VOLUME 3 WICHITA FALLS, TEXAS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1909 NUMBER 137

DEFINITE ACTION FOR GOOD ROADS

COMMITTEE IS APPOINTED AND WILL START TO WORK AT ONCE.

PRECINCT BOND ISSUE

This Plan of Securing Necessary Funds is Now Favored—Cost to Be Estimated.

The first definite steps toward securing better country thoroughfares for Wichita County, and more particularly for that part of the country immediately adjacent to Wichita Falls, were taken yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce directors, when a committee was appointed to take the matter in hand. This committee consists of R. E. Huff, J. A. Kemp, N. Henderson, T. B. Noble and T. R. T. Orth.

The committee will direct its first attention to the country to the north and northeast. An extension from the east end of Seventh Street out across Molliday Creek will be the first object and this will be taken up with the County Commissioners at once. The committee will in the meantime secure figures on the number of miles of road in the first Commissioners' precinct, which includes Wichita Falls and will secure estimates for macadamizing these thoroughfares. It is believed that excellent, durable roads can be constructed for twenty-five hundred dollars per mile.

As soon as this estimate can be obtained, the question of a bond issue will be brought and its advisability discussed. It is planned to make it a precinct election so that the benefits from the new roads will come more directly to Wichita Falls.

It is felt that the time for some action along this line has arrived and the directors at their meeting yesterday seemed enthusiastic and determined to push the matter until some good results are evident.

Talbot, of Decatur, Texas, following which an elegant light repast was served immediately after which the bridal party left over the Santa Fe railroad for Dallas and other points where they will visit for a few days. They will be at home in Thornberry. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins and is a lady of charming person and manner and most excellent christian character. The groom is too well known to need an introduction in this part of Texas.

FOOTBALL BY ARCLIGHT TO BE TRIED TONIGHT

Football by arc light is an innovation which will be tried in Wichita Falls by the recently organized team, beginning tonight. The members of the team are to meet at the corner of 8th and Ohio and practice will be held between Ohio avenue and the railroad tracks on 8th street. The two arc lights will make things bright enough and will enable the boys to run signals, practice formations and get into trim for the coming games. It had been hoped to practice late in the afternoons, but owing to the fact that many of the boys do not get off from work until 5 or 6 o'clock, it was decided to practice by arc light instead, and the first practice will be held tonight at 8 o'clock.

SOMETHING ABOUT INDIAN AFFAIRS

COMMISSIONER VALENTINE GIVES LIGHT ON SUBJECT AT LAKE MOHAWK CONFERENCE.

PEOPLE ARE IGNORANT

Very Few Citizens are Aware of True State of Affairs, or How to Remedy Conditions.

By Associated Press.
Mohawk Lake, N. Y., Oct. 20.—The address of R. G. Valentine, commissioner of Indian affairs, was the feature of today's session of the conference for the friends of the Indians and other dependent people.

Mr. Valentine said in part:

"The people of the United States ought to know certain things about their Indian bureau. They know today too little about the two or three fundamental principles in the light of which all the multiform activities of the Indian service fall into well ordered array in an advance toward a single goal. In the minds of most people the Indian service is a mere hodge-podge of activity. Indians are going to this or that kind of a school, being allotted, raising stock, working in the woods, learning to irrigate, drawing per capita payments in some cases and rations in others, owning bank accounts of all sizes from a few dollars to many thousands, going to church and engaging in pagan rights, dealing shrewdly with traders or becoming an easy mark for them, developing all kinds of diseases, getting drunk and even keeping sober, loafing and making some of the best workmen the United States possesses. All these various activities are kept in further confusion by the kaleidoscopic changes introduced by the rapidly scattering economic and social life of the white people scattered more and more around and through the Indian country.

"This apparent chaos in Indian affairs is only true superficially. It is necessary. It is necessary for the people at large to understand what the fundamental principles governing the bureau are in order to assist in bringing them to the surface and to demand of the Indian bureau and of Congress their intelligent and forceful application."

Continuing Mr. Valentine said that the Indian service was today wide open to the whole country for inspection. He said it was impossible for him to hear and see all the good and all the bad in the service personally and that it was necessary for Congress to give him to this end a corps of thirty competent inspectors with the necessary qualifications. Real superintendents also were needed. These superintendents should be big men, for Indian affairs above all is a human business, and to get good men adequate salaries must be paid them.

