

IN SOCIETY'S REALM

THE COMMENCEMENT ORATION.

Go back through all the years
And trace the subtle influence of all her smiles and tears—
(I think I'll take that organdie; I like that sprig of blue;
I'll have it made in princess style, and fifteen yard will do.)
—Of all her smiles and tears, and see how peasants and how kings
Have yielded to the power that a woman's presence brings;
(I want a little bunch of lace to finish off each sleeve.)

"Though Troy was quite a famous
place, today 't would be forgot-
But that fair Helen made of it a great historic spot!" (Indeed, I want the neck cut low, but not too low, you see;
And with a yoke of Irish lace, you know how swell 't will be.)

"And Cleopatra, who made laws subservient to her smile
Until she built an empire on the borders of the Nile"
(Of course I'll wear a hat, or else a jewel in my hair—
A cluster of white rhinestones would be very pretty there.)

And as we turn through history we read page after page
That shows how woman swayed the world in every bygone age" (O dear! This old commencement surely will drive me insane!
I don't know whether I should have it
short or with a train.)

"The people of all times, we find, have all been glad to own Allegiance to the sway of some fair
woman on a throne" (Why, alppers, surely!—Mamma, it would make me have the blues
To have to graduate in just a common pair of shoes.)

And so today we enter on an epoch
that shall stand
As one that marked the wisdom of a woman's guiding hand" (What! Waist and skirt? Well, I guess not! Why every girl in town Will graduate this year in a brand-new directorie gown!)
"And thus we see when woman turns
her mind to things of state
She ranks among the highest who have been accounted great" (O pshaw! I'll finish this when I am not all rushed to death.
I'll go to the dressmaker soon as I catch my breath.)

Fads and Fashions

[By Florence Fairbanks.]

New York, May 21.—An inspection of the materials for spring and summer
wear shows that certain old-time, reliable materials have returned under new names, particularly among the rough cloths and basket weaves. The feature that commends itself to many women is the fact that the weave in these materials is so evident that it serves for decoration, and, therefore,
requires very little other ornamentation. Simple braiding designs or buttons are generally sufficient for the morning dress, while the square meshes of these coarse fabrics form excellent backgrounds upon which designs in cross stitching, done with woolen or linen threads, may be added.

The correct present outline is that of a simple peasant garment, falling naturally over the shoulders and with no extra width across the chest.

The waist is not pulled in, but its size is contributed to in effect, if not in reality, by the unpadded, ungathered shoulders and sleeve tops. The clothing figure preserves more nearly the natural outlines than it has been allowed to do for many a day. It is comparatively straight up and down, looking more peasantlike and primitive than fashion usually permits.

The girdle belongs at the normal
waist line at present and there is reason to believe that that will remain in its place during the summer season.
But it is impossible to forecast where the belt will be placed when autumn comes. The girdle may be plain, folded, embroidered or clasped with one of the marvellously wrought metal buckles of oriental design. The tendency of the girdle is to widen or to be pulled to a greater width in front, after the line of the empire. This is the first faint suggestion of a return to the empire outline in women's apparel, and Poiret, the Parisian modiste,

is responsible for it in his continued
adherence to the Josephine garb.

Everything clings, and the skirt will not widen out below in its outline, but has rather taken on a barrel-like tendency to widen through the center and narrow in toward the feet. The deep hem, varying from nine to eighteen inches, does duty here, either as a weight to draw down the skirt into clinging lines or as a band into which to gather the central fullness of the gathered skirt.

Necks, it is needless to say, are left collarless, and the plaited Pierrot
frill, though objected to in many cases,
comes to us as a distinctly new Parisian note. This collar fullness is absolutely the only fullness on many of the late Paris blouses, which are made in one piece, with merely the under-arm to shape them, and without a vestige of ornament except a sleeve finish and a neck finish in the event of the abandonment of the fluted collar.

Bordered foulards and pongees are sometimes made in double skirt or crusader tunic effect, the upper skirt falling below the knees of the one beneath. But those crusader tunics are not now as smart as the "dragged-in" skirt, which is pleated or gathered at the knee into a weighted flounce or a straight band of plain material. As for the apron over-skirt, which came in with a rush early in the spring, its day is already on the wane and only on the ready-made and home-made costumes does it prevail. If the apron style is worn at all the little knee-length tunic must be heavily weighted, for anything that flutters is extremely unmodish at the present time.

