CHILDREN ARE ESSENTIAL.

Club of Matrons Investigates Married Life.

Trenton, N. J.—That children are essential to the happiness of married couples is the belief of the "Cupid Wings" Club, the local organization composed of prominent matrons who spend most of their spare time in mending broken hearts and bringing about domestic felicity. At a recent meeting of the organization a committee of three was appointed to investigate the relation of children to the happiness of the parents, and a report has just been submitted to Mrs. Charles Howell, president of the club.

The committee is unanimous that where there are no children a marriage usually results unhappily, and where there are children it is just the reverse. In this connection the report says:

"To investigate the subject your committee undertook to study thirty married couples. The number with children and those without was equally divided. We found the condition the same with all.

"We will take, for example, one wife and base this side of the argument on her. She had been married five years, distrusted and disliked her husband and was continually 'hen-pecking' him. She wanted to spend most of her time talking matters over with friends and was continually yearning for amusement. She is extravagant in dress and in all her tastes. Although her husband's income is small, she spends the greater portion of it on herself and allows him such a small sum for spending money that he is unable to supply himself with cigars for half of a week.

"He cares nothing for his home nor his wife. Life is not worth living for him, and he dislikes even to go to his home. He reluctantly takes his wife to the theatre at her order. He does not enjoy the play and the comments of his wife as to the appearance of certain persons in the audience give him a headache. He wishes he was thousands of miles away. There is nothing in common between the couple, and there exists that lack of sympathy that is essential to happiness in the state of wedlock.

"Such a marriage generally results in divorce or the physical wasting away of the man or the woman for the lack of sunshine and glory which should hover about a home. We found almost an identical condition in each life of the fifteen childless couples saving one. In this case they had been married only a year.

"We were very careful in selecting the subjects of our study, so that we are certain none of them was possessed of bad habits. Of course, if the man or woman is a drunkard or has degrading habits, conditions would undoubtedly be different if there were a dozen children in a home."—Indianapolis News.

NO POLITICAL PRESIDENT.

Suggestion of a Better Policy for Mr. Taft to Pursue.

We wish at times that President Taft would admit to himself that he is a great failure as a political president and quit bothering with that end of his job and with justification of his course and defense of his policies, and concentrate his powers on the mere duties of his office. As long as he is such a bad politician—and he seems a mighty bad one—he ought not to waste on futile essays at political leadership powers so valuable and rare as his for administration. He is an exceedingly honest and able man and a great administrator. He is doing admirable and important work all the time that few observers have the brains and knowledge to understand, and he loses the effect of it, so far as he himself is concerned, by making political speeches which everybody understands and hardly anyone likes. We wish he would let the republican party go hang—split if it will, bust it it must—and just mind his job and the country's needs. He is eminently qualified to do that. He does not seem to have an unusual gift for the selection of cabinet officers, but otherwise he has qualifications fit to make his a great president, and will prove to be a great president if he can put his weight in where it will tell.—Life.

Piano Men at Richmond.

Richmond, Va., May 13.—The advance guard of visitors has arrived in Richmond for the big convention of piano manufacturers and dealers to be held here during the coming week. The gathering will include the annual meetings of the National Association of Piano Dealers, the Association of American Piano Manufacturers and the Association of Piano Travelers. The largest exhibition of pianos ever seen in America will be held in conjunction with the gathering of the piano men.

STRANGE CRIMINALS.

Cases of Men Who Combined Respectability With Crime.

It is alleged that Herr May, the German philanthropist and author recently proved to have been a burglar and bandit in early life, in addition to the improving literature of which he was the acknowledged author, also published anonymously a series of cheap and detrimental fiction, in which his experiences as a bandit were utilized. In other respects, however, he appears to have wholly forsaken his wicked ways. If this is so, and it would be kinder to give him the benefit of any doubt, the case only bears a partial resemblance to that of the celebrated Charles Peace. That now notorious burglar was actively practicing his real profession when he was known, to the saddest society of Peckham, as a well-to-do and cultured gentleman of impeccable antecedents. Peace was a past master in the arts of imposture and had the makings of brigand in him, if he never got the chance of following the more adventurous and perhaps more picturesque branches of crime. He, too, managed to establish some reputation for piety by his partiality for sacred music. His house was crammed with musical instruments, but he never allowed anything else to be played.