"It is possible to do only two things with the Indians," Mr. Valentine went on, "to exterminate them or make them into citizens. Our present course is a cross between extermination and citizenship. If we would escape a disaster greater than any which has attended this Indian business yet we must stop at the beginning of this twentieth century and think clearly about the Indians and set ourselves resolutely to certain clean and high courses. The whole American people must do this thinking, and this course which the thinking people will make clear demands of us more than would be demanded in the case of the backward among our own people, or in the case of the immigrant."

Mr. Valentine then declared that the Indian today was not yet ready to live under a perfectly constructed and highly developed irrigation system. He must first be given instructions from which he can see results, and in this way in one year many Indians could be taught to use highly developed irrigation system who without that preliminary training would forever fall.

The Commissioner then touched upon the health of the three thousand Indians in the United States. He said that tuberculosis and diseases of the blood should not be permitted to creep in among those peoples, and that liquor must be kept away from them. What is the use of a maimed and poisoned citizen, he asked? There should be an unexcelled Indian medical service.

Referring to education, Mr. Valentine said all Indians should be taught to speak the English language, to read easily, to speak objectively, to write clearly and to figure easily. For the industrial education of the Indian, the plant at hand in the broader sense is the very valuable property owned by the Indians, or given them by the Government, on which they get the experience of actual life.

In conclusion Mr. Valentine said: "It is possible to bring these three principals of health—shriftfulness industry to the front the Indian service will waken into full consciousness and intelligence. The superintendent who writes in for $700 to paint his buildings will not be told there is no money nor will another superintendent who needs more rations for the old people be told that it is the policy of the Government to discontinue rations. The bona fide white settler must come in, and the land speculator must go. Broad powers should be given by Congress to the executive officers of the Government by which in such cases as the allotments of Indians these officers can use their discretion.

"Finally, one great force, perhaps above all others, must be met and overcome. It seems as if in many white men there existed a different moral code among themselves and between themselves and the Indians. Men who would not think of stealing from white men apparently consider it no crime to steal from the Indians. This must be corrected.

"If the people of the United States will take note of all these things these evils would disappear in a few years. They will not disappear until some fundamental legislation is passed by Congress in response to the will of the people."

JAPAN A LAND OF COLOR.

Farms of Two or Three Acres Divided Into Many Tiny Fields.

Land is so scarce in Japan and the people so numerous that a farm rarely consists of more than an acre or two. These little farms are divided up into tiny fields. During the season of the year in which we made our journey one of these fields was filled with sprouting barley, light green in color; another field, perhaps the next, with vetch, a lavender colored, cloverlike fodder; a neighboring field with a dark green grass from the seed of which a lamp oil is manufactured; another with the pale yellow flowers of the mustard, and scattered here and there fields filled with what looked like a variety of lily, some white, some red, some yellow, but all equally brilliant.

Then to get the complete picture you must imagine patches of flowering azaleas dotting the roadside; towering, round topped camellia trees breaking the sky line with frequent splashes of bright green; usually in the shade of these trees houses with white plastered walls and red tiled roofs; about the more pretentious of these houses white plastered walls, above which appeared a profusion of palms, roses and strange native flowers, and in the doorways of the garden walls kimono clad Japanese girls, the kimonos as many and as gayly colored as the garden that framed them.

I have traveled in but one other country that is so gayly colored, and that was some few years ago, when, in the company of a number of other youngsters and an evil smelling magic lantern, I used to make frequent visits to the Land of Primary Colors.—George MacAdam in Outing Magazine.

Good Kitchen Company.

One housewife in this town doesn't know anything about the servant problem, at least so much of it as has to do with the keeping of a maid of all work, the quality of such service not being counted. This is because her servants always become devoted to her because of her brightness and magnanimous treatment of them. Having only the one servant of doubtful skill and accomplishments, this housewife has to spend a good deal of time in her own kitchen. The other day Julia expressed her appreciation this way: "Miss Fanny, yo' certinly is good kitchen comp'ny."—Louisville Times.

Two Hamlets.

