WHAT FIRE COSTS UNITED STATES

HEAVY TOLL IS LEVIED EACH YEAR THAT MIGHT BE VERY EASILY ELIMINATED.

FIRE PROOF MATERIAL

In Consistent Use of Less Inflammable Supplies Would Do Much to Solve Problem.

By Associated Press.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 7.—Fire, stolen from heaven by Prometheus, according to ancient Greek mythology, and as a blessing brought by him to earth in a hollow reed after Zeus had deprived mankind of it, levies upon Americans each year an enormous tax calculated by United States Government officials at almost a million and a half dollars a day and 1,449 lives a year. As a result of an investigation just concluded by officials of the United States Geological Survey, has been ascertained that cheaper fire proof materials can be used to advantage in construction, that three to six times the necessary amount of material is habitually used in structural work in the United States, that the building codes are laxly enforced, that the fire loss in the United States is eight times as much per capita as any country in Europe and that the great fire waste in the United States is due principally to the predominance of frame buildings and to defective construction and equipment.

Contrast between the small loss by fire to government buildings and the immense losses reported from the country as a whole, led the geological survey to make an inquiry as to the losses in the United States and as to their exact cost to the people. To determine the strength and resistance of building materials, still being made by the survey, and thought these tests are designed primarily to meet the needs of the government as the largest consumer, the results are available to anyone of general use.

Not one person in a thousand knows that the United States Government owns buildings that cost more than $300,000,000 and is spending $20,000,000 a year for new buildings. It will be a surprise to everyone, too, to learn that not one cent of insurance against loss by fire is carried on these valuable buildings. Insurance at the ordinary rate would cost more than a million dollars a year, and the government avoids this great tax by constructing buildings that are secure fireproof.

To attain this degree of security from fire for government buildings the government has gone to considerable expense and the results obtained far repay the outlay. From these tests to determine the strength and fire resistance of building materials it has been determined that American builders can with safety use cheaper fire proof materials than they do. It has been learned that the difference in cost between fireproof and inflammable buildings is less than generally supposed and the officials predict that this difference will soon become so small that it will cease to encourage the construction of flimsy buildings. It has been found that three to six times the necessary amount of material is habitually used by American builders in structural work. The necessity is also shown for better building codes in cities and especially a better enforcement of the codes already enacted if the present enormous fire losses are to be diminished.

After a careful investigation it has been determined that the total cost of fires in the United States in 1907, excluding that of forest fires and the marine losses (in themselves extensive) but including excess cost of fire protection due to bad construction and excess premiums over insurance paid amounted to the enormous sum of over $456,485,000, a tax on the American people exceeding the total value of all the gold, silver, copper and petroleum produced in the United States in that year. The cost of building construction in 1907 in forty-nine leading cities of the United States reporting a total population of less than 18,000,000, amounted to $661,076,286, and the cost of building construction for the entire country is conservatively estimated at $1,000,000,000. Thus it will be seen that nearly one-half of the value of all of the new buildings constructed within one year is destroyed by fire. The annual fire cost is greater than the value of the real property and improvements in either Maine, West Virginia, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Dakota, Alabama, Louisiana or Montana. In addition to this waste of wealth and natural resources, 1,449 persons were killed and 5,664 injured in fires in the United States in 1907.

The Geological Survey's inquiry, which is embodied in a report entitled "The Fire Tax and Waste of Structural Materials in the United States," prepared by H. M. Wilson and J. L.

Cochrane of the survey, covered not only the value of property destroyed, but also the cost of maintaining fire departments, the amount of insurance premiums paid less the amount returned, the cost of protective agencies, the additional cost of water supplies and other elements of the fire loss. The report gives the method of gathering the statistics collected, makes an analysis of the fire loss in city and country and on frame and brick buildings, and contains tables showing the increased cost of fire protection due to faulty construction.

The actual fire loss in the United States due to the destruction of buildings and their contents amounted to $215,084,709 in 1907. This was $2.51 loss per capita. The per capita loss in the cities of the six leading European countries amounted to but 33 cents. Comparisons of the total cost of fires, which includes the items already stated, show that if the buildings in the United States were as nearly fireproof as those of Europe, the annual fire cost would be $40,000,000, instead of $256,000,000.