Another criminal who managed to impose on his friends and acquaintances was Thomas Wainwright, who was certain a forger, and probably a poisoner, but who had been a fashionable writer and critic, and was the friend of Charles Lamb, Talfourd and DeQuincey. "The kind, light-hearted Wainwright," as Ella called him, was a thorough-going and heartless scoundrel, and the offenses for which he was sentenced to transportation for life were only incidents in a long career of wrong-doing. Whether he really confessed that he poisoned the unfortunate Miss Abercromby, urging in extenuation that she had very thick ankles, may be doubted, but quite enough has been proved to his discredit. At the same time, it is improbable that he would ever, like Herr Karl May, have returned to respectability, even if the opportunity had been allowed him.

Another and less known man of letters who combined literature with crime, Botany Bay for pocket-picking in 1790. He did recover his character, became high constable of Paramatta and was much thought of in official circles for his good conduct. His literary fame rests mainly upon the often quoted description of the true patriots: "Be it understood we left our country for our country's good."—London Standard.

It takes a baby to get down under a man's left suspender. The most eloquent of the gifted orator will not move the heart of the average man as will a little hiss from the stumbling tongue of a baby.

This little bit is from real life—a little thing that happened in Kansas within the last few days:

The wife of a well-known Kansas man has been very ill. Two little boys bless their home; fine, manly little fellows, who worship their mother and have an average faith in their father. One night the mother had a particularly bad turn. The father was in the slough of despond but he kept his shoulders up because of the little ones, though he could not keep the moisture from his eyes.

One of the boys, 5 years old, plucked his father on the sleeve. "Daddy," he said, "come out here in the hall; I want to ask you something."

He led his father into a dark recess, where their conversation could not be heard in the sick room, and pulling his parent's head down, whispered into his ear: "Daddy, you won't let mamma die?"

Have you ever been there? Do you understand that? Do you comprehend the abiding faith of that lad in his "daddy?" You cannot unless such incisive grief has been your portion. But you know one thing—that there is, or was, a happy family.—Kansas City Journal.

Lard Has Been in Existence a Long Time--So Has Indigestion

Human nature is hard to solve. People who are most particular about adapting the weight of their wearing apparel to the season and its conditions, who never think of going out in a storm without an umbrella and rubbers, who would not sit in a draft, will day after day eat lard-soaked food and not realize for an instant that it is clogging their whole inner machinery. Lard is produced from hog fat, sometimes pure, always indigestible.

CARUSO WILL HAVE HIS JOKE

Great Tenor Like Overgrown Boy in His Fondness for Fun.

Caruso is an unconscionable wag. One night we were sitting on the altar steps before the rising of the curtain on "Tosca." The stage hands were putting on the finishing touches, among which was the placing of an artist's brush in a certain spot on the floor. Everyone who passed by took particular pains to pick up that brush and place it carefully on the easel. Each time this happened, some property man would replace the brush on the floor. Finally Caruso got a hammer and nail and spiked it down. No more was thought of it until the curtain had risen, when the little sacristan with his feather duster, stooping to pick up the brush, found it would not budge. That night the brush stayed on the floor, and Caruso, painting at his easel, had a good chuckle to himself. Later, when the little sacristan held up the paint box that Cavaradossi (Caruso) might choose his colors, he received a daub of green across his face in recognition of the brush episode.

One night Eames stood waiting her entry with several of us supers back of her. Caruso, coming up behind, slapped her lightly on the shoulder. Quick as a flash the prima donna turned on us with a freezing stare, while Caruso, behind a piece of scenery two feet away, was innocently watching the performers on the stage.

The most famous of tenors is still just a big, overgrown-boy, always in good humor, as jolly as he is full of pranks, imitating the balet or mimicking some soprano as she takes her E in alt. One evening I was watching him intently as he poured forth his adoration to Aida with the utmost feeling. Almost immediately after, on coming off, he picked up the first balet girl he met and waltzed her about exuberantly. Again, on an evening when he did not sing, he appeared behind the scenes dressed in the latest American fashion to watch the balet. For ten or fifteen minutes, while the stage was being set, he jollied the girls uninterruptedly, sending them in to gales of laughter by his mimicry. He pranced up and down, whirled on the toes of his patent leather shoes to make his overcoat stand out like a balet dancer's skirt; then, catching the strains of the orchestra, he began to clog, ending by sawing his walking stick across his legs in imitation of the bass violin. And he simply can't help singing. I have seen him come off after some great act, grab the hat and cloak of a chorus man, and, re-entering, sing as lustily as one of them. —Harper's Weekly.