Sir Beerbohm Tree and Wilson Barrett gave London their production of "Hamlet" almost contemporaneously. A well known wit who was asked his opinion of the dual Hamlets nonchalantly made answer: "Tree's Hamlet is funny without being vulgar, but Barrett's is vulgar without being funny."

A BISMARCK STORY.

Playing the Role of Cousin Was Just to His Liking.

In his university days Bismarck was as jolly and boisterous as the least promising youth of his generation. According to the author of "The M. P. For Russia," he enjoyed dancing and singing better than study and was as full of fun as his chosen companion, Count Keyserling, was deficient in it, and on this difference in temperament hangs a tale.

One day the shy and reserved Keyserling came to Bismarck in great agitation.

"What is the matter?" demanded Bismarck.

"My mother writes that an aunt and two cousins are coming for a week to Berlin, and, as they are very young and inexperienced, I must go about everywhere with them, offering them all sorts of amusements. It is most annoying," groaned Keyserling, "as I have to prepare myself for examinations and have no time for pretty country cousins."

Bismarck saw his chance and immediately inquired:

"Have you ever seen these young girls? Have they ever seen you?"

"Never in my life."

"Capital! Nothing could be better. Let me be Count Keyserling for the time being, and you become simple Bismarck. You stay at home, and I shall become a first class cicero during all the time of their visit."

Keyserling eagerly accepted the proposition. When the young ladies arrived, Bismarck met them as Keyserling and placed himself at their disposition during their stay in Berlin. Keyserling buried himself in his books and thought no more about it until the girls had gone home to the Baltic provinces.

A week or two later he was disconcerted by receiving a letter from home in which his mother expressed her great delight in hearing from the young ladies and their mother how immensely they had enjoyed themselves and how very agreeable and kind their cousin had been.

"I am overjoyed," continued the fond parent, "to hear from their description that you have grown quite stout and robust during your stay at Berlin."

A COOK'S CREST.

The Decoration Worn by a Pompous Persian Chef.

A quaint story from Persia is given in a book by Mr. James. The author had missed from his saddle the brass plate inscribed with the maker's name, Souter, and was wrath at his loss, since the name went for much in the judgment of the east.

"One day," he says, "I was sitting in my favorite teashop with my friend Hassan Ali, discussing as usual England's perfidy in abandoning north Persia to Russian machinations, when a most dignified Persian entered the asuberge. He was preceded by a well groomed boy carrying his dust coat. The Persian bowed to me with great civility and passed into an inner apartment. As both man and boy bore burnished gilt crests upon their tall astrakhan hats I took them to be public functionaries of no small importance.

"Who was that, Hassan Ali? I asked. 'I do not remember having seen him before, yet evidently he recognized me.'

"That," said my friend, with his small, beady eyes twinkling, 'is your cook—yes!'

"My cook?" I answered in astonishment. 'I took him to be at least the governor's chief of staff.'

"Well, he is your chief of staff, which to him seems a higher degree—yes! And Hassan Ali smiled his inimitable smile.

"But what in the name of good conscience is the impertinence that she wears upon his hat?"

"That must be your crest. It is a badge of yours!"

"On my honor, Hassan Ali, you must not make fun of me! I have given the man no crest, and I have never set eyes on him before!"

"I have seen the badge," Hassan Ali continued. 'It is undoubtedly your own. It has the motto "Souter," which is doubtless the old heraldic contraction for the word souter, and also the subtitle, "By royal appointment"—yes!'

It was, of course, the missing saddle plate, which the ingenious cook had "conveyed" as a heraldic decoration.

Not Personal.

Count d'Orsay had an explosive temper. Sir Algernon West says that the count "once called on the publishers, Messrs. Saunders & Otley, on Lady Blessington's behalf and used very strong language. A beautiful gentleman in a white neckcloth said he would rather sacrifice Lady Blessington's patronage than stand such personal abuse. 'I am not personal,' said D'Orsay. 'If you are Saunders, then—Otley; if you are Otley, then—Saunders.'"

Learned It by Ear.

The dear little girl arose, bowed and recited it in this manner:

"Lettuce Denby up N. Dewing,
Widow Harford N. E. Fate;
SUN H. E. Vize, still per Bow Wing,
"Learn to label Auntie Walte."