And the way we are doing it is keeping the best wire fencing in stock. Before deciding on the wire fencing most suitable to our particular trade, we investigated all the leading makes. Our object was to get the strongest fencing; fencing that would stretch up the easiest; would not sag when run over uneven ground; was animal proof and so constructed as to best withstand the ravages of time.

The fencing that we found to most nearly combine all these desirable qualities was the Pittsburgh Perfect Welded Wire Fencing. So this is the fence we not only offer you, but advise you to take. It costs no more than other fencing of inferior quality.

Amusements for the Week

Scene From Act 4—Wichita Theatre, Feb. 7.

"The Little Homestead," by W. B. Patton tells a touching story of human interest—a story with a moral forcibly told and beautiful in its pathos. It appeals to the fine sensibilities, raises the emotions of indignation, sorrow, pity and applauds righteousness triumphant. It is a story which makes one better for the knowing, yet a tale of such dramatic force and virility that interest is heightened by every word, every situation.

One feels at home by that freshest with the devoted young husband and handsome wife; shudders at the entrance of the villain who crosses the happy threshold and strikes at its sanctity; sorrows at the frailty of the wife who in a moment of blind infatuation succumbs to the wiles of the destroyer; weeps with the disconsolate husband and finds hope in the little ill-shapen deformed cripple to whom the wife has been kind and who knows that this deformed being was created for a purpose. Pathos pervades when the doors of the homestead are closed upon the wife and the home destroyed. The sorrow and suffering which follow the unhappy woman to squalid apartment and to drunken abuse from the man with whom she has cast her lot, and relieved by the appearance of the husband who hopes to again lead her back to paths of right. The threats of death by the brutal paramour have no terror for the wronged husband. The little cripple again sees and knows. It is his hand that bids the homestead of its destroyer.

Then out of the blisking New England blizzard comes the remorseful wife to the little homestead—to die. The ruddy blaze of the fireside lights upon her face, made sweet through suffering. She hears her husband call her wife, hears his forgiveness and in her little homestead passes to rest.

With its realistic settings and capable interpretation by an unusually talented company, the story of "The Little Homestead" goes straight to the heart. This will be the attraction at the Wichita Theatre tonight. William MacCauley, the star, will appear in the leading part and he is well remembered for his excellent acting in "The Minister's Son" and "When We Were Friends," and it is with pleasure that one can look forward to a visit of this clever young actor. A packed house should welcome both star and play. Mr. MacCauley has had this beautiful play re-written and an entire new third act is being introduced.

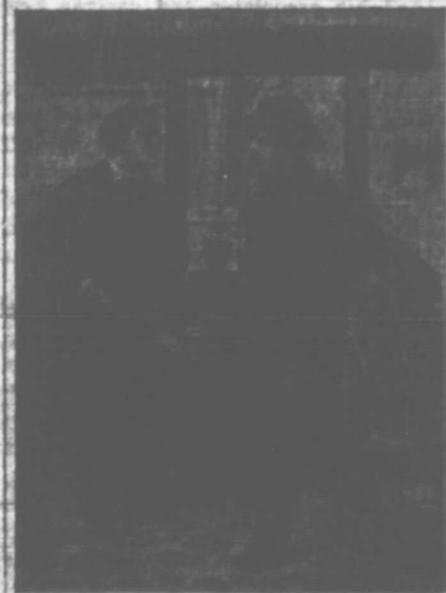

"The Three Twins."

The "Three Twins," which comes to the Wichita Theatre next Thursday, February 10th, with the full prestige of a metropolitan success, having had a run of five months in Chicago at the Whitney Opera House, and one year at the Herald Square Theatre, New York, where it scored such tremendous success with its beautiful music and wonderful electric novelties. It is said to be the most handsome costumed company in America, including eight Parisian Duettoes gowns which Mr. Joe M. Galter purchased in Paris especially for this production, which presents a ray of beauty when worn by the beautiful and shapely girls.

