices. Suddenly the door was opened violently, and as they all started to their feet some men pushed themselves past the guard and shouted to the king: "The people have something to show you. If you don't wish them to bring it up here you had better go to the window."

With the deadly fear in their hearts they did as directed and looked into the dead and painted face of their devoted friend and also saw her tender heart and her poor body, backed by the sabers of these wretches.

With a cry of horror and despair Marie Antoinette fell into a state of stupor. Mme. Elizabeth forced her into a chair, and her children clung to her and cried with fear. Louis tried to control his voice as he said with pathetic dignity, "You might have spared the queen the knowledge of this frightful calamity."—Boston Globe.

To Make a Hit.

"You send me violets every morn," said the beautiful girl.
"I do," responded the ardent lover, "no matter what the cost."
"Quite so. Now, why not send up a bunch of asparagus tomorrow instead. It would be just as expensive and would make a big hit with pa."—Pittsburg Post.

A PERILOUS PERCH.

Two Nights on a Ledge of a Lofty Peak in the Tyrol.

In the northeastern corner of the Tyrol is the best skes ground in Europe, writes W. A. Ballie-Graham in "Tyrol." The region has many lofty peaks, which make mountain climbing of interest. The author gives one of his adventures on a peak near the village of Kitzbuhel.

On one of these peaks occurred to me many years ago a little adventure which gave me an opportunity of admiring the grand view rather longer than was pleasant.

I was out stalking chamois, and, having some unoccupied hours in the middle of the day, when stalking is practically useless, as the beasts are resting, I thought I would ascend one of those pinnacles upon which at that time few human beings, I suppose, had ever set foot.

The very last bit was a smooth faced rock not more than twelve feet high, but absolutely unclimbable if unaided by rope or another man upon whose shoulders one could get and so obtain a hand grip of the top and thus draw oneself up. As I was alone I had recourse to a short length of rope I had in my rucksack. Making a slip noose, I threw it upward till it gripped some projection. Then I drew myself up.

While looking about me an unfortunate movement of my legs, which were dangling over the brink as I sat, caused the rope to slip and fall down to the small ledge on which I had stood when flinging it upward. This ledge or band of rock was uncomfortably narrow, not wider than thirty inches, and the abyss below was a perpendicular wall four or five church steeples in depth.

At first it did not seem such a serious fix to be in. By letting myself drop to the ledge, my extended arms gripping the top, the distance between the soles of my feet and the ledge was not more than four feet or so—nothing to speak of if that yawning gulf had not been there and I had had boots on my feet. But, having taken these off and left them below, together with my coat and rifle, I should have to drop on to sharp rocks barefooted and hence would be very apt to lose my balance.

The more I considered the position the more I funk'd that drop, and, to make a long story short, I stayed on that pinnacle two nights, until the morning of the third day, before hunger drove me to risk the drop, which I did in safety.

How I got down the remainder of that descent, "shining" down chimneys and creeping along narrow edges, was a mystery to me afterward, for I was faint with hunger and my knees trembled and shook under me. When I reached the first habitation where I happened to be known the peasant woman at the door hardly recognized me.

Fatherly Advice.

"Dad," said the country youth who had just graduated from the district school, "I have long cherished a desire to go on the stage and have at last decided, with your permission, to—"

"My boy," interrupted the old granger, "all the world's a stage. You hitch the mules to the big red plow and transfer the outfit to the ten acre lot behind the barn, where you can enact the star role in that beautiful drama entitled 'Down on the Farm.'"—Chicago News.

PATTI'S EARNINGS.

The Shrewd Financial Methods of the Musical Miracle.

Adelina Patti never suffered from the financial timidity of a Jenny Lind. Not only was she a supreme vocalist; but, as Colonel Mapleson remarked, "no one ever approached her in the art of obtaining from a manager the greatest possible sum he could by any possibility contrive to pay." But the musical miracle was the spoiled darling of her day, and she never failed to obtain exactly what she wanted. She was first engaged in London in 1861 by Mapleson to sing four nights "on approval" and in case of success to obtain £40 a week. This contract was not fulfilled, however, for, being hard pressed financially, she had borrowed £50 from a rival manager, and her receipt proved practically a contract. This was the beginning of a career so dazzling that its successive steps are simply a series of increasing banknotes. In 1872 she obtained in London 200 guineas a night, since she insisted on having more than Christine Nilsson, who was receiving £200. She sang twice a week. Ten years later she was given $5,000 a night! Her famous contract to sing in America provided that the money should be paid her at 2 o'clock on the day she sang; also a drawing room and sleeping car to be especially built for her, with conservatory, fernery, etc. Further, there was to be deposited to her credit $50,000 for payment of the last ten performances—Patti's favorite device. She thus received about twenty times what Mario and Grisi got.