The latest advices from Paris indicate that the size of women's hats is slowly but steadily increasing and there is good reason to believe that some extremely large hats will be seen
during the latter part of the summer.
Hat materials are of unusual beauty and variety this season. This is particularly true of the straws and braids.
One may find anything from the coarsest and roughest of straws, which is,
nevertheless, of admirable lightness
and lustre, to the finest and supplest of gauze braids, and all of these in such a wide and beautiful range of coloring as has never before been equaled.

Two-tone, or Persian coloring straws
have been considerably used in Paris
for smart little street hats trimmed only by a simple ornament, cockade or fancy feather in black or one of the tones in the straw. Tagal, Milan, leghorn, crin, all the old favorites, are modish, as well as the new fancy braids
and are indeed used for the handsomest of the season's models.

Leghorn of the finest quality is enormously successful and is used for every type of model from the severest street hat to the most elaborate dress hat. Black lace, usually Chantilly, is associated with leghorn in many of the most charming summer
hats, veiling, either crown or brim,
put on in big bow or scarf drapery, facing the brim, etc. The white laces on the order of Chantilly are also much used with leghorn.

White and black, with or without a note of color, is even more insistent than the popular leghorn among the spring and summer models. The rough light white straws and white crins
are in great demand and black velvet
or black satin is the usual trimming, with big black and white pompons or fancy feathers in black.

Good looking tailor hats of a popular shape are of rough white straw. The crown is covered with black satin.
The wide white brim rolls up a little to the left of the front and is held by a square button or mould covered by the black satin, which in turn holds a small ornament or cockade of black feathers. These little feather trimmings, hardly more than a tuft, are a novelty of the season and there are all sorts of feather tufts or heads from which spring long slim feathers or quills. The pheasant is a prime favorite for such ornaments, because of its beautiful coloring and very often such a slender Pheasant—"fancy," as the modish feather ornaments are called,
is the only trimming on one of the severe hats with front or side roll.

Black and white is also a favorite combination for the big roll brim sailor which Carlier introduced and which bids fair to have great popularity. It is, perhaps, not so generally becoming as the old-time straight-brim sailor, but this is because it is worn so low on the head and the hat itself is of more graceful lines than is the straight brim model. The brim is wide enough to shade the face if worn fairly well forward, although toward its edge it rolls upward for about three inches.

All kinds of straw are used for this sailor, but some of the prettiest are in a very flexible, though rough, white straw, with wide, black velvet ribbon folded around the crown and three of the large feather pompons, two black
and one white, posed at the left front,
quite high against the crown.

Flowers are extensively used on all kinds of summer hats and, as a rule, the larger the hat, the smaller the flowers used for trimming. Lilies of

New York is fortunate in having among its clergymen several able bodied and courageous men who can do more than preach sermons and attend teas and sewing circles among their fair church members. The priest in charge of the Catholic Seamen's Mission, while on his way home the other night, saw two men in the act of robbing a drunken sailor on the water front. He came to the assistance of the helpless victim and blew a police whistle until several officers came, who arrested the robbers and took them to the station.

A Good Way to Cook Trout.

Build your fire and let it burn until you have a good bed of hot stones and ashes. Have your trout cleaned and washed, ready at hand on anything convenient. Pluck an armful of balsam twigs. Rake out your fire, leaving a base of hot stones and ashes. Upon this base lay balsam twigs till you have a layer from six to ten inches thick. Now put your trout in a row upon this layer of equal thickness; over all lay ashes and hot stones. Then smoke your pipe for, say twenty minutes.

When at last you gently remove the coverings, you will think first that the trout have not been cooked at all. There they lie, in all their moist beauty, colored as when they first came to your basket. But be careful how you handle them, or they will fall apart, so tender are they. Steamed through and through by the heated essences of the balsam, they give out a faint aromatic redolence that adds a subtle perfection to the flavor.—Bannister Merwin in June Outing.

A recent incident at a meeting of the Montclair, N. J., town council proves beyond dispute that a man may have ten children and yet be a fool. At that meeting the town council considered an ordinance for a "safe and sane" celebration of Fourth of July in Montclair. One of the residents of the town, who was present at the meeting, made a violent speech against the ordinance which he declared unconstitutional and openly defied the authority of the council by declaring that, even if the ordinance should be passed, he and his ten children would shoot off all the fire-crackers and other explosives they could get on the glorious Fourth. The ordinance was passed and it is to be hoped that the authorities of Montclair will know what to do with the man and will not hesitate to do it, should he attempt to violate the ordinance.