GOLD WATCH A BOOKMARK

Left Between Volume's Pages, But Is Restored to Its Owner.

New York.—Singular articles are frequently found in the books on the shelves in the public libraries. Gold-bowed spectacles, bank bills and many more curious things have been used for bookmarks and left behind by their owner through sheer forgetfulness. Sometimes the owners are found, or come back to seek their property. Very often, though, the reverse happens. One of the most remarkable bookmarks noted by librarians in this city, a gold watch and chain was restored to its owner through a curious chain of circumstances.

The owner was a woman who had occasion to look up data on the reference shelves of the library. In the course of her researches, she took down many books and had to mark many passages in them. Finally, the bits of paper she had with her were exhausted, and she looked about her for a substitute. There was none visible, and in desperation she snatched her watch and chain from the table and slipped them between the leaves. It would only be for a minute, she told herself, as she turned to look back over some of the other marked paragraphs.

But just at that moment, as it chanced, the bell rang for the readers to vacate the library, and the woman closed the book absent-mindedly, allowing the massive volume to fall with its own weight on the slim gold chain. The chain snapped off short, and the woman rose to replace the book on the shelf, without noticing that her watch and most of the chain were between the leaves.

For two days the watch lay in the book on the open reference shelf, free to the touch of all who came into the room. But, as it happened, nobody took down that particular volume. The man who was the first to handle it was honest, and immediately turned over the odd bookmark to the librarian. A search was instituted by the library officials, and the woman was found with little difficulty. She had given up her watch as hopelessly lost. It is said that this is the only case of its kind in the half-century that the library has existed. —St. Louis Republic.

KIPLING IN REAR ROW

The First Stenographer in That Town Was Circus.

It was my good fortune to be at Medicine Hat and to meet Rudyard Kipling on his recent triumphal journey over the Canadian Pacific, and at this time I became acquainted with a settler from the Battleford country. This man was not sufficiently interested in Mr. Kipling to "follow the crowd" in the great novelist's wake, although he knew of his fame. Yet three years before this settler had hitched up his yoke of oxen and, with his wife and three children, had driven twenty-two miles to Battleford expressly to see the first stenographer that had ever come to that part of the country. This young girl, Mabel Hardigan, was for a long time a greater celebrity in the little prairie settlement than Rudyard Kipling was in the cities. She was a tremendous advertisement and her employer, a wide awake real estate man, had her work near a large window, through which she was gazed upon as a most wonderful being from morning until night. She became immensely popular, and the real estate man found his business on the boom. Added to her stenographic accomplishments was an unusual prettiness of form and face, and she soon had a long train of suitors. The real estate man settled the question by marrying her himself, and he is now a rich man. —James Oliver Curwood in the Bookkeeper.

"Our Mother."

As is usual in times of depression, I have her recent letter of inspiration and encouragement, God Bless her!

When sorrow and misfortune let their dark shadows fall upon our lives, and when time lays heavy hands on tired hearts, she is the sunshine and inspiration of the home.

When sickness lays its deadly pallor on the suffering forms of her children, with loving care through sleepless nights and anxious days, she nurses them back to health.

When fortune smiles in health and plenty, she is the happy queen of an empire of loving hearts.

The misfortunes that we have to face, the partings that give us grief, and the sorrows that lance our hearts, only endear us more to mother.

Time is now marking her face with evidences of age; as the furrows of Time cover the roses of youth in her fair face, reverence grows deeper in my heart for her.

Every curve that Time prints on her noble brow is a sacred souvenir of some sacrifice and loving devotion.

Every hair of gray that comes to whiten her temples puts another jewel in my heart for her.

King Leopold's Answer.

Exchange.
Few monarchs have possessed a more caustic tongue than the late King Leopold of Belgium when he chose to exercise it. Once a dispute was raging in the Belgian army as to whether the words of command should be given in Flemish or French. Neither side would give in. King Leopold should decide the matter. The aged monarch asked for a week in which to consider the question. At the end of that period he summoned the leading generals and announced that he had decided that in future all orders should be given in Esperanto. Needless to say, the disputants managed to come to some amicable arrangement.