Her private car incidentally cost $90,000 and contained a silver bath and gold keys to the doors, to say nothing of a $2,000 piano. Patti gave to the manager only her voice and her costumes. Her drawing capacity justified this. "Lucia," as an example, was sung to an average of $14,000. "Traviata" drew more, since she sang more notes. It was a frequent occurrence among the poorer music lovers to buy a club ticket and each take turns at hearing her for twenty minutes. If one overstayed his time he paid for the entire ticket. Some mathematicians computed by dividing the number of notes sung by the sum paid that in "Semiramide" Patti received 42% cents for each note. This was found to be just 7 1-10 cents a note more than Rosini got for writing the whole opera.—George Middleton in Bookman.

A BEAR STORY.

The Picture the Amateur Photographer Did Not Wait to Get.

The best bear story I ever heard, states a writer in Recreation, was told me by an amateur prospector, who might have stepped out of a comic weekly. He had made a big trip in the Siskiyou with no weapon save a nickel plated miner's pick.

"Have you seen much game?" I asked. "None at all," he replied in his dry falsetto. "No bear!" I exclaimed, knowing he had come right through Bear Camp. "Oh, yes," he returned, "quite so. Now that you mention it I dare say that is what it was. Didn't occur to me, you know. I was so very angry, don't you see, I took no pains to identify the brute."

"Why, what did he do to you?" "What did he do? Why, nothing, of course. You see, the little beggar ran and climbed up a stump. And he wouldn't come down so I could obtain a decent photograph of him. Sat up there half a day, fifty feet from the ground. Then his legs got tired holding on, I imagine, for he started in to squeal. And, do you know, the brute must have given me away, for pretty soon his mother, I suppose it was, came hurrying up, and I had to clear out. Four times as big as he, she was, I assure you."

"Did you run?" I asked, laughing. "Oh, not at all; not at all," said he. "But still I thought it best not to remain." He paused and stroked his stubby chin reflectively. "By Jove," said he finally, "how very interesting! I should have thought to photograph the old one. She looked quite savage, don't you know?" "Such a picture would have been unique, to say the least," I replied. "Quite so," said he.

Why She Was Right. Haydn had a peculiar way of determining the time in which a piece of music should be sung. On one occasion a female singer in high esteem at court had been appointed to sing one of Haydn's compositions. At the rehearsal she and the conductor differed as to the time of the music. The matter was to be settled by referring it to Haydn himself. When called on to decide he asked the conductor if the singer was handsome.

"Very," was the reply, "and a special favorite with the prince."

"Then she is right," replied Haydn.

Occasionally. "You must try to love your papa" said the visitor, "as much as he loves you."

"Oh, I love him more!" replied Tommy. "Indeed? Doesn't your papa love you very much?"

"Not much. He says he loves me only when I'm good."—Exchange.

If you have a steady cough, go to a doctor. Don't waste your money on reputed cures.

Don't give consumption to others.

Don't let others give Consumption to you.

Don't spit on sidewalks; it spreads disease.

Don't spit on the floor of your shop.

When you spit, spit in the gutters, or into a spittoon.

Don't live in rooms where there is no fresh air.

Health Rules Given by the National Association for the Prevention and Cure of Tuberculosis

Don't work in rooms where there is no fresh air.

Keep at least one window open in your bedroom day and night.

Fresh air helps to kill the Consumption germ.

Fresh air helps to keep you strong and healthy.

Don't eat with soiled hands; wash them first.

Don't drink intoxicating drinks; they will do you no good, but will make it harder for you to get well.

Don't sleep in the same bed with anyone else and, if possible, not in the same room.

Good food, fresh air and rest are the best cures. Keep in the sunshine as much as possible and keep your windows open, winter and summer, night and day. Fresh air night and day is good for you.

Go to a hospital while you can and before it is too late. There you can get the best treatment; all the rest, all the fresh air and all the food you need.

FADS AND FASHIONS FOR SUMMER DAYS.