Brooklyn Man Who Claims to be Heir to English Throne

John G. E. W. Guelph towers over six feet four inches, is a good judge of Kentucky bourbon, looks like an Indiana circuit rider of the old school, has a Yankee twang in talking and heaps of nerve. Guelph, or Prince John, as he insists on being called, is according to his story, the son of the late King Edward of England. He has a lawyer and a mass of papers which, he claims, will prove his right to be the ruler of Great Britain. He is going to London within the next two weeks to lay his claim "before my brother, now King George." Guelph has a long history in and around New York and for months lived at the Plaza hotel. He has two servants, who address him as "your highness." Where Guelph secures his money has been a mystery, but he gives the impression that it comes from England. "This point will go to prove my right to the throne when I make public my letters and where I secure my money," said Prince John. In the meantime, Prince John has given up twenty dollar a day hotel rooms for a more modest room at 106 Montague street, Brooklyn. "You see," he explains, "my father had been ill for some time."

STRAY TOPICS FROM LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

New York, May 21.—Mayor Gaynor is working hard to make a record for himself. Some persons are inclined to believe that he is ambitious and is prompted in his actions by the desire to win distinction and thus lay the foundations for higher honors, while others think that he is merely obeying the strenuous instincts of his nature and is innocent of any ambitious thoughts of the future. However that may be, Mayor Gaynor does not seem afraid of piling up a big load of responsibility in addition to that resting as a matter of course, upon the shoulders of the chief executive official of a large city. Now he has taken it upon himself to constitute himself a censor of morality, standards as indicated by stage productions. "The Girl With the Whooping Cough," a farce, which, like a great many others of that kind, depends for its drawing power upon its "suggestiveness," was the first play to fall under the ban of the self-constituted censor. Upon the order of the Mayor the run of the farce was stopped and when the producer of the nasty play appealed to the courts for an injunction, the renewal of the license of the theatre in which the play was given was refused by the authorities. The Mayor has expressed his determination to put a stop to all vulgar and indecent shows whether they are given in one of the big theatres along Broadway or in one of the minor show places all through the city. Theatrical managers are now beginning to sit up and take notice.

One of the New York morning papers with a reputation for being well edited, is evidently cultivating a tone of extreme politeness to members of the burglar fraternity. "While absent on a professional call yesterday afternoon burglars broke into the home of Dr. Mott D. Cannon—" thus began the opening sentence of that paper's account of a sensational burglary and double-murder committed the day before. This is probably the first time that burglars following their criminal vocation were spoken of as being absent "on a professional call." Even Lord Chesterfield could not have improved upon such politeness.

The recent death of a policeman bold enough to cross the "deadline" drawn by the notorious car bars gang infesting the district around Ninety-seventh street and Second avenue, seems like an anachronism. It reminds one of the days of yore when certain parts of the city were completely controlled by gangs of criminals whose rule of terrorism the police seemed to break. Probably no man did more to put an end to this gang rule than Inspector Byrnes, who died the other day and was buried in Calvary Cemetery. There was a big crowd at the funeral but strange to say, not a single representative of the present police department. Considering the fact that it was Byrnes who made New York's police department what it now is supposed to be and that no man ever did more for the department than he, the failure of the police commissioners to be represented at the famous chief showed not only a deplorable lack of graceful appreciation but of tact and common decency as well.

How deeply rooted certain superstitious notions are and how tenaciously they cling to many persons is shown by the dread of many individuals of Friday, especially when it happens to fall upon the thirteenth day of the month. In the early part of this month an Italian was tried for killing another Italian during a quarrel over a woman. The prisoner did not seem to mind being found guilty of manslaughter in the second degree, but when the Judge before whom he was tried announced that he would pronounce sentence on Friday, the 13th, the man became frantic. So great seemed his fear of the combination of unlucky elements in that day, that the Judge changed the date to Thursday, the 12th.

The invention of typography some time in the fifteenth century has undoubtedly been a great blessing to humanity in many respects, notwithstanding the fact that the art has often been most shamefully abused. Were it not for the art of printing from type the world would probably be poorer by many useful productions of man's literary genius, but it is equally certain that it would have been spared an enormous mass of literary trash and useless printed matter. It is astonishing what a lot of superfluous stuff is put into print nowadays. One of the medical journals published an article the other day upon the subject of "How the Motor Helps the Doctor." One has but to read the daily papers with their long lists of automobile victims to understand, without a diagram how the motor car helps, not only the doctor, but also the undertaker. Isn't it unnecessary cruelty, a sort of "rubbing it in," to print an article of this kind?