Contest of Student Orators.

Greenville, Miss., May 13.—Special and regular trains brought many large delegations of students to Greenville today for the annual contest of the Mississippi International Oratorical Association. The membership of the association comprises the University of Mississippi, Millsaps College, the State Agricultural and Mechanical College, and Mississippi College. As a preliminary to the oratorical meet the student teams competed in baseball games and athletic contests this afternoon.

WEATHER FORECAST.

For Wichita Falls and Vicinity.
Tonight and Saturday, unsettled weather; warmer tonight.

"FRIDAY, THE THIRTEENTH."

A double hoodoo, should, according to the popular superstition, overhang this date, which is "Friday, the Thirteenth."

Locally, the superstition seems to have missed fire. In the first place, the day was ushered in by rain, and certainly no one can see any bad luck in that. Again, this date promises to clinch the packery proposition, and there does not appear to be any great amount of hard luck in that; so, the hoodoo day has been quite kind to Wichita Falls, in more ways than one.

Today also marks the completion of the third year of the existence of the Daily Times, and tomorrow is its third birthday. In 1907, May 13 fell on Monday and it had been planned to start the daily on that date, but the superstition was too much, and it was started on May 14, instead. Possibly the dodging of the ill-fated 13th has been one of the contributing causes to the prosperity which has attended the enterprise; we are more prone to believe, however, that our success has been due, in a much larger measure, to the support accorded it by the business men of Wichita Falls and by the general public.

No enterprise attains its full growth in three years, any more than does a human being, and we feel that we are still an infant, withal, a lusty one, and that our real growth is yet to come.

STAND BY HOME.

Speaking of standing by home enterprises, it is a question upon which we all agree—in theory.

It is no trouble to establish by the statements of bankers that the home banks should have first consideration in the way of deposits and other patronage.

It is easy to show the justice of the argument in favor of buying your lumber from dealers who live here and contribute their share to the support of the city's welfare.

No one should consider for a moment the suggestion that the people of Wichita Falls should send away from home to get their flour, with an excellent home enterprise producing, as they declare themselves, the very best article obtainable.

The management of the brick plant will hear out the statement that none but home-made brick should go into the splendid buildings going up in the city.

The grocery dealers will agree with us that it is unfair to send away for supplies which they are ready to furnish at fair prices.

The spirit of standing by home enterprises contributes largely to the excellent business built up by the broom factory, for which the owners are no doubt grateful.

The home bakeries believe in the statement that they are able to supply the demands in their line.

The home laundries insist, and they are correct, that they are entitled to first consideration in that line.

The dry goods merchants will testify heartily that a citizen of Wichita Falls who sends off to Sear-Sobuck & Co. for goods which they are prepared to supply is unpatriotic.

The implement dealers and hardware merchants cannot see the justice of Wichita Falls money going to foreign fields for supplies which they handle.

The shoe dealers would feel slighted if any of us should get our supplies in that line from a mail order house.

Dealers in real estate could not see the justice of property owners turning their interests over to people who reside in some other city.

The automobile dealer will tell you that he ought to have some advantage over the dealer who resides outside of Wichita Falls.

The local insurance agent feels that he is entitled to the premium on policies written on Wichita Falls property. You could not convince the furniture dealers that it is right to send away for goods which they are ready to supply.

Local lawyers could hardly be convinced that it would be just to them to send to Dallas for an attorney to look after the litigation in the courts.

The physicians and dentists claim that they are prepared to take care of all business in their lines, and that home patronage should be given them.

Local capital invested in railroads feels that it should be given all the encouragement possible by home people.

The butcher stands ready to supply all demands in his line.

Local carpenters, bricklayers and other laborers feel that they have first call on work to be performed in this city.

Contractors who live here argue well that in giving them home business you are helping to build up your home town.

And the office-seeker doesn't he sing well the song that his neighbor should stand by him as against the fellow who lives somewhere else?

These things are mentioned, not in the spirit of criticism, but to remind those who believe in and argue for home enterprises that the home printer is also entitled to the same consideration along that line. The money paid out for labor in the printing offices here is practically all spent among Wichita Falls business men, and the Times believes that the business men, in turn, should give the home printer first consideration on work which can be done at home.