The company is a tremendously large one and owing to the vast amount of heavy electrical equipment and scenery it requires two baggage cars to transport it. The electrical aerial swing weighs 4000 pounds and is illuminated with 200 electric lights and when revolving with six beautiful show girls in the basket it is said to present a most beautiful picture. There are many musical numbers that are hits. "The Cuddle Song," showing the Seven Ages of Cuddling, is one of the most elaborate and sentimental stage pictures that has been produced in recent years. The "Yama Yama" girls and their funny clown suits is a distinct novelty and Ashton Stevens of the New York Journal, said it was the most titillating piece of business that had been produced on Broadway in many years and he devoted an entire column to this one musical number.

The "Three Twins" is headed by Victor Morley, who created the title role when the show was produced at the Whitney Opera House in Chicago, and includes Bessie Clifford, Florence Kolb, W. H. Woodside, Frank Smith, E. F. Bower, Harry Hanlon, Albert Livingston, Harry Johnson, Minnie Allen, Helena Sallinger, Ada Gifford, Ada Bateman, Lillian Sadler and a chorus of sixty people. The orchestra is under the direction of Ivan Rudisill. Seats will be on sale tomorrow at 9 a. m. Prices, 50c to $2.00.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROMISES.

Some of the stuff sent out by President Taft or his friends is as far from the truth as the bulletins of Napoleon when the fortune of war was going against that resourceful historical character. There is this difference, however: When the famous Corsican was in a tight place he came out with a great, thumping falsehood, claiming victory in the midst of dire defeat, to encourage the people at home. But the tricks of Taft are by indirection.

To Berwick, Pa., came Rabbi Levy from a Washington interview with the president. And the rabbi spoke to the people: "You don't know that man yet. In my hearing President Taft said: 'Two years ago promises were made to the American people, and every promise will be kept.' This is trick No. 1. Here is trick No. 2. Says its Washington letter to the Brooklyn Eagle: 'The democrats could ask for nothing better than that the president should listen to the advice of many of his well-meaning friends all over the country, and bring on a breach between himself and the leaders in congress. Such a course would result in legislative stagnation during the remainder of the sixty-first congress, continue the same throughout the sixty-second congress, under the management of a democratic house, and bring the Taft administration to a close March 4, 1913, with a record of nothing done.'"

Now, the president ought not to deceive the rabbi. As a religious teacher such a man is apt to believe in human nature. The greatest political promise made to the American people by Mr. Taft was of tariff revision downward. He was elected on the faith of that promise. He made it before the election. He made it again after the election. Congress was duly called in special session. At Yale, Mr. Taft, apparently true to the people and his promise, said that the republican party must not go on record as a pledge-breaking party. But it did. It passed a tariff revision bill, giving the people revision, not downward, but upward. And Mr. Taft went on record as a pledge-breaking president, for, instead of vetoing that bad bill, he signed it. He joked as he affixed his signature. "He who laughs last laughs best. The great American people have not yet come to their time to laugh."

And, not content with talking about promise-keeping to the rabbi, Mr. Taft inspires the wonderful statement that his alliance with Aldrich and Cannon is because the democrats want him to break with those agents of the predatory interests. As patriots the democrats do want Mr. Taft to dissolve the unholy alliance, but as party men they must needs want to give him plenty of rope; he will yet hang himself politically with his extra high tariff, his trusts rampant, his United States bank, his ship subsidy scheme and his support of the plunderers of our natural resources, for which the Roosevelt conservation policy is a paramount need.—Houston Chronicle.

Zelaya is gone from this hemisphere, pretty much if not precisely as Castro and others before him have gone. He has gone to stay—has been translated permanently into enduring private life. His career has conformed too closely to the revolutionary processes of his kind to permit any doubt as to that. Superior in intelligence, in courage, in unscrupulousness and favored by luck, he was able to pick up a country by its heels to empty its pocket. With such, political institutions are merely means of confiscation. They incorporate legislative and judicial power with executive power merely to prevent any dispersion of the spoils. The spoils are destined for European deposit; Belgium is a favored nook. The accumulations of a few years suffice to make the Zelayas and Castros indifferent to any consequence which does not involve the integrity of their skins. If allowed to pass a few uninterrupted years and suffered to escape as Zelaya and Castro escaped, they can feel that the game has sufficiently rewarded them. There are not many marks to the credit of Secretary Knox's diplomacy, but his failures and blunders whatever they are, are somewhat atoned by the fact that he had most to do with ousting Zelaya from this hemisphere.—Dallas News.