WRECK ON KATY.

Four Are Hurt in Smash-up at Waxahachie.

Texas News Service Special Waxahachie, May 21.—Four were injured, none fatally, when the M., K. & T. limited train, southbound, was wrecked this morning near here. The injured:

Engineer Scott, scalded and bruises, slight.

Fireman, Scalds, bruises, slight.

J. L. Watkins, passenger, sprained wrist.

Negro woman, knee sprained, serious.

A soft track caused the derailment. The track was badly damaged. Traffic is delayed, but it is expected will be repaired tonight. When the train left the rails, the locomotive, tender, baggage, mail and smoker were ditched. The baggage and mail with the engine turned turtle. The sleeper and day coaches remained on the track. The injured were brought here for attention. The others, escaped injury but were badly shaken up.

The Wonderful Toad Bone.

All early writers attribute wonderful qualities to toads and frogs and the various parts of their bodies. Pliny believed, for instance, that if a toad was brought into the midst of a mob or other large and unruly concourse of people "silence would instantly prevail." A small bone found in the right side of toads "of the proper age" was also believed to have powers over the various elements. "By throwing this bone into a vessel of boiling water," says Pliny, "it will immediately cool it, the water refusing to boil again until the bone has been removed. To find this bone, expose the dead toad on an ant hill. When the ants have eaten her all away except the bones, take each bone separately and drop it into boiling water. Thus may the wondrous toad bone be discovered."

An Ancient Astronomer.

About 500 B. C. Anaxagoras of Ionia was born. When he "grew up in wisdom" he was the first to teach the course and cause of both solar and lunar eclipses and to give his followers rules whereby they could distinguish planets from fixed stars. He was punished for declaring that the sun was not a god.

PITTED CHERRIES AND PLUMS.

They may not be new to some of our friends but to others they are.

Dried Cherries are not common because to put them up right they must be pitted and that costs money.

But for a real rich, juicy cherry pie or pudding there is nothing quite equal to them; our stock is put up in 1-lb packages which keeps them clean and fresh.

SLEEPING OUT OF DOORS.

There's a Trick in Making a Bed of Comfort Even in a Desert.
"People drop into a loose habit of speaking about the right and the wrong way of doing a thing," remarked an experienced camper. "As a matter of fact, there may be a dozen good ways, and as many bad."

"Take sleeping in the open, for instance. My little trips haven't been confined to the Adirondacks and the Berkshires. I've knocked over the whole North American continent, and wrinkles that were never heard of in this neighborhood.

"Down in the desert of Arizona last year I was a member of a party traveling between Tucson and the Mexican frontier. The first night found us in the middle of a flat expanse of sand. There wasn't even a hillock or a rock behind which one could find shelter. A cold breeze was blowing and I thought I had an uncomfortable night in front of us.

"But the Westerners in the party knew a trick or two. I was surprised to see them grubbing out little hollows in the sand corresponding to the shape of the human body. They made a deep depression for the hips and a shallow one for the shoulders, with sand banked up in the middle to support the small of the back. At one end they built up a ridge of sand as a foot rest, pounding and stamping on it until it was compact enough not to break down under pressure.

"Then we wrapped ourselves in our blankets Arizona fashion. We placed one corner of the blanket on the left side, just below the heart, and turned around, until the body was covered five or six folds deep. This left plenty to spare at both ends, which was disposed of by giving the blanket a turn around our feet and knotting it, and folding down the upper end around the head as a sort of cape. The advantage of using a blanket in this way is that you get all the possible warmth out of it, while in case of a sudden alarm it is easy to unroll one's self in a few seconds.

"We lay down in the hollows we had prepared—'graves' the westerners called them—and found that we were amply protected from the wind. The latter blew the fine sand over us, and in time our blankets were hidden from sight. There was no danger of our being choked, however, as we used our saddles as pillows, which kept our heads at a sufficient elevation from the surface of the desert.

"When we opened our eyes at dawn the ground was covered with a heavy frost. It must have been very cold during the night, but we had not felt it. We jumped to our feet, shook ourselves free of the sand that had sifted into our clothes and lighted a fire. The desert was very desolate and white.

"Two hours later it seemed like a different world. The sun had dissipated the frost like magic and the sand was blazing hot. That is the most singular thing about the Arizona desert at high elevations. One passes from winter to summer over night.