"If we never used the paper to advertise . . . how could we expect the people to know we have a real live hardware store?" is the pointed question asked by one of Wichita Falls' enterprising hardware merchants in an advertisement which appeared in yesterday's paper. There are several ways in which to draw trade to one's place of business. One is to hire a cheap speaker to announce to all within the sound of his "fog-horn" voice where the best bargains are to be obtained; another is to stand on the street corners and hang around the wagon yards and watch for a chance customer, and when he makes his appearance, nab and swing onto him like grim death to a "bigger" until you land him at your place of business and force him to buy something before you turn him loose. Nine chances to ten he will be willing to do this to get away from you and your place of business. But, in order to get him in good humor before he leaves, give him a box of out-of-date collars, an old shop-worn

H. Bascom Thomas to Speak Here.

Senator H. Bascom Thomas, candidate for lieutenant governor of Texas will address the people at Wichita Falls next Friday night, May 20, on the subject: "The Evils of the Lobby, Graft and corruption at Austin and Why I Was Expelled from the Senate."

Senator Thomas was expelled from the senate for attacking the lobby and charging grafting on the part of the Texas legislature. In twenty days he was triumphantly re-elected by his people by the largest majority ever given a state senator for the number of votes cast, carrying every county in the district and every box but four.

This address has created a deep sensation in all parts of Texas.

Senator Thomas says he will call for questions from the audience as to his action in the senate and will guarantee to make ninety per cent of them endorse his action in that body. A patient hearing is all he asks to prove his charges. Ladies are especially invited to be present.

ALL MODERN IMPROVEMENTS.

And Where, Oh Where is the Venerable Parlor Stove.

"All modern improvements" is the sign attached to every up-to-date apartment nowadays, and there are some disadvantages in these new-fangled notions that everybody demands, yet there is a pathetic side connected with this desire for conveniences and luxuries in the homes of today.

It calls to mind the very essence of the so-called home comforts is lacking in the hurly-burly existence we lead. There are other things besides modern improvements that go to make up a home. One of these is the sociability and whole-heartedness found a few generations ago, but now practically nonexistent. This may be due in part to better means of communication, which makes whirlwind visits toeriant, whereas in earlier days calls really meant something.

Rural or urban life has lost many of the characteristics of former decades, when visits, whether social or business, played a larger part in the life of the citizens than they do today. When a caller came to the house, he was first offered refreshments, and was then invited into the parlor or sitting-room, where of a winter afternoon or evening a bright fire was burning in the stove or grate. This fire was the center of the home sociability. From it radiated the warmth of the welcome; about it gathered host and guest; its bright blaze symbolized the sparkle of the conversation; its mellow glow typified the reflective moments, and its dying embers marked the hour of departure.

Such a picture can be seen in too few homes of today. Here and there is a fireplace, but the habits of the present generation are such as to preclude any possibility of a visit for the interchange of opinion. Calls, even when formal, are usually matter-of-fact. There is the nervous Twentieth Century attitude of getting through with it as quickly as possible and on to the next duty.

The sitting room stove is antiquated. With its passage goes the feeling of home coziness. As a piece of architecture, the stove is unnecessary. As an article of necessity it has lost its raison d'etre.

The sweethearts of former days could sit and gaze into the fire and see Cupid dancing about in the blaze. Not so today. Cupid has become a matter-of-fact sort of creature. Life is worth living, but, with all the advantages of modernism, there are certain memories of days of old that appeal strongly to the imagination. And one of these is the stove of our mothers and grandmothers.—Washington Herald.

MUSKRAT IS GOOD TO EAT.

Secretary Wilson Recommends it and Quotes Some Epicures.

Washington.—If beef or lamb costs too much, eat muskrat. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson says it is good. In a bulletin just issued by the department he recommends muskrat farming as profitable. He says that the flesh of the muskrat is highly esteemed by the Indians of North America, especially in winter.

"In recent years," says the bulletin, "many persons of refined taste have eaten the flesh of the muskrat, and considerable diversity of opinion has been expressed as to its palatability. One writer is emphatic in the opinion that its musky flavor would keep any but the starving from eating it. Another declares that muskrat is game worthy of an epicure, with a flavor somewhat like the wild duck that has been shot in the marshes where it has fed.