Then, with the tumultuous applause of the audience ringing in her ears, she sat down in happy confusion.—Chicago Tribune.

Not to Him.

THE SCANDALOUS CONDITION OF TEXAS JAILS.

Dallas News: In a communication which Mr. George A. Carden addressed to The News a few days ago he protested severely, but none too severely, against the sanitary and hygienic conditions of the Dallas county jail. Mr. Carden said that three prisoners had contracted tuberculosis and died of the disease, and that fact he considered as proof of a social crime.

The News quite agrees with this verdict, drastic as it is. But, what makes the matter worse, the condition of the Dallas county jail is not exceptional; or, if it is, the difference is favorable to it. We venture to say that, however bad the conditions of the Dallas county jail may be, they are at least no worse than those in half the jails of Texas. The fact is—and it were well we stripped it of the concealment of soft words—that our treatment of prisoners in county jails is little better than barbarous. What exceptions there are are just few enough to emphasize the rule. We do not to be sure, beat, starve or kill outright those whom we imprison in jails, but for the most part, we subject them to conditions that not only make living a torture to the man of even ordinary sensibilities but expose them to the dangers of deadly disease. Lacking even the most ordinary means of ventilation and lacking the commonest methods of sanitation, we lock men up in an atmosphere so laden with disease that only the hardiest—and the luckiest—can hope to escape a fatal infection. Darning as even that criterion would be, we can not measure our slay by the number of men who actually die on our hands. Many we release from jail after we have kept them only long enough to infect them with disease. Many others are convicted and survive their penitentiary terms only to be released to die of a disease contracted in the jails. The freedom we give such after they have paid the penalty of their crimes is a mockery. Such we formally adjudge deserving only of a term of confinement; but in reality, pending the determination of their crime, we have informally sentenced them to death by lingering process. If this fact were not so certainly the result of insensate negligence, an unfriendly critic might suspect us of a desire to make away with men whom we lack the courage to condemn.

Doubtless these words will shock many ears; but if they shall shock men and women of Texas into sense of the enormity of the wrong we do the prisoners in our jails, any slight exaggeration will be abundantly atoned. For this is one of those great wrongs which react hard to the hurt of those who themselves do the wrong. The existence of such conditions dulls the popular sense of justice, weakens the people's power of perception, and, we have no doubt, speaking more concretely, the vile condition of the ordinary jail operates often to defeat the ends of lawful justice.

This is not a criticism of jailors, who in most cases do the best they can with the means and provisions at hand, but of the whole people of any county in which the bad conditions exist.

The above from the News, as it says, will apply to three-fourths of the county and city jails in Texas, and to many of our county poor houses. The Times is glad to state however, that the tax-payers of Wichita county have at last had their attention called to the condition of things at the county jail, and as a result bonds have been voted for the construction of a new jail. For any civilized people to confine a half dozen prisoners into a place or cell where only about half that number should be confined is nothing less than crime worse, perhaps than the crimes for which the prisoners are confined.

The following welcome to the W. D. C. which is now holding its convention in Houston, appears in yesterday's Houston Post:
The daughters of the men who wore the gray,
Who yesterday—it seems like yesterday—
Went charging to the belching cannon's mouth
An cheered and died for their beloved South!
Who flung aloft their banners with a cheer,
And scorning shot and shell and death and fear
Charged on and on, and with their latest breath
Flung loud defiance in the face of death.
We greet you here—you daughters of brave men—
When shall the world look on their like again

When shall the world look on their like again?
Where are the lips to speak, or where the pen.
To tell the glory of the deeds they dared,
To tell the roughness of the roads they fared,
To tell the veneration of the South
For them her heroes!—grief may droop the mouth
For a short moment for our heroes dead,
The while we twine a wreath to deck the bed
They rest in now, then memories arise
Of their brave deeds and brighten in our eyes.

Daughters of heroes, it is yours to lay
The twin-ed wreaths above their voiceless clay;
To sing their deeds so that the sons of men
Shall know their greatness, so that when again
The clarion call shall send its swift alarm
Across the South our sons shall wake and arm
Themselves and swiftly rush to front the foe.
Spurred by the deeds their sires so long ago
So nobly dared, ward's tide to meet and stem!
We honor you, and thus we honor them.
—Judd Mortimer Lewis.