"While my bones ached for a few days from sleeping in those artificial sand hollows. I soon grew accustomed to it, and I pass on the hint to those campers who may find themselves obliged to spend the night on the unprotected plain."—Springfield Union.

HOW IT HAPPENED.

The Explanation of the Automobile Driver and a Climax.
After the victim of the accident was carried to the sidewalk the automobile driver turned his machine and came back and explained how it happened with considerable warmth.

"This woman," he volubly remarked to the policeman, "was entirely to blame. She ran around from ahead of the street car and deliberately put herself in my way. After she had dodged the coal cart it was too late for me to stop. I couldn't tell which way she was going, and when I saw that she was dazed and foolish I jammed on the brakes and tried to pass to the left, but of course she had to run the same way, and the consequence was that in endeavoring to avoid a baby carriage with twins in it and an old man who was walking with a crutch I suppose I must have hit her. But I wasn't going more than two miles an hour, and any woman who would dodge around in that foolish way and lose her head shouldn't be permitted to go on the streets without a bunch of guardians."

The policeman nodded.
"Come over to the sidewalk," he said, "and take a look at her."
So the driver went to the curb with the officer and looked at the unfortunate creature who had so actively contributed to her own disaster.
And, lo, it was only a dressmaker's dummy that had fallen off the rear of a delivery wagon!—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HIS ONLY REGRET.

The Sorrow That Consumed Bichat When He Was Dying.

Over a century ago died Xavier Bichat, the famous physician and anatomist, author of "L'Anatomie Generale." He probably dissected more human corpses than any other man in the world's history. He established a record when he opened 625 bodies during one winter.

Of his nerve a tale is told. When he lay on his deathbed he called his colleagues to him and said: "Dear friends, I am done, but what comforts me is the fact that my case is a remarkable one. I have had unusual symptoms for some days which I have analyzed. They have greatly surprised me." The doctors sought to reassure him. He answered that he was under no illusion with regard to himself. "I shall die fairly satisfied with my life and go to the grave with only one regret, one great sorrow."

"What is that?" he was asked. "I am distressed that after death I cannot dissect my own body. I could, I am certain, have made some beautiful scientific discoveries." Then he sank back, murmuring: "I must not think about it. It won't bear thinking of."—Westminster Gazette.

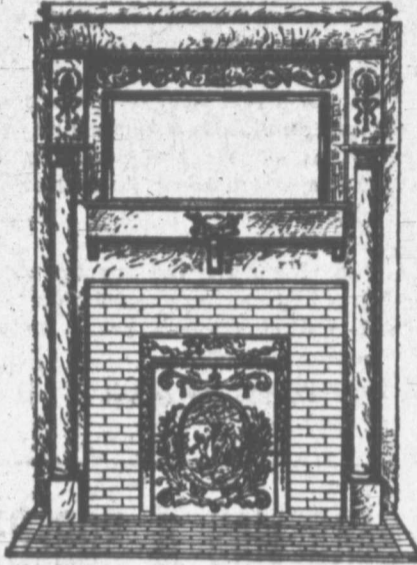

The Pearl Hunters' Superstition.

The pearl hunters of Borneo and the adjacent islands have a peculiar superstition. When they open shells in search of pearls they take every ninth find, whether it be large or small, and put it into a bottle, which is kept corked with a dead man's finger. The pearls in the vial are known as "seed pearls" or "breeding pearls," and the native Borneo firmly believes that they will reproduce their kind. For every pearl put into the vial two grains of rice are thrown in for the pearls to "feed upon." Some whites in Borneo believe as firmly in the superstition as the natives do, and almost every hut along the coast has its "dead finger" bottle, with from nine to fifty seed pearls and twice that number of rice grains carefully and evenly stowed away among them. That no results follow does not dim the superstition.

Today's Best Story.

Representative Harry Maynard of Virginia, tells the story of how a religious old negro in his district put a stop to the exercise of Christian charity in the congregation of which he was a member. It seems that it was a practice in the church to excommunicate for one year any member who had been guilty of a "blood fight"—that is, any man who had attacked another with a pistol or a razor.

At the end of the year, if the offender wished reinstatement, he could go to the "mourners' bench," rise and declare his repentance and be forgiven by the congregation. This went on for many years. At last a young darkey, who had been in a particularly objectionable broil, appeared for reinstatement. The pastor made an eloquent appeal to the congregation, and everybody began to shout and say "Amen!"