New York, July 10.—Each season the Paris women of fashion invent or adopt some characteristic feature in their costumes, sometimes only a peculiar note in the ornamentation of the gown or blouse, or some striking note of color. This year the Parisian women seem to have dyed every bit of sheer linen they could lay hands on, and to have dipped all of their laces, mulls and eyelet embroideries, with the result that the blouse as the Parisian woman wears it is a colored garment matching its own especial skirt and coat. Notwithstanding all of the promises made for the return of this garment and the joyful reception in America of the white blouse for the tailored suit, Paris dips her own in dye pots to bring her costume into the semblance of a one-piece frock. She even colors her buttons of linen and lace with dye.

That the colored laces are taking the lead this season instead of the white, cannot be denied. The reason is not hard to find, for the colors that are now modish are extremely beautiful and are brought out to the best advantage in heavy laces. In addition to that there is an unusually wide range of weaves among the flax textiles this year.

Some of these laces imitate pongee to perfection, though without the gloss they might be mistaken for hand-woven linen, which in the machine work of the day is not far from equal to the old-time hand-loom materials. The machine woven materials in silks and linens, with uneven threads, which remind one of hand-loom stuffs, have lost, to a great extent, the crude appearance which they used to have in former years.

The new linens, imitating pongee, come in a complete range of the season's fashionable colors and are eminently suited for tailor-mades. Many such suits are being made with plaits in the skirts, some are pleated all around, but more have plaits let into the front and sides, and the front plaits are repeated to enhance the length of line.

A good many short coats are making their appearance this season, but the majority are still quite long and cut at all angles. In linen tailor-mades the ones with shawl-points at sides and back, drooping well below the hips, are among the most graceful shapes. There is a very stunning new style for linen suits of the simple class which is cropping out now and then, and which on a girlish figure is charming. It is the baby frock with wide plaits at the back in a sort of indistinct outline, and loose enough not to define the waist line. The plaits at the back are frequently stitched all the way down, while the sides, with let-in plaits, are left loose and flowing. Directoire revers are often used to finish the sides of the front, which is sure to be of lace, or open embroidery with lace.

The bathing season has now fully begun and some exceedingly charming bathing costumes have been displayed at the fashionable beaches. The bathing dress cut on a combination of Princess and Empire lines seems again to be the favorite this season. The influence of the Moven Age has not yet made itself felt on the beach. The long straight lines from high waistline to the abbreviated hem are the correct thing, with plenty of flat plaits introduced to give the necessary fullness.

In materials there is a wide range from which to choose. For those who cannot afford to be extravagant, satin, rich black, of the "stand alone" quality, is the ideal material. But it must be satin of the heaviest and most expensive kind, for thin satins cling uncomfortably when wet and do not give satisfactory wear for the money expended.

Good black satin does not cling in the water, and shakes itself free, apparently, of all moisture the minute its wearer emerges from the sea. Salt water does not seem to fade it, and although expensive at the outset, it is really an excellent investment, for it will look well for several seasons.

Taffeta silks, if of good quality, and carefully chosen, also make satisfactory bathing dresses. But they, also, must be of fairly expensive weave, for cheap silks will crack and crinkle after one or two wettings. There are, however, several new silks designed expressly for bathing dresses on the market this year. They come in wide widths which cut to advantage and are claimed to give satisfactory wear.

Perhaps of all the stuffs from which bathing dresses may be made nothing is more to be recommended than fine mohair. And here is where the girl who must be economical may find satisfaction at a moderate cost. The bathing dresses of mohair, carefully cut and made at home, brightened with a few discreet touches of gaily colored silk, can quite outshine the ready-made silk or satin suit, which may have cost three times as much. Plaid silks used in combination with solid colors have a tremendous vogue among smart bathers this season.

Many women prefer the shirt waist effect in their bathing dresses, high stand-up collar, tailored waist and gored or plaited skirt, joined by a belt. The sleeves are frequently long with hand cuffs and white embroidered turn over collar and cuffs are worn. This appeals to the woman who has some consideration for her complexion and is distinctly conservative and nice looking.

It is still an undecided question whether the Princess dress cut in one, worn with woven woolen tights, or the bathing dress cut with bloomers and waist in one and the skirt buttoned on, is the wiser choice.

A most economical notion is that of having two or three separate flounces for the same petticoat top. Every one who packs a suit case for a short visit knows how bothersome it is to have to take petticoats of various lengths for various frocks. The summer girl now packs one petticoat top made of lawn and carefully fitted over the hips, and three flounces; a rather short one, rather plain, for the linen morning frock, a pretty embroidered one for the afternoon costume and a long, lacy one for the evening dress. The top has a heading along the lower edge and each flounce is provided with a similar heading. It takes but a moment to run the heading together with a ribbon, and one's petticoat is ready to wear.