The Floral Heights Realty Company, in advertising its property on such an extensive scale, is giving Wichita Falls in general some publicity that is most valuable. The half-page and full-page ads that have appeared recently have made the name "Wichita Falls" a household word and results are sure to follow.

An exchange points out that all the modern disasters have been visited upon wicked cities, Galveston San Francisco and Paris, being cited as examples. What have our neighbors to predict for us on that theory?

An Amarillo man was heard bragging on that city's ten miles of cement sidewalks yesterday. Ten miles, think of it! Why, she only lacks thirty-five miles of having as much as Wichita Falls.

Four Chicago city officials have been indicted for graft, but as they stole only forty-five thousand dollars, it is not thought their punishment will be severe.

Wouldn't it be awful if O. E. Colquitt and Dr. Rankin had to pay line rates for all the space they are taking up in the Sunday papers?

The Ballinger investigation has been postponed for a week. It oughtn't to take 'em that long to buy up the witnesses.

Mine explosions seem to be becoming quite a fashionable diversion, judging from recent press reports.

WICHITA FALLS MAN MAY BE SECRETARY.

Conferring with the directors of the San Angelo Chamber of Commerce, with an eye to accepting the position of permanent secretary is F. H. Gohlke of Wichita Falls, one of the most experienced men in all the business and thoroughly conversant with all the particulars and necessities that a first class secretary must deal with.

No decision has been reached as yet; it is the desire of both of the parties concerned, viz Gohlke and the board of directors, to fully understand each other and be sure of their ground before a decision is made. It is likely that Mr. Gohlke will return to Wichita Falls this afternoon on the Orient and settle up certain affairs there that may interfere with his acceptance of this position, if it should be thus decided.

Mr. Gohlke looked over the city at length and observed many of the characteristics. He wants to gather more knowledge of the resources of the city before making any permanent arrangement with the directors.

"What San Angelo needs in a great measure is civic improvements and development," he declared with vim. "You cannot imagine for a moment what a great advertising card a well fixed up city is for any town. When the prospectors look upon it, if it is comely and progressive, he generally makes it as his selection. He wants to come to a town where there is some pride in the beautiful and the handy."

"I have made no definite terms as yet but will tell the directors just what I expect to do and outline my plans and they will likewise give me their requirements. Then we may possibly make a go of it."

Mr. Gohlke conferred with the directors for a couple of hours in their quarters in the San Angelo Club rooms Friday morning, but no report was made, save to say that nothing had been closed as yet.—San Angelo Standard.

A Careful Queen of Diamonds. New York Press. Alexandra of Great Britain is the one queen in Europe who has not lost or broken the family jewels. The British royal ornaments have been preserved with the greatest care, and the only change she has ever made is to have certain jewels in the big collection reset to bring them up to the more recent fashionable requirements. Alexandra has been devoted to jewelry, its care and collection, ever since her marriage. She has each set imbedded in a specially designed tray of white velvet and before she retires each night she attends personally to locking the jewels in burglar proof vaults. The only other person who has a key to those vaults is Charlotte Knollys.

Character Read by Forehead Lines. New York World. Paris.—The method of reading character in vogue here is not by the lines of the hand, but by the lines in one's forehead. The "new" science is known as metoscopic and four centuries ago was in high favor. Seven principal lines traverse the forehead and; like the lines in the hand, are influenced by Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, Mercury, the sun and the moon. If a certain line takes the form of an M that signifies happiness; if it is shaped like an X and is surrounded by a kind of U that means infidelity.

Your Electric Light Bill

Now, just a moment—it is not my intention to be disagreeable, but I believe that I can cause it to be much more satisfactory. How would you like to have twice as much light or the same amount of light, twice the number of hours, or twice the number of lights the same hours, at less than the present cost? Isn't that fair enough? Make a suggestion.