THE TEASEL

A Queer Plant With Water Traps For Its Insect Victims.

Among common plants there are few more remarkable than the teasel. There is little doubt, says a well-informed natural history contributor to the London Chronicle, that the teasel is as much a flesh eating organism as any spider that ever spun a web.

Moreover, its method of securing its victims, though quite as ingenious as that of the spider, is much more comprehensive as well as more efficacious. Not only does this extraordinary plant capture all species of flies and gnats, great or small, but caterpillars, slugs, woodlice and the like are all frequent victims.

How this is brought about forms one of the most wonderful incidents in nature's fascinating story of the year. The spider weaves her net of the finest silk; the teasel makes her snare out of dewdrops. The plant grows up straight as a church spire, throwing out its leaves in pairs at intervals up the juicy green stem. The twin leaves unite at their base to form a deep cup, and the leaves are so contrived that the moisture precipitated on them runs down into this reservoir.

A well developed plant will thus catch and hold in four or five of these water traps a full half pint of liquid, and the heat of the sun appears to evaporate so little of it that the cups will be brimming even at the close of a hot June day. The smooth, steep leaves all lead down into these pits, and their gradient gets sharper as the water is approached.

Thus the teasel's victims are made to "walk the plank" to their death, and once in the water there is no hope of return. They soon drown, and every teasel well has at its bottom a layer of slime formed by their disintegrated bodies.

It is of course difficult to prove that this deposit is absorbed by the plant as nutriment, but careful dissection will show at the base of each cup a ring of apertures—sink holes, in fact—which lead into the substance of the stem and the presence of which affords little room for doubt on the matter.

DRIVING A NAIL

More to It Than Simply Hammering It Into the Wood.

One who thinks that the driving of a nail consists simply in getting the whole length of it out of sight has little conception of the real nature of the operation, says the Scientific American. A nail driven by an expert will often hold several times as much as one ill driven, while, too, it is often made to draw the parts into place. If you have ever watched a mechanic driving nails you have doubtless noted that he rarely drives one at right angles with the face of the work.

There is a reason for this. Suppose that he is nailing the "sheeting" on the frame of a building and desires to draw the board down tightly against the one below it. He points the nail downward, and a few well considered blows at the last produce the desired effect. If the board is bent edgewise, so that much force is required, probably he will start the nail in the upper edge, pointing very sharply downward. Again, two nails driven in a board at different angles will hold it in place much more firmly than the same nails would if they were driven at right angles with the face of the board.

Did you ever notice that in driving a nail in very hard wood one man will do it successfully, while another succeeds only in doubling the nail up before the point has fairly entered the wood? The difference lies in the fact that the expert strikes the nail fairly and not too hard, "coaxing" it in, while the other strikes too hard and with indirection. It may be properly mentioned right here that in driving a nail into very hard wood it is usually profitable to dip the end in oil or grease. This will not sensibly interfere with the holding qualities of the nail, while it will be found to very materially facilitate its driving.

Mr. Walter Allen who is visiting his cousin here, Mr. Dan Allen, left last week to spend a few days at the Dallas Fair. He will then return here.

THE CAMERA.

Some of the Wonderful Things of Which It is Capable.

The camera, which divides time into thousandths of a second and records the impressions of each, makes permanent pictures of events which pass too quickly for the dull human retina to recognize. It is only through the camera that the motions of the wings of flying birds and of the legs of swift running animals have been analyzed. To the camera the fuzzy drivers of the swiftly speeding locomotives stand out clear cut and stationary, while each flying drop of rain in the driven storm is distinct and seems frozen in its place. The tarpon fisherman, familiar with the first wild leap of the frenzied fish as it casts hook and bait 175 feet in the air, sees first in the finished picture the outstretched gills, the convulsive opening and closing of which had escaped his eye, however closely he may have looked for it.

Often the eye of the camera will decipher documents of which the writing had been substantially obliterated by age, and I have successfully copied with the camera the utterly faded photograph of a classmate of forty years previous and thereby been enabled to present to a grizzled veteran a likeness of his curly haired youth. Changes in the pigment of the skin undetectable by the eye appear with distinctness on the sensitive plate, and it is said that ample warning of approaching disease has been thereby given.