It was at this point that the old negro arose and said hotly:

"Look hyah, pahson; ever since I been a membuh ob dis congregashun, dar ain't been nothin' but fightin, an' fuhgivin'—an' I been doin' all de fuhgivin' I 'ee tired of it!"

That broke up the meeting.—Popular Magazine.

New Divorce Rulings.

Spokane, Wash., May 20.—Radical reforms in the divorce laws of the western states are advocated by Judge J. D. Hinkle of the Spokane County Superior Court. He does not believe that a national law would solve the problem; though he says, uniform statutes by the various states might result in much good. Here are some of the restrictions he recommends as supplemental to existing laws:

Where the cause for divorce originates in another state, the plaintiff should establish three years' residence in the state in which the divorce is to be granted. Corroborative evidence should also be required in all cases.

Persons seeking legal separation should live apart at least two years before a suit for divorce can be instituted.

The trial judge should have the power to bring the offending persons into court by warrant and inflict punishment as a part of the divorce proceedings.

Publication of the filing of the petition for divorce should be required in the community where the couple lives.

"The most important change needed at present is in carrying out our laws," Judge Hinkle said. "We are often imposed upon by colonists from eastern, central and southern states and by residents of the Dominion of Canada, who come to the west chiefly for the purpose of divorce, and where the suit is not contested we have no way of ascertaining whether the allegations are borne out by facts."

"We see less liberality toward persons seeking divorce in the eastern states; but here in the west, where persons become acquainted quicker and friendships are not so prolonged and close before marriage, such restrictions would almost stop the marrying habit."

Oil Gusher at Petrolia.

The past few weeks has brought in four good wells, on the "Jim" Taylor tract, all of them being considered "big producers." One of them came in during the night and was packed with clay to keep it from breaking away and letting the secret out. The last of the four wells has been capped and is under a heavy guard, all traces of oil that could be, have been removed by the hired help, but we learn from good authority, that a test was made and shows a flow that will run from 1500 to 2000 barrels every twenty-four hours, making this the best oil field in the United States today, and as soon as this information becomes generally known, it is quite likely that a general rush will be made by oil men from all parts of the country. When the plungers hit Clay county you will see something that will open your eyes. That Byers will come in for her share of the prosperity, goes without saying, and if anyone doubts that there is a "bug under the chip," let them try to approach either of the last four wells brought in on the Taylor tract, and see how quick the guards will command you to stay away. The consumers' company is not guarding these wells without a good and sufficient reason, and the veil of secrecy should be lifted and Petrolia and Byers given a chance to grow as they should, unhampered by the Standard Oil Company any of its sub-agencies known by other names. The Oil Boom is on, and the Herald hereby gives out the information, believing it to be true, as our informant is on the inside of the big ring.—Byers Herald.

FORT ERECTED BY DANIEL BOONE

MISS FANNIE BRYANT

THE OLD MONUMENT WHICH HAS BEEN RESTORED

Under the auspices of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs Miss Fannie Bell Bryant of Newport, Ky., will unveil the restored monument in honor of Daniel Boone on May 26 at Frankfort, Ky. The present monument was erected seventy-five years ago and has been so damaged that a movement was started a year ago by the women of Kentucky and backed up by historical societies throughout the country to restore the monument to its proper condition. Miss Bryant, who will be given the post of honor at the unveiling, is a lineal descendant of Daniel and Rebecca Boone.