"A number of persons have likened its flavor to that of the famous terrapin of the Chesapeake."

The bulletin says that muskrats are sold extensively in markets of the East and Middle West as marsh rabbits. They retail at 10 cents each. One dealer in Baltimore informed the Department of Agriculture that he couldn't get enough to supply the city demand, let alone the calls from the small country towns. In one week a Philadelphia dealer sold 3000 muskrats for food.

The department finds that muskrat is a favorite dish at church socials in Maryland and Delaware. Annual muskrat banquets are features with some gun clubs in the west.—Indianapolis News.

FARRAR SINGS TO CONVICTS.

Star Weeps With 1000 Persons in Prison.

Atlanta, Ga.—One thousand convicts in the United States penitentiary here were in tears this afternoon as Geraldine Farrar, grand opera singer, sang to them, and, noting the emotion of the prison-garbed men before her, Miss Farrar herself wept.

In some way the convicts learned that Miss Farrar would be here this week with the Metropolitan opera company, and they sent her a request to sing to them. Miss Farrar gladly agreed, and this afternoon went to the prison, where the convicts were gathered in the large auditorium. The convicts cheered as she entered.

Miss Farrar played her own accompaniments on the piano, and for nearly forty minutes she sang old ballads to the convicts. She gave them "Annie Laurie," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Swanee River," and other old-time ballads.

She concluded with "Home, Sweet Home," and by that time nearly every person in the auditorium was weeping and tears were streaming down Miss Farrar's cheek.

"Miss Farrar's singing has been worth more than a hundred sermons," said Warden Moyer. "The prisoners will be better men for years."

Among the prisoners who heard Miss Farrar sing was Charles W. Morse, the New York banker.

"It is strange to think about" said Miss Farrar, "that I had in my audience at the prison more than one real music lover who has heard me before. Charles W. Morse had heard grand opera many a time when I was in New York, and I have no doubt there are others. What a change from the gilded boxes in which they used to sit. But it is not because they were once rich or famous that I wanted to sing to them; it is because they are unhappy now. When Mr. Morse was a free and powerful banker in New York, not any money he could have offered would have interested me, but now I made an especial effort to please him and the other unfortunates."—St. Louis Republic.

HATIANIANS START RIOT.

Man Leaps From Uncomfortable Seat Into Woman's Lap.

Los Angeles.—Percy Van Dyke, a visitor from New York, entered a motion picture theatre yesterday, pushed his way along a row of seats occupied mostly by women, sat down and instantly leaped into the air, yelling.

He had sat down on a phalanx of long, sharp, hatpins. His body shot into the darkness and he landed in the lap of a woman in front. This woman's escort immediately leaped upon Van Dyke and there were signs of panic in the twilight of the house when the police were called.

Van Dyke was found to be seriously injured and he was taken to the receiving hospital, where the surgeons said he would recover.—San Francisco Call.

BELL BOY HAS COMPLAINT.

He Has to Call for Kelly and Start Laugh.

"Front!" called the clerk at the Grand Union Hotel, and it was Tiddies' turn. Tiddies is an ancient bellhop—no one knows how many years at the Grand Union. His head is gray, his back bowed, and his face furrowed by the years, which yet have left him a countenance of innocent expectancy.

"Page that name," said the clerk, and Tiddies' face fell. He stopped in one of the intricate corridors of the hotel a moment to say:

"Look at that name—Kelly. A bellhop's life ain't all tips and thank-yous. I can tell you. It don't make me feel extra comfortable to have all the people at the tables looking at me and grinning. I've had that name twice in a month, and both times I nearly blushed to death.

"I'll have to go through the ladies' dining room—but they don't usually see the joke; through the main dining room, the cafe, the luncheon room, the wrestlers' room and the Flemish room. Every time I yell 'Kelly,' the whole lot of them will concentrate their eyes on me. Then a grin will blossom on one face and spread. And first thing I know some of the men will take up my cry and alter it to:

"Has anybody here seen Kelly?"

"And of course," if any of them was named Kelly, he wouldn't let it be known right then.

"Well, here goes, anyhow," commented Tiddies, resignedly, plunging into the wrestlers' room.—New York Times.

Famous Soldier to Visit Canada.