In the Paris shops now one may purchase separate stocking feet of white Hsie thread or cotton and these stocking feet are intended to be worn inside the silk stockings to prevent the warmth and moisture of the foot from helping to wear holes in the delicate silk hose. The white stocking foot fits snugly and daintily and is not high enough to show at the edge of the tie or slipper.

Some of the most attractive of the summer hats are of soft leghorn lined with figured foulard. These accord with semi-dressy gowns and make the costume complete for a tour of the shops and the inevitable "five o'clock."

Strings, usually not serving any particular purpose, but caught up and knotted in some graceful fashion, appear upon a number of the most picturesque broad-brimmed hats this season.

Dangles and beads and fringes of silk and leather were never so popular as at the present moment among the leathern girdles and shopping bags.

Hats of the sombrero type are growing in favor with the young girls. They are trimmed with a soft fold of satin, and finished with a corded rosette and a quill or two.

USE SIGNALS OF INDIANS.

Army Experts Adopt Many Ideas of the Aborigines.

Just as the fighting men of the United States army many years ago took lessons from the Indians and from their methods of warfare devised and perfected the system of extended order or skirmish drills which have proved so effective, so the signal corps of the army has followed to a large extent the red men's methods of conveying information from point to point where there is not time to string telegraph or telephone lines or where wireless telegraph is unavailable.

As the Indians since prehistoric times have used columns of smoke in various combinations to signal the approach of an enemy or to transmit other messages, so the army signalmen have found most effective what are known as smoke bombs or smoke rockets. The former are fired from a small mortar, the latter in the same way as Fourth of July fireworks. Each when reaching a desired height, regulated by a fuse, bursts and liberates a picric acid compound, which ignites and burns colored fires, one after the other, so arranged in the cartridge as to convey a message to those who may be watching for it. These cartridges are made in sections, each containing its own different colored fire, and threaded to screw together in a fraction of a minute.

These military fireworks, as they might aptly be called, are packed in hermetically sealed cans, much in the same manner as tinned meats, with the same sort of thumbcrew attachment for opening them quickly. In this way they keep indefinitely in any climate and have been found particularly effective in the campaigns in the Philippines.

While the navy does not employ so complicated a system of rocket and bomb signaling as does the army, every warship carries a supply of powerful rockets, which liberate on bursting a series of brilliant white stars for the purpose of calling attention to other signals which are transmitted by a system of combinations of colored electric lights strung from a masthead and operated from a switchboard much on the plan of a typewriter, called the Ardis system. But both branches of the service employ an odd sort of pistol, the invention of a naval officer, which shoots from cartridges "stars" similar to those of a roman candle of any color. The combinations which can be made in this manner practically are numberless.—Popular Mechanics.

FATE OF THE BRAAKE.

A Treasure Ship That Lies Buried Off Cape Henlopen.

Somewhere in deep water off Cape Henlopen lies over half a million in British gold, and how much more in gold and silver bars and plate and other treasures can only be guessed at. In 1798 the British privateer Braake decided to turn pirate and whether he merely was showing excessive zeal in making war on all the enemies of England that he met on the high seas and intended to turn over his loot to the crown on his return will never be known, but the fact that the Braake took no prisoners and sank every prize goes a long way toward proving the piracy theory. The Braake captured a Spanish merchantman coming up from South American ports laden with rich tribute from the Spanish colonies there, transferred the precious cargo to her own hold and burned the vessel. Another Spanish ship bringing a church service of richly jeweled gold plate to a new world cathedral encountered the privateer and suffered the same fate. The next to fall a victim to the Braake's rapacity was a Frenchman carrying silks, spices, brandy and bars of silver. That, too, was sent to the bottom after it was despoiled.

The Braake was overtaken by a hurricane when nearing the American coast, was blown far out of her course and sank off Cape Henlopen. Several of the crew escaped in a small boat and reached land. Their tales of the treasure on the sunken ship caused several expeditions to be fitted out the following year, but nothing was brought up save pieces of the anchor chains and a cannon or two. During the last hundred years every effort to raise any part of the treasure has failed.

The last attempt was made by Captain Charles Adams, who fitted out a ship under the auspices of the navy department, but was unable to locate the wreck, which is probably by this time deeply submerged in the ooze and mud of the ocean bed.—New York Press.