By means of the invisible rays lying beyond the violet of the spectrum objects may be photographed in the darkness and, with the aid of the so called X rays, through substances otherwise opaque. When from the darkness of night and storm the forked lightning flashes, the camera makes a vivid and permanent picture of each fiery trail. Creatures that travel by night can be "caught" in the brief blaze of a magnesium charged pistol, the flash of which is of too short duration for the creature to move or the dull human eye to recognize the subject.—A. W. Dimock in Van Norden's.

YES WE DO REPAIRING

And we are not ashamed of it either for it is the kind that we don't have to be ashamed of. The shoes we sell need repairing in the way of new soles and heels, for the uppers are too good to throw away, even after the soles and heels are gone. So bring in the shoes you bought from us and we will make them almost as good as new. Bring in the shoes you bought from others and we will make them serviceable at least.

FLORAL HEIGHTS

Wake Up and Buy Some Lots In Floral Heights

Can't you see that delay means a loss to you. Don't you know that lots in Floral heights will soon be higher? Why not? They are certainly the cheapest and best located lots in and about Wichita Falls. They have the highest elevation, the purest atmosphere, the most picturesque view. They have the city water, graded streets, five cent car fare and, in fact, will soon have every modern convenience out to the bend of the car line. Wide concrete sidewalks are now being put down and several nice residences are under construction.

This is the only way the town can grow and the only way we will have street car service for several years. The Floral Heights addition is not a real estate man's proposition, but is an addition backed by over fifty of the leading citizens of Wichita County, who have the interest of Wichita Falls at heart and who are determined to make Floral Heights the swellest residence section of the city. Floral Heights is spending more money to boost Wichita Falls than all the concerns in the city put together, with the exception of the Chamber of Commerce.

Any agent in the city will be glad to give you prices and assist you in selecting your lots. Make your purchase today before the good lots are all sold. Cars leave the corner of 8th St. and Indiana Avenue every ten minutes for Floral Heights. Lots are sold on terms of one-third cash, balance in one and two years, 8 per cent interest.

If you have friends and acquaintances who would like to know more about Wichita Falls, call at our office, 617 8th Street, for nice literature to mail them.

SPITTING NUISANCE.

Hawking and Spitting is Caused by Catarrh Germs.

If the local authorities want to stop the disgusting habit of spitting mucous on the sidewalks, they had better instruct the people as to the best method of killing the catarrh germs and curing catarrh.

You can easily tell by reading the symptoms below whether you have catarrh or not:

Offensive breath, frequent sneezing, discharge from nose, stoppage of the nose, huskiness of the voice, tickling in throat, droppings in throat, a cough, pain in chest, loss of strength, variable appetite, spasms of coughing, low spirited at times, raising of mucous, difficulty in breathing, loss of vital force.

Mater-Walker Drug Company have a sensible remedy (money back if it fails) for catarrh, called Hyomet, which is vaporized air so antiseptic that when it is breathed over the inflamed and germ-infested membrane, it kills all germ life and cures catarrh.

The price, including large rubber inhaler, is only $1.00 and money back if it doesn't cure. Extra bottles, 50 cents. "I had tried almost every catarrh cure on the market without benefit. Have been using Hyomet for one week and feel like a new man already."—Wm. V. Goode, Newark, Ohio, June 21, 1909.

Benjamin Clothes
Alfred Benjamin & Co. New York

You'd be surprised if we'd tell you the number of men in this city who come to us, quite worried because of the fear that they can not obtain a suit of exceptional attractiveness, and one not having that flippant "air" which characterizes so many makes of clothes. We quiet their fears in a moment and do it very easily, too. In our long experience we have found that freakishness is not style, nor are the clamorous patterns. Acting upon our real knowledge of a gentleman's needs we are always prepared to exhibit rare styles and fascinating patterns; BUT NOT boisterous clothes. The Seabright Sack, made by Alfred Benjamin & Co., in New York, is a remarkable style, which is so "up-to-the-minute" that it fairly sparkles. The fabrics are soft and rich; the tailoring is of the kind which only expert workers can give. It is a clean, good, "Made in New York" style which men of taste desire.

TESTING THE ENUMERATORS.