London, May 12.—General Sir John French sailed today from Liverpool for Canada where he is to spend a month or two in a semi-official tour of inspection of the militia forces and defenses of the Dominion. Upon his arrival in Quebec he will proceed direct to Toronto to attend the unveiling on May 24 of the memorial erected in that city to the Toronto soldiers who fell in the South African war. After leaving Toronto Sir John will confer with Frederick Borden, Minister of Militia, and will inspect the Quebec garrison and the military camps in the neighborhood of Montreal. He will also visit Kingston, London, Niagara Falls and other points before returning to England.

General Sir John French is one of the most distinguished officers of the British army and has had a truly meteoric career. Born in 1852, he failed to pass his examinations for the army, and took refuge in the ranks of the militia. Through this back door to the regular establishment, he eventually entered the 8th Hussars in 1874. There was absolutely nothing in his early career which could be construed as a forecast of the military triumphs which he was to achieve later. His time came in the Boer war, when he gained rapid promotions for his services in the relief of Kimberley. He was the first officer to win a major generalship in the South African campaign and at the time of his promotion he was the youngest officer to reach that rank in the army list.

"THIS IS MY 32nd BIRTHDAY."

Duchess of Hamilton.

The Duchess of Hamilton, one of England's most beautiful women, was born May 13, 1878. Before her marriage in 1901 she was Miss Nina Pooke, the daughter of Major Robert Pooke. Her husband, the Duke of Hamilton, was a poor lieutenant in the British navy before he succeeded to the title and estates in 1895. Now the premier peer of Scotland, and "Heir Male of the House of Douglas," when he was a young man there seemed not the slightest chance of his succeeding to the Dukedom, but the death of the only son of the twelfth Duke and a succession of other deaths placed him at the head of the family. The Duke is the holder of more than a score of titles in the English and Scotch peerages and is Hereditary Keeper of Holyrood Palace. His estates, amounting to about 157,000 acres, are in trust according to the will of the late Duke.

Big Crowd to Witness Fight.

San Francisco, Cal., May 12.—A record-breaking crowd is expected to wend its way to Jim Coffroth's club at San Mateo tomorrow afternoon to witness the 25-round meeting between Joe Thomas of this city and Billy Papke of Kewanee, Ill. So great is the interest that practically all of the seats have been sold in advance, according to the announcement of the management. The fighters will battle at catchweights. Jack Welsh has been chosen as referee. With both fighters in good condition the bout is expected to be a fast and lively one from gong to gong. If Papke wins he will probably be signed for a go with Stanley Ketchel, the fight to take place here a day or two before the big Jeffries-Johnson mill on July 4.

MEXICO CAN MAKE REPLY.

United States Also Supports Some Malodorous Barbarities.

If Mr. Turner's standpoint, or rather lack of standpoint, were to prevail as the criterion for judging of a nation's civilization, we should have new ground for characterizing once more as barbarous the progressive republic of the north in the scandalous revelations in regard to the famous organization known as Tammany Hall.

The scandal has been immense, so much so that the people of New York, not easily scandalized, have been stirred up to the extraordinary degree and the press almost unanimously demands immediate and vigorous measures of repression. And the facts warrant this indignation for the revelations, which concern the white slave traffic, are no trifle.

In effect, it has transpired, from an investigation carefully conducted by a former chief of police, that the white slave traffic, under the wing of Tammany, has been carried to the worst extremes. The investigation shows that a group of individuals, agents of the slum organization, have been indefatigable in recruiting among the working or the immigrant class a certain number of young women whom they systematically led astray, even having recourse to desperate measures such as violence and intoxication.

These unfortunates are exploited in an infamous manner by this novel race of enganchadores. If the poor creatures rebel and seek to break through the iniquitous toils in which they have been caught, their exploiters denounce them to the police as women of bad character and they are at once incarcerated.

For—and this is where Tammany, whose influence with the police force and the administration of justice is traditional, comes in—there exists a close understanding between the empressarios of the traffic and the guardians of the community's interests, from the policemen, who is Tammany's agent, to the magistrate who owes his election to the political power of the same organization.

Naturally, all this has caused intense indignation, which proves that it has not happened in a barbarous country inhabited by a barbarous people. Such disgraceful things, which in the United States attain greater proportions than in any other nation, are in effect, the darker sides of a great people, like poisonous growths spring from noxious seeds amidst bounteous and wholesome crop.