Citation by Publication.
THE STATE OF TEXAS,
To the Sheriff or any Constable of Wichita County—GREETING:
You are hereby commanded: That you summon, by making publication of this Citation in some newspaper published in the County of Wichita, for eight consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, Cabel Hairston, Sr.; Willie Hairston, Anna Hairston, Nettie Hairston, Lula Hairston and Cabel Hairston, Jr., and the unknown heirs of P. H. Hairston, deceased, whose residences are unknown, to be and appear before the Hon. District Court at the next regular term thereof, to be held in the County of Wichita, at the Court House thereof, in Wichita Falls, Texas, on the 6th day of June, A. D. 1916, then and there to answer a Petition filed in said Court, on the 7th day of April, A. D. 1916, in a suit numbered on the docket of said Court No. 3917, wherein Emma F. Kemp is plaintiff and Cabel Hairston, Sr.; Willie Hairston, Anna Hairston, Nettie Hairston, Lula Hairston and Cabel Hairston, Jr., and the unknown heirs of P. H. Hairston, deceased, are defendants, the nature of the plaintiff's demand being as follows, to-wit: Plaintiff alleges that on September 30th, 1909, she was and is now lawfully seized and possessed of a tract of land hereinafter described, situated in Wichita County, Texas, and being 100x 116 2-3 feet, out of Lot 4, Block 223, in the City of Wichita Falls, as shown by the original map of said City of record in the Deed Records of Wichita County, Texas, and more particularly described as follows: Beginning at a point on the North side of 12th street, 50 feet Westward from the S. W. corner of said Lot 4; Thence at right angles with 12th street 116 2-3 feet; Thence Eastward with 12th street 100 feet; Thence Southward in a line perpendicular with 12th street 116 2-3 feet to a point in North side of 12th street in South line of Lot 4; Thence Westward with 12th street 100 feet to beginning, holding the same in fee simple, and on said day defendants entered upon said premises and ejected plaintiff therefrom and withholds from plaintiff the possession thereof to her damage, $500.00; plaintiff alleges that she claims said land under deed duly registered and she and those under whom she claims have had peaceable, continuous and adverse possession of the lands and tenements hereinabove set out, using and enjoying the same, paying the taxes due thereon for more than 5 years and more than 5 years before the commencement of this suit; plaintiff alleges that defendants set up a claim to said land by reason of the fact that they are heirs of said P. H. Hairston, and that said P. H. Hairston, their ancestor, having died seized and possessed of said land owing the same in fee simple and they as her heirs having acquired said property by inheritance and claim same by reason of said inheritance, that is, all said defendants claim to be descendants of P. H. Hairston, except Cabel Hairston, who is her surviving husband and all defendants claim said land by being heirs of said P. H. Hairston, deceased. Wherefore plaintiff prays for restitution of the above premises, clearing her title, for damages, costs and general relief.
Herein Fall Not, And have you before said Court, on the said first day of the next term thereof, this Writ, with your endorsement thereon, showing how you have executed the same.
Given under my hand and seal of said Court, at office in Wichita Falls, Texas, this 8th day of April, A. D. 1916.

Curing a Cold in Camp.
Taking "cold" is a very popular camp method of feeling bad. The man who does not at least once, while in camp, stuff himself full of a good old-fashioned "cold" feels that he has been cheated out of a part of the enjoyment of his outing. For the benefit of those of his companions who do not appreciate his "barking" in season and out, the following rules are suggested: First, take a bath; it may be painful but necessary. Second, assist overworked eliminators to remove the debris that has accumulated by reason of the failure of the ordinary processes of waste removal.
This can be done very nicely with a heroic dose of calomel; by heroic about three grains is meant. Follow up the calomel with several five-grain doses of phenacetine, or until the patient is in a profuse perspiration, roll him in warm blankets, and await developments. A careful observance of the foregoing will annihilate any able-bodied "cold" on earth.—Dr. Charles Stewart Moody in June Outing.

SHORT REIGN PREDICTED.

Astrologer Says George V. Will Have Much Trouble.

Washington D. C.—A short and stormy reign for George V. is predicted by S. Daoud, the Washington astrologer. Two years ago, it is said Daoud foretold the death of King Edward and described the circumstances accurately.

Among the things which he foresees in the new king's horoscope is that his reign will last but six and a half years.

"The first five years," Daoud says, will be among the stormiest in England's history. The last 18 months, however, will be comparatively fortunate. The coming reign will be terminated by the king's death, which will be a natural one. He will more than once be the object of attempted assassination, but would-be murderers will be powerless to harm him.

"There will be trouble in all the British possessions during the second year, especially in India.

War With Germany.
"In the third year of his reign there will be a conflict between England and another European power, led by a kinsman of King George, which will precipitate a great war.

England will on her own part wage war with this European country.

The war will be short and decisive and will result in England's being obliged to make concessions which will deprive her of much of her power.

"Egypt will give King George decided trouble, but will not be able to free herself from English rule during his reign. She will accomplish this, however, during the reign of his successor.

"George's reign will see the rise of a new political power within the British empire and sweeping constitutional changes. The privileged classes will be obliged to give up many of their prerogatives forever. New political parties will be formed.

Illness in Family.
"In the third year he will have serious trouble in his own family in the form of dangerous illness; it will not, however, result in death. During that year the British royal family will be put in mourning; I do not see that the death is within the immediate family of the king.

"The second year of his reign will also see great need among the British people, resulting in conditions of actual famine.

"England will lose support of her allies and will be obliged to alter her foreign policy. A decided hostility to her will arise among the European powers.