Census Director Durand Will Follow Plan Pursued in 1900.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 20.—United States Census Director E. Dana Durand stated today that the primary responsibility for securing efficient enumerators must rest with the supervisors of the census.

It has been suggested from time to time, said the director, "that more efficient enumerators might be secured by competitive examination open to everybody. There is no doubt that if the expense and time required were not prohibitive, it would be advantageous to hold an examination, although it would be necessary, instead of merely selecting those whose ranking in the examination was highest, to refer all candidates who passed to the supervisor, and allow him to select those whose personal characteristics, such as cannot be tested by any written examination, were most suitable. The difficulty with such an open examination is the expense and delay involved. It is probable that for the 65,000 places there would be several hundred thousand candidates, and the grading of their papers would require a large force for a long time. At some future census this plan might be worth a trial, but it can scarcely be attempted at the present census within the limits of time and appropriations set by law.

"The census bureau does, of course, undertake to protect itself," he continued, "against such obviously incompetent enumerators as the supervisors, through political influence or through oversight, may happen to choose. At the last census the enumerators recommended by the supervisors were all subjected to a test examination, and the same policy will be pursued this time. About one-sixth or 9,000, of the candidates selected by the supervisors were rejected as a result of this test in 1900. It may be wise to make the test at the present census a trifle more severe than at the twelfth census. At best, however, such an examination can do no more than eliminate those who cannot write plainly and who are clearly lacking in an understanding of their duties. It can do little to assure the selection of men of industry, tact, or honesty. The judgment, efficiency and integrity of the supervisors must be the prime reliance for securing enumerators who possess these fundamental qualifications.

"I hope and believe that the supervisors at the present census are on the whole, a higher type of men than those at any preceding census. The compensation offered to supervisors is somewhat more than ever before, but it is not really an adequate remuneration for men of the character needed. I believe that a very considerable proportion of the supervisors who have been appointed are men who in their regular occupations or profession are able to earn much more than the supervisor's pay, and who have accepted the positions because of the honor and responsibility involved, or from patriotic motives. There has, however, been no departure with respect to the general method of selecting supervisors, save only that in large cities, or most of them, selections have largely been made independently of political recommendations.

"It may not be inappropriate here to explain the reason why so-called political recommendations must be sought in the appointment of supervisors in most of the districts. The supervisor, in order to do his work properly, must be a resident of the district over which he has charge. The position is not one which can be filled by civil service examination. A supervisor should be a man of executive ability, such as no examination can test, and he should be a man well known in his community. Indeed, men of the type desired would not, in most instances, be willing to submit themselves to a civil service examination. Neither the director of the census, his superior officer, the secretary of commerce and labor, nor the president, can possibly have personal acquaintance throughout the country with men suitable to fill these positions, nor even with men outside of political positions, whose advice they can seek. The representative of the district in congress or the party leaders in the district have the necessary knowledge of local conditions and local men, and it is not only natural, but practically necessary, as a matter of good administration, that they should be asked to make recommendations for positions of this character.

"Fortunately, members of congress and party leaders are coming more and more to appreciate the importance of accurate census statistics. The spoils idea of appointments is growing constantly less dominant. The director of the census has done everything possible to impress upon those whose opinions were asked regarding the supervisory positions, the importance of the necessity of having furnished by members of congress and party leaders regarding the candidates whom they have recommended has been supplemented by full personal statements required from each candidate, and, in most cases, by numerous letters of indorsement from business and professional men.

"In the large cities the administration is evidently less dependent than in the country districts upon members of congress and party leaders for information regarding available material for such positions as that of supervisor of the census, and the president and the secretary of commerce and labor have joined with the director of the census in establishing the policy of making selections, whenever the information on which to act was available, without depending on the recommendations of political leaders."

Two Ways of Looking At It.

After buying that bill of lumber you are going to need, and using it, you may be either glad or mad. It depends on whether you buy good, dry lumber from us, or carelessly accept lumber that's only half seasoned, from somebody who's not so particular about the quality of their stock as we are.

There are no two ways about it: You can buy any kind of lumber or building material to better advantage right here than you can anywhere else in this part of the country. Let us make you an estimate on what you want.

THE TRUE BLUEBEARD

He Was a Cruelly and Malevolently Malignant Frenchman.

NOT A MURDEROUS MONSTER.