Only a wrong-headed person would look for what is typical of a country in the records of its criminality.

It is the judging of the sun by its eclipses.—El Imparcial, Translation in Mexican Herald.

The Practice of Sympathy.

Harper's Bazar.
Shelley has told us that perfect man, when he came, would be "equal, unclassed, tribeless and nationless," which was only another way of saying that the world could not verge upon the millennium until each one of us has ceased to set limits to his sympathies.

There was once a young housekeeper who insisted for one week—every year upon doing the entire work of one of her servants which she gave that servant a holiday. It was not a happy nor a comfortable week for her, and she was much laughed at by her friends for so quixotic an undertaking. Now, in her old age, her tasks and vocations having greatly multiplied, she no longer carries out the program. To tell the truth, it is so easy for her not to do with former maids and old cooks so aboundingly glad to come back for a week; but she maintains that it was thus that she got her real insight into what their work required or regularly, self-suppression and industry.

Sympathy is the universal solvent. If we could only for a time put ourselves in the other man's place and see from his standpoint! A certain lady says she remembers and has remembered through ten long years, that once, when she was terribly tired in a hot and crowded shop, she looked across the aisle, and a shopgirl, idle for the moment looked back at her and smiled. She was an ugly girl, and to all appearances an uninteresting person, but that smile let down whole blocks of barriers.

Just sympathize with people, and without being half aware of it you are let out of your own life and into another's and this means always large interests, a wider field of resource, less cramping misery. It is an interesting thing to learn to walk through the dull ways of our daily round with sympathy instead of with demands. It is worth trying just to see how much more general it makes the sunshine.

Jubilee Week for California "U."

Berkeley, Cal., May 12.—A week's celebration of the golden jubilee of the University of California was begun today in commemoration of the founding of the institution and the work it has accomplished during the fifty years of its existence. Hundreds of graduates and other friends of the university are returning for the semi-centennial celebration. In honor of the occasion the city of Berkeley, as well as the college buildings and grounds, is profusely decorated in the university colors of blue and gold.

The program prepared for the celebration is replete with interesting and attractive features and includes the regular commencement exercises of the university. The senior ball, the presentation of a Greek play and a big athletic meet is to be held tomorrow and will have as its participants the crack athletes of the five great universities of the Pacific coast—Nevada, Washington, Oregon, Stanford and California.

The baccalaureate sermon is to be delivered Sunday and the following day there will be numerous class and fraternity reunions and other affairs of a social nature.

Tuesday has been set aside for the main exercises of the golden jubilee celebration. The day's program will begin in the morning with the delivery of the jubilee address by President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale University. In the afternoon a "good of the university" meeting will be held in the Greek theatre.

A monster illuminated parade Tuesday night, marching through the streets of Berkeley and across the campus, will furnish the big spectacular feature of the celebration. The pageant promises to be one of the most magnificent affairs of its kind ever seen in this section of the country. A huge dragon, manipulated by students of the university from China, will be one of the special features. The Japanese students will also have a unique float in the pageant, and the Italian students and the Spanish students will contribute unique features. At the conclusion of the pageant there will be a grand pyrotechnic display on the university campus.

The university was founded first as the College of California, and from a humble beginning, has grown to be one of the most important centers of education in the United States, while among its graduates are numbered scores of men who have distinguished themselves in the professions, in commercial life and in the political world.

The "father of the university" was Professor Henry Durant, who established a school in Oakland in 1853. The College of California was, through his influence and suggestion, incorporated in 1855, and he was enabled to bring about the organization as a working institution some four or five years later. Prof. Durant continued his connection with the institution until he was able to bring about the consummation of his hopes of merging it into the University of California. This he accomplished in 1869 when the College of California, which had been maintained as a private corporation, transferred its rights to the University of California, which had been organized and approved by the legislature the year before. Prof. Durant became the first president of the university and served in that capacity for about a year.

Since 1871, in which year President Durant resigned, the university has had seven presidents, as follows: Daniel Colt Gilman, 1871-76; John Le Conte, 1876-81; William Thomas Reid, 1881-86; Edward Singleton Holden, 1886-88; Horace Davis, 1888-90; Martin Kellogg, 1890-99; Benjamin Ide Wheeler, 1899-1910.