"The horoscope does not show that any of these occurrences will be due to King George himself. They will be rather the result of circumstances without his grasp. The king, as is shown throughout, is the victim of destiny. He will, however, show himself very domineering, and will display an inflexibility that will give his advisers much trouble.

"He will act throughout from the best motives, but will manage to offend, unconsciously, many powerful persons."

MARCO POLO'S BOOK.

It Gave Columbus the Idea For His Voyage of Discovery.

Medieval Europe knew but very little of eastern and northeastern Asia. Many of the most learned cosmographers of the time taught that Asia stretched eastward indefinitely, and no one imagined that it had an eastern coast washed by the ocean. It was seriously taught that eastern Asia was a land of vast swamps, inhabited by monster serpents and dragons. This was the opinion that still prevailed up to within 200 years of the time of Columbus.

At this time two Venetian merchants of the name of Polo went on a vast trading expedition to the uttermost parts of Asia. They were gone many years. Upon their return the son of one of them, a young man named Marco Polo, wrote out a full account of their travels, described the empire of the grand khan (the Chinese emperor) and revealed the fact that Asia was bounded on the east by a vast ocean. He described this eastern coast minutely, with all its vast cities and its wealth of precious stones and spices.

It was from reading this book that the imagination of Columbus was fired, and he conceived the bold idea of reaching this eastern coast of Asia by sailing toward the west around the earth.

So when he discovered Cuba he had not a doubt that he had landed upon the coast of Asia and that he looked upon the same scenes that Marco Polo had gazed upon 200 years before.

HEIGHT OF ELEPHANTS.

In the Majority of Cases It is Under Eight Feet.

The average term of an elephant's life, although there is no precise information on the point, is seventy or eighty years. The elephant is not in full vigor and strength till thirty-five. The most ready way of forming an approximate idea of the age is by the amount of turnover of the upper edge of the ear. In young animals, sometimes up to the age of eight or nine years, the edge is quite straight. It, however, then begins to turn over, and by the time the animal is thirty the edges lap over to the extent of an inch, and between this age and sixty this increases to two inches or slightly more.

Extravagant ideas are held as to the height of an elephant. Such a thing as an elephant measuring ten feet at the shoulder does not exist in India or Burma. Sanderson, an admitted authority on the subject, said the largest male he ever met with measured nine feet ten inches and the tallest female eight feet five inches. The majority of elephants, however, are below eight feet, and an animal rarely reaches nine feet, the female being slightly shorter than the male. The carcass of an elephant seven feet four inches tall weighed in portions gave a total weight of 3,000 pounds, so an elephant weighing two tons should be common enough. The skin was about three-fourths of an inch thick.

Kind Words Mean Much.

Cultivate kindness of heart; think well of your fellow men; look with charity upon the shortcomings in their lives. Do a good turn for them as opportunity offers and, finally, don't forget the kind word at the right time. How much a word of kindness, encouragement or appreciation means to others sometimes and how little it costs us to give it. We do not need to wait for some special occasion. When calamity overtakes a friend words of sympathy and encouragement are offered sincerely enough, yet in certain respects as a matter of course. Such an occasion calls for expression on our part, and we naturally respond. But why wait for occasion? Why not speak the kind word when there is no special occasion?

The Roman Senate.

The Roman senate had for many centuries but 300 members, selected from the patricians, or aristocrats. The office of senator was for life. The body was practically supreme in matters of legislation and administration. The majority of votes decided a question, and the order in which the voting took place was invariably determined by rank, beginning with the president and ending with the quatuors. The senators wore on their tunics a broad purple stripe—a badge of distinction, like a modern decoration—and they had the exclusive right of precedence at theaters, the amphitheater and all other public gatherings.

What She Wanted.

"Are you fond of etchings?" asked the young man who had taken the hostess' pretty niece down to supper. "As a general thing, yes," she answered, looking up into his eyes with an engaging frankness that threatened havoc to his heart, "but," she added hastily as he started to say something pretty, "not any tonight, thank you; it is rather late. A small piece of cake will be sufficient."

Prima Facie Evidence.

The late Lord Morris on one occasion gave a characteristic illustration of the meaning of "prima facie evidence." "If," he said to the jury, "you saw a man coming out of a public house wiping his mouth, that would be prima facie evidence that he had been having a drink."

Friendship.

False friendship, like the ivy, decays and ruins the walls it embraces, but true friendship gives new life and animation to the object it supports.