He Had Matrimonial Misfortunes, It Is True, but He Seems to Have Been the Only One Who Came to Grief on Account of Them—His Tragic End.

The supposedly detestable Bluebeard, the monster of murderous polygamy, the very name of the ogre into whose mouth one used, if one could, in childhood's happy hour, to throw india rubber balls, was in truth a man who has been as cruelly and malevolently malignantly by history as Nero, Richard III., Macbeth, tittit quants. So says M. Anatole France—and pray who can speak with higher authority on the real facts of faery?—in "Les Sept Femmes de la Barbe-Bleue et Autres Contes Merveilleux." One knew already that Charles Perrault first wrote, in about 1690, the historical biography of Bluebeard, but one did not know until now how deeply Perrault, probably through false information, wronged the memory of an excellent and ill treated personage. From M. France we learn that M. Bernard de Montroux, of old, and noble descent, lived in 1650 or thereabouts at the ancestral Chateau Les Gulliettes, on his estates between Complegne and Pierrefonds. The castle, of frowning outward aspect, was inside a treasure house of taste and wealth. Its owner, contrary to long existing tradition, wore no beard, only a mustache and a little tuft below the lower lip. He was known through the countryside as Bluebeard because his hair was very black, and therefore his close shaven cheeks and chin were markedly blue.

He was a fine figure of a man who, in spite of his manifest advantages as a good match, did not get on well with women of his own rank in life. This was due to an incurable shyness on his part. Pleasant and pretty girls who had been well brought up attracted him immensely, but also filled him with an indescribable terror.

The first notable result of this affliction was that the unfortunate orphan, for such he had been since his early youth, incapable of making proposals for the hand of any of the attractive and high born ladies in the neighborhood, married a certain Colette Passage, a fascinating girl in her way, against whose character nothing seems known, who was going round the country with a dancing bear. Things went well enough for a few months, and then Colette, who had at first revealed in being a lady of quality, began to long for her old freedom. The longing became irresistible, and at last she took her departure secretly with her justly beloved bear. It is noteworthy that they made their escape by way of a room that had a door leading to what had been water meadows, and so to open country. Perrault called this room "le petit cabinet," but it was also known as "the wretched princesses' room," because a Florentine painter had covered its walls with the most lifelike figures of Circe, Niobe and Procris. The tragic effect of these paintings was enhanced by the porphyry flooring of the room, which suggested bloodstains.

Montroux appeared inconsolable at the disappearance, which was complete, of Colette, his first wife, and doubtless his lot would have been far less unhappy if he had never tried to console himself. This, most unfortunately, he did by marrying one Jeanne de la Cloche, who turned out to be a violent dipsomaniac. Bluebeard was of a nature so kindly and noble that, although in a fit of mad passion she nearly killed him with a kitchen knife, he continually hoped to reclaim her by kindness. But one day she strayed into the generally shut up princesses' room, took the painted figures for real people and was so terrified that she rushed wildly into the open fields, tumbled into a deep pool, and so was drowned.

So things went on, a new affliction with each new wife, and in each case the final catastrophe was associated with the princesses' room. The climax to the unhappy career of the more than worthy and lovable Bernard de Montroux came with his seventh wife, Jeanne de Lespoise, cleverest and most fascinating of a family of utterly unscrupulous adventurers. No one knew anything about the supposed late husband of the mother. Of the two brothers, a dragon and a musketeer, one was a low rascal and a mere sponge; the other lived on gaming and on the good nature of women to whom he made love. Anne, the sister, was the incarnation of malicious cunning. Associated with this precious family was a certain Chevalier de Merius, who had a great deal to do with the final tragedy of M. de Montroux's career. The nature of this tragedy may be inferred, but it is curious that, while Perrault represented Bluebeard as taking a journey in order to lay a trap for his wife, the fact was exactly opposite. Both before and after his marriage he had heaped benefits on all these wretches. When he was obliged to go away in the matter of an inheritance he gave all his keys without reserve to his wife, warning her out of pure love against the unhappy associations of the princesses' room. As soon as he was out of the way a trap was laid for him, and it was in that very room that he was most treacherously assassinated. The worst and the best of it was that M. de Merius, after marrying the wealthy widow, became an exemplary husband and subject of the king.
